The Poetical Works Of Percy
Bysshe Shelley

QUEEN MAB.

Are such as may not find
Comparison on earth.

Behold the chariot of the Fairy Queen !
Celestial couriers paw the unyielding air ;
Their filmy per 'ns at her word they furl,
And stop obedient to the reins of light :
These the Queen of Spells drew in,
She spread a charm around the spot,
And leaning graceful from the ethereal car,
Long did she gaze, and silently,
Upon the slumbering maid.

Oh ! not the visioned poet in his dreams,
When silvery clouds float through the wilder'd brain
When every sight of lovely, wild and grand,
Astonishes, enraptures, elevates—
When fancy at a glance combines
The wondrous and the beautiful,—
So bright, so fair, so wild a shape
Hath ever yet beheld,
As that which reined the coursers of the air,
And poured the magic of her gaze
Upon the sleeping maid.

The broad and yellow moon
Shone dimly through her form—
That form of faultless symmetry ;
The pearly and pellucid ear
Moved not the moonlight's line :
'Twas not an earthly pageant ;
Those who had looked upon the sight,
Passing all human glory,
Saw not the yellow moon,
Saw not the mortal scene,
Heard not the night-wind's rush,
Heard not an earthly sound,
Saw but the fairy page,
Heard but the heavenly strains
That filled the lonely dwelling.

The Fairy's frame was slight ; yon fibrous cloud,
That catches but the palest tinge of even,
And which the straining eye can hardly seize
When melting into eastern twilight's shadow,
Were scarce so thin, so slight ; but the fair star,
That gems the glittering coronet of morn,
Sheds not a light so mild, so powerful,
As that which, bursting from the Fairy's form,
Spread a purpureal halo round the scene,
Yet with an undulating motion,
Swayed to her outline gracefully.

QUEEN MAB.

Mother celestial ear
The Fairy Queen descended,
And thrice she waved her wand
Circled with wreaths of amaranth :
Her thin and misty form
Moved with the moving air,
And the clear silver tones,
As thus she spoke, were such
As are unheard by all but gifted ear.

Fairy. Stars ! your balmiest influence shed !
Elements ! your wrath suspend !
Sleep, Ocean, in the rocky bounds
That circle thy domain !
Let not a breath be seen to stir
Around you grass-grown ruin's height,
Let even the restless gossamer
Sleep on the moveless air !
Soul of Ianthe ! thou,

Judged alone worthy of the envied boon
That waits the good and the sincere ; that waits
Those who have struggled, and with resolute will Vanquished earth's pride and meanness, burst the chains,
The icy chains of custom, and hale shone
The day-stars of their age ;—Soul of Ianthe !

Awake ! arise !

Sudden arose
Ianthe's Soul ; it stood
All beautiful in naked purity,
The perfect semblance of its bily frame,
Instinct with inexpressible beauty and grace,
Each stain of earthliness
Had passed away, it reassumed
Its native dignity, and stood
Immortal amid ruin.

Upon the couch the body lay,
Wrapt in the depth of slumber :
Its features were fixed and meaningless,
Yet animal life was there,
And every organ yet performed
Its natural functions ; 'twas a sight
Of wonder to behold the body and soul.
The self-same lineaments, the same
Marks of identity were there ;
Yet, oh how different ! One aspires to heaven,
Pants for its semipiternal heritage,
And ever changing, ever-rising still,
Wantons in endless being.
The other, for a time the unwilling sport

QUEEN MAB.

Of circumstance and passion, struggles on ;
Fleets through its sad duration rapidly ;
Then like a useless and worn-out machine,
Rots, perishes and passes.

Fairy. Spirit ! who hast dived so deep ;
Spirit ! who hast soared so high ;
Thou the fearless, thou the mild,
Accept the boon thy worth hath earned,
Ascend the car with me.

Spirit. Do I dream ? Is this new feeling
But a visioned ghost of slumber ?
If indeed I am a soul,
A free, a disembodied soul,
Speak again to me.

Fairy. I am the Fairy MAB : to me 'tis given
The wonders of the human world to keep.
The secrets of the immeasurable past,
In the unfailing consciousnesses of men,
Those stern, unflattering chroniclers, I find :
The future, from the causes which arise
In each event, I gather : not the sting
Which retributive memory implants
In the hard bosom of the selfish man ;
Nor that ecstatic and exulting throb
Which virtue's votary feels when he sums up
The thoughts and actions of a well-spent day,
Are unforeseen, unregistered by me :
And it is yet permitted me, to rend
The veil of mortal frailty, that the spirit,
Clothed in its changeless purity, may know
How soonest to accomplish the great end
For which it hath its being, and may taste
That peace, which, in the end, all life will share.
This is the meed of virtue ; happy Soul,
Ascend the car with me !

The chains of earth's immurement
Fell from Janthe's spirit ;
They shrank and brake like bandages of straw
Beneath a wakened giant's strength.
She knew her glorious change,
And felt in apprehension in controlled
New raptures opening round :
Each day-dream of her mortal life,
Each frenzied vision of the slumbers
That closed each well-spent day,
Seemed now to meet reality.

QUEEN MAB.

The Fairy and the Soul proceeded ;
The silver clouds disparted ;
And as the car of magic they ascended,
Again the speechless music swelled,
Again the coursers of the air
Unfurled their azure pennons, and the Queen,
Shaking the beamy reins,
Bade them pursue their way.

The magic car moved on.
The night was fair, and countless stars
Studded heaven's dark blue vault.—
Just o'er the eastern wave
Peeped the first faint smile of morn :—
The magic car moved on—
From the celestial hoofs
The atmosphere in flaming sparkles flew,
And where the burning wheels
Eddied above the mountain's loftiest peak,
Was traced a line of lightning.
Now it flew far above a rock,
The utmost verge of earth,
The rival of the Andes, whose dark brow
Lowered o'er the silver sea.

Far, far below the chariot's path,
Calm as a slumbering babe,
Tremendous Ocean lay.
The mirror of its stillness showed
The pale and wan stars,
The chariot's fiery track,
And the grey light of morn
Tinging those fleecy clouds
That canopied the dawn.
Seemed it, that the chariot's way
Lay through the midst of an immense concave,
I radiant with million constellations, tinged
With shades of infinite colour,
And semicircled with a belt
Flashing incessant meteors.

The magic car moved on.
As they approached their goal,
The coursers seemed to gather speed ;
The sea no longer was distinguished ; earth
Appeared a vast and shadowy sphere ;
The sun's unclouded orb
Rolled through the black concave ;
Its rays of rapid light
Parted around the chariot's swifter cour o,

QUEEN MAB.

And fell, like ocean's feathery spray
Dashed from the boiling surge
Before a vessel's prow.

The magic car moved on.

Earth's distant orb appeared

The smallest light that twinkles in the heaven ;
Whilst round the chariot's way
Innumerable systems rolled,
And countless spheres diffused
An ever-varying glory.
It was a sight of wonder : some
Were horned like the crescent moon ;
Some shed a mild and silver beam
Like Hesperus o'er the western sea ;
Some dashed athwart with trains of flame,
Like worlds to death and ruin driven ;
Some shone like suns, and as the chariot passed,
Eclipsed all other light.

Spirit of Nature ! here !

In this interminable wilderness
Of worlds, at whose immensity
Even soaring fancy staggers,
Here is thy fitting temple.

Yet not the lightest leaf
That quivers to the passing breeze

Is less instinct with thee :

Yet not the meanest worm

That lurks in graves and fattens on the dead
Less shares thy eternal breath.

Spirit of Nature ! thou !

Imperishable as this scene,

Here is thy fitting temple !

II.

If solitude hath ever led thy steps
To the wild ocean's echoing shore,
And thou hast lingered there,
Until the sun's broad orb
Seemed resting on the burnished wave,
Thou must have marked the lines
Of purple gold, that motionless
Hung o'er the slinking sphere.
Thou must have marked the billowy clouds
Edged with intolerable radiancy,
Towering like rocks of jet
Crowned with a diamond wreath.
And yet there is a moment,
When the sun's highest point

Peeps like a star o'er ocean's western edge,
 When those far clouds of feathery gold,
     Shaded with deepest purple, gleam
     Like islands on a dark blue sea ;
 Then has thy fancy soared above the earth,
     And furled its wearied wing
     Within the Fairy's fane.

Yet not the golden islands
 Gleaming in yon flood of light,
     Nor the feathery curtains
     Stretching o'er the sun's bright couch,
     Nor the burnished ocean-waves,
     Paving that gorgeous dome,
     So fair, so wonderful a sight
 As Mab's ethereal palace could afford.
 Yet likest evening's vault, that fairy Hall !
 As Heaven, low resting on the wave, it spread
     Its floors of flashing light,
     Its vast and azure dome,
     Its fertile golden islands
     Floating on a silver sea ;
 Whilst suns their mingling beamings darted
 Through clouds of circumambient darkness,
     And pearly battlements around
     Looked o'er the immense of Heaven.

The magic ear no longer moved.
 The Fairy and the Spirit
     Entered the Hall of Spells :
     Those golden clouds
     That rolled in glittering billows
     Beneath the azure canopy,
 With the ethereal footsteps trembled not :
     The light and crimson mists,
     Floating to strains of thrilling melody
     Through that unearthly dwelling,
 Yield'd to every movement of the will.
 Upon their passive swell the Spirit leaned,
 And, for the varied bliss that pressed around,
     Used not the glorious privilege
     Of virtue and of wisdom.

Spirit ! the Fairy said,
 And pointed to the gorgeous dome,
     This is a wondrous sight
     And mocks all human grandeur ;
 But, were it virtue's only need, to dwell
 In a celestial palace, all resigned
     To pleasurable impulses, immured

Within the prison of itself, the will
 Of changeless nature would be unsatisfied.
 Learn to make others happy. Spirit, come !
 This is thine high reward :—The past shall rise ;
 Thou shalt behold the present ; I will teach
 The secrets of the future.

The Fairy and the Spirit
 Approached the overhanging battlement.—
 Below lay stretched the universe !
 There, far as the remotest line
 That bounds imagination's flight,
 Countless and unending orbs
 In mazy motion intermingled,
 Yet still fulfilled immutably
 Eternal Nature's law,
 Above, below, around
 The circling systems formed
 A wilderness of harmony ;
 Each with undeviating aim,
 In eloquent silence, through the depths of space
 Pursued its wondrous way.

There was a little light
 That twinkled in the misty distance :
 None but a spirit's eye
 Might ken that rolling orb ;
 None but a spirit's eye,
 And in no other place
 But that celestial dwelling, might behold
 Each action of this earth's inhabitants.
 But matter, space and time,
 In those aerial mansions cease to act ;
 And all-prevailing wisdom, when it reaps
 The harvest of its excellence, o'erbounds
 Those obstacles, of which an earthly soul
 Fears to attempt the conquest.

The Fairy pointed to the earth.
 The Spirit's intellectual eye
 Its kindred beings recognised.
 The thronging thousands, to a passing view,
 Seemed like an ant-hill's citizens.
 How wonderful ! that even
 The passions, prejudices, interests,
 That sway the meanest being the weak touch
 That moves the finest nerve,
 And in one human brain
 Causes the faintest thought, becomes a link
 In the great chain of nature.

Behold, the Fairy cried,
 Palmyra's ruin'd palaces !—
 Behold ! where grandeur frowned
 Behold ! where pleasure smiled ;
 What now remains !— the memory
 Of senselessness and shame—
 What is immortal there ?
 Nothing—it stands to tell
 A melancholy tale, to give
 An awful warning : soon
 Oblivion will steal silently
 The remnant of its fame
 Monarchs and conquerors there
 Proud o'er prostrate millions trod .
 The earthquakes of the human race,
 Like them, forgotten when the ruin
 That mark 'eir shock is past.

Beside the eternal Nile
 The Pyramids have risen.
 Nile shall pursue his changeless way ;
 Those Pyramids shall fall ;
 Yea ! not a stone shall stand to tell
 The spot whereon they stood ;
 Their very site shall be forgotten,
 As is their buil'ler's name !

Behold you sterile spot :
 Where now the wandering Arab's tent
 Flaps in the desert-blast.
 There once old Salem's haughty fame
 Reared high to heaven its thousand golden domes,
 And in the blushing face of day
 Exposed its shameful glory.
 Oh ! many a widow, many an orphan cursed
 The building of that fame, and many a father,
 Worn out with toil and slavery, implored
 The poor man's God to sweep it from the earth,
 And spare his children the detested task
 Of piling stone on stone, and poisoning
 The choicest days of life.
 To soothe a dotard's vanity,
 There an inhuman and uncultured race
 Howled hideous praises to their Demon-God :
 They rushed to war, tore from the mother's womb
 The unborn child,— old age and infancy
 Prometheus perished ; their victorious arms
 Left not a soul to breathe. Oh ! they were fiends :
 But what was he who taught them that the God
 Of nature and benevolence had given

A special sanction to the trade of blood ?
 His name and theirs are fading, and the tales
 Of this barbarian nation, which imposture
 Recites till terror credits, are pursuing Itself into forgetfulness.

- Where Athens, Rome, and Sparta stood,
 There is a moral desert now :
 The mean and miserable huts,
 The yet more wretched palaces,
 Contrasted with those ancient fanes,
 Now crumbling to oblivion ;
 The long and lonely colonnades,
 Through which the ghost of Freedom stalks,
 Seem like a well-known time,
- Which in some dear scene we have loved to hear,
 Remembered now in sadness.
 But, oh ! how much more changed,
 How gloomier is the contrast
 Of human nature there !
- Where Socrates expired, a tyrant's slave,
 A coward and a fool, spreads death around --
 Then, shuddering, meets his own.
- Where Cicero and Antoninus lived,
 A cowled and hypocritical monk
 Prays, curses, and deceives.

Spirit ! ten thousand years
 Have scarcely passed away,
 Since, in the waste where now the savage drink,
 His enemy's blood, and, aping Europe's sons,
 Wakes the unholy song of war,
 Arose a stately city,
 Metropolis of the western continent :
 There, now, the mossy column-stone,
 Indented by Time's unrelaxing grasp,
 Which once appeared to brave
 All, save its country's ruin ;
 There the wide forest scene,
 Rude in the uncultivated loveliness
 Of gardens long run wild,
 Seems, to the unwilling sojourner, whose steps
 Chance in that desert has delayed,
 Thus to have stood since earth was what it is.
 Yet once it was the busiest haunt,
 Whither, as to a common centre, flocked
 Strangers, and slups, and merchandize :
 Once peace and freedom blest
 The cultivated plain :
 But wealth, that curse of man,

Blighted the bud of its prosperity :
 Virtue and wisdom, truth and liberty,
 Fle'd, to return not, until man shall know
   That they alone can give the bliss
     Worthy a soul that claims
       Its kindred with eternity.

There's not one atom of yon earth
   But once was living man ;
   Nor the minutest drop of rain,
 That hangeth in its thinnest cloud,
   But flowed in human veins :
   And from the burning plains
     Where Lybian monsters yell,
     From the most gloomy glens
     Of Greenland's sunless clime,
     To where the golden fields
     Of fertile La, and spread
     Their harvest to the day,
     Thou canst not find one spot
     Whereon no city stood.

How strange is human pride !
 I tell thee that those living things,
 To whom the fragile blade of grass,
   That springeth in the morn
     And perisheth ere noon,
     Is an unbounded world ;
 I tell thee that those viewless beings,
 Whose mansion is the smallest particle
   Of the impassive atmosphere,
     Think, feel, and live like man :
 That their affections and antipathies,
   Like his, produce the laws
     Ruling their moral state ;
     And the minutest throbs
 That through their frame diffuse
   The slightest, faintest motion,
     Is fixed and indispensable
     As the majestic laws
     That rule you rolling orbs.

The Fairy paused. The Spirit,
 In ecstasy of admiration, felt
 All knowledge of the past revived ; the events
   Of old and wondrous times,
 Which dim tradition interruptedly
 Teaches the credulous vulgar, were unfolded
   In just perspective to the view ;
     Yet dim from their infinitude,

The Spirit seemed to stand
High on an isolated pinnacle ;
The flood of ages combating below,
The depth of the imbounded universe
Above, and all around
Nature's unchanging harmony.

III.

Fairy ! the Spirit said,
And on the Queen of Spells
Fixed her ethereal eyes,
I thank thee. Thou hast given
A boon which I will not resign, and taught
A lesson not to be unlearned. I know
The past, and thence I will essay to glean
• A warning for the future, so that man
May profit by his errors, and derive Experience from his folly :
For, when the power of imparting joy
Is equal to the will, the human soul
Requires no other heaven.

Mab. Turn thee, surpassing Spirit !
Much yet remains unscanned.
Thou knowest how great is man,
Thou knowest his imbecility :
Yet learn thou what he is ;
Yet learn the lofty destiny
Which restless Time prepares
For every living soul.

Behold a gorgeous palace, that, amid
Yon populous city, rears its thousand towers
And seems itself a city. Gloomy troops
Of sentinels, in stern and silent ranks,
Enclose it around : the dweller there
Cannot be free and happy ; hearst thou not
The curses of the fatherless, the groans
Of those who have no friend ? He passes on :
The King, the wearer of a gilded chain
That binds his soul to abjectness, the fool
Whom courtiers nickname monarch, whilst a slave
Even to the basest appetites—that man
Heeds not the shriek of penury ; he smiles
At the deep curses which the destitute
Mutter in secret, and aullen joy
Pervades his bloodless heart when thousands groan
But for those mortals which his wantonness
Wastes in unjoyous reverie, to save
All that they love from famine : when he hears

The tale of horror, to some ready-made face
 Of hypocritical assent he turns,
 Smothering the glow of shame, that, spite of him,
 Flushes his bloated cheek.

Now to the meal

Of silence, grandeur, and excess, he drags
 His palled unwilling appetite. If gold,
 Gleaming around, and numerous viands culled
 From every clime, could force the loathing sense
 To overcome satiety, - if wealth
 The spring it draws from poisons not, --or vice,
 Unfeeling, stubborn vice, converteth not
 Its food to deadliest venom; then that king
 Is happy; and the peasant who fulfils
 His unforced task, when he returns at even,
 And by the blazing faggot meets again
 Her welcome for whom all his toil is sped,
 Tastes not a sweet 'meal.

Behold him now

Stretched on the gorgeous couch; his fevered brain
 Reels dizzily awhile: but ah! too soon
 The slumber of intemperance subsides,
 And conscience, that undying serpent, calls
 Her venomous brood to their nocturnal task.
 Listen! he speaks! oh! mark that frenzied eye -
 Oh! mark that deadly visage.

King.                            No cessation!

Oh! must this last for ever! Awful death,
 I wish yet fear to clasp thee! Not one moment
 Of dreamless sleep! O dear and blessed peace!
 Why dost thou shroud thy vestal purity
 In penury and dungeons! wherefore burkest
 With danger, death, and solitude: yet shunnest
 The palace I have built thee! Sacred peace!
 Oh visit me but once, and pitying shed
 One drop of balm upon my wither'd soul.

Vain man! that palace is the virtuous heart,
 And peace defileth not her snowy robes
 In such a sheath as thine. Hark! yet he mutters;
 His slumbers are but varied agonies,
 They prey like scorpions on the springs of life.
 There needeth not the hell that bigots frame
 To punish those who err: earth in itself
 Contains at once the evil and the cure;
 And all-sufficing nature <sup>can</sup> chastise
 Those who transgress her law, - she only knows
 How justly to proportion to the fault
 The punishment it merits.

Is it strange
 That this poor wretch should pride him in his woe ?
 Take pleasure in his abjectness, and hung
 The scorpion that consumes him ? Is it strange
 That, placed on a conspicuous throne of thorns,
 Grasping an iron sceptre, and immured
 Within a splendid prison, whose stern bounds
 Shut him from all that's good or dear on earth,
 His soul asserts not its humanity ?
 That man's mild nature rises not in war
 Against a king's employ ? No 'tis not strange,
 He, like the vulgar, thinks, feels, acts, and lives
 Just as his father did ; the unconquered powers
 Of precedent and custom interpose
 Between a king and virtue. Stranger yet,
 To those who know not nature, nor deduce
 • The future from the present, it may seem,
 That not one slave, who suffers from the crimes
 Of this unnatural being ; not one wretch,
 Whose children famish, and whose nuptial bed
 Is earth's un pitying bosom, rears an arm
 To dash him from his throne !

Those gilded flies

That, basking in the sunshine of a court,
 Fatten on its corruption !—what are they ?
 —The drones of the community ; they feed
 On the mechanic's labour ; the starved hind
 For them compels the stubborn glebe to yield
 Its unshared harvests ; and you squalid form,
 Leaner than fleshless misery, that wastes
 A soulless life in the unwholesome mine,
 Drags out in labour a protracted death,
 To glut their grandeur ; many faint with toil,
 That few may know the cares and woe of sloth.

Whence, thinkest thou, kings and parasites arose ?
 Whence that unnatural line of drones, who heap
 Toil and unvanquishable penury
 On those who build their palaces, and bring Their daily bread ? From vice, black, loathsome vice ;
 From rapine, madness, treachery, and wrong ;
 From all that genders misery, and makes
 Of earth this thorny wilderness ; from lust,
 Revenge, and murder.—And when reason's voice,
 Loud as the voice of nature, shall have waked
 The nations ; and mankind perceive that vice
 Is discord, war, and misery ; that virtue
 Is peace, and happiness, and harmony ;
 When man's maturer nature shall disdain
 The playthings of its childhood, - kingly glare

Will lose its power to dazzle ; its authority
 Will silently pass by ; the gorgeous throne
 Shall stand unnoticed in the regal hall,
 Fast falling to decay ; whilst falsehood's trade
 Shall be as hateful and unprofitable
 As that of truth is now.

Where is the fame
 Which the vain-glorious mighty of the earth
 Seek to eternise ? Oh ! the faintest sound
 From time's light footfall, the minutest wave
 That swells the flood of ages, whelms in nothing
 The unsubstantial bubble. Ay ! to-day,
 Stern is the tyrant's mandate, red the gaze
 That flashes desolation, strong the arm
 That scatters multitudes. To-morrow comes !
 That mandate is a thunder-peal that died
 In ages past ; that gaze, a transient flash
 On which the midnight closed, and on that arm
 The worm has made his meal.

The virtuous man

Who, great in his humility, as kings
 Are little in their grandeur ; he who leads Invincibly a life of resolute good,
 And stands amid the silent dungeon-depths
 More free and fearless than the trembling judge,
 Who, clothed in venal power, vainly strove
 To bind the impassive spirit ; —when he falls,
 His mild eye beams benevolence no more ;
 Withered the hand outstretched but to relieve ;
 Sunk reason's simple eloquence, that rolled
 But to appal the guilty. Yes ! the grave
 Hath quenched that eye, and death's relentless frost
 Withered that arm : but the unfeling fame
 Which virtue hangs upon its votary's tomb ;
 The deathless memory of that man, whom kings
 Call to their mind and tremble ; the remembrance
 With which the happy spirit contemplates
 Its well spent pilgrimage on earth,
 Shall never pass away.

Nature rejects the monarch, not the man ;
 The subject, not the citizen : for kings
 And subjects, mutual foes, for ever play
 A losing game into each other's hands,
 Whose stakes are vice and misery. The man
 Of virtuous soul commands not, nor obeys.
 Power, like a desolating pestilence,
 Pollutes whate'er it touches ; and obedience,
 Bane of all genius, virtue, freedom, truth,
 Makes slaves of men, and of the human frame
 A mechanized automaton.

When Nero,

High over flaming Rome, with savage joy
 Lowered like a fiend, drank with enraptured ear
 The shrieks of agonising death, beheld
 The frightful desolation spread, and felt
 A new-created sense within his soul
 Thrill to the sight, and vibrate to the sound ;
 Thinkest thou his grandeur had not overcome
 The force of human kindness ! and, when Rome,
 With one stern blow, hurled not the tyrant down,
 Crushed not the arm, red with her dearest blood,
 Had not submissive abjectness destroyed
 Nature's suggestions ?

Look on yonder earth :

The golden harvests spring ; the unfailing sun
 Sheds light and life ; the fruits, the flowers, the trees,
 Arise in due succession ; all things speak
 Peace, harmony, and love. The Universe,
 In nature's silent eloquence, declares
 That all fulfil the works of love and joy,—
 All but the outcast, Man. He fabricates
 The sword which stabs his peace ; he cherisheth
 The snakes that gnaw his heart ; he raiseth up
 The tyrant, whose delight is in his woe,
 Whose sport is in his agony. Yon sun,
 Lights it the great alone ! Yon silver beams,
 Sleep they less sweetly on the cottage thatch,
 Than on the dome of kings' ? Is mother earth
 A step-dame to her numerous sons, who earn
 Her unshared gifts with unremitting toil ;
 A mother only to those puling babes
 Who, nursed in ease and luxury, make men
 The playthings of their babyhood, and mar,
 In self-important childishness, the peace
 Which men alone appreciate ?

Spirit of Nature ! no !

The pure diffusion of thy essence throbs
 Alike in every human heart.

Thou, aye, erectest there
 Thy throne of power unappealable :
 Thou art the judge beneath whose nod
 Man's brief and frail authority
 Is powerless as the wind
 That passeth idly by.

Thine the tribunal which surpasseth
 The show of human justice,
 As God surpasses man.

Spirit of Nature ! thou
 Life of interminable multitudes :

Soul of those mighty spheres
 Whose changeless paths through Heaven's deep silence lie
 Soul of that smallest being,
 The dwelling of whose life
 Is one faint April sun-gleam ;—
 Man, like these passive things,
 Thy will unconsciously fulfilleth :
 Like theirs, his age of endless peace,
 Which time is fast maturing,
 Will swiftly, surely, come ;
 And the unbounded frame, which thou pervadest,
 Will be without a flaw
 Marring its perfect symmetry.

IV.

How beautiful this night ! the balmiest sigh,
 Which vernal zephyrs breathe in evening's ear,
 Were discord to thereaking quietude
 That wraps this moveless scene. Heaven's ebon vault,
 Studded with stars unutterably bright,
 Through which the moon's unclouded grandeur rolls,
 Seems like a canopy which love has spread
 To enchain her sleeping world. Yon gentle hills,
 Robed in a garment of untrodden snow ;
 Yon darksome rocks, whence icicles depend,
 So stainless that their white and glittering spires
 Tinge not the moon's pure beam ; yon castled steep,
 Whose banner hangeth o'er the time-worn tower
 So idly, that rapt fancy deemeth it
 A metaphor of peace ;—all form a scene
 Where musing solitude might love to lift
 Her soul above this sphere of earthliness :
 Where silence undisturbed might watch alone,
 So cold, so bright, so still.

The orb of day,
 In southern climes, o'er ocean's waveless field
 Sinks sweetly smiling : not the faintest breath
 Steals o'er the unruffled deep ; the clouds of eve
 Reflect unmoved the lingering beam of day ;
 And vesper's image on the western main
 Is beautifully still. To-morrow comes :
 Cloud upon cloud, in dark and deepening mass,
 Roll o'er the blackened waters ; the deep roar
 Of distant thunder mutters awfully ;
 Tempest unfolds its pinion o'er the gloom
 That shrouds the boiling surge ; the pitiless fiend,
 With all his winds and lightnings, tracks his prey ;
 The torn deep yawns,—the vessel finds a grave
 Beneath its jagged gulf.

Ah ! whence yon glare
 That fires the arch of heaven !—that dark red smoke

Blotting the silver moon ? The stars are quenched
 In darkness, and the pure and spangling snow
 Gleams faintly through the gloom that gathers round.
 Hark to that roar, whose swift and deafening peals
 In countless echoes through the mountains ring,
 Startling pale midnight on her starry throne !
 Now swells the intermingling dim ; the jar
 Frequent and frightful of the bursting bomb ;
 The falling beam, the shriek, the groan, the shout,
 The ceaseless clangor, and the rush of men
 Inebriate with rage :—loud, and more loud
 The discord grows ; till pale death shuts the scene,
 And o'er the conqueror and the conquered draws
 His cold and bloody shroud.—Of all the men
 Whom day's departing beam saw blooming there
 In proud and vigorous health ; of all the hearts
 That beat with anxious life at sun-set there ;
 How few survive, how few are beating now !
 All is deep silence, like the fearful calm
 That slumbers in the storm's portentous pause ;
 Save when the frantic wail of widowed love
 Comes shuddering on the blast, or the faint moan
 With which some soul bursts from the frame of clay
 Wrapt round its struggling powers.

The grey morn

Dawn on the mournful scene ; the sulphurous smoke
 Before the icy wind slow rolls away,
 And the bright beams of frosty morning dance
 Along the spangling snow. There tracks of blood
 Even to the forest's depth, and scattered arms,
 And lifeless warriors, whose bard lineaments
 Death's soft could change not, mark the dreadful path
 Of the out-sallying victors : far behind,
 Black ashes note where their proud city stood.
 Within yon forest is a gloomy glen—
 Each tree which guards its darkness from the day,
 Waves o'er a warrior's tomb.

I see thee shrink,

Surpassing Spirit !—wert thou human else ?
I see a shade of doubt and horror fleet
Across thy stainless features : yet fear not ;
This is no unconnected misery,
Nor stands uncaused, and irretrievable.
Man's evil nature, that apology
Which kings who rule, and cowards who crouch, set up
For their unnumbered crimes, sheds not the blood
Which desolates the disord-wasted land :
From kings, and priests, and statesmen, war arose,
Whose safety is man's deep unbettered woe,
Whose grandeur his debasement. Let the axe

Strike at the root, the poison-tree will fall;
 And where its venom'd exhalations spread
 Ruin, and death, and woe, where millions lay
 Quenching the serpent's famine, and their bones
 Bleaching unburied in the putrid blast,
 A garden shall arise, in loveliness
 Surpassing fabled Eden.

Hath Nature's soul,
 That formed this world so beautiful, that spread
 Earth's lap with plenty, and life's smallest chord
 Strung to unchanging unison, that gave
 The happy birds their dwelling in the grove,
 That yielded to the wanderers of the deep
 The lovely silence of the unfathomed main,
 And filled the meanest worm that crawls in dust
 With spirit, thought, and love; on Man alone
 Partial in causeless malice, wantonly
 Heaped ruin, vice, and slavery: his soul
 Blasted with withering curses; placed afar
 The meteor happiness, that shuns his grasp,
 But serving on the frightful gulf to glare,
 Rent wide beneath his footsteps?

Nature! no!
 Kings, priests, and statesmen blast the human flower,
 Even in its tender bud; their influence darts
 Like subtle poison through the bloodless veins
 Of desolate society. The child,
 Ere he can lisp his mother's sacred name,
 Swells with the unnatural pride of crime, and lifts
 His baby-sword even in a hero's mood.
 This infant arm becomes the bloodiest scourge
 Of devastated earth; whilst specious names
 Learnt in soft childhood's unsuspecting hour,
 Serve as the sophisms with which manhood duns
 Bright reason's ray, and sanctifies the sword
 Upraised to shed a brother's innocent blood.
 Let priest-led slaves cease to proclaim that man
 Inherits vice and misery, when force
 And falsehood hang even o'er the cradled babe,
 Stilling with rudest grasp all natural good.

Ah! to the stranger-soul, when first it peeps
 From its new tenement, and looks abroad
 For happiness and sympathy, how stern
 And desolate a tract is this wide world!
 How withered all the buds of natural good!
 No shade, no shelter from the sweeping storms
 Of pitiless power! On its wretched frame,
 Poisoned, perchance, by the disease and woe
 Heaped on the wretched parent, whence it sprung,

By morals, law, and custom, the pure winds
 Of heaven, that renovate the insect tribes,
 May breathe not. The untainting light of day
 May visit not its longings. It is bound
 Ere it has life : yea, all the chains are forged
 Long ere its being : all liberty and love
 And peace is torn from its defencelessness ;
 Cursed from its birth, even from its cradle doomed
 To abjectness and bondage !

Throughout this varied and eternal world
 Soul is the only element, the block
 That for uncounted ages has remained,
 The moveless pillar of a mountain's weight
 Is active living spirit. Every grain
 Is sentient both in unity and part,
 And the minutest atom comprehends
 A world of loves and hatreds; these beget
 Evil and good: hence truth and falsehood spring :
 Hence will, and thought, and action, all the germs
 Of pain or pleasure, sympathy or hate,
 That variegate the eternal universe.
 Soul is not more polluted than the beams
 Of heaven's pure orb, ere round their rapid lines
 The taint of earth-born atmospheres arise.

Man is of soul and body, formed for deeds
 Of high resolve; on fancy's boldest wing
 To soar unwearied, fearlessly to turn
 The keenest pangs to peacefulness, and taste
 The joys which mingled sense and spirit yield.
 Or he is formed for abjectness and woe,
 To grovel on the dunghill of his fears,
 To shrink at every sound, to quench the flame
 Of natural love in sensualism, to know
 That hour as blest when on his worthless days
 The frozen hand of death shall set its seal,
 Yet fear the cure, though hating the disease.
 The one is man that shall hereafter be;
 The other, man as vice has made him now.

War is the statesman's game, the priest's delight,
 The lawyer's jest, the hired assassin's trade,
 And, to those royal murderers, whose mean thrones
 Are bought by crimes of treachery and gore,
 The bread they eat, the staff on which they lean.
 Guards, garbed in blood-red livery, surround
 Their palaces, participate the crimes
 That force defends, and front a nation's rage
 Secure the crown, which all the curses reach
 That famine, misery, woe and penury ~~bequeath~~

These are the hired bravoës who defend
 The tyrant's throne—the bullies of his fear :
 These are the sinks and channels of worst vice,
 The refuse of society, the dregs
 Of all that is most vile : their cold hearts blend
 Deceit with sternness, ignorance with pride,
 All that is mean and villainous, with rage
 Which hopelessness of good, and self-contempt,
 Alone might kindle : they are decked in wealth,
 Honour and power, then are sent abroad
 To do their work. The pestilence that stalks
 In gloomy triumph through some Eastern land
 Is less destroying. They cajole with gold,
 And promises of fame, the thoughtless youth
 Already crushed with servitude : he knows
 His wretchedness too late, and cherishes
 Repentance for his ruin, when his doom
 Is sealed in gold and blood !
 Those too the tyrant serve, who skilled to snare
 The feet of justice in the toils of law,
 Stand, ready to oppress the weaker still ;
 And, right or wrong, will vindicate for gold,
 Sneering at public virtue, which beneath
 Their pitiless tread lies torn and trampled, where Honour sits smiling at the sale of truth.

Then grave and hoary-headed hypocrites,
 Without a hope, a passion, or a love,
 Who, through a life of luxury and lies,
 Have crept by flattery to the seats of power,
 Support the system whence their honours flow—
 They have three words ; well tyrants know their use,
 Well pay them for the loan, with usury
 Torn from a bleeding world !—God, Hell, and Heaven.
 A vengeful, pitiless, and almighty fiend,
 Whose mercy is a nick-name for the rage
 Of tameless tigers hungering for blood.
 Hell, a red gulf of everlasting fire,
 Where poisonous and undying worms prolong
 Eternal misery to those hapless slaves
 Whose life has been a penance for its crimes.
 And Heaven, a meed for those who dare belie
 Their human nature, quake, believe, and cringe
 Before the mockeries of earthly power.

These tools the tyrant tempers to his work,
 Wields in his wrath, and as he wills, destroys,
 Omnipotent in wickedness : the while
 Youth springs, age moulders, manhood tamely does
 His bidding, bribed by short-lived joys to lend
 Force to the weakness of his trembling arm.

They rise, they fall ; one generation comes
 Yielding its harvest to destruction's scythe.
 It fades, another blossoms : yet behold !
 Red glows the tyrant's stamp-mark on its bloom,
 Withering and caukering deep its passive prime.
 He has invented lying words and modes,
 Empty and vain as his own coreless heart ;
 Evasive meanings, nothings of much sound,
 To lure the heedless victim to the toils
 Spread round the valley of its paradise.

Look to thyself, priest, conqueror, or prince !
 Whether thy trade is falsehood, and thy lusts
 Deep wallow in the earnings of the poor,
 With whom thy master was :—or thou delight'st
 In numbering o'er the myriads of thy slain,
 All misery weighing nothing in the scale
 Against thy short-lived fame ; or thou dost load
 With cowardice and crime the groaning land,
 A pomp-fed king. Look to thy wretched self !
 Aye, art thou not the veriest slave that e'er
 Crawled on the loathing earth ? Are not thy days
 Days of unsatisfying listlessness ?
 Dost thou not cry, ere night's long rack is o'er,
 When will the morning come ? Is not thy youth
 A vain and feverish dream of sensualism ?
 Thy manhood blighted with unripe disease ?
 Are not thy views of unregretted death
 Drear, comfortless, and horrible ? Thy mind,
 Is it not morbid as thy nerveless frame,
 Incapable of judgment, hope, or love ?
 And dost thou wish the errors to survive
 That bar thee from all sympathies of good,
 After the miserable interest
 Thou hold'st in their protraction ? When the grave
 Has swallowed up thy memory and thyself,
 Dost thou desire the bane that poisons earth
 To twine its roots around thy coffined clay,
 Spring from thy bones, and blossom on thy tomb,
 That of its fruit thy babes may eat and die ?

v.

TIDES do the generations of the earth
 Go to the grave, and issue from the womb,
 Surviving still the imperishable change
 That renovates the world ; even as the leaves
 Which the keen frost-wind of the waning year
 Has scattered on the forest soil, and heaped
 For many seasons there, though long they choke,
 Loading with loathsome rottenness the land,
 All germs of promise. Yet when the tall trees

From which they fell, shorn of their lovely shapes,
 Lie level with the earth to moulder there,
 They fertilise the land they long deformed,
 Till from the breathing lawn a forest springs
 Of youth, integrity, and loveliness,
 Like that which gave it life, to spring and die.
 Thus suicidal selfishness, that blights
 The fairest feelings of the opening heart,
 Is destined to decay, whilst from the soil
 Shall spring all virtue, all delight, all love,
 And judgment cease to wage unnatural war
 With passion's unsubduable array.
 Twin-sister of religion, selfishness !
 Rival in crime and falsehood, aping all
 The wanton horrors of her bloody play ;
 Yet frozen, unimpasioned, spiritless,
 Shunning the light, and owning not its name :
 Compelled, by its deformity, to screen
 With flimsy veil of justice and of right,
 Its unattractive lineaments, that scare
 All, save the brood of ignorance : at once
 The cause and the effect of tyranny ;
 Unblushing, hardened, sensual, and vile ;
 Dead to all love but of its abjectness,
 With heart impassive by more noble powers
 Than unshared pleasure, sordid gain, or fame :
 Despising its own miserable being,
 Which still it longs, yet fears, to disenthral.

Hence commerce springs, the venal interchange
 Of all that human art or nature yield :
 Which wealth should purchase not, but want demand.
 And natural kindness hasten to supply
 From the full fountain of its boundless love,
 For ever stifled, drained, and tainted now.
 Commerce ! beneath whose poison breathing shade
 No solitary virtue dares to spring :
 But poverty and wealth with equal hand
 Scatter their withering curses, and unfold
 The doors of premature and violent death,
 To pinning famine and full fed disease,
 To all that shares the lot of human life,
 Which poisoned body and soul, scarce drags the chain
 That lengthens as it goes and chunks behind.

Commerce has set the mark of selfishness,
 The signet of its all enslaving power,
 Upon a shining ore, and called it gold ;
 Before whose image bow the vulgar great,
 The vainly rich, the miserable proud,

The mob of peasants, nobles, priests, and kings,
And with blind feelings reverence the power
That grinds them to the dust of misery.
But in the temple of their hireling hearts
Gold is a living god, and rules in scorn
All earthly things but virtue.

Since tyrants, by the sale of human life,
Heap luxuries to their sensualism, and fame
To their wide wasting and insatiate pride,
Success has sanctioned to a credulous world
The ruin, the disgrace, the woe of war.
His hosts of blind and unresisting dupes
The despot numbers; from his cabinet
These puppets of his schemes he moves at will,
Even as the slaves by force or famine driven
Beneath a vulgar master, to perform
A task of cold and brutal drudgery; -
Hardened to hope, insensible to fear,
Scarce living pulleys of a dead machine,
Mere wheels of work and articles of trade,
That grace the proud and noisy pomp of wealth!

The harmony and happiness of man
Yield to the wealth of nations; that which lifts
His nature to the heaven of its pride,
Is bartered for the poison of his soul;
The weight that drags to earth his towering hopes,
Blighting all prospect but of selfish gain,
Withering all passion but of slavish fear,
Extinguishing all free and generous love
Of enterprise and daring, even the pulse
That fancy kindles in the beating heart.
To mingle with sensation, it destroys, -
Leaves nothing but the sordid lust of self,
The grovelling hope of interest and gold,
Unqualified, unmixed, unredeemed
Even by hypocrisy.

And statesmen boast
Of wealth! The wordy eloquence that live
After the ruin of their hearts, can gild
The bitter poison of a nation's woe,
Can turn the worship of the servile mob
To their corrupt and glaring idol, Fame,
From Virtue, trampled by its iron tread,
Although its dazzling pedestal be raised
Amid the horrors of a limb-strewn field,
With desolated dwellings smoking round,
The man of ease, who, by his warm fire-side,
To deeds of charitable intercourse
And bare fulfilment of the common law.

Of decency and prejudice, confines
 The struggling nature of his human heart,
 Is duped by their cold sophistry ; he sheds
 A passing tear perchance upon the wreck
 Of earthly peace, when near his dwelling's door
 The frightful waves are driven,—when his son
 Is murdered by the tyrant, or religion
 Drives his wife raving mad. But the poor man,
 Whose life is misery, and fear, and care ;
 Whom the morn wakens but to fruitless toil ;
 Who ever hears his fainted offspring's scream,
 Whom their pale mother's uncomplaining gaze
 For ever meets, and the proud rich man's eye
 Flashing command, and the heart-breaking scene
 Of thousands like himself ; he little heeds
 The rhetorie of tyranny, his hate
 Is quenchless as his wrongs, he laughs to scorn
 The vain and bitter mockery of words,
 Feeling the horror of the tyrant's deeds,
 And unrestrained but by the arm of power,
 That knows and dreads his enmity.

The iron rod of penury still compels
 Her wretched slave to bow the knee to wealth,
 And poison, with unprofitable toil,
 A life too void of solice to confirm
 The very chains that bind him to his doom.
 Nature, impartial in munificence,
 Has gifted man with all-subduing will :
 Matter, with all its transitory shapes,
 Lies subjected and plastic at his feet,
 That, weak from bondage, tremble as they tread.
 How many a rustic Milton has passed by,
 Stilling the speechless longings of his heart,
 In unremitting drudgery and care !
 How many a vulgar Cato has compelled
 His energies, no longer tameless then,
 To mould a pin, or fabricate a nail !
 How many a Newton, to whose passive ken
 Those mighty spheres that gem infinity
 Were only specks of tinsel, fixed in heaven
 To light the midnights of his native town !

Yet every heart contains perfection's germ :
 The wisest of the sages of the earth,
 That ever from the stores of reason drew
 Science and truth, and virtue's dreadless tone,
 Were but a weak and inexperienced boy,
 Proud, sensual, unimpassioned, uninbued
 With pure desire and universal love,

Compared to that high being, of cloudless brain,
 Untainted passion, elevated will,
 Which death (who even would linger long in awe
 Within his noble presence, and beneath
 His changeless eye-beam), might alone subdue.
 Him, every slave now dragging through the filth
 Of some corrupted city his sad life,
 Pining with famine, swoln with luxury,
 Blunting the keenness of his spiritual sense
 With narrow schemings and unworthy cares,
 Or madly rushing through all violent crime,
 To move the deep stagnation of his soul,—
 Might imitate and equal.

But mean lust

Has bound its chains so tight about the earth,
 That all within it but the virtuous man
 Is venal: gold or fame will surely reach
 The price prefixed by selfishness, to all
 But him of resolute and unchanging will;
 Whom, nor the plaudits of a servile crowd,
 Nor the vile joys of tainting luxury,
 Can bribe to yield his elevated soul
 To tyranny or falsehood, though they wield
 With blood-red hand the sceptre of the world.

All things are sold: the very light of heaven
 Is venal; earth's unsparing gifts of love,
 The smallest and most despicable things
 That bark in the abysses of the deep,
 All objects of our life, even life itself,
 And the poor pittance which the laws allow
 Of liberty, the fellowship of man.
 These duties which his heart of human love
 Should urge him to perform instinctively,
 Are bought and sold as in a publick mart
 Of undistinguishing selfishness, that sets
 On each its price, the stamp-mark of her reign.
 Even love is sold; the solace of all woe
 Is turned to deadliest agony, old age
 Shivers in selfish beauty's loathing arms,
 And youth's corrupted impulses prepare
 A life of horror from the blighting bane
 Of commerce: whilst the pestilence that springs
 From unenjoying sensualism, has filled
 All human life with hydra-headed woes.

Falsehood demands but gold to pay the pangs
 Of outraged conscience; for the slavish priest
 Sets no great value on his hireling faith:
 A little passing pomp, some servile souls,

Whom cowardice itself might safely chain,
Or the spare mite of avarice could bribe
To deck the triumph of their languid zeal,
Can make him minister to tyranny.
More daring crime requires a loftier need :
Without a shudder the slave soldier lends
His arm to murderous deeds, and steals his heart,
When the dread eloquence of dying men,
Low mingling on the lonely field of fame,
Assails that nature whose applause he sells
For the gross blessings of the patriot mob,
For the vile gratitude of heartless kings,
And for a cold world's good word,--viler still !

There is a nobler glory which survives
Until our being fades, and, solacing
All human care, accompanies its change ;
Deserts not virtue in the dungeon's gloom,
And, in the precincts of the palace, guides
Its footsteps through that labyrinth of crime ;
Imbues his lieutenants with doubtlessness,
Even when, from power's avenging hand, he takes
Its sweetest, last and noblest title - death ;
--The consciousness of good, which neither gold,
Nor sordid fame, nor hope of heavenly bliss,
Can purchase ; but a life of resolute good,
Unalterable will, quenchless desire
Of universal happiness, the heart
That beats with it in unison, the brain,
Whose ever-wakeful wisdom toils to change
Reason's rich stores for its eternal weal.

This commerce of sincerest virtue needs
No mediative signs of selfishness,
No jealous intercourse of wretched gain,
No balancings of prudence, cold and long ;
In just and equal measure all is weighed,
One scale contains the sum of human weal,
And one, the good man's heart.

How vainly seek
The selfish for that happiness denied
To aught but virtue ! Blind and hardened, they
Who hope for peace amid the storms of care,
Who covet power they know not how to use,
And sigh for pleasure they refuse to give ;--
Maddly they frustrate still their own designs ;
And, where they hope that quiet to enjoy
Which virtue pictures, bitterness of soul,
Pining regrets, and vain repentances.
Disease, disgust, and lassitude, pervade
Their valueless and miserable lives.

But hoary-headed selfishness has felt
 Its death-blow, and is tottering to the grave :
 A brighter morn awaits the human day,
 When every transfer of earth's natural gifts
 Shall be a commerce of good words and works ;
 When poverty and wealth, the thirst of fame,
 The fear of infamy, disease and woe,
 War with its million horrors, and fierce hell,
 Shall live but in the memory of time,
 Who, like a penitent libertine, shall start,
 Look back, and shudder at his younger years.

VI.

ALL touch, all eye, all ear,
 The Spirit felt the Fairy's burning speech.
 • O'er the thin texture of its frame,
 The varying periods painted, changing glows :
 As on a summer even,
 When soul-enfolding music floats around,
 The stainless mirror of the lake
 Re-images the eastern gloom,
 Mingling convulsively its purple hues
 With sunset's burnished gold.

Then thus the Spirit spoke :
 It 's a wild and miserable world !
 Thorny, and full of care,
 Which every fiend can make his prey at will.
 O Fairy ! in the lapse of years,
 Is there no hope in store ?
 Will you vast suns roll on
 Interminably, still illumining
 The night of so many wretched souls,
 And see no hope for them ?
 Will not the universal spirit e'er
 Revivify this withered limb of Heaven ?

The Fairy calmly smiled
 In comfort, and a kindling gleam of hope
 Suffused the Spirit's lineaments.
 Oh ! rest thee tranquil ; chase those fearful doubts,
 Which no'er could rack an everlasting soul,
 That sees the chains which bind it to its doom.
 Yes ! crime and misery are in yonder earth,
 falsehood, mistake, and lust ;
 But the eternal world
 Contains at once the evil and the cure.
 Some eminent in virtue shall start up,
 Even in perersest time :
 The truths of their pure lips, that never die,

Shall bind the scorpion falsehood with a wreath
 Of ever-living flame,
 Until the monster sting itself to death.

How sweet a scene will earth become !
 Of purest spirits, a pure dwelling-place,
 Symphonious with the planetary spheres ;
 When man, with changeless nature coalescing,
 Will undertake regeneration's work,
 When its ungenial poles no longer point
 To the red and baleful sun
 That faintly twinkles there.

Spirit, on yonder earth, 12. 196.

Falshood now triumphs; deadly power
 Has fixed its seal upon the lip of truth !

Madness and misery are there !
 The happiest is a most wretched ! Yet confide
 Until pure health-drops, from the cup of joy,
 Fall like a dew of balm upon the world.
 Now, to the scene I show, in silence turn,
 And read the blood-stained charter of all woe,
 Which nature soon, with re-creating hand,
 Will blot in mercy from the book of earth.
 How bold the flight of passion's wandering wing,
 How swift the step of reason's firmer tread,
 How calm and sweet the victories of life,
 How terrorless the triumph of the grave !
 How powerless were the mightiest monarch's arm,
 Vain his loud threat, and impotent his frown !
 How ludicrous the priest's dogmatic roar !
 The weight of his exterminating curse
 How light ! and his affected charity,
 To suit the pressure of the changing times,
 What palpable deceit ! --but for thy aid,
 Religion ! but for thee, prolific fiend,
 Who peoplest earth with demons, hell with men,
 And heaven with slaves !

Thou taintedst all thou look'st upon !—the stars,
 Which on thy cradle beamed so brightly sweet,
 Were gods to the distempered playfulness
 Of thy untutored infancy : the trees,
 The grass, the clouds, the mountains, and the sea,
 All living things that walk, swim, creep, or fly,
 Were gods : the sun had homage, and the moon
 Her worshipper. Then thou becamest a boy,
 More daring in thy frenzies : every shape,
 Monstrous or vast, or beautifully wild,
 Which from sensation's relics, fancy culls ;
 The spirits of the air, the shuddering ghost,

The genii of the elements, the powers
 That give a shape to nature's varied works,
 Had life and place in the corrupt belief
 Of thy blind heart : yet still thy youthful hands
 Were pure of human blood. Then manhood gave
 Its strength and ardour to thy frenzied brain ;
 Thine eager gaze scanned the stupendous scene,
 Whose wonders mocked the knowledge of thy pride.
 Their everlasting and unchanging laws
 Reproached thine ignorance. Awhile thou stoodst
 Baffled and gloomy ; then thou didst sum up
 The elements of all that thou didst know ;
 The changing seasons, winter's leafless reign,
 The budding of the heaven-breathing trees,
 The eternal orbs that beautify the night,
 The sun-rise, and the setting of the moon,
 Earthquakes and wars, and poisons and disease,
 And all their causes, to an abstract point
 Converging, thou didst bend, and call'd it God !
 The self-sufficing, the omnipotent,
 The merciful, and the avenging God !
 Who, prototype of human misrule, sits
 High in heaven's realm, upon a golden throne,
 Even like an earthly king ; and whose dread work,
 Hell, gapes for ever for the unhappy slaves
 Of late, whom he created in his sport
 To triumph in their torments when they fell !
 Earth heard the name ; earth trembled, as the smoke
 Of his revenge ascended up to heaven,
 Blotting the constellations ; and the cries
 Of millions butchered in sweet confidence
 And in suspecting peace, even when the bonds
 Of safety were confirmed by wordy oaths
 Sworn in his dreadful name, rung through the land ;
 Whilst innocent babes writhed on thy stubborn spear,
 And thou didst laugh to hear the mother's shriek
 Of marine gladness as the sacred steel
 Felt cold in her torn entrails !

Religion ! thou wert then in manhood's prime :
 But age crept on : one God would not suffice
 For senile puerility : thou framedst
 A tale to suit thy dotage, and to glut
 Thy misery-thirsting soul, that the mad fiend
 Thy wickedness had pictured, might afford
 A plea for sating the unnatural thirst
 For murder, rapine, violence, and crime,
 That still consumed thy being, even when
 Thou heardst the step of fate ;—that flames might light
 Thy funeral scene, and the shrill horrent shrieks

Of parents dying on the pile that burned
 To light their children to thy paths, the roar
 Of the encircling flames, the exulting cries
 Of thine apostles, loud commingling there,
 Might satiate thy hungry ear
 Even on the bed of death !

But now contempt is mocking thy grey hairs ;
 Thou art descending to the darksome grave,
 Unhonoured and unpitied, but by those Whose pride is passing by like thine, and sheds,
 Like thine, a glare that fades before the sun
 Of truth, and shines but in the dreadful night
 That long has lowered above the ruined world.

Throughout these infinite orbs of mingling light,
 Of which you earth is one, is wide diffused
 A spirit of activity and life,
 That knows no term, cessation, or decay ;
 That fades not when the lamp of earthly life,
 Extinguished in the dampness of the grave,
 Awhile there slumbers, more than when the babe
 In the dim newness of its being feels
 The impulses of sublunary things,
 And all is wonder to unpractised sense :
 But, active, stedfast, and eternal, still
 Guides the fierce whirlwind, in the tempest rears,
 Cheers in the day, breathes in the balmy groves,
 Strengthens in health, and poisons in disease ;
 And in the storm of change, that ceaselessly
 Rolls round the eternal universe, and shakes
 Its undecaying battlement, presides,
 Apportioning with irresistible law
 The place each spring of its machine shall fill :
 So that, when waves on waves tumultuous heap
 Confusion to the clouds, and fiercely driven
 Heaven's lightnings scorch the uprooted ocean fords
 Whilst, to the eye of shipwrecked mariner,
 Lone sitting on the bare and shuddering rock,
 All seems unlinked contingency and chance :
 No atom of this turbulence fulfils
 A vague and unnecessitated task,
 Or acts but as it must and ought to act.
 Even the minutest molecule of light,
 That in an April sunbeam's fleeting glow
 Fulfils its destined, though invisible work,
 The universal Spirit guides ; nor less •
 When merciless ambition, or mad zeal,
 Has led two hosts of dupes to battle field,
 That, blind, they there may dig each other's graves

And call the sad work glory, does it rule
 All passions : not a thought, a will, an act,
 No working of the tyrant's moody mind,
 Nor one misgiving of the slaves who boast
 Their servitude, to hide the shame they feel,
 Nor the events enchainning every will,
 That from the depths of unrecorded time
 Have drawn all-influencing virtue, pass
 Unrecognised or unforeseen by thee,
 Soul of the Universe ! eternal spring
 Of life and death, of happiness and woe,
 Of all that chequers the phantasinal scene
 That floats before our eyes in wavering light,
 Which gleams but on the darkness of our prison,
 Whose chains and massy walls
 • We feel but cannot see.

Spirit of Nature ! all-sufficing Power.
 Necessity ! thou mother of the world !
 Unlike the God of human error, thou
 Requirest no prayers or praises ; the caprice
 Of man's weak will belongs no more to thee
 Than do the changeful passions of his breast
 To thy unvarying harmony : the slave,
 Whose horrible lusts spread misery o'er the world,
 And the good man, who lifts, with virtuous pride,
 His being, in the sight of happiness,
 That springs from his own works ; the poison-tree,
 Beneath whose shade all life is withered up,
 And the fair oak, whose leafy dome affords
 A temple where the vows of happy love
 Are register'd, are equal in thy sight :
 No love, no hate thou cherishest ; revenge
 And favouritism, and worst desire of fame,
 Thou knowest not : all that the wide world contains
 Are but thy passive instruments, and thou
 Regardest them all with an impartial eye
 Whose joy or pain thy nature caunot feel,
 Because thou hast not human sense,
 Because thou art not human mind.

Yes ! when the sweeping storm of time
 Has sung its death-dirge o'er the ruined fane
 And broken altars of the almighty fiend
 Whose nail usurps thy honour, and the blood
 Through centuries clotted there, has floated down
 The tainted flood of aye, shall thou live
 Unchangeable ! A shrine is raised to thee,
 Which, nor the tempest breath of time,
 Nor the interminable flood,

Over earth's slight pageant rolling,
Avileth to destroy,—
The sensitive extension of the world.
That wondrous and eternal fane,
Where pain and pleasure, good and evil join,
To do the will of strong necessity,
And life in multitudinous shapes,
Still pressing forward where no term can be,
Like hungry and unresting flame
Curls round the eternal columns of its strength.

VII.

Spirit. I was an infant when my mother went
To see an atheist burned. She took me there :
The dark-robed priests were met around the pile ;
The multitude was gazing silently ;
And as the alprit passed with dauntless mien,
Tempered disdain in his unaltering eye,
Mixed with a quiet smile, shone calmly forth :
The thirsty fire crept round his manly limbs ;
His resolute eyes were scorched to blindness soon ;
His death-pang rent my heart ! the insensate mob
Uttered a cry of triumph, and I wept.
Weep not, child ! cried my mother, for that man
Has said, There is no God.

Fairy. There is no God !
Nature confirms the faith his death-groan seal'd :
Let heaven and earth, let man's revolving race,
His ceaseless generations, tell their tale ;
Let every part depending on the chain
That links it to the whole, point to the hand
That grasps its term ! Let every seed that falls,
In silent eloquence unfold its store
Of argument : infinity within,
Infinity without, belie creation ;
The exterminable spirit it contains
Is nature's only God ; but human pride
Is skilful to invent most serious names
To hide its ignorance.

The name of God
Has fenced about all crime with holiness,
Himself the creature of his worshippers,
Whose names and attributes and passions change,
Seeva, Buddh, Foh, Jehovah, God, or Lord,
Even with the human dupes who build his shrines,
Still serving o'er the war-polluted world
For desolation's watch-word ; whether hosts
Stain his death-blushing chariot wheels, as on Triumphantly they roll, whilst Brahmins raise

A sacred hymn to mingle with the groans ;
 Or countless partners of his power divide
 His tyranny to weakness ; or the smoke
 Of burning towns, the cries of female helplessness,
 Unarmed old age, and youth, and infancy,
 Horribly massacred, ascend to heaven
 In honour of his name ; or, last and worst,
 Earth groans beneath religion's iron age,
 And priests dare babble of a God of peace,
 Even whilst their hands are red with guiltless blood,
 Murdering the while, uprooting every germ
 Of truth, exterminating, spoiling all,
 Making the earth a slaughter-house !

O Spirit ! through the sense
 By which thy inner nature was apprised
 Of outward shows vague dreams have roll'd,
 And varied reminiscences have waked
 Tablets that never fade ;
 All things have been imprinted there,
 The stars, the sea, the earth, the sky,
 Even the unshapeliest lineaments
 Of wild and fleeting visions
 Have left a record there
 To testify of earth.

These are my empire, for to me is given
 The wonders of the human world to keep,
 And fancy's thin creations to endow
 With manner, being, and reality ;
 Therefore a wondrous phantom, from the dreams
 Of human error's dense and purblind faith,
 I will evoke, to meet thy questioning.
 Ahasuerus, rise !

A strange and woe-worn wight
 Arose beside the battlement,
 And stood unmoving there.
 His inessential figure cast no shade
 Upon the golden floor ;
 His port and mien bore mark of many years,
 And chronicles of untold ancientness
 Were legible within his beauteous eye :
 Yet his cheek bore the mark of youth ;
 Freshness and vigour knit his manly frame ;
 The wisdom of old age was mingled there
 With youth's primeval duntlessness ;
 And inexpressible woe,
 Chasten'd by fearless resignation, gave
 An awful grace to his all-speaking brow. .

Spirit. Is there a God?

Ahasuerus. Is ther<sup>e</sup> a God!—ay, an almighty God,
 And vengeful as almighty! Once his voice
 Was heard on earth: earth shuddered at the sound;
 The fiery-visaged firmament expressed
 Abhorrence, and the grave of nature yawned
 To swallow all the dauntless and the good
 That dared to hurl defiance at his throne,
 Girt as it was with power. None but slaves
 Survived,—cold blooded slaves, who did the work
 Of tyrannous omnipotence; whose souls
 No honest indignation ever urged
 To elevated daring, to one deed
 Which gross and sensual self did not pollute.
 These slaves built temples for the omnipotent fiend,
 Gorgeous and vast: the costly altars smoked
 With human blood, and hideous peacans rung
 Through all the long-drawn aisles. A murderer heard
 His voice in Egypt, one whose gifts and arts
 Had raised him to his eminence in power,
 Accomplice of omnipotence in crime,
 And confidant of the all-knowing one.
 These were Jehovah's words.

From an eternity of idleness
 I, God, awoke; in seven days' toil made earth
 From nothing; rested, and created man:
 I placed him in a paradise, and there
 Planted the tree of evil, so that he Might eat and perish, and my soul procure
 Wherewith to sate its malice, and to turn,
 Even like a heartless conqueror of the earth,
 All misery to my fane. The race of men
 Chosen to my honour, with impunity
 May sate the lusts I planted in their heart.
 Here I command thee hence to lead them on,
 Until, with harden'd feet, their conquering troops
 Wade on the promised soil through woman's blood,
 And make my name be dreaded through the land.
 Yet ever-burning flame and ceaseless woo
 Shall be the doom of their eternal souls,
 With every soul on this ungrateful earth,
 Virtuous or vicious, weak or strong,—even all
 Shall perish, to fulfil the blind revenge
 (Which you, to men, call justice) of their God.

The murderer's brow
 Quiver'd with horror.

God omnipotent,
 Is there no mercy? must our punishment
 Be endless? will long ages roll away,
 And see no term? Oh! wherefore hast thou made
 In mockery and wrath this evil earth?
 Mercy becomes the powerful—be but just:
 O God! repent and save.

One way remains:

I will beget a son, and he shall bear
 The sins of all the world; he shall arise
 In an unnoticed corner of the earth,
 And there shall die upon a cross, and purge
 The universal crime; so that the few
 On whom my grace descends, those who are mark'd
 As vessels to the honour of their God,
 May credit this strange sacrifice, and save
 Their souls alive: millions shall live and die,
 Who ne'er shall call upon their Saviour's name,
 But, unredeemed, go to the gaping grave.
 Thousands shall deem it an old woman's tale,
 Such as the nurses frighten babes withal:
 These in a gulf of anguish and of flame
 Shall curse their reprobation endlessly,
 Yet tenfold pangs shall force them to avow,
 Even on their beds of torment, where they howl,
 My honour, and the justice of their doom.
 What then avail their virtuous deeds, their thoughts
 Of purity, with radiant genius bright,
 Or lit with human reason's earthly ray?
 Many are called, but few will I elect.
 Do thou my bidding, Moses.

Even the murderer's cheek
 Was blanched with horror, and his quivering lips
 Scarce faintly uttered—O almighty one,
 I tremble and obey!

O Spirit! centuries have set their seal
 On this heart of many wounds, and loaded brain,
 Since the Incarnate came: humbly he came,
 Veiling his horrible Godhead in the shape
 Of man, scorned by the world, his name unheard,
 Save by the rabble of his native town,
 Even as a parish demagogue. He led
 The crowd; he taught them justice, truth, and peace,
 In semblance; but he lit within their souls
 The quenchless flames of zeal, and blest the sword
 He brought on earth to satiate with the blood
 Of truth and freedom his malignant soul.
 At length his mortal frame was led to death.

I stood beside him : on the torturing cross
 No pain assailed his un terrestrial sense ;
 And yet he groaned. Indignantly I summed
 The massacres and miseries which his name
 Had sanctioned in my country, and I cried,
 Go ! go ! in mockery.
 A smile of godlike malice reillumed
 His fading lineaments.—I go, he cried,
 But thou shalt wander o'er the unquiet earth
 Eternally.—The dampness of the grave
 Bathed my imperishable front. I fell,
 And long lay tranced upon the charmed soil.
 When I awoke hell burned within my brain,
 Which staggered on its seat ; for all around
 The mouldering relics of my kindred lay,
 Even as the Almighty's ire arrested them,
 And in their various attitudes of death
 My murdered children's mute and eyeless sculls
 Glared ghastly upon me.

But my soul,
 From sight and sense of the polluting woe
 Of tyranny, had long learned to prefer
 Hell's freedom to the servitude of heaven.
 Therefore I rose, and dauntlessly began
 My lonely and unending pilgrimage,
 Resolved to wage unwearable war
 With my almighty tyrant, and to hurl
 Defiance at his impotence to harm
 Beyond the curse I bore. The very hand
 That barred my passage to the peaceful grave
 Has crushed the earth to misery, and given
 Its empire to the chosen of his slaves.
 These have I seen, even from the earliest dawn
 Of weak, unstable, and precarious power ;
 Then preaching peace, as now they practise war,
 So, when they turned but from the massacre
 Of unoffending infidels, to quench
 Their thirst for ruin in the very blood
 That flowed in their own veins, and pitiless zeal
 Froze every human feeling, as the wife
 Sheathed in her husband's heart the sacred steel,
 Even whilst its hopes were dreaming of her love ;
 And friends to friends, brothers to brothers stood
 Opposed in bloodiest battle-field, and war,
 Scarce satiable by fate's last death-draught waged,
 Drunk from the wine-press of the Almighty's wrath ;
 Whilst the red cross, in mockery of peace,
 Pointed to victory ! When the fray was done,
 No remnant of the exterminated faith
 Survived to tell its ruin, but the flesh,

With putrid smoke poisoning the atmosphere,
That rotted on the half-extinguished pile.

Yes ! I have seen God's worshippers unsheathe
The sword of his revenge, when grace descended,
Confirming all unnatural impulses,
To sanctify their desolating deeds ;
And frantic priests waved the ill-omened cross
O'er the unhappy earth : then shone the sun
On showers of gore from the upflashing steel
Of safe assassination, and all crime
Made stingless by the spirits of the Lord,
And blood-red rainbows canopied the land.

Spirit ! no year of my eventful being
Has passed unstained by crime and misery,
Which flows from God's own faith. I've marked his slaves,
With tongues whose lies are venomous, beguile
The insensate mob, and, whilst one hand was red
With murder, feign to stretch the other out
For brotherhood and peace ; and, that they now
Babble of love and mercy, whilst their deeds
Are marked with all the narrowness and crime
That freedom's young arm dares not yet chastise,
Reason may claim our gratitude, who now,
Establishing the imperishable throne
Of truth, and stubborn virtue, maketh vain
The upprevailing malice of my foe,
Whose bootless rage heaps torments for the brave,
Adds impotent eternities to pain,
Whilst keenest disappointment racks his breast
To see the smiles of peace around them play,
To frustrate or to sanctify their doom.

Thus have I stood,—through a wild waste of years
Struggling with whirlwinds of mad agony,
Yet peaceful, and serene, and self-enshrined,
Mocking my powerless tyrant's horrible curse
With stubborn and unalterable will,
Even as a giant oak, which heaven's fierce flame
Had scathed in the wilderness, to stand
A monument of fadeless ruin there ;
Yet peacefully and movelessly it braves
The midnight conflict of the wintry storm,
As in the sun-light's calm it spreads
Its worn and withered arms on high
To meet the quiet o' a summer's noon.

The Fairy waved her wand:
Ahasuerus fled

Fast as the shapes of mingled shade and mist,
That lurk in the glens of a twilight grove,

Flee from the morning beam :

The matter of which dreams are made

Not more endowed with actual life

Than this phantasmal portraiture

Of wandering human thought.

VIII.

THE present and the past thou hast beheld :

It was a desolate sight. Now Spirit, learn,

The secrets of the future.—Time !

Unfold the brooding pinion of thy gloom,

Render thou up thy half-devoured babes,

And from the cradles of eternity,

Where millions lie lulled to their portioned sleep

By the deep murmuring stream of passing things.

Tear thou that gloomy shroud.—Spirit, behold

Thy glorious destiny !

Joy to the Spirit came.

Through the wide rent in Time's eternal veil,

Hope was seen beaming through the mists of fear :

Earth was no longer hell ;

Love, freedom, health, had given

Their ripeness to the manhood of its prime,

Aud all its pulses beat

Symphonious to the planetary spheres :

Then dulcet music swelled

Concordant with the life-strings of the soul ;

It throbbed in sweet and languid beatings there,

Catching new life from transitory death.—

Like the vague sighings of a wind at even,

That wakes the wavelets of the slumbering sea,

And dies on the creation of its breath,

And sinks and rises, fails and swells by fits :

Was the pure stream of feeling

That sprang from these sweet notes,

And o'er the Spirit's human sympathies

With mild and gentle motion calmly flowed.

Joy to the Spirit came,—

Such joy as when a lover sees

The chosen of his soul in happiness,

And witnesses her peace

Whose woe to him were bitterer than death ;

Sees her unfaded, cheek

low manthling in first luxury of health,

Thrills with her lovely eyes,

Which like two stars amid the heaving main

Sparkle through liquid bliss.

Then in her triumph spoke the Fairy Queen :
 I will not call the ghost of ages gone
 To unfold the frightful secrets of its lore ;

The present now is past,*

And those events that desolate the earth
 Have faded from the memory of Time,
 Who dares not give reality to that
 Whose being I annul. To me is given
 The wonders of the human world to keep,
 Space, matter, time, and mind. Futurity
 Exposes now its treasure ; let the sight
 Renew and strengthen all thy failing hope.
 O human Spirit ! spur thee to the goal
 Where virtue fixes universal peace,
 And, 'midst the ebb and flow of human things,
 Show somewhat stable, somewhat certain still,
 A light-house o'er the wild of dreary waves.

The habitable earth is full of bliss ;
 Those wastes of frozen billows that were hurled
 By everlasting snow-storms round the poles,
 Where matter dared not vegetate nor live,
 But ceaseless frost round the vast solitude
 Bound its broad zone of stillness, are unloosed ;
 And fragrant zephyrs there from spicy isles
 Ruffle the placid ocean-deep, that rolls
 Its broad, bright surges to the sloping sand,
 Whose roar is wakened into echoings sweet
 To murmur through the heaven-breathing groves,
 And incandise with man's blest nature there.

Those deserts of immeasurable sand,
 Who-e age-collected fervours scarce allowed
 A bird to live, a blade of grass to spring,
 Where the shrill chirp of the green lizard's love
 Broke on the sultry silentness alone,
 Now teem with countless rills and shady woods,
 Corn-fields and pastures and white cottages ;
 And where the startled wilderness beheld
 A savage conqueror stained in kindred blood,
 A tigress sating with the flesh of lambs
 The unnatural famine of her toothless cubs,
 While shouts and howlings through the desert rang ;
 Sloping and smooth the daisy-spangled lawn,
 Offering sweet incense to the sun-rise, smiles
 To see a babe before his mother's door,
 Sharing h . morn'g's meal
 With the green and golden basilisk
 That comes to lick his feet.

Those trackless deeps, where many a weary sail

Has seen above the illimitable plain,
 Morning on night, and night on morning rise,
 Whilst still no land to greet the wanderer spread
 Its shadowy mountains on the sun-bright sea,
 Where the loud roarings of the tempest-waves
 So long have mingled with the gusty wind
 In melancholy loneliness, and swept
 The desert of those ocean solitudes,
 But vocal to the sea-bird's harrowing shriek,
 The bellowing monster, and the rushing storm ;
 Now to the sweet and many mingling sounds
 Of kindliest human impulses respond.
 Those lonely realms bright garden-isles begem,
 With lightsome clouds and shining seas between,
 And fertile valleys, resonant with bliss,
 Whilst green woods overcanopy the wave,
 Which like a toil-worn labourer leaps to shore,
 To meet the kisses of the flowrets there.

All things are recreated, and the flame
 Of spontaneous love inspires all life :
 The fertile bosom of the earth gives suck
 To myriads, who still grow beneath her care,
 Rewarding her with their pure perfectness :
 The balmy breathings of the wind inhale
 Her virtues, and diffuse them all abroad :
 Health floats amid the gentle atmosphere,
 Glows in the fruits, and mantles on the strain :
 No storms deform the beaming brow of heaven,
 Nor scatter in the freshness of its pride
 The foliage of the ever-verdant trees ;
 But fruits are ever ripe, flowers ever fair,
 And autumn proudly bears her matron grace,
 Kindling a flush on the fair cheek of spring,
 Whose virgin bloom beneath the ruddy fruit
 Reflects its tint, and blushes into love.

The lion now forgets to thirst for blood :
 There might you see him sporting in the sun
 Beside the dreadless kid ; his claws are sheathed,
 His teeth are harmless, custom's force has made
 His nature as the nature of a lamb.
 Like passion's fruit, the nightshade's tempting bane
 Poisons no more the pleasure it bestows :
 All bitterness is past ; the cup of joy
 Unmingled mantles to the goblet's brim,
 And courts the thirsty lips it fled before.

But chief, ambiguous man, he that can know
 More misery, and dream more joy than all ;

Whose keen sensations thrill within his breast
 To mingle with a loftier instinct there,
 Lending their power to pleasure and to pain,
 Yet raising, sharpening, and refining each ;
 Who stands amid the ever-varying world,
 The burthen or the glory of the earth ;
 He chief perceives the change ; his being notes
 The gradual renovation, and defines
 Each movement of its progress on his mind.

Man, where the gloom of the long polar night
 Lowers o'er the snow-clad rocks and frozen soil,
 Where scarce the hardiest herb that braves the frost
 Basks in the moonlight's ineffectual glow,
 Shrank with the plants, and darkened with the night ;
 His chilled and narrow energies, his heart,
 Inseparable to courage, truth, or love,
 His stunted stature and imbecile frame,
 Marked him for some abortion of the earth,
 Fit compeer of the bears that roamed around,
 Whose habits and enjoyments were his own :
 His life a feverish dream of stagnant woe,
 Whose meagre wants, but scantily fulfilled,
 Apprised him ever of the joyless length
 Which his short being's wretchedness had reached ;
 His death a pang which famine, cold, and toil,
 Long on the mind, whilst yet the vital spark
 Clung to the body stubbornly, had brought :
 All was inflicted here that earth's revenge
 Could wreak on the infringers of her law ;
 One curse alone was spared—the name of God.

Nor, where the tropics bound the realms of day
 With a broad belt of mingling cloud and flame,
 Where blue mists through the numoving atmosphere
 Scattered the seeds of pestilence, and fed
 Unnatural vegetation, where the land
 Teemed with all earthquake, tempest, and disease,
 Was man a nobler being ; slavery
 Had crushed him to his country's blood-stained dust ;
 Or he was bartered for the fame of power,
 Which, all internal impulses destroying,
 Makes human will an article of trade ;
 Or he was changed with Christians for their gold,
 And dragged to distant isles, where to the sound
 Of the flesh-mangling scourge, he does the work
 Of all-polluting luxury and wealth,
 Which doubly visits on the tyrants' heads
 The long-protracted fulness of their woe ;
 Or he was led to legal butchery,

To turn to worms beneath that burning sun
 Where kings first leagued against the rights of men,
 And priests first traded with the name of God.

Even where the milder zone afforded man
 A seeming shelter, yet contagion there,
 Blighting his being with unnumbered ills,
 Spread like a quenchless fire ; nor truth till late
 Availed to arrest its progress, or create
 That peace which first in bloodless victory waved
 Her snowy standard o'er this favoured cline :
 There man was long the train-bearer of slaves,
 The mimic of surrounding misery,
 The jackal of ambition's lion-rage,
 The bloodhound of religion's hungry zeal.

Here now the human being stands adorning
 This loveliest earth with taintless body and mind ;
 Blest from his birth with all bland impulses,
 Which gently in his noble bosom wake
 All kindly passions and all pure desires.
 Him (still from hope to hope the bliss pursuing,
 Which from the exhaustless store of human weal
 Draws on the virtuous mind) the thoughts that rise
 In time-destroying infiniteness, gift
 With self-enshrined eternity, that mocks
 The unprevailing hoariness of age,
 And man, once fleeting o'er the transient scene
 Swift as an unremembered vision, stands
 Immortal upon earth : no longer now
 He slays the lamb that looks him in the face,
 And horribly devours his mangled flesh,
 Which, still avenging nature's broken law,
 Kindled all putrid humours in his frame,
 All evil passions, and all vain belief,
 Hatred, despair, and loathing in his mind,
 The germs of misery, death, disease, and crime.
 No longer now the winged habitants,
 That in the woods their sweet lives sing away,
 Flee from the form of man ; but gather round,
 And prune their sunny feathers on the hands
 Which little children stretch in friendly sport
 Towards these dreadless partners of their play.
 All things are void of terror : man has lost
 His terrible prerogative, and stands
 An equal amidst equals : happiness
 And science dawn, though late, upon the earth ;
 Peace cheers the mind, health renovates the frame ;
 Disease and pleasure cease to mingle here,
 Reason and passion cease to combat there ;

Whilst each unfettered o'er the earth extends
 Its all-subduing energies, and wields
 The sceptre of a vast dominion there ;
 Whilst every shape and mode of matter lends
 Its force to the omnipotence of mind,
 Which from its dark mine drags the gem of truth
 To decorate its paradise of peace.

IX.

O HAPPY Earth! reality of Heaven!
 To which those restless souls that ceaselessly
 Throng through the human universe, aspire ;
 Thou consummation of all mortal hope!
 Thou glorious prize of blindly-working will!
 Whose rays, diffused throughout all space and time,
 Verge to one point and blend for ever there :
 Of purest spirits thou pure dwelling-place!
 Where care and sorrow, impotence and crime,
 languor, disease, and ignorance, dare not come :
 O happy Earth, reality of Heaven!

Genius has seen thee in her passionate dreams ;
 And dim forebodings of thy loveliness,
 Haunting the human heart, have there entwined
 Those rooted hopes of some sweet place of bliss,
 Where friends and lovers meet to part no more.
 Thou art the end of all desire and will,
 The product of all action ; and the souls
 That by the paths of an aspiring change
 Have reached thy haven of perpetual peace,
 There rest from the eternity of toil
 That framed the fabric of thy perfectness.

Even Tiue, the conqueror, fled thee in his fear ;
 That hoary giant, who, in lonely pride,
 So long had ruled the world, that nations fell
 Beneath his silent footstep. Pyramids,
 That for millenniums had withstood the tide
 Of human things, his storm-breath drove in sand
 Across that desert where their stones survived
 The name of him whose pride had heaped them there.
 Yon monarch, in his solitary pomp,
 Was but the mushroom of a summer day,
 That his light-wing'd footstep pressed to dust :
 Time was the king of earth : all things gave way
 Before him, but the fixed and virtuous will,
 The sacred sympathies of soul and sense,
 That mocked his fury and prepared his fall.

Yet slow and gradual dawned the morn of love ;

Long lay the clouds of darkness o'er the scene,
 Till from its native heaven they rolled away :
 First, crime triumphant o'er all hope careered
 Unblushing, undisguising, bold and strong ;
 Whilst falsehood, tricked in virtue's attributes,
 Long sanctified all deeds of vice and woe,
 Till, done by her own venomous sting to death,
 She left the moral world without a law,
 No longer fettering passion's fearless wing.
 Then steadily the happy ferment worked ;
 Reason was free ; and wild though passion went Through tangled glens and wood-embosomed meads,
 Gathering a garland of the strangest flowers,
 Yet, like the bee returning to her queen,
 She bound the sweetest on her sister's brow,
 Who meek and sober, kissed the sportive child,
 No longer trembling at the broken rod.

Mild was the slow necessity of death :
 The tranquil Spirit failed beneath its grasp.
 Without a groan, almost without a fear,
 Calm as a voyager to some distant land,
 And full of wonder, full of hope as he.
 The deadly germs of languor and disease
 Died in the human frame, and purity
 Blessed with all gifts her earthly worshippers.
 How vigorous then the athletic form of age !
 How clear its open and unwrinkled brow !
 Where neither avarice, cunning, pride, nor care,
 Had stamped the seal of grey deformity
 On all the mingling lineaments of time.
 How lovely the intrepid front of youth !
 Which meek-eyed courage decked with freshest grace ;
 Courage of soul, that dreaded not a name,
 And elevated will, that journeyed on
 Through life's phantasinal scene in fearlessness,
 With virtue, love, and pleasure, hand in hand.
 Then, that sweet bondage which is freedom's self,
 And rivets with sensation's softest tie
 The kindred sympathies of human souls,
 Needed no fitters of tyrannic law.
 Those delicate and timid impulses
 In nature's primal modesty arose,
 And with undoubting confidence disclosed
 The growing longings of its dawning love,
 Unchecked by dull and selfish chastity,
 That virtue of the cheaply virtuous,
 Who pride themselves in senselessness and frost.
 No longer prostitution's venomous bane
 Poisoned the springs of happiness and life ;

Woman and man, in confidence and love,
 Equal and free and pure, together trod
 The mountain-paths of virtue, which no more
 Were stained with blood from many a pilgrim's feet.

Then, where, through distant ages, long in pride
 The palace of the monarch-slave had mocked
 Famine's faint groan, and penury's silent tear,
 A heap of crumbling ruins stood, and threw
 Year after year their stones upon the field,
 Wakening a lonely echo; and the leaves
 Of the old thorn, that on the topmost tower
 Usurped the royal ensign's grandeur, shook
 In the stern storm that swayed the topmost tower,
 And whispered strange tales in the whirlwind's ear.
 Low through the lone cathedral's roofless aisles
 The melancholy winds a death-dirge sung:
 It were a sight of awfulness to see
 The works of faith and slavery, so vast,
 So sumptuous, yet so perishing withal!
 Even as the corpse that rests beneath its wall.
 A thousand mourners decked the pomp of death
 To-day, the breathing marble glows above
 To decorate its memory, and tongues
 Are busy of its life: to-morrow, worms
 In silence and in darkness seize their prey.

Within the massy prison's mouldering courts,
 Fearless and free the ruddy children played,
 Weaving gay chaplets for their innocent brows
 With the green ivy and the red wail-flower,
 That mock the dungeon's unavailing gloom;
 The ponderous chains, and gratings of strong iron,
 There rusted amid heaps of broken stone,
 That mingled slowly with their native earth:
 There the broad beam of day, which feebly once
 Lighted the cheek of lean captivity
 With a pale and sickly glare, then freely shone
 On the pure smiles of infant playfulness:
 No more the shuddering voice of hoarse despair
 Pealed through the echoing vaults, but soothing notes
 Of ivy-fingered winds and gladsome birds
 And merriment were resonant around.
 These ruins soon left not a wreck behind:
 Their elements, wide scattered o'er the globe,
 To happier shapes were moulded, and became
 Ministrant to all blissful impulses:
 Thus human things were perfected, and earth,
 Even as a child encath its mother's love,
 Was strengthened in all excellence, and grew

Fairor and nobler with each passing year.
 Now Time his dusky pennons o'er the scene
 Closes in steadfast darkness, and the past
 Fades from our charmed sight. My task is done :
 Thy lore is learned. Earth's wonders are thine own,
 With all the fear and all the hope they bring.
 My spells are past : the present now recurs.
 Ah me! a pathless wilderness remains
 Yet unsubdued by man's reclaiming hand.

Yet, human Spirit ! bravely hold thy course,
 Let virtue teach thee firmly to pursue
 The gradual paths of an aspiring change :
 For birth and life and death, and that strange state
 Before the naked soul has found its home,
 All tend to perfect happiness, and urge
 The restless wheels of being on their way,
 Whose flashing spokes, instinct with infinite life,
 Bicker and burn to gain their destined goal.
 For birth but wakes the spirit to the sense
 Of outward shows, whose unexperienced shape
 New modes of passion to its frame may lend ;
 Life is its state of action, and the store
 Of all events is aggregated there
 That variegate the eternal universe ;
 Death is a gate of dreariness and gloom,
 That leads to azure isles and beaming skies,
 And happy regions of eternal hope,
 Therefore, O Spirit ! fearlessly bear on :
 Though storms may break the primrose on its stalk,
 Though frosts may blight the freshness of its bloom,
 Yet spring's awakening breath will woo the earth,
 To feed with kindest dews its favourite flower,
 That blooms in mossy banks and darksome glens,
 Lighting the greenwood with its sunny smile.

Fear not then, Spirit, death's disrobing hand ;
 So welcome when the tyrant is awake,
 So welcome when the bigot's hell-torch burns ;
 'Tis but the voyage of a darksome hour,
 The transient gulf-dream of a startling sleep.
 Death is no foe to virtue : earth has seen
 Love's brightest roses on the scaffold bloom,
 Mingling with freedom's fadeless laurels there,
 And presaging the truth of visioned bliss.
 Are there not hopes within thee, which this scene
 Of linked and gradual being has confirmed ?
 Whose stingings bade thy heart look further still,
 When to the moonlight walk, by Henry led,
 Sweetly and sadly thou didst talk of death ?

And wilt thou rudely tear them from thy breast,
 Listening supinely to a bigot's creed,
 Or tamely crouching to the tyrant's rod,
 Whose iron thongs are red with human gore ?
 Never : but bravely bearing on, thy will
 Is destined an eternal war to wage
 With tyranny and falsehood, and uproot
 The germs of misery from the human heart.
 Thine is the hand whose piety would soothe
 The thorny pillow of unhappy crime,
 Whose impotence an easy pardon gains,
 Watching its wanderings as a friend's disease :
 Thine is the brow whose mildness would defy
 Its fiercest rage, and brave its sternest will,
 When fenced by power and master of the world.
 Thou art sincere and good ; of resolute mind,
 Free from heart-withering custom's cold control,
 Of passion lofty, pure and unsubdued.
 Earth's pride and meanness could not vanquish thee,
 And therefore art thou worthy of the boon
 Which thou hast now received : virtue shall keep
 Thy footsteps in the path that thou hast trod,
 And many days of beaming hope shall bless
 Thy spotless life of sweet and sacred love.
 Go, happy one ! and give that bosom joy,
   Whose sleepless spirit waits to catch
   Light, life and rapture from thy smile.

The Fairy waves her wand of charm.
 Speechless with bliss the Spirit mounts the car,
   That rolled beside the battlement.
 Bendin., her beamy eyes in thankfulness.
   Again the enchanted steeds were yoked,
   Again the burning wheels inflame
 The steep descent of heaven's untrodden way.
   Fast and far the chariot flew :
   The vast and fiery globes that rolled
   Around the Fairy's palace-gate
 Lessened by slow degrees, and soon appeared
 Such tiny twinklers as the planet orbs
 That there attendant on the solar power
 With borrowed light pursued their narrower way.

Earth floated then below :
 The chariot paused a moment there ;
   The Spirit then de...ended
 The restless coursers pawed th' ungenial soil,
 Snuffed the gross air, and then, their errand done,
 Unfurled their pinions to the winds of heaven.

The Body and the Soul united then;
 A gentle start convulsed Ianthe's frame;
 Her veiny eyelids quietly unclosed;
 Moveless awhile the dark blue orbs remained:
 She looked around in wonder, and beheld
 Henry, who kneeled in silence by her couch,
 Watching her sleep with looks of speechless love,
 And the bright beaming stars
 That through the casement shone.

ALASTOR; OR, THE SPIRIT OF SOLITUDE.

---

Nondum amabam, et amare amabam, quarebam quid amarem
Confess. St. August.

PREFACE.

THE poem entitled "Alastor," may be considered as allegorical of one of the most interesting situations of the human mind. It represents a youth of uncorrupted feelings and adventurous genius, led forth by an imagination inflamed and purified through familiarity with all that is excellent and majestic, to the contemplation of the universe. He drinks deep of the fountains of knowledge, and is still insatiate. The magnificence and beauty of the external world sinks profoundly into the frame of his conceptions, and affords to their modifications a variety not to be exhausted. So long as it is possible for his desires to point towards objects thus infinite and unmeasured, he is joyous, and tranquil, and self-possessed. But the period arrives when these objects cease to suffice. His mind is at length suddenly awakened, and thirsts for intercourse with an intelligence similar to itself. He images to himself the Being whom he loves. Conversant with speculations of the sublimest and most perfect natures, the vision in which he embodies his own imaginations, unites all of wonderful, or wise, or beautiful, which the poet, the philosopher, or the lover, could depicture. The intellectual faculties, the imagination, the functions of sense, have their respective requisitions on the sympathy of corresponding powers in other human beings. The Poet is represented as uniting these requisitions, and attaching them to a single imago. He seeks in vain for a prototype of his conception. Blasted by his disappointment, he descends to an untimely grave.

The picture is not barren of instruction to actual men. The Poet's self-centred seclusion was avenged by the furies of an irresistible passion pursuing him to speedy ruin. But that Power which strikes the luminaries of the world with sudden darkness and extinction, by awakening them to too exquisite a perception of its influences, dooms to a slow and poisonous decay those meaner spirits that dare to abjure its dominion. Their destiny is more abject and inglorious, as their delinquency is more contemptible and pernicious. They who, deluded by no generous error, instigated by no sacred thirst of doubtful knowledge, duped by no illustrious superstition, loving nothing on this earth, and cherishing no hopes beyond, yet keep aloof from sympathies with their kind, rejoicing neither in human joy nor mourning with human grief; these, and such as they, have their apportioned curse. They languish, because none feel with them their common nature. They are morally dead. They are neither friends, nor lovers, nor fathers, nor citizens of the world, nor benefactors of their country. Among those who attempt to exist without human sympathy, the pure and tender-hearted perish through the intensity and passion of their search after its communities, when the vacancy of their spirit suddenly makes itself felt. All else, selfish, blind, and torpid, are those unforeseeing multitudes who constitute, together with their own, the lasting misery and loneliness of the world. Those who love not their fellow-beings, live unfruitful lives, and prepare for their old age a miserable grave.

The good die first,
And those whose hearts are dry as summer's dust
Burn to the socket!

EARTH, ocean, air, beloved brotherhood !
If our great mother have imbued my soul
With aught of natural piety to feel
Your love, and recompense the boon with mine ;
If dewy morn, and odorous noon, and even,
With sunset and its gorgeous ministers,
And solemn midnight's tingling silence ;
If autumn's hollow sighs in the sere wood,
And winter robing with pure snow and crowns
Of starry ice the grey grass and bare boughs ;
If spring's voluptuous pantings when she breathes
Her first sweet kisses, have been dear to me ;
If no bright bird, insect, or gentle beast
I consciously have injured, but still loved
And cherished these my kindred :—then forgive
This boast, beloved brethren, and withdraw
No portion of your wonted favour now !

Mother of this unfathomable world !
 Favour my solemn song, for I have loved
 Thee ever, and thee only ; I have watched
 Thy shadow, and the darkness of thy steps,
 And my heart ever gazes on the depth
 Of thy deep mysteries. I have made my bed
 In charnels and on coffins, where black death
 Keeps record of the trophies won from thee,
 Hoping to still these obstinate questionings
 Of thee and thine, by forcing some lone ghost,
 Thy messenger, to render up the tale
 Of what we are. In lone and silent hours,
 When night makes a weird sound of its own stillness,
 Like an inspired and desperate alchymist
 Staking his very life on some dark hope,
 Have I mixed awful talk and asking looks
 With my most innocent love, until strange tears,
 Uniting with those breathless kisses, made
 Such magic as compels the charmed night
 To render up thy charge : and, though ne'er yet
 Thou hast unveiled thy immost sanctuary ;
 Enough from incommunicable dream,
 And twilight phantasms, and deep noonday thought,
 Has shone within me, that serenely now
 And moveless, as a long-forgotten lyre
 Suspended in the solitary dome
 Of some mysterious and deserted fane,
 I wait thy breath, Great Parent, that my strain
 May modulate with murmurs of the air,
 And motions of the forests and the sea,
 And voice of living beings, and woven hymns
 Of night and day, and the deep heart of man.

There was a Poet whose untimely tomb
 No human hands with pious reverence reared,
 But the charmed eddies of autumnal winds
 Built o'er his mouldering bones a pyramid
 Of mouldering leaves in the waste wilderness ;
 A lovely youth,—no mourning maiden decked
 With weeping flowers, or votive cypress wreath,
 The lone couch of his everlasting sleep :
 Gentle, and brave, and generous, no torn bard
 Breathed o'er his dark fate one melodious sigh :
 He lived, he died, he sang in solitude.
 Strangers have wept to hear his passionate notes,
 And virgins, as unknown he passed, have pined
 And wasted for fond love of his wild eyes.
 The fire of those soft orbs has ceased to burn,
 And Silence too, enamoured of that voice,
 Locks its mute music in her rugged cell.

By solemn vision and bright silver dream,
 His infancy was nurtured. Every sight
 And sound from the vast earth and ambient air
 Sent to his heart its choicest impulses.
 The fountains of divine philosophy
 Fled not his thirsting lips : and all of great,
 Or good, or lovely, which the sacred past
 In truth or fable consecrates, he felt
 And knew. When early youth had past, he left
 His cold fireside and alienated home,
 To seek strange truths in undiscovered lands.
 Many a wide waste and tangled wilderness
 Has lured his fearless steps ; and he has bought
 With his sweet voice and eyes, from savage men,
 His rest and food. Nature's most secret steps
 He, like her shadow has pursued, where'er
 The red volcano overcanopies
 Its fields of snow and pinnacles of ice
 With burning smoke : or where bitumen lakes,
 On black bare pointed islets ever beat
 With sluggish surge, or where the secret caves,
 Rugged and dark, winding among the springs,
 Of fire and poison, inaccessible
 To avarice or pride, their starry domes
 Of diamond and of gold expand above
 Numberless and immeasurable halls,
 Frequent with crystal column, and clear shrines
 Of pearl, and thrones radiant with chrysolite.
 Nor had that scene of ample majesty
 Than gems of gold, the varying roof of heaven
 And the green earth, lost in his heart its claims
 To love and wonder ; he would linger long
 In lonesome vales making the wild his home,
 Until the doves and squirrels would partake
 From his innocent hand his bloodless food.
 Lured by the gentle meaning of his looks,
 And the wild antelope, that starts whene'er
 The dry leaf rustles in the brake, suspend
 Her timid steps, to gaze upon a form
 More graceful than her own.

His wandering step,

Obedient to high thoughts has visited
 The awful ruins of the days of old :
 Athens, and Tyre, and Balbec, and the waste
 Where stood Jerusalem, the fallen towers
 Of Babylon, the eternal pyramids,
 Memphis and Thebes, and whatsoe'er of strange
 Sculptured on alabaster obelisk,
 Or jasper tomb, or mutilated sphinx,
 Dark Ethiopia on her desert hills

Conceals. Among the ruined temples there,
 Stupendous columns, and wild images
 Of more than man, where marble demons watch
 The Zodiac's brazen mystery, and dead men
 Hang their mute thoughts on the mute walls around,
 He lingered, poring on memorials
 Of the world's youth, through the long burning day
 Gazed on those speechless shapes, nor, when the moon
 Filled the mysterious halls with floating shades
 Suspended he that task, but ever gazed
 And gazed, till meaning on his vacant mind
 Flashed like strong inspiration, and he saw
 The thrilling secrets of the birth of time.

Meanwhile an Arab maiden brought his food,
 Her daily portion, from her father's tent,
 And spread her matting for his couch, and stole
 From duties and repose to tend his steps :
 Enamoured, yet not daring for deep awe
 To speak her love :—and watched his nightly sleep,
 Sleepless herself, to gaze upon his lips
 Parted in slumber, whence the regular breath
 Of innocent dreams arose : then, when red morn
 Made paler the pale noon, to her cold home,
 Wildered, and wan, and panting, she returned.

The Poet wandering on, through Arabia
 And Persia, and the wild Carmanian waste,
 And o'er the aerial mountains which pour down
 Indus and Oxus from their icy caves,
 In joy and exultation held his way ;
 Till in the vale of Cachmire, far within
 Its loneliest dell, where odorous plants entwine
 Beneath the hollow rocks a natural bower,
 Beside a sparkling rivulet he stretched
 His languid limbs. A vision on his sleep
 There came, a dream of hopes that never yet
 Had flushed his cheek. He dreamed a veiled maid
 Sate near him, talking in low solemn tones.
 Her voice was like the voice of his own soul
 Heard in the calm of thought ; its music long,
 Like woven sounds of streams and breezes, held
 His innost sense suspended in its web
 Of many-coloured woof and shifting hues.
 Knowledge and truth and virtue were her theme,
 And lofty hopes of divine liberty,
 Thoughts the most dear to him, and poesy,
 Himself a poet. Soon the solemn mood
 Of her pure mind kindled through all her frame
 A permeating fire ; wild numbers then

She raised, with voice stifled in tremulous sobs
Subdued by its own pathos : her fair hands
Were bare alone, sweeping from some strange harp
Strange symphony, and in their branching veins
The eloquent blood told an ineffable tale.
The beating of her heart was heard to fill
The pauses of her music, and her breath
Tumultuously accorded with those fits
Of intermitted song. Sudden she rose,
As if her heart impatiently endured
Its bursting burthen : at the sound he turned,
And saw by the warm light of their own life
Her glowing limbs beneath the sinuous veil
Of woven wind ; her outspread arms now bare,
Her dark locks floating in the breath of night,
Her beamy bending eyes, her parted lips
Outstretched, and pale, and quivering eagerly.
His strong heart sank and sickened with excess
Of love. He reared his shuddering limbs, and quelled
His gasping breath, and spread his arms to meet
Her panting bosom :—she drew back awhile,
Then, yielding to the irresistible joy,
With frantic gesture and short breathless cry
Folded his frame in her dissolving arms.
Now blackness veiled his dizzy eyes, and night
Involved and swallowed up the vision ; sleep,
Like a dark flood suspended in its course,
Rolled back its impulse on his vacant brain.

Roused by the shock, he started from his trance—
The cold white light of morning, the blue moon
Low in the west, the clear and garish hills,
The distinct valley and the vacant woods,
Spread round him where he stood. Whither have fled
The hues of heaven that canopied his bower
Of yesternight ? The sounds that soothed his sleep,
The mystery and the majesty of Earth,
The joy, the exultation ? His wan eyes
Gaze on the empty scene as vacantly
As ocean's moon looks on the moon in heaven.
The spirit of sweet human love has sent
A vision to the sleep of him who spurned
Her choicest gifts. He eagerly pursues
Beyond the realms of dream that fleeting shade ;
He overleaps the bounds. Alas ! alas !
Were limbs and breath and being intertwined
Thus treacherously ? Lost, lost, for ever lost
In the wide pathless desert of dim sleep,
That beautiful shape ! Does the dark gate of death
Conduct to thy mysterious paradise,

O Sleep? Does the bright arch of rainbow clouds,
 And pendent mountains seen in the calm lake,
 Lead only to a black and watery depth,
 While death's blue vanlt with loathliest vapours hung,
 Where every shade which the foul grave exhales
 Hides its dead eye from the detested day,
 Conduct, O Sleep, to thy delightful realms?
 This doubt with sudden tide flowed on his heart,
 The insatiate hope which it awakened, stung
 His brain even like despair.

While daylight held

The sky, the Poet kept mute conference
 With his still soul. At night the passion came,
 Like the fierce fiend of a distempered dream,
 And shook him from his rest, and led him forth
 Into the darkness.—As an eagle grasped
 In folds of the green serpent, feels her breast
 Burn with the poison, and precipitates
 Through night and day, tempest, and calm and cloud,
 Frantic with dizzying anguish, her blind flight
 O'er the wide airy wilderness: thus driven
 By the bright shadow of that lovely dream,
 Beneath the cold glare of the desolate night,
 Through tangled swamps and deep precipitous dells,
 Startling with careless step the moonlight snake,
 He fled. Red morning dawned upon his flight,
 Shedding the mockery of its vital hues
 Upon his cheek of death. He wandered on,
 Till vast Aornos, seen from Petra's steep,
 Hung o'er the low horizon like a cloud;
 Through Balk, and where the desolated tombs
 Of Parthian kings scatter to every wind
 Their wasting dust, wildly he wandered on,
 Day after day, a weary waste of hours,
 Bearing within his life the brooding care
 That ever fed on its decaying flame.
 And now his limbs were lean; his scattered hair
 Sered by the autumn of strange suffering,
 Sung dirges in the wind; his listless hand
 Hung like dead bone within its withered skin;
 Life, and the lustre that consumed it, shone
 As in a furnace burning secretly
 From his dark eyes alone. The cottagers,
 Who ministered with human charity
 His human wants, beheld with wondering awe
 Their fleeting visitant. The mountaineer,
 Encountering on some dizzy precipice
 That spectral form, deemed that the Spirit of wind
 With lightning eyes, and eager breath, and feet
 Disturbing not the drifted snow, had paused

In his career ; the infant would conceal
 His troubled visage in his mother's robe
 In terror at the glare of those wild eyes,
 To remember their strange light in many a dream
 Of after times ; but youthful maidens, taught
 By nature, would interpret half the woe
 That wasted him, would call him with false names
 Brother, and friend, would press his pallid hand
 At parting, and watch, dim through tears, the path
 Of his departure from their father's door.

At length upon the lone Chorasmian shore
 He paused, a wide and melancholy waste
 Of putrid marshes. A strong impulse urged
 His steps to the sea-shore. A swan was there,
 Beside a sluggish stream among the reeds.
 It rose as he approached, and with strong wings
 Sealing the upward sky, bent its bright course
 High over the immeasurable main.
 His eyes pursued its flight :—“Thou hast a home,
 Beautiful bird ! thou voyag'est to thine home,
 Where thy sweet mate will twine her downy neck
 With thine, and welcome thy return with eyes
 Bright in the lustre of their own fond joy.
 And what am I that I should linger here,
 With voice far sweeter than thy dying notes,
 Spirit more vast than thine, frame more attuned
 To beauty, wasting these surpassing powers
 In the deaf air, to the blind earth, and heaven
 That echoes not my thoughts ?” A gloomy smile
 Of desperate hope wrinkled his quivering lips.
 For sleep, he knew, kept most relentlessly
 Its precious charge, and silent death exposed,
 Faithless perhaps as sleep, a shadowy lure,
 With doubtful smile mocking its own strange charms.

Startled by his own thoughts, he looked around :
 There was no fair fiend near him, not a sight
 Or sound of awe but in his own deep mind.
 A little shallop floating near the shore
 Caught the impatient wandering of his gaze.
 It had been long abandoned, for its sides
 Gaped wide with many a rift, and its frail joints
 Swayed with the undulations of the tide.
 A restless impulse urged him to embark
 And meet lone Death on the drear ocean's waste ;
 For well he knew that mighty Shadow loves
 The slimy caverns of the populous deep.

The day was fair and sunny : sea and sky

Drank its inspiring radiance, and the wind
 Swept strongly from the shore, blackening the waves.
 Following his eager soul, the wanderer
 Leapt in the boat, he spread his cloak aloft
 On the bare mast, and took his lonely seat,
 And felt the boat speed o'er the tranquil sea
 Like a torn cloud before the hurricane.

As one that in a silver vision floats
 Obedient to the sweep of odorous winds
 Upon resplendent clouds, so rapidly
 Along the dark and ruffled waters fled
 The straining boat. A whirlwind swept it on,
 With fierce gusts and precipitating force,
 Through the white ridges of the chafed sea.
 The waves arose. Higher and higher still
 Their fierce necks writhed beneath the tempest's scourge
 Like serpents struggling in a vulture's grasp.
 Calm and rejoicing in the fearful war
 Of wave running on wave, and blast on blast
 Descending, and black flood on whirlpool driven
 With dark obliterating course, he sate :
 As if their genii were the ministers
 Appointed to conduct him to the light
 Of those beloved eyes, the Poet sate
 Holding the steady helm. Evening came on,
 The beams of sunset hung their rainbow hues
 High 'mid the shifting domes of sheeted spray
 That canopied his path o'er the waste deep ;
 Twilight, ascending slowly from the east,
 Entwined in duskier wreaths her braided locks
 O'er the fair front and radiant eyes of day ;
 Night followed, clad with stars. On every side
 More horribly the multitudinous strains
 Of ocean's mountainous waste to mutual war
 Rush'd in dark tumult thundering, as to mock
 The calm and spangled sky. The little boat
 Still fled before the storm ; still fled, like foam
 Down the steep cataract of a wintry river ;
 Now pausing on the edge of the riven wave ;
 Now leaving far behind the bursting mass
 That fell, convulsing ocean. Safely fled—
 As if that frail and wasted human form
 Had been an elemental god.

At midnight

The moon arose : and lo ! the ethereal cliffs
 Of Caucasus, whose icy summits shone
 Among the stars like sunlight, and around
 Whose caverned base the whirlpools and the waves,
 Bursting and eddying irresistibly,

Rage and resound for ever.—Who shall save?—
The boat fled on,—the boiling torrent drove,—
The crags closed round with black and jagged arms,
The shattered mountain overhung the sea,
And faster still, beyond all human speed,
Suspended on the sweep of the smooth wave,
The little boat was driven. A cavern there
Yawned, and amid its slant and winding depths
Ingulphed the rushing sea. The boat fled on
With unrelaxing speed. “Vision and Love!”
The Poet cried aloud, “I have beheld
The path of thy departure. Sleep and death
Shall not divide us long.”

The boat pursued
The windings of the cavern. Day-light shone
At length upon that gloomy river's flow :
Now, where the fiercest war among the waves
Is calm, on the unfathomable stream
The boat moved slowly. Where the mountain, riven,
Exposed those black depths to the azure sky,
Ere yet the flood's enormous volume fell
Even to the base of Caucasus, with sound
That shook the everlasting rocks, the mass
Filled with one whirlpool all that ample chasm ;
Stair above stair the eddying waters rose,
Circling immeasurably fast, and laved
With alternating dash the gnarled roots
Of mighty trees, that stretched their giant arms
In darkness over it. I' the midst was left,
Reflecting, yet distorting every cloud,
A pool of treacherous and tremendous calm,
Seized by the sway of the ascending stream,
With dizzy swiftness, round, and round, and round,
Ridge after ridge the straining boat arose,
Till on the verge of the extremest curve,
Where, through an opening of the rocky bank,
The waters overflow, and a smooth spot
Of glassy quiet 'mid those battling tides
Is left, the boat paused shuddering. Shall it sink
Down the abyss? Shall the reverting stress
Of that resistless gulf embosom it?
Now shall it fall? A wandering stream of wind,
Breathed from the west, has caught the expanded sail,
And, lo! with gentle motion between banks
Of mossy slope, and on a placid stream,
Beneath a woven grove, it saile, and hark!
The ghastly torrent mingles its far roar,
With the breeze murmuring in the musical woods.
Where the embowering trees recede, and leave
A little space of green expanse, the cove

Is closed by meeting banks, whose yellow flowers
For ever gaze on their own drooping eyes,
Reflected in the crystal calm. The wave
Of the boat's motion marred their pensive task,
Which nought but vagrant bird, or wanton wind,
Or fulling spear-grass, or their own decay
Had e'er disturbed before. The Poet longed
To deck with their bright hues his withered hair,
But on his heart its solitude returned,
And he forbore. Not the strong impulse hid
In those flushed cheeks, bent eyes, and shadowy frame
Had yet performed its ministry : it hung
Upon his life, as lightning in a cloud
Gleams, hovering ere it vanish, ere the floods
Of night close over it.

The noonday sun

Now shone upon the forest, one vast mass
Of mingling shade, whose brown magnificence
A narrow vale embosoms. There, huge caves,
Scooped in the dark base of those airy rocks
Mocking its moans, respond and roar for ever.
The meeting boughs and implicated leaves
Wove twilight o'er the Poet's path, as led
By love, or dream, or god, or mightier Death,
He sought in Nature's dearest haunt, some bank,
Her cradle, and his sepulchre. More dark
And dark the shades accumulate—the oak,
Expanding its immense and knotty arms,
Embraces the light beech. The pyramids
Of the tall cedar overarching, frame
Most solemn domes within, and far below,
Like clouds suspended in an emerald sky,
The ash and the acacia floating hang
Tremulous and pale. Like restless serpents, clothed
In rainbow and in fire, the parasites,
Starr'd with ten thousand blossoms, flow around
The grey trunks, and, as gamesome infants' eyes,
With gentle meanings, and most innocent wiles,
Fold their beams round the hearts of those that love,
These twine their tendrils with the wedded boughs
Uniting their close union ; the woven leaves
Make net-work of the dark blue light of day,
And the night's noontide clearness, mutable
As shapes in the weird clouds. Soft mossy lawns
Beneath these canopies extend their swells,
Fragrant with perfumed herbs, and eyed with blooms
Minute, yet beautiful. One darkest glen
Sends from its woods of musk-rose, twined with jasmine,
A soul-dissolving odour, to invite
To some more lovely mystery. Through the dell,

Silence and Twilight here, twin-sisters, keep
 Their noonday watch, and sail among the shades,
 Like vaporous shapes half-seen ; beyond, a well,
 Dark, gleaming, and of most translucent wave,
 Images all the woven boughs above,
 And each depending leaf, and every speck
 Of azure sky, darting between their chasms ;
 Nor aught else in the liquid mirror laves
 Its portraiture, but some inconstant star
 Between one foliaged lattice twinkling fair,
 Or painted bird, sleeping beneath the moon,
 Or gorgeous insect, floating motionless,
 Unconscious of the day, ere yet his wings
 Have spread their glories to the gaze of noon.

Hither the Poet came. His eyes beheld
 Their own wan light through the reflected lines
 Of his thin hair, distinct in the dark depth
 Of that still fountain ; as the human heart,
 Gazing in dreams over the gloomy grave,
 Sees its own treacherous likeness there. He heard
 The motion of the leaves, the grass that sprung
 Startled and glanced and trembled even to feel
 An unaccustomed presence, and the sound
 Of the sweet brook that from the secret springs
 Of that dark fountain rose. A Spirit seemed
 To stand beside him—clothed in no bright robes
 Of shadowy silver or enshrinéd light,
 Borrow'd from aught the visible world affords
 Of grace, or majesty, or mystery ;—
 But undulating woods, and silent well,
 And rippling rivulet, and evening gloom
 Now deepening the dark shades, for speech assuming
 Held communion with him, as if he and it
 Were all that was,—only—when his regard
 Was raised by intense pensiveness,—two eyes,
 Two starry eyes, hung in the gloom of thought,
 And seemed with their serene and azure smiles
 To beckon him.

Obedient to the light
 That shone within his soul, he went, pursuing
 The windings of the dell.—The rivulet
 Wanton and wild, through many a green ravine
 Beneath the forest flowed. Sometimes it fell
 Among the moss, with hollow harmony
 Dark and profound. Now on the polished stones
 It danced ; like childhood laughing as it went :
 Then, through the plain in tranquil wanderings crept,
 Reflecting every herb and drooping bud
 That overhung its quietness.—“O stream !

Whose source is inaccessible profound,
Whither do thy mysterious waters tend ?
Thou imagest my life. Thy darksome stillness,
Thy dazzling waves, thy loud and hollow gulfs,
Thy searchless fountain, and invisible course
Have each their type in me : And the wide sky,
And measureless ocean may declare as soon
What oozy cavern or what wandering cloud
Contains thy waters, as the universe
Tell where these living thoughts reside, when stretched
Upon thy flowers my bloodless limbs shall waste
I the passing wind ! ”

Beside the grassy shore
Of the small stream he went ; he did impress
On the green moss his tremulous step, that caught
Strong shuddering from his burning limbs. As one
Roused by some joyous madness from the couch'
Of fever, he did move ; yet, not like him,
Forgetful of the grave, where, when the flame
Of his frail exultation shall be spent,
He must descend. With rapid steps he went
Beneath the shade of trees, beside the flow
Of the wild babbling rivulet ; and now
The forest's solemn canopies were changed
For the uniform and lightsome evening sky.
Grey rocks did peep from the spare moss, and stemmed
The struggling brook : tall spires of windlestrae
Threw their thin shadows down the rugged slope,
And nought but gnarled roots of ancient pines
Branchless and blasted, clenched with grasping roots
The unwilling soil. A gradual change was here,
Yet ghastly. For, as fast years flow away,
The smooth brow gathers, and the hair grows thin
And white ; and where irradiate dewy eyes
Had shone, gleam stony orbs : so from his steps
Bright flowers departed, and the beautiful shade
Of the green groves, with all their odorous winds
And musical motions. Calm, he still pursued
The stream, that with a larger volume now
Rolled through the labyrinthine dell ; and there
Fretted a path through its descending curves
With its wintry speed. On every side now rose
Rocks, which, in unimaginable forms,
Lifted their black and barren pinnacles
In the light of evening, and its precipice
Obseuring the ravine, disclosed above,
'Mid toppling stones, black gulfs, and yawning caves,
Whose windings gave ten thousand various tongues
To the loud stream. Lo ! where the pass expands
Its stony jaws, the abrupt mountain breaks,

And seems, with its accumulated crags,
To overhang the world: for wide expand
Beneath the wan stars and descending moon
Islanded seas, blue mountains, mighty streams,
Dim tracks and vast, robed in the lustrous gloom
Of leaden-coloured even, and fiery hills
Mingling their flames with twilight, on the verge
Of the remote horizon. The near scene,
In naked and severe simplicity,
Made contrast with the universe. A pine,
Rock-rooted, stretched athwart the vacancy
Its swinging boughs, to each inconstant blast
Yielding one only response, at each pause,
In most familiar cadence, with the howl
The thunder and the hiss of homeless streams
Mingling its solemn song, whilst the broad river,
Foaming and hurrying o'er its rugged path,
Fell into that immeasurable void,
Scattering its waters to the passing winds.

Yet the grey precipice, and solemn pine
And torrent, were not all; - one silent nook
Was there. Even on the edge of that vast mountain,
Upheld by knotty roots and fallen rocks,
It overlooked in its serenity
The dark earth, and the bending vault of stars.
It was a tranquil spot, that seemed to smile
Even in the lip of horror. Ivy clasped
The fissured stones with its entwining arms,
And did embower with leaves forever green,
And berries dark, the smooth and even space
Of its inviolated floor, and here
The children of the autumnal whirlwind bore,
In wanton sport, those bright leaves, whose decay,
Red, yellow, or ethereally pale,
Rival the pride of summer. 'Tis the haunt
Of every gentle wind, whose breath can teach
The wilds to love tranquillity. One step,
One human step alone, has ever broken
The stillness of its solitude: -one voice
Alone inspired its echoes, -even that voice
Which hither came, floating among the winds,
And led the loveliest among human forms
To make their wil' haunts the depository
Of all the grace and beauty that endued
Its motions, render up its m<sup>o</sup>stiness,
Scatter its music on the unfeeling storm,
And to the damp leaves and blue cavern mould,
Nurses of rainbow flowers and branching moss,
Commit the colours of that varying cheek,
That snowy breast, those dark and drooping eyes.

The dim and horned moon hung low, and poured
 A sea of lustre on the horizon's verge
 That overflowed its mountains. Yellow mist
 Filled the unbounded atmosphere, and drank
 Wan moonlight even to fulness: not a star
 Shone, not a sound was heard; the very winds,
 Danger's grim playmates, on that precipice
 Slept, clasped in his embrace.—O, storm of death!
 Whose sightless speed divides this sullen night:
 And thou, colossal Skeleton, that, still
 Guiding its irresistible career
 In thy devastating omnipotence,
 Art king of this frail world, from the red field
 Of slaughter, from the reeking hospital,
 The patriot's sacred couch, the snowy bed
 Of innocence, the scaffold and the throne,
 A mighty voice invokes thee. Ruin calls
 His brother Death. A rare and regal prey
 He hath prepared, prowling around the world;
 Clutched with which thou may'st repose, and men
 Go to their graves like flowers or creeping worms,
 Nor ever more offer at thy dark shrine
 The unheeded tribute of a broken heart.

When on the threshold of the green recess
 The wanderer's footsteps fell, he knew that death
 Was on him. Yet a little, ere it fled,
 Did he resign his high and holy soul
 To images of the majestic past,
 That paused within his passive being now,
 Like winds that bear sweet music, when they breathe
 Through some dim latticed chamber. He did place
 His pale lean hand upon the rugged trunk
 Of the old pine. Upon an ivied stone
 Reclined his languid head, his limbs did rest,
 Diffused and motionless, on the smooth brink
 Of that obscurest chasm;—and thus he lay,
 Surrendering to their final impulses
 The hovering powers of life. Hope and despair,
 The torturers, slept: no mortal pain or fear
 Marred his repose, the influxes of sense,
 And his own being unalloyed by pain,
 Yet feebler and more feeble, calmly fed
 The stream of thought, till he lay breathing there
 At peace, and faintly smiling:—his last sight
 Was the great moon, which o'er the western line
 Of the wide world her mighty horn suspended,
 With whose dun beams inwoven darkness seemed
 To mingle. Now upon the jagged hills
 It rests, and still as the divided frame

Of the vast meteor sunk, the Poet's blood,
 That ever beat in mystic sympathy
 With nature's ebb and flow, grew feebler still :
 And when two lessening points of light alone
 Gleamed through the darkness, the alternate gasp
 Of his faint respiration scarce did stir
 The stagnate night :—till the minutest ray
 Was quenched, the pulse yet lingered in his heart.
 It paused—it fluttered. But when heaven remained
 Utterly black, the murky shades involved
 An image, silent, cold, and motionless,
 As their own voiceless earth and vacant air.
 Even as a vapour fed with golden beams
 That ministered on sunlight, ere the west
 Eclipses it, was now that wondrous frame—
 No sense, no motion, no divinity—
 A fragile lute, on whose harmonious strings
 The breath of heaven did wander—a bright stream
 Once fed with many-voiced waves—a dream
 Of youth, which night and time have quenched for ever,
 Still, dark, and dry, and unremembered now.

O, for Medea's wondrous alchymy,
 Which whereso'er it fell made the earth gleam
 With bright flowers, and the wintry boughs exhale
 From vernal blooms fresh fragrance ! O, that God,
 Profuse of poisons, would concede the chalice
 Which, but one living man has drained, who now,
 Vessel of deathless wrath, a slave that feels
 No proud exemption in the blighting curse
 He bears, over the world wanders for ever,
 Loue as incarnate death ! O, that the dream
 Of dark magician in his visioned cave,
 Raking the cinders of a crucible
 For life and power, even when his feeble hand
 Shakes in its last decay, were the true law
 Of this so lovely world ! But thou art fled
 Like some frail exhalation, which the dawn
 Robes in its golden beams,—ah ! thou hast fled !
 The brave, the gentle, and the beautiful,
 The child of grace and genius. Heartless things
 Are done and said i' the world, and many worms
 And beasts and men live on, and mighty Earth
 From sea and mountain, city and wilderness,
 In vesper low or joyous orison,
 Lifts still its solemn voice :—But thou art fled—
 Thou canst no longer know or love the shapes
 Of this phantasmal scene, who have to thee
 Been purest ministers, who are, alas !
 Now thou art not. Upon those pallid lips

So sweet even in their silence, on those eyes
 That image sleep in death, upon that form
 Yet safe from the worm's outrage, let no tear
 Be shed—not even in thought. Nor, when those hues
 Are gone, and those divinest lineaments,
 Worn by the senseless wind, shall live alone
 In the frail pauses of this simple strain,
 Let not high verse, mourning the memory
 Of that which is no more, or painting's woe
 Or sculpture, speak in feeble imagery
 Their own cold powers. Art and eloquence,
 And all the shows o' the world, are frail and vain
 To weep a loss that turns their light to shade.
 It is a woe "too deep for tears," when all
 Is left at once, when some surpassing Spirit,
 Whose light adorned the world around it, leaves
 Those who remain behind nor sobs nor groans,
 The passionate tumult of a clinging hope ;
 But pale despair and cold tranquillity,
 Nature's vast frame, the web of human things,
 Birth and the grave, that are not as they were.

PREFACE.

THE Poem which I now present to the world, is an attempt from which I scarcely dare to expect success, and in which a writer of established fame might fail without disgrace. It is an experiment on the temper of the public mind, as to how far a thirst for a happier condition of moral and practical society survives, among the enlightened and refined, . tempests which have shaken the age in which we live. It have sought to enlist the harmony of metrical language, the ethereal combinations of the fancy, the rapid and subtle insitions of human passion, all those elements which essentially compose a Poem, in the cause of a liberal and comprehensive morality; and in the view of kindling within the bosoms of my readers, a virtuous enthusiasm for those doctrines of liberty and justice, that faith and hope in something good, which neither violence, nor misrepresentation, nor prejudice can ever totally extinguish among mankind.

For this purpose, I have chosen a story of human passion in its most universal character, diversified with moving and romantic adventures, and appealing, in contempt of all artificial opinions or institutions, to the common sympathies of every human breast. I have made no attempt to recommend the motives which I would substitute for those at present governing mankind, by methodical and systematic argument. I would only awaken the feelings so that the reader should see the beauty of true virtue, and be incited to those inquiries which have led to my moral and political creed, and that of some of the sublimest intellects in the world. The Poem, therefore, (with the exception of the first Canto, which is purely introductory,) is narrative, not didactic. It is a succession of pictures illustrating the growth and progress of individual mind aspiring after excellence, and devoted to the love of mankind : its influence in refining and making pure the most daring and uncommon impulses of the imagination, the understanding, and the senses ; its impatience at "all the oppressions which are done under the sun;" its tendency to awaken public hope and to enlighten and improve mankind ; the rapid effects of the application of that tendency ; the awakening of an immense nation from their slavery and degradation to a true sense of moral dignity and freedom, the bloodless dethronement of their oppressors, and the unveiling of the religious frauds by which they had been deluded into submission : the tranquillity of successful patriotism, and the universal toleration and benevolence of true philanthropy ; the treachery and barbarity of hired soldiers ; vice not the object of punishment and hatred, but kindness and pity ; the faithlessness of tyrants ; the confederacy of the Rulers of the World, and the restoration of the expelled Dynasty by foreign arms : the massacre and extermination of the Patriots, and the victory of established power ; the consequences of legitimate despotism, civil war, famine, plague, superstition, and an utter extinction of the domestic affections ; the judicial murder of the advocates of Liberty ; the temporary triumph of oppression, that secure earnest of its final and inevitable fall ; the transient nature of ignorance and error, and the eternity of genius and virtue. Such is the series of delineations of which the Poem consists. And if the lofty passions with which it has been my scope to distinguish this story, shall not excite in the reader a generous impulse, an ardent thirst for excellence, an interest profound and strong, such as belongs to no meaner desires—let not the failure be imputed to a natural unfitness for human sympathy in those sublime and animating themes. It is the business of the Poet to communicate to others the pleasure and the enthusiasm arising out of those images and feelings, in the vivid presence of which within his own mind, consists at once his inspiration and his reward.

The panic which, like an epidemic transport, seized upon all classes of men during the excesses consequent upon the French Revolution, is gradually giving place to sanity. It has ceased to be believed, that whole generations of mankind ought to consign themselves to a hopeless inheritance of ignorance and misery, because a nation of men who had been dupes and slaves for centuries, were incapable of conducting themselves with the wisdom and tranquillity of freemen so soon as some of their fetters were partially loosened. That their conduct could not have been marked by any other characters than ferocity and thoughtlessness, is the historical fact from which liberty derives all its recommendations, and falsehood the worst features of its deformity. There is a r'lex in the tide of human things which bears the shipwrecked hopes of men into a secure haven, after the storms are past. Methinks, those who now live have survived an age of despair.

The French Revolution may be considered as one of those manifestations of a general state of feeling among civilised mankind, produced by a defect of correspondence between the knowledge existing in society and the improvement or gradual abolition of political institutions. The year 1788 may be assumed as the epoch of one of the most important crises produced by this feeling. The sympathies connected with that event extended to every bosom. The most generous and amiable natures were those which participated the most extensively in these sympathies. But such a degree of unmixed good was expected, as it was impossible to realise. If the Revolution had been in every respect prosperous, then misrule and superstition would lose half their claims to our abhorrence, as fetters which the captive can unlock with the slightest motion of his fingers, and which do not eat with poisonous rust into the soul. The revulsion occasioned by the atrocities of the demagogues and the re-establishment of successive tyrannies in France was terrible, and felt in the remotest corner of the civilised world. Could they listen to the plea of reason who had groaned under the calamities of a social state, according to the provisions of which, one man riots in luxury whilst another famishes for want of bread? Can he who the day before was a trampled slave, suddenly become liberal-minded, forbearing, and independent? This is the consequence of the habits of a state of society to be produced by resolute perseverance and indefatigable hope, and long-suffering and long-believing courage, and the systematic efforts of generations of men of intellect and virtue. Such is the lesson which experience teaches now. But on the first reverses of hope in the progress of French liberty, the sanguine eagerness for good overleapt the solution of these questions, and for a time extinguished itself in the unexpectedness of their result. Thus many of the most ardent and tender-hearted of the worshippers of public good have been morally ruined, by what a partial glimpse of the events they deplored, appeared to show as the melancholy desolation of all their cherished hopes. Hence gloom and misanthropy have become the characteristics of the age in which we live, the solace of a disappointment that unconsciously finds relief only in the wilful exaggeration of its own despair. This influence has tainted the literature of the age with the hopelessness of the minds from which it flows. Metaphysics,* and inquiries into moral and political science, have become little else than vain attempts to revive exploded superstitions, or sophisms like those † of Mr. Malthus, calculated to lull the oppressors of mankind into a security of everlasting triumph. Our works of fiction and poetry have been overshadowed by the same infectious gloom. But mankind appear to me to be emerging from their trance. I am aware, methinks, of a slow, gradual, silent change. In that belief I have composed the following Poem.

I do not presume to enter into competition with our greatest contemporary Poets. Yet I am unwilling to tread in the footsteps of any who have preceded me. I have sought to avoid the imitation of any style of language or versification peculiar to the original minds of which it is the character, designing that even if what I have produced be worthless, it should still be properly my own. Nor have I permitted any system relating to mere words, to divert the attention of the reader from whatever interest I may have succeeded in creating, to my own ingenuity in contriving to disgust them according to the rules of criticism. I have simply clothed my thoughts in what appeared to me the most obvious and appropriate language. A person familiar with nature, and with the most celebrated productions of the human mind, can scarcely err in following the instinct, with respect to selection of language, produced by that familiarity.

There is an education peculiarly fitted for a Poet, without which genius and sensibility can hardly fill the circle of their capacities. No education, indeed, can entitle to this appellation a dull and unobservant mind, or one, though neither dull nor unobservant, in which the channels of communication between thought and expression have been obstructed or closed. How far it is my fortune to belong to either of the latter classes, I cannot know. I aspire to be something better. The circumstances of my accidental education have been favourable to this ambition. I have been familiar from boyhood with mountains and lakes, and the sea, and the solitude of forests : Danger, which sports upon the brink of precipices, has been my playmate. I have trodden the glaciers of the Alps, and lived under the eye of Mont Blanc. I have been a wanderer among distant fields. I have sailed down mighty rivers, and seen the sun rise and set, and the stars come forth, whilst I have sailed night and day down a rapid stream among mountains. I have seen populous cities, and have watched the passions which rise and spread, and sink and change, amongst assembled multitudes of men. I have seen the theatre of the more visible ravages of tyranny and war, cities and villages reduced to scattered groups of black and roofless houses, and the naked inhabitants sitting famished upon their desolated thresholds. I have conversed with living men of genius. The poetry of ancient Greece and Rome, and modern Italy, and our own country, has been to me like external nature, a passion and an enjoyment. Such are the sources from which the materials for the imagery of my Poem have been drawn. I have considered Poetry in its most comprehensive sense, and have read the Poets, and the Historians, and the Metaphysicians* whose writings have been accessible to me, and have looked upon the beautiful and majestic scenery of the earth as common sources of those elements which it is the province of the Poet to embody and combine. Yet the experience and the feelings to which I refer, do not in themselves constitute men Poets, but only prepare them to be the auditors of those who are. How far I shall be found to possess that more essential attribute of Poetry, the power of awakening in others sensations like those which animate my own bosom, is that which, to speak sincerely, I know not; and which, with an acquiescent and contented spirit, I expect to be taught by the effect which I shall produce upon those whom I now address.

* I ought to except Sir W. Drummond's "Academical Questions;" a volume of very acute and powerful metaphysical criticism.

† It is remarkable, as a symptom of the revival of public hope, that Mr. Malthus has assigned, in the later editions of his work, an indefinite concession to moral restraint over the principle of population. This concession answers all the inferences from his doctrine unfavourable to human improvement, and reduces the "ESSAY ON POPULATION," to a commentary illustrative of the unansweredness of "POLITICAL JUSTICE."

I have avoided, as I have said before, the imitation of any contemporary style. But there must be a resemblance, which does not depend upon their own will, between all the writers of any particular age. They cannot escape from subjection to a common influence which arises out of an infinite combination of circumstances belonging to the times in which they live, though each is in a degree the author of the very influence by which his being is thus pervaded. Thus, the tragic Poets of the age of Pericles : the Italian revivers of ancient learning: those mighty intellects of our own country that succeeded the Reformation, the translators of the Bible, Shakspeare, Spenser, the Dramatists of the reign of Elizabeth, and Lord Bacon; † the colder spirits of the interval that succeeded ;—all resemble

* In this sense there may be such a thing as perfectibility in works of fiction, notwithstanding the concession often made by the advocates of human improvement, that perfectibility is a term applicable only to science.

each other, and differ from every other in their several classes. In this view of things, Ford can no more be called the imitator of Shakspere, than Shakspere the imitator of Ford. There were perhaps few other points of resemblance between these two men, than that which the universal and inevitable influence of their age produced. And this is an influence which neither the meanest scribbler, nor the sublimest genius of any era, can escape; and which I have not attempted to escape.

I have adopted the stanza of Spenser (a measure incomparably beautiful), not because I consider it a finer model of poetical harmony than the blank verse of Shakspere and Milton, but because in the latter there is no shelter for mediocrity: you must either succeed or fail. This perhaps an aspiring spirit should desire. But I was enticed, also, by the brilliancy and magnificence of sound which a mind that has been nourished upon musical thoughts can produce by a just and harmonious arrangement of the pauses of this measure. Yet there will be found some instances where I have completely failed in this attempt, and one, which I here request the reader to consider as an erratum, where there is left most inadvertently an alexandrine in the middle of a stanza.

But in this, as in every other respect, I have written fearlessly. It is the misfortune of this age, that its Writers, too thoughtless of immortality, are exquisitely sensible to temporary praise or blame. They write with the fear of Reviews before their eyes. This system of criticism sprang up in that torpid interval when Poetry was not. Poetry, and the art which professes to regulate and limit its powers, cannot subsist together. Longinus could not have been the contemporary of Homer, nor Boileau of Horace. Yet this species of criticism never presumed to assert an understanding of its own: it has always, unlike true science, followed, not preceded, the opinion of mankind, and would even now bribe with worthless adulation some of our greatest Poets to impose gratuitous fetters on their own imaginations, and become unconscious accomplices in the daily murder of all genius either not so aspiring or not so fortunate as their own. I have sought therefore to write, as I believe that Homer, Shakspere, and Milton wrote, in utter disregard of anonymous censure. I am certain that calumny and misrepresentation, though it may move me to compassion, cannot disturb my peace. I shall understand the expressive silence of those sagacious enemies who dare not trust themselves to speak. I shall endeavour to extract from the midst of insult, and contempt, and maledictions, those admonitions which may tend to correct whatever imperfections such ensurers may discover in this my first serious appeal to the Public. If certain Critics were as clear-sighted as they are malignant, how great would be the benefit to be derived from their virulent writings! As it is, I fear I shall be malicious enough to be amused with their paltry tricks and lame invectives. Should the public judge that my composition is worthless, I shall indeed bow before the tribunal from which Milton received his crown of immortality, and shall seek to gather, if I live, strength from that defeat, which may nerve me to some new enterprise of thought which may not be worthless. I cannot conceive that Lucretius, when he meditated that poem whose doctrines are yet the basis of our metaphysical knowledge, and whose eloquence has been the wonder of mankind, wrote in awe of such censure as the hired sophists of the impure and superstitious noblemen of Rome might affix to what he should produce. It was at the period when Greece was led captive, and Asia made tributary to the Republic, fast verging itself to slavery and ruin, that a multitude of Syrian captives, bigoted to the worship of their obscene Ashtaroth, and the unworthy successors of Socrates and Zeno, found there a precarious subsistence by administering, under the name of freedom<sup>to</sup> the vices and vanities of the great. These wretched men were skilled to plead, with a superficial but plausible set of sophisms, in favour of that contempt for virtue which is the portion of slaves, and that faith in portents, the most fatal substitute for benevolence in the imaginations of men, which, arising from the enslaved communities of the East, then first began to overwhelm the western nations in its stream. Were these the kind of men whose disapprobation the wise and lofty-minded Lucretius should have regarded with a salutary awe? The latest and perhaps the meanest of those who follow in his footsteps, would disdain to hold life on such conditions.

The Poem now presented to the Public occupied little more than six months in the composition. That period has been devoted to the task with unremitting ardour and enthusiasm. I have exercised a watchful and earnest criticism on my work as it grew under my hands. I would willingly have sent it forth to the world with that perfection which long labour and revision is said to bestow. But I found that if I should gain something in exactness by this method, I might lose much of the newness and energy of imagery and language as it flowed fresh from my mind. And although the mere composition occupied no more than six months, the thoughts thus arranged were slowly gathered in as many years.

I trust that the reader will carefully distinguish between those opinions which have a dramatic propriety in reference to the characters which they are designed to elucidate, and such as are properly my own. The erroneous and degrading idea which men have conceived of a Supreme Being, for instance, is spoken against, but not the Supreme Being itself. The belief which some superstitious persons whom I have brought upon the stage entertain of the Deity, as injurious to the character of his benevolence, is widely different from my own. In recommending also a great and important change in the spirit which animates the social institutions of mankind, I have avoided all flattery to those violent and malignant passions of our nature, which are ever on the watch to mingle with and to alloy the most beneficial innovations. There is no quarter given to Revenge, or Envy, or Prejudice. Love is celebrated everywhere as the sole law which should govern the moral world.

What life and death is : there's not any law
Exceeds his knowledge : neither is it lawful
That he should stoop to any other law.

TO MARY — — .

I.
So now my summer-task is ended, Mary,
And I return to thee, mine own heart's home ;
As to his Queen some victor Knight of Faery,
Earning bright spoils for her enchanted dome ;
Nor thou byslain, that ere my fame became
A star among the stars of mortal night,
If it indeed may cleave its natal gloom,
Its doubtful promise thus I would unite
With thy beloved name, thou Child of love and light.

II.
The toil which stole from thee so many an hour
Is ended—an ! the fruit is at thy feet !
No longer where the woods to frame a bower
With interlaced branches mix and meet,
• Or where with sound like many voices sweet,
Water-falls leap among wild islands green,
Which framed for my lone boat a lone retreat
Of moss-grown trees and weeds, shall I be seen :
But beside thee, where still my heart has ever been.

III.
Thoughts of great deeds were mine, dear Friend, when first
The clouds which wrap this world from youth did pass.
I do remember well the hour which burst
My spirit's sleep : a fresh May-dawn it was,
When I walked forth upon the glittering grass,
And wept, I knew not why : until there rose
From the near school-room, voices, that, alas !
Were but one echo from a world of woes—
The harsh and grating strife of tyrants and of foes.

IV.

And then I clasped my hands and looked around,
 But none was near to mock my streaming eyes,
 Which poured their warm drops on the sunny ground—
 So without shame, I spake :—"I will be wise,
 And just, and free, and mild, if in me lies
 Such power, for I grow weary to behold
 The selfish and the strong still tyrannise
 Without reproach or check." I then controlled
 My tears, my heart grew calm, and I was meek and bold.

V.

And from that hour did I with earnest thought
 Heap knowledge from forbidden mines of lore,
 Yet nothing that my tyrants knew or taught
 I cared to learn, but from that secret store
 Wrought linked at . . . ir for my soul, before
 It might walk forth to war among mankind ;
 Thus power and hope were strengthened more and more
 Within me, till there came upon my mind
 A sense of loneliness, a thirst with which I pined.

VI.

Alas, that love should be a blight and snare
 To those who seek all sympathies in one !—
 Such once I sought in vain ; then black despair,
 The shadow of a starless night, was thrown
 Over the world in which I moved alone :—
 Yet never found I one not false to me,
 Hard hearts, and cold, like weights of icy stone
 Which crushed and withered mine, that could not be
 Aught but a lifeless clog, until revived by thee.

VII.

Thou Friend, whose presence on my wintry heart
 Fell, like bright Spring upon some herbless plain,
 How beautiful and calm and free thou wert
 In thy young wisdom, when the mortal chain
 Of Custom thou didst burst and rend in twain,
 And walked as free as light the cloud among,
 Which many an envious slave then breathed in vain
 From his dim dungeon, and my spirit sprung
 To meet thee from the woes which had begirt it long.

VIII.

No more alone through the world's wilderness,
 Although I trod the paths of high intent,
 I journeyed now : no more companionless,
 Where solitude is like despair, I went. —
 There is the wisdom of a stern content
 When Poverty can blight the just and good,
 When Infamy dares mock the innocent,
 And cherished friends turn with the multitude
 To trample : this was ours, and we unshaken stood !

IX.

Now has descended a serener hour,
 And with inconstant fortune, friends return ;
 Though suffering leaves the knowledge and the power
 Which says :—Let scorn be not repaid with scorn.
 And from thy side two gentle babes are born
 To fill our home with smiles, and thus are we
 Most fortunate beneath life's beaming morn :
 And these delights, and thou, have been to me
 The parents of the Song I consecrate to thee.

X.

Is it, that now my inexperienced singers
 But strike the prelude of a loftier strain ?
 Or, must the lyre on which my spirit lingers
 Soon pause in silence, ne'er to sound again,
 Though it might shake the Anarch Custom's reign,
 And charm the minds of men to Truth's own sway,
 Holier than was Amphion's ? I would fain
 Reply in hope—but I am worn away,
 And Death and Love are yet contending for their prey.

XI.

And what art thou ? I know, but dare not speak :
 Time may interpret to his silent years,
 Yet in the paleness of thy thoughtful cheek,
 And in the light thine ample forehead wears,
 And in thy sweetest smiles, and in thy tears,
 And in thy gentle speech, a prophecy
 Is whispered, to subdue my fondest fears :
 And through thine eyes, even in thy soul I see
 A lamp of vestal fire burning internally.

XII.

They say that thou wert lovely from thy birth,
 Of glorious parents thou aspiring Child :
 I wonder not—for One then left this earth
 Whose life was like a setting planet mild,
 Which clothed thee in the radiance undefiled
 Of its departing glory ; still her fame
 Shines on thee, through the tempests dark and wild
 Which shake these latter days ; and thou caust claim
 The shelter, from thy Sire, of an immortal name.

XIII.

One voice came forth from many a mighty spirit,
 Which was the echo of three thousand years ;
 And the tumultuous world, tood mute to hear it,
 As some lone man who in a desert hears
 The music of his home :—unwepted tears
 Fell on the pale oppressors of our race,
 And Faith, and Custom, and low-thoughted cares,
 Like thunder-stricken dragons, for a space
 Left the torn human heart, their foot and dwelling-place.

xiv.

Truth's deathless voice pauses among mankind !
 If there must be no response to my cry—
 If men must rise and stamp with fury blind
 On his pure name who loves them,—thou and I,
 Sweet Friend ! can look from our tranquillity
 Like lamps into the world's tempestuous night,—
 Two tranquil stars, while clouds are passing by
 Which wrap them from the fondering seaman's sight,
 That burn from year to year with unextinguished light.

CANTO I.

I.

WHEN the last hope of trampled France had failed
 Like a brief dream of unremaining glory,
 From visions of despair I rose, and scaled
 The peak of an aerial promontory,
 Whose caverned base w<sup>t</sup>h the vexed surge was hoary ;
 And saw the golden dawn break forth, and waken
 Each cloud, and every wave :—but transitory
 The calm : for sudden, the firm earth was shaken,
 As if by the last wreck its frame were overtaken.

II.

So as I stood, one blast of muttering thunder
 Burst in far peals along the waveless deep,
 When, gathering fast, around, above, and under,
 Long trains of tremulous mist began to creep,
 Until their complicating lines did steep
 The orient sun in shadow :—not a sound
 Was heard ; one horrible repose did keep
 The forests and the floods, and all around
 Darkness more dread than night was poured upon the ground.

III.

Hark ! 'tis the rushing of a wind that sweeps
 Earth and the ocean. See ! the lightnings yawn
 Deluging Heaven with fire, and the lashed deeps
 Glitter and boil beneath : it rages on,
 One mighty stream, whirlwind and waves upthrown,
 Lightning, and hail, and darkness eddying by,
 There is a pause—the sea-birds, that were gone
 Into their caves to shriek, come forth to spy
 What calm has fall'n on earth, what light is in the sky.

For, where the irresistible storm had cloven
 That fearful darkness, the blue sky was seen
 Fretted with many a fair cloud interwoven
 Most delicately, and the ocean green,
 Beneath that opening spot of blue serene,
 Quivered like burning emerald : calm was spread
 On all below ; but far on high, between
 Earth and the upper air, the vast clouds fled,
 Countless and swift as leaves on autumn's tempest shed.

v.

For ever as the war became more fierce
 Between the whirlwinds and the rack on high,
 That spot grew more serene ; blue light did pierce
 The woof of those white clouds, which seemed to lie
 Far, deep, and motionless ; while through the sky
 The pallid semicircle of the moon
 Past on, in slow and moving majesty ;
 Its upper horn arrayed in mists, which soon
 But slowly fled, like dew beneath the beams of noon.

vi.

I could not choose but gaze ; a fascination
 Dwelt in that moon, and sky, and clouds, which drew
 My fancy thither, and in expectation
 Of what I knew not, I remained :—the hue
 Of the white moon, amid that heaven so blue
 Suddenly stained with shadow did appear ;
 A peck, a cloud, a shape, approaching grew,
 Like a great ship in the sun's sinking sphere
 Beheld afar at sea, and swift it came anear

vii.

Even like a bark, which from a chasm of mountains,
 Dark, vast, and overhanging, on a river
 Which there collects the strength of all its fountains,
 Comes forth, whilst with the speed its frame doth quiver,
 Sails, oars, and stream, tending to one endeavour ;
 So, from that chasm of light a winged Form
 On all the winds of heaven approaching ever
 Fleated, dilating as it came : the storm
 Pursued it with fierce blasts, and lightnings swift and warm.

viii.

A course precipitous, of dizzy speed,
 Suspending thought and breath ; a monstrous sight !
 For in the air do I behold indeed
 An Eagle and a Serpent wreathed in fight.—
 And now, relaxing its impetuous flight,
 Before the aerial rock on which I stood,
 The Eagle, hovering, wheeled to left and right,
 And hung with lingering wings over the flood,
 And startled with its yells the wide air's solitude.

ix.

A shaft of light upon its wings descended,
 And every golden feather gleamed therein—
 Feather and scale inextricably blended.
 The Serpent's mailed and many-coloured skin
 Shone through the plumes; its coils were twined within
 By many a swollen and knotted fold, and high
 And far, the neck receding lithe and thin,
 Sustained a crested head, which warily
 Shifted and glanced before the Eagle's steadfast eye.

x.

Around, around, in ceaseless circles wheeling
 With clang of wings and scream, the Eagle sailed
 Incessantly—sometimes on high concealing
 Its lessening o'bs, sometimes as if it failed,
 Dropped through the air; and still it shrieked and wailed,
 And casting back its eager head, with beak
 And talon unremittingly assailed
 The wretched Serpent, who did ever seek
 Upon his enemy's heart a mortal wound to wreak.

xi.

What life, what power, was kindled and aro. o
 Within the sphere of that appalling fray!
 For, from the encounter of those wondrous foes,
 A vapour like the sea's suspended spray
 Hung gathered: in the void air, far away,
 Fleeted the shattered plumes; bright scuties did leap,
 Where'er the Eagle's talons made their way,
 Like sparks into the darkness:—as they sweep,
 Blood stains the snowy foam of the tumultuous deep.

xii.

Swift chances in that combat—many a check,
 And many a change, a dark and wild turmoil:
 Sometimes the Snake around his enemy's neck
 Locked in stiff rings his adamantine coil,
 Until the Eagle, faint with pain and toil,
 Remitted his strong flight, and near the sea
 Languidly fluttered, hopeless so to foil.
 His adversary, who then reared on high
 His red and burning crest, radiant with victory.

xiii.

Then on the white edge of the bursting surge,
 Where they had sunk together, would the Snake
 Relax his suffocating grasp, and scourge
 The wind with his wild writhings; for to break
 That chain of torment, the fast bird would shake
 That strength of his unconquerable wings
 As in despair, and with his sinewy neck
 Dissolved in sudden shock those linked rings,
 Then soar—as swift as smoke from a volcano springs.

Wile baffled wile, and strength encountered strength,
 Thus long, but unprevailing :—the event
 Of that portentous fight appeared at length :
 Until the lamp of day was almost spent
 It had endured, when lifeless, stark, and rent,
 Hung high that mighty Serpent, and at last
 Fell to the sea, while o'er the continent,
 With clang of wings and scream the Eagle past,
 Heavily borne away on the exhausted blast.

xv.

And with it fled the tempest, so that ocean
 And earth and sky shone through the atmosphere —
 Only, it was strange to see the red commotion
 Of waves like mountains o'er the sinking sphero
 Of sunset sweep, and their fierce roar to hear
 Amid the calm : down the steep path I wound
 To the sea-shore — the evening was most clear
 And beautiful, and there the sea I found
 Calm as a cradled child in dreamless slumber bound.

xvi.

There was a woman, beautiful as morning,
 Sitting beneath the rocks upon the sand
 Of the waste sea—fair as one flower adornin;
 An icy wilderness— each delicate hand
 Lay crossed upon her bosom, and the band
 Of her dark hair had fallen, and so she sate
 Looking upon the waves ; on the bare strand
 Upon the sea-mark a small boat did wait,
 Fair as herself, like Love by Hope left desolate.

xvii.

It seemed that this fair Shape had looked upon
 That unimaginable fight, and now
 That her sweet eyes were weary of the sun,
 As brightly it illustrated her woe ;
 For in the tears which silently to flow
 Paused not, its lustre hung ; she watching aye
 The foam-wreaths which the faint tide wove below
 Upon the spangled sands, groaned heavily.
 And after every groan looked up over the sea.

xviii.

And when she saw the wounded Serpent make
 His path between the waves her lips grew pale,
 Parted and quivered, the tears ceased to break
 From her immovable eyes ; no voice of wail
 Escaped her ; but she rose, and on the gale
 Loosening her star-bright robe and shadowy hair,
 Poured forth her voice : the caverns of the vale
 That opened to the ocean, caught it there,
 And filled with silver sounds the overlowing air.

xix.

She spake in language whose strange melody
 Might not belong to earth. I heard, alone,
 What made its music more melodious be,
 The pity and the love of every tone ;
 But to the snake those accents sweet were known,
 His native tongue and hers : nor did he beat
 The hoar spray idly then, but winding on
 Through the green shadows of the waves that meet
 Near to the shore, did pause beside her snowy feet.

xx.

Then on the sands the Woman sate again,
 And wept and clasped her hands, and all between,
 Renewed the unintelligible strain
 Of her ineloquent voice and eloquent mien ;
 And she unveiled her bosom, and the green
 And glancing shadows of the sea did play
 O'er its marmoreal depth :- one moment seen,
 For ere the next, the Serpent did obey
 Her voice, and, coiled in rest, in her embrace it lay.

xxi.

Then she arose, and smiled on me with eyes
 Serene yet sorrowing, like that planet fair,
 While yet the day-light lingereth in the skies
 Which cleaves with arrowy beams the dark red air,
 And said : To grieve is wise, but the despair
 Was weak and vain which led thee here from sleep :
 This shalt thou know, and more, if thou dost dare
 With me and with this Serpent, o'er the deep,
 A voyage divine and strange, companionship to keep.

xxii.

Her voice was like the wildest, saddest tone,
 Yet sweet, of some loved voice heard long ago.
 I wept. Shall this fair woman all alone
 Over the sea with that fierce Serpent go ?
 His head is on her heart, and who can know
 How soon he may devour his feeble prey ?
 Such were my thoughts, when the tide 'gan to flow :
 And that strange boat, like the moon's shade did sway
 Amid reflected stars that in the waters lay.

xxiii.

A boat of rare device, which had no sail
 But its own curved prow of thin moonstone,
 Wrought like a web of texture fine and frail,
 To catch those gentlest winds which are not known
 To breathe, but by the steady speed alone
 With which it cleaves the sparkling sea ; and now
 We are embarked, the mountains hang and frown
 Over the starry deep that gleams below
 A vast and dim expanse, as o'er the waves we go.

xxiv.

And as we sailed, a strange and awful tale
 That Woman told, like such mysterious dream
 As makes the slumberer's check with wonder pale !
 'Twas midnight, and around, a shoreless stream,
 Wide ocean rolled, when that majestic theme
 Shrined in her heart found utterance, and she bent
 Her looks on mine ; those eyes a kindling beam
 Of love divine into my spirit sent,
 And, ere her lips could move, made the air eloquent.

xxv.

Speak not to me, but hear ! much shalt thou learn,
 Much must remain unthought, and more untold,
 In the dark Future's ever-flowing urn :
 Know then, that from the depth of ages old
 Two Powers o'er mortal things dominion hold,
 Ruling the world with a divided lot,
 Immortal, all-pervading, manifold,
 Twiū Gemi, equal Gods—when life and thought
 Sprung forth, they burst the womb of inessential Nought.

xxvi.

The ear'liest dweller of the world alone
 Stood on the verge of chaos : Lo ! afar
 O'er the wide wild abyss two meteors shone,
 Sprung from the depth of its tempestuous jar :
 A blood-red Comet and the Morning Star
 Mingling their beams in combat—as he stood
 All thoughts within his mind waged mutual war
 In dreadful sympathy—when to the flood
 That fair star fell, he turned and shed his brother's blood.

xxvii.

Thus evil triumphed, and the Spirit of Evil,
 One Power of many shapes which none may know,
 One Shape of many names ; the Fiend did revel
 In victory, reigning o'er a world of woe,
 For the new race of man went to and fro,
 Famished and homeless, loathed and loathing, wild,
 And hating good—for his immortal foe
 He changed from starry shape, 'leantous and mild,
 To a dire Snake, with man and beast unreconciled.

xxviii.

The darkness lingering o'er the dawn of things,
 Was Evil's breath and life : this made him strong
 To soar aloft with overshadowing wings ;
 And the great Spirit of Good did creep 'mong
 The nations of mankind, and every tongue
 Cursed, and blasphemed him as he past ; for none
 Knew good from evil, though their names were hung
 In mockery o'er the fane where many a groan,
 King, and Lord, and God, the conquering Fiend did own.

The Fiend, whose name was Legion ; Death, Decay,
 Earthquake, and Blight, and Want, and Madness pale,
 Winged and wan diseases, an array
 Numerous as leaves that strew the autumnal gale ;
 Poison, a snake in flowers, beneath the veil
 Of food and mirth, hiding his mortal head ;
 And, without whom all these might nought avail,
 Fear, Hatred, Faith, and Tyranny, who spread
 Those subtle nets which snare the living and the dead.

xxx.

His spirit is their power, and they his slaves
 In air, in light, and thought, and language dwell ;
 And keep their state from palaces to graves,
 In all resorts of ...—invisiblē :
 But when, in ebon mirror, Nightmare fell,
 To tyrant or impostor bids them rise,
 Black winged demon forms--whom, from the hell,
 His reign and dwelling beneath nether skies,
 He loosens to their dark and blasting ministries.

xxxv.

In the world's youth his empire was as firm
 As its foundations—soon the Spirit of Good,
 Though in the likeness of a loathsome worm,
 Sprang from the billows of the formless flood,
 Which shrank and fled ; and with that fiend of blood
 Renewed the doubtful war - thrones then first shook,
 And earth's immense and trampled multitude,
 In hope on their own powers began to look,
 And Fear, the demon pale, his sanguine shrine forsook.

xxxvi.

Then Greece arose, and to its bards and sages,
 In dream the golden-pinioned Genii came,
 Even where they slept amid the night of ages
 Steeping their hearts in the divinest flame
 Which thy breath kindled, Power of holiest name !
 And oft in cycles since, when darkness gave
 New weapons to thy foe, their sunlike fame
 Upon the combat shone—a light to save,
 Like Paradise spread forth beyond the shadowy grave.

xxxvii.

Such is this conflict—when mankind doth strive
 With its oppressors in a strife of blood,
 Or when free thoughts, like lightnings, are alive ;
 And in each bosom of the multitude
 Justice and truth, with custom's hydra brood,
 Wage silent war ;—when priests and kings dissemble
 In smiles or frowns their fierce disquietude,
 When round pure hearts, a host of hopes assemble,
 The Snake and Eagle meet—the world's foundations tremble !

XXXIV.

Thou hast beheld that fight—when to thy home
 Thou dost return, steep not its hearth in tears ;
 Though thou may'st hear that earth is now become
 The tyrant's garbage, which to his compeers,
 The vile reward of their dishonoured years,
 He will dividing give.—The victor Fiend
 Omnipotent of yore, now quails, and fears
 His triumph dearly won, which soon will lend
 An impulse swift and sure to his approaching end.

XXXV.

List, stranger, list ! mine is a human form,
 Like that thou wearest—touch me—shrink not now !
 My hand thou feel'st is not a ghost's, but warm
 With human blood.—'Twas many years ago,
 Since first my thirsting soul aspired to know
 The secrets of this wondrous world, when deep
 My heart was pierced with sympathy, for woe
 Which could not be mine own—and thought did keep
 In dream, unnatural watch beside an infant's sleep.

XXXVI.

Woe could not be mine own, since far from men
 I dwelt, a free and happy orphan child,
 By the sea shore, in a deep mountain glen ;
 And near the waves, and through the forests wild,
 I roamed, to storm and darkness reconciled,
 For I was calm while tempest shook the sky :
 But, when the breathless heavens in beauty smiled,
 I wept sweet tears, yet too tumultuously
 For peace, and clasped my hands aloft in ecstasy.

XXXVII.

These were forebodings of my fate.—Before
 A woman's heart beat in my virgin breast,
 It had been nurtured in divinest lore :
 A dying poet gave me books, and blesst
 With wild but holy talk the sweet unrest
 In which I watched him as he died away—
 A youth with hoary hair—a fleeting guest
 Of our lone mountains—and this lore did sway
 My spirit like a storm, contending there alway.

XXXVIII.

Thus the dark tale which hi-<sup>hi</sup> tory doth unfold,
 I knew, but not, methinks, as others know,
 For they weep not ; and Wisdom had unrolled
 The clouds which hide the gulf of mort<sup>d</sup>l woo :
 To few can she that warning vision show,
 For I loved all things with intense devotion ;
 So that when Hope's deep source in fullest flow,
 Like earthquake did uplift the stagnant ocean
 Of human thoughts—mine shook beneath the wild emotion.

When first the living blood through all these veins
 Kindled a thought in sense, great France sprang forth
 And seized, as if to break, the ponderous chains
 Which bind in woe the nations of the earth.
 I saw, and started from my cottage hearth ;
 And to the clouds and waves in tameless gladness
 Shrieked, till they caught immeasurable mirth —
 And laughed in light and music : soon sweet madness
 Was poured upon my heart, a soft and thrilling sadness.

XL.

Deep slumber fell on me ;—my dreams were fire,
 Soft and delightful thoughts did rest and hover
 Like shadows o'er my brain ; and strange desire
 The tempest of a passion, raging over
 My tranquil soul, its depths with light did cover,
 Which past ; and calm, and darkness, sweeter far
 Came—then I loved; but not a human lover !
 For when I rose from sleep, the Morning Star [were Shone through the woodbine wreaths which round my casement

XLI.

'Twas like an eye which seemed to smile on me.
 I watched till, by the sun made pale, it sank
 Under the billows of the heaving sea ;
 But from its beams deep love my spirit drank,
 And to my brain the boundless world now shrank
 Into one thought—one image—yea, for ever !
 Even like the day's-spring, poured on vapours dank,
 The beams of that one star did shoot and quiver
 Through my benighted mind—and were extinguished never.

XLII.

The day past thus : at night, methought in dream
 A shape of speechless beauty did appear ;
 It stood like light on a careering stream
 Of golden clouds which shook the atmosphere ;
 A winged youth, his radiant brow did wear
 The Morning Star : a wild dissolving bliss
 Over my frame he breathed, approaching near,
 And bent his eyes of kindling tenderness
 Near mine, and on my lips impressed a lingering kiss,

XLIII.

And said : A Spirit loves thee, mortal maiden,
 How wilt thou prove thy worth ? Then joy and sleep
 Together fled ; my soul was deeply laden,
 And to the shore I went to muse and weep ;
 But as I moved, over my heart did creep
 A joy less soft, but more profound and strong
 Than my sweet dream ; and it forbade to keep
 The path of the sea-shore : that Spirit's tongue
 Seemed whispering in my heart, and bore my steps along.

How, to that vast and peopled city led,
 Which was a field of holy warfare then,
 I walked among the dying and the dead,
 And shared in fearless deeds with evil men,
 Calm as an angel in the dragon's den—
 How I braved death for liberty and truth,
 And spurned at peace, and power, and fame ; and when
 Those hopes had lost the glory of their youth,
 How sadly I returned—might move the hearer's ruth.

XLV.

Warm tears throng fast ! the tale may not be said—
 Know then, that when this grief had been subdued,
 I was not left, like others, cold and dead ;
 The Spirit whom I loved in solitude
 Sustained his child : the tempest-shaken wood,
 The waves, the fountains, and the hush of night—
 These were his voice, and well I understood
 His smile divine when the calm sea was bright
 With silent stars, and Heaven was breathless with delight.

XLVI.

In lonely glens, amid the roar of rivers,
 When the dim nights were moonless, have I known
 Joys which no tongue can tell ; my pale lip quivers
 When thought revisits them :—know thou alone,
 That after many wondrous years were flown,
 I was awakened by a shriek of woe ;
 And over me a mystic robe was thrown,
 By viewless hands, and a bright star did glow
 Before my steps—the Snake then met his mortal foe.

XLVII.

Thou fear'st not then the Serpent on thy heart ?
 Fear it ! she said with brief and passionate cry,
 And spake no more : that silence made me start—
 I looked, and we were sailing pleasantly,
 Swift as a cloud between the sea and sky,
 Beneath the rising moon seen far away ;
 Mountains of ice, like sapphire, piled on high
 Temming the horizon round, in silence lay
 On the still waters,—these we did approach alway.

XLVIII.

And swift and swifter grew the vessel's motion,
 So that a dizzy trance fell on my brain—
 Wild music woke me : we had past the ocean
 Which girds the pole, Nature's remotest reign—
 And we glode fast o'er a pell-mell plain
 Of waters, azure with the noon-tide day.
 Ethereal mountains shone around—a Fane
 Stood in the midst, girt by green isles which lay
 On the blue sunny deep, resplendent far away.

XIX.

It was a Temple, such as mortal hand
Has never built, nor ecstasy, or dream,
Reared in the cities of enchanted land :
'Twas likest Heaven, ere yet day's purple streak
Ebbs o'er the western forest, while the glean
Of the unrisen moon among the clouds
Is gathering—when with many a golden beam
The thronging constellations rush in crowds,
Paving with fire the sky and the marmoreal floods.

L.

Like what may be conceived of this vast dome,
When from the depths which thought can seldom pierce
Genius beholds it . . . his native home,
Girt by the deserts of the Universe,
Yet, nor in painting's light, or mightier verse,
Or sculpture's marble language, can invest
That shape to mortal sense—such glooms immense
That incommunicable sight, and rest
Upon the labouring brain and over-burthened breast.

II.

Winding among the lawny islands fair,
Whose bloomy forests tarred the shadowy deep,
The wingless boat paused where an ivory stair
Its fretwork in the crystal sea did steep,
Encircling that vast Fane's aerial heap :
We disembarked, and through a portal wide
We passed—whose roof of moonstone carved, did keep
A glimmering o'er the forms on every side,
Sculptures like life and thought ; immovable, deep-eyed.

III.

We came to a vast hall, whose glorious roof
Was diamond, which had drunk the lightning's sheen
In darkness, and now poured it through the woof
Of spell-inwoven clouds hung there to screen
Its blinding splendour—through such veil was seen
That work of subtlest power, divine and rare ;
Orb above orb, with starry shapes between,
And horned moons, and meteors strange and fair,
On night-black columns poised—one hollow hemisphere !

IV.

Ten thousand columns in that quivering light
Distinct—between whose shafts wound far away
The long and labyrinthine aisles - more bright
With their own radiance than the Heaven of Day ;
And on the jasper walls around, there lay
Paintings, the poesy of mightiest thought,
Which did the Spirit's history display ;
A tale of passionate change, divinely taught,
Which, in their winged dance, unconscious Genii wrought.

Beneath, there sate on many a sapphire throne,
 The great, who had departed from mankind,
 A mighty Senate ; some whose white hair shone
 Like mountain snow, mild, beautiful, and blind.
 Some, female forms, whose gestures beamed with mind ;
 And ardent youths, and children bright and fair ;
 And some had lyres whose strings were intertwined
 With pale and clinging flames, which ever there
 Waked faint yet thrilling sounds that pierced the crystal air.

LV.

One seat was vacant in the midst, a throne,
 Reared on a pyramid like sculptured flame,
 Distinct with circling steps which rested on
 Their own deep fire—soon as the woman came
 Into that hall, she shrieked the Spirit's name
 And fell ; and vanished slowly from the sight.
 Darkness arose from her dissolving frame,
 Which gathering, filled that dome of woven light,
 Blotting its sphered stars with supernatural night.

LVI.

Then first two glittering lights were seen to glide
 In circles on the amethystine floor,
 Small serpent eyes trailing from side to side,
 Like meteors on a river's grassy shore,
 They round each other rolled, dilating more
 And more—then rose, commingling into one,
 One clear and mighty planet hanging o'er
 A cloud of deepest shadow which was thrown
 Athwart the gle wing steps and the crystalline throne.

LVII.

The cloud which rested on that cone of flame
 Was cloven : beneath the planet sate a Form,
 Fairer than tongue can speak or thought may frame,
 The radiance of whose limbs rose-like and warm
 Flowed forth, and did with softest light inform
 The shadowy dome, the sculptures, and the state
 Of those assembled shapes—with clinging charm
 Sinking upon their hearts and mine —He sate
 Majestic yet most mild—calm, yet compassionate.

LVIII.

Wonder and joy a passing faintness threw
 Over my brow—a hand support'd me,
 Whose touch was magic strength : an eye of blue
 Looked into mine, like moonlight, soothingly ;
 And a voice said—Thou must a listener be
 This day—two mighty spirits now return,
 Like birds of calm, from the world's raging sea,
 They pour fresh light from Hope's immortal urn :
 A tale of human power—despair not—list and learn !

LIX.

I looked, and lo ! one stood forth eloquently,
 His eyes were dark and deep, and the clear brow
 Which shadowed them was like the morning sky,
 The cloudless Heaven of Spring, when in their flow
 Through the bright air, the soft winds as they blow
 Wake the green world—his gestures did obey
 The oracular mind that made his features glow,
 And where his curved lips half open lay,
 Passion's divinest stream had made impetuous way.

LX.

Beneath the darkness of his outspread hair
 He stood thus beautiful : but there was One
 Who sate beside him like his shadow there,
 And held his hand—far lovelier—she was known
 To be thus fair by the few lines alone
 Which through her floating locks and gathered cloke,
 Glances of soul-dissolving glory, shone :—
 None else beheld her eyes, in him they woke Memories which found a tongue, as thus he silence broke.

CANTO II.

I.

THE star-light smile of children, the sweet looks
 Of women, the fair breast from which I fed,
 The murmur of the unreposing brooks,
 And the green light which, shifting overhead,
 Some tangled bower of vines around me shed,
 The shells on the sea-sand, and the wild flowers,
 The lamp-light through the rafters cheerly spread,
 And on the twining flax—in life's young hours
 These sights and sounds did nurse my spirit's folded powers.

II.

In Argolis beside the echoing sea,
 Such impulses within my mortal frame
 Arose, and they were dear to memory,
 Like tokens of the dead :—but others came
 Soon, in another shape : the wondrous fame
 Of the past world, the vital words and deeds
 Of minds whom neither time nor change can tame,
 Traditions dark and old, whence evil creeds
 Start forth, and whose dim shade a stream of poison feeds.

III.

I heard, as all have heard, the various story
 Of human life, and wept unwilling tears.
 Feeble historians of its shame and glory,
 False disputants on all its hopes and fears,
 Victims who worshipped ruin,—chroniclers
 Of daily scorn, and slaves who loathed their state ;
 Yet flattering power had given its ministers
 A throne of judgment in the grave—'twas fate,
 That among such as these my youth should seek its mate.

IV.

The land in which I lived, by a fell bane
 Was withered up. Tyrants dwelt side by side,
 And stabled in our homes,—until the chain
 Stifled the captive's cry, and to abide
 That blasting curse men had no shame—all vied
 In evil, slave and despot ; fear with lust
 Strange fellowship through mutual hate had tied,
 Like two dark serpents tangled in the dust,
 Which on the paths of men their mingling poison thrust.

V.

Earth, our bright home, its mountains and its waters,
 And the ethereal shapes which are suspended
 Over its green expanse, and those fair daughters,
 The clouds, of Sun and Ocean, who have blended
 The colours of the air since first extended
 It cradled the young world, none wandered forth
 To see or feel : a darkness had descended
 On every heart : the light which shows its worth,
 Must among gentle thoughts and fearless take its birth.

VI.

This vital world, this home of happy spirits,
 Was as a dungeon to my blasted kind,
 All that despair from murdered hope inherits
 They sought, and in their helpless misery blind,
 A deeper prison and heavier chains did find,
 And stronger tyrants :—a dark gulf before,
 The realm of a stern Ruler, yawned ; behind,
 Terror and Time conflicting drove, and bore
 On their tempestuous flood the shrieking wretch from shore.

VII.

Out of that Ocean's wrecks had Guilt and Woe
 Framed a dark dwelling for their homel as thought,
 And, starting at the ghosts which to and fro
 Glide o'er its dim and gloomy strand, had brought
 The worship thence which they each other taught.
 Well might men loathe their life, well might they turn
 Even to the ills again from which they sought
 Such refuge after death !—well might they learn
 To gaze on this fair world with hopeless unconcern !

VIII.

For they all pined in bondage ; body and soul,
 Tyrant and slave, victim and torturer, bent
 Before one Power, to which supreme control
 Over their will by their own weakness lent,
 Made all its many names omnipotent ;
 All symbols of things evil, all divine ;
 And hymns of blood or mockery, which rent
 The air from all its fanes, did intertwine
 Imposture's impious toils round each discordant shrine.

IX.

I heard, as all have heard, life's various story,
 And in no careless heart transcribed the tale ;
 But, from the sneers of men who had grown hoary
 In shame and scorn, from groans of crowds made pale
 By famine, from a mother's desolate wail
 O'er her polluted child, from innocent blood
 Poured on the earth, and brows anxious and pale
 With the heart's warfare ; did I gather food
 To feed my many thoughts :—a tameless multitude.

X.

I wandered through the wrecks of days departed
 Far by the desolated shore, when even
 O'er the still sea and jagged islets darted
 The light of moonrise ; in the northern Heaven,
 Among the clouds near the horizon driven,
 The mountains lay beneath one planet pale ;
 Around me broken tombs and columns riven
 Looked vast in twilight, and the sorrowing gale
 Waked in those ruins grey its everlasting wail !

XI.

I knew not who had framed these wonders then,
 Nor had I heard the story of their deeds ;
 But dwellings of a race of mightier men,
 And monuments of less ungentle creeds
 Tell their own tale to him who wisely heeds
 The language which they speak ; and now, to me
 The moonlight making pale the blooming weeds,
 The bright stars shining in the breathless sea,
 Interpreted those scrolls of mortal mystery.

XII.

Such man has been, and such may yet become !
 Ay, wiser, greater, gentler, even than they
 Who on the fragments of yon shattered dome
 Have stamped the sign of power—I felt the sway
 Of the vast stream of ages bear away
 My floating thoughts—my heart beat loud and fast --
 Even as a storm let loose beneath the ray
 Of the still moon, my spirit onward past
 Beneath truth's steady beams upon its tumult cast.

xiii.

It shall be thus no more ! too long, too long,
 Sons of the glorious dead ! have ye lain bound
 In darkness and in ruin.—Hope is strong,
 Justice and Truth their winged child have found.—
 Awake ! arise ! until the mighty sound
 Of your career shall scatter in its gust
 The thrones of the oppressor, and the ground
 Hide the last altar's unregarded dust,
 Whose Idol has so long betrayed your impious trust.

xiv.

It must be so—I will arise and waken
 The multitude, and like a sulphurous hill,
 Which on a sudden from its snows had shaken
 The swoon of ages, it shall burst, and fill
 The world with cleansing fire ; it must, it will—
 It may not be restrained !—and who shall stand—
 Amid the rocking earthquake stedfast still,
 But Laon ? on high Freedom's desert land
 A tower whose marble walls the leagued storms withstand !

xv.

One summer night, in commune with the hope
 Thus deeply fed, amid those ruins grey
 I watched beneath the dark sky's starry cope ;
 And ever from that hour upon me lay
 The burthen of this hope, and night or day,
 In vision or in dream, clove to my breast :
 Among mankind, or when gone far away
 To the lone shores and mountains, 'twas a guest,
 Which followed where I fled, and watched when I did rest.

xvi.

These hopes found words through which my spirit sought
 To weave a bondage of such sympathy
 As might create some response to the thought
 Which ruled me now—and as the vapours lie
 Bright in the outspread morning's radiance,
 So were these thoughts invested with the light
 Of language ; and all bosoms made reply
 On which its lustre streamed, whene'er it might Thro' darkness wide and deep those tranced spirits smite.

xvii.

Yes, many an eye with dizzy tears was dim,
 And oft I thought to clasp my own heart's brother,
 When I could feel the listener's senses, swim,
 And hear his breath its own swift gaspings smother
 Even as my words evoked them—and another,
 And yet another, I did fondly deem,
 Felt that we all were sons of one great mother ;
 And the cold truth such sad reverse did seem.
 As to awake in grief from some delightful dream.

xviii.

Yes, oft beside the ruined labyrinth
 Which skirts the hairy caves of the green deep,
 Did Laon and his friend on one grey plinth,
 Round whose worn base the wild waves hiss and leap,
 Resting at eve, a lofty converse keep :
 And that his friend was false, may now be said
 Calmly—that he like other men could weep
 Tears which are lies, and could betray and spread
 Snares for that guileless heart which for his own had bled.

xix.

Then, had no great aim recompensed my sorrow,
 I must have sought dark respite from its stress—
 In dreamless rest, in sleep that sees no morrow—
 For to tread life's dismaying wilderness
 Without one smile to cheer, one voice to bless,
 Amid the snares and scoffs of human kind,
 Is hard—but I betrayed it not, nor less
 With love that scorned return, sought to unbind
 The interwoven clouds which make its wisdom blind.

xx.

With deathless minds, which leave where they have past
 A path of light, my soul communion knew ;
 Till from that glorious intercourse, at last,
 As from a mine of magic store, I drew
 Words which were weapons ;—round my heart there grew
 The adamantine armour of their power,
 And from my fancy wings of golden hue
 Sprang forth—yet not alone from wisdom's tower,
 A minister of truth,—these plumes young Laon bore.

xxi.

An orphan with my parents lived, whose eyes
 Were load-stars of delight, which drew me home
 When I might wander forth ; nor did I prize
 Aught human thing beneath Heaven's mighty dome
 Beyond this child : so when sad hours were come,
 And baffled hope like ice still clung to me,
 Since kin were cold, and friends had now become Heartless and false. I turned from all to be,
 Cythna, the only source of tears and smiles to thee.

xxii.

What wert thou then ? A child most infantine,
 Yet wandering far beyond that innocent ago
 In all but its sweet looks and mien divine ;
 Even then, methought, with the world's tyrant rage
 A patient warfare thy young heart did wage,
 When those soft eyes of scarcely conscious thought,
 Some tale, or thine own fancies, would engage
 To overflow with tears, or converse fraught
 With passion, o'er their depths its fleeting light had wrought.

xxiii.

She moved upon this earth a shape of brightness,
 A power, that from its objects scarcely drew
 One impulse of her being—in her lightness
 Most like some radiant cloud of morning dew
 Which wanders through the waste air's pathless blue,
 To nourish some far desert ; she did seem Beside me, gathering beauty as she grew,
 Like the bright shade of some immortal dream
 Which walks, when tempest sleeps, the wave of life's dark stream.

xxiv.

As mine own shadow was this child to me,
 A second self, far dearer and more fair ;
 Which clothed in undissolving radiancy
 All those steep paths which languor and despair
 Of human things had made so dark and bare,
 But which I trod alone—nor, till bereft
 Of friends, and overcome by lonely care,
 Knew I what solace for that loss was left,
 Though by a bitter wound my trusting heart was clost.

xxv.

Once she was dear, now she was all I had
 To love in human life—this playmate sweet,
 This child of twelve years old—so she was made
 My sole associate, and her willing feet
 Wandered with mine where earth and ocean meet,
 Beyond the aerial mountains whose vast cells
 The unreposing billows ever beat,
 Through forests wide and old, and lawny dells,
 Where boughs of incense droop over the emerald wells.

xxvi.

And warm and light I felt her clasping hand
 When twined in mine : she followed where I went,
 Through the lone paths of our immortal land.
 It had no waste, but some memorial lent
 Which strung me to my toil—some monument
 Vital with mind : then Cythna by my side,
 Until the bright and beaming day were spent,
 Would rest, with looks entreating to abide,
 Too earnest and too sweet ever to be denied.

xxvii.

And soon I could not have refused her—thus
 For ever, day and night, we two were ne'er
 Parted, but when brief sleep div'd us :
 And, when the pauses of the lul'ing air
 Of noon beside the sea had mad• a lair
 For her soothed senses, in my arms she slept,
 And I kept watch over her slumber, there,
 While, as the shifting visions over her swept,
 Amid her innocent rest by turns she smiled and wept.

xxviii.

And, in the murmur of her dreams, was heard
 Sometimes the name of Laon :—suddenly
 She would arise, and, like the secret bird
 Whom sunset wakens, fill the shore and sky
 With her sweet accents—a wild melody !
 Hymns which my soul had woven to Freedom, strong
 The source of passion, whence they rose to be
 Triumphant strains, which, like a spirit's tongue,
 To the enchanted waves that child of glory sung.

xxix.

Her white arms lifted through the shadowy stream
 Of her loose hair—oh, excellently great
 Seemed to me then my purpose, the vast theme
 Of those impassioned songs, when Cythna sate
 Amid the calm which rapture doth create
 After its tumult, her heart vibrating,
 Her spirit o'er the ocean's floating state
 From her deep eyes far wandering, on the wing
 Of visions that were mine, beyond its utmost spring.

xxx.

For, before Cythna loved it, had my song
 Peopled with thoughts the boundless universe,
 A mighty congregation, which were strong
 Where'er they trod the darkness to disperse
 The cloud of that unutterable curse
 Which clings upon mankind :—all things became
 Slaves to my holy and heroic verse,
 Earth, sea, and sky, the planets, life, and fame,
 And fate, or whate'er else binds the world's wondrous frame.

xxxI.

And this beloved child thus felt the sway
 Of my conceptions, gathering like a cloud
 The very wind on which it rolls away :
 Hers too were all my thoughts, ere yet, endowed
 With music and with light, their fountains flowed
 In poetry ; and her still and earnest face,
 Pallid with feelings which intensely glowed
 Within, was turned on mine with speechless grace,
 Watching the hopes which there her heart had learned to trace.

xxxII.

In me, communion with this purest being
 Kindled intenser zeal, and made me wise
 In knowledge, which in hers mine own mind seeing,
 Left in the human world few mysteries :
 How without fear of evil or disguise
 Was Cythna !—what a spirit strong and mild,
 Which death, or pain, or peril, could despise,
 Yet melt in tenderness ! what genius wild,
 Yet mighty, was inclosed within one simple child !

XXXIII.

New lore was this—old age with its grey hair,
 And wrinkled legends of unworthy things,
 And icy sneers, is nought ; it cannot dare
 To burst the chains which life for ever flings
 On the entangled soul's aspiring wings,
 So is it cold and cruel, and is made
 The careless slave of that dark power which brings
 Evil, like blight on man, who, still betrayed,
 Laughs o'er the grave in which his living hopes are laid.

XXXIV.

Nor are the strong and the severe to keep
 The empire of the world : thus Cythna taught
 Even in the visions of her eloquent sleep,
 Unconscious of the power through which she wrought
 The woof of such intelligible thought,
 As from the tranquil strength which cradled lay
 In her smile-peopled rest, my spirit sought
 Why the deceiver and the slave has sway
 O'er heralds so divine of truth's arising day.

XXXV.

Within that fairest form, the female mind
 Untainted by the poison clouds which rest
 On the dark world, a sacred home did find :
 But else, from the wide earth's maternal breast,
 Victorious Evil, which had dispossess'd
 All native power, had those fair children torn,
 And made them slaves to soothe his vile unrest,
 And minister to lust its joys forlorn,
 Till they had learned to breathe the atmosphere of scorn.

XXXVI.

This misery was but coldly felt, till she Became my only friend, who had indued
 My purpose with a wider sympathy ;
 Thus, Cythna mourned with me the servitude
 In which the half of humankind were mewed,
 Victims of lust and hate, the slaves of slaves :
 She mourned that grace and power were thrown as food
 To the hyena lust, who, among graves,
 Over his loathed meal, laughing in agony, raves.

XXXVII.

And I, still gazing on that glorious child,
 Even as these thoughts flushed o'er her :—" Cythna sweet,
 Well with the world art thou unenclosed ;
 Never will peace and human nature meet,
 Till free and equal man and woman greet
 Domestic peace ; and ere this power can make
 In human hearts its calm and holy seat,
 This slavery must be broken"—as I spake,
 From Cythna's eyes a light of exultation broke.

xxxviii.

She replied earnestly :—“ It shall be mine,
 This task, mine, Laon !—thou hast much to gain ;
 Nor wilt thou at poor Cythna’s pride repine,
 If she should lead a happy female train
 To meet thee over the rejoicing plain,
 When myriads at thy call shall throng around
 The Golden City.”—Then the child did strain
 My arm upon her tremulous heart, and wound
 Her own about my neck, till some reply she found.

xxxix.

I smiled, and spake not.—“ Wherefore dost thou smile
 At what I say ? Laon, I am not weak,
 And, though my cheek might become pale the while,
 With thee, if thou desirest, will I seek
 Through their array of banded slaves to wreak
 Ruin upon the tyrants. I had thought
 It was more hard to turn my unpractised cheek
 To scorn and shame, and this beloved spot
 And theo, O dearest friend, to leave and murmur not.

xl.

“ Whence came I what I am ? Thou, Laon, knowest
 How a young child should thus undaunted be ;
 Methinks, it is a power which thou bestowest,
 Through which I seek, by most resembling thee,
 So to become most good, and great, and free ;
 Yet far beyond this Ocean’s utmost roar
 In towers and huts are many like to me,
 Who, could they see thine eyes, or feel such lore
 As I have learnt from them, like me would fear no more.

xli.

“ Thinkest thou that I shall speak unskilfully,
 And none will heed me ? I remember now,
 How once, a slave in tortures doomed to die,
 Was saved, because in accents sweet and low
 He sang a song his Judge loved long ago,
 As he was led to death.—All shall relent
 Who hear me—tears as mine have flowed, shall flow,
 Hearts beat as mine now beats, with such intent
 As renovates the world ; a will omnipotent !

xlii.

“ Yes, I will tread Pride’s golden palaces,
 Through Penury’s roofless huts and squalid cells
 Will I descend, where’er in abjectness
 Woman with some vile slave her tyrant dwells,
 There with the music of thine own sweet spells
 Will disenchant the captives, and will pour
 For the despairing, from the crystal wells
 Of thy deep spirit, reason’s mighty lore,
 And power shall then abound, and hope arise once more.

XLIII.

"Can man be free if woman be a slave?
 Chain one who lives, and breathes this boundless air
 To the corruption of a closed grave!
 Can they whose mates are beasts, condemned to bear
 Scorn, heavier far than toil or anguish, dare
 To trample their oppressors? In their home
 Among their babes, thou knowest a curse would wear
 The shape of woman—hoary crime would come
 Behind, and fraud rebuild religion's tottering dome.

XLIV.

"I am a child:—I would not yet depart.
 When I go forth alone, bearing the lamp
 Aloft which thou hast kindled in my heart,
 Millions of slaves from many a dungeon damp
 Shall leap in joy, as the benumbing cramp
 Of ages leaves their limbs—no ill may harm
 Thy Cythna ever—truth its radiant stamp
 Has fixed, as an invulnerable charm,
 Upon her children's brow, dark falsehood to disarm.

XLV.

"Wait yet awhile for the appointed day.—
 Thou wilt depart, and I with tears shall stand
 Watching thy dim sail skirt the ocean grey;
 Amid the dwellers of this lonely land
 I shall remain alone—and thy command
 Shall then dissolve the world's unquiet trance,
 And, multitudinous as the desert sand
 Borne on the storm, its millions shall advance,
 Thronging round thee, the light of their deliverance.

XLVI.

"Then, like the forests of some pathless mountain,
 Which from remotest glens two warring winds
 Involve in fire, which not the loosened fountain
 Of broadest floods might quench, shall all the kinds
 Of evil catch from our uniting minds
 The spark which must consume them;—Cythna then
 Will have cast off the impotence that binds
 Her childhood now, and through the paths of men
 Will pass, as the charmed bird that haunts the serpent's den.

XLVII.

"We part!—O Laon, I must dare, nor tremble,
 To meet those looks no more!—<sup>Oh,</sup> hear y stroke!
 Sweet brother of my soul; can I disseminate
 The agony of this thought?"—As thus she spoke
 The gathered sobs her quivering accents broke,
 And in my arms she hid her beating breast.
 I remained still for tears—sudden she woke
 As one awakes from sleep, and wildly prest
 Y bosom, her whole frame impetuously possest.

XLVIII.

"We part to meet again—but yon blue waste,
 Yon desert wide and deep, holds no recess
 Within whose happy silence, thus embraced
 We might survive all ills in one caress:
 Nor doth the grave—I fear 'tis passionless---
 Nor yon cold vacant Heaven :—we meet again
 Within the minds of men, whose lips shall bless
 Our memory, and whose hopes its light retain
 When these dissevered bones are trodden in the plain."

XLIX.

I could not speak, though she had ceased, for now
 The fountains of her feeling, swift and deep,
 Seemed to suspen' the tumult of their flow;
 So we arose, and by the star-light steep
 Went homeward—neither did we speak nor weep,
 But pale, were calm.—With passion thus subdued,
 Like evening shades that o'er the mountains creep,
 We moved towards our home; where, in this mood,
 Each from the other sought refuge in solitude.

CANTO III.

I.

WHAT thoughts had sway o'er Cythna's lonely slumber
 That night, I know not; but my own did seem
 As if they might ten thousand years outnumber
 Of waking life, the visions of a dream,
 Which hid in one dim gulf the troubled stream
 Of mind; a boundless chaos wild and vast,
 Whose limits yet were never memory's theme :
 And I lay straggling as its whirlwinds past.
 Sometimes for rapture sick, sometimes for pain agast.

II.

Two hours, whose mighty circle did embrace
 More time than might make grey the infant world,
 Rolled thus, a weary and tumultuous space :
 When the third came, like mist on breezes curled,
 From my dim sleep a shadow was unfurled :
 Methought, upon the threshold of a cave
 I sat with Cythna; drooping briony, pearl'd
 With dew from the wild streamlet's shattered wave,
 Hung, where we sate, to taste the joys which Nature gave.

III.

We lived a day as we were wont to live,
 But nature had a robe of glory on,
 And the bright air o'er every shape did weave
 • Intenser hues, so that the herbless stone,
 The leafless bough among the leaves alone,
 Had being clearer than its own could be,
 And Cythna's pure and radiant self was shown
 In this strange vision, so divine to me,
 That if I loved before, now love was agony.

IV.

Morn fled, noon came, evening, then night descended,
 And we prolonged calm talk beneath the sphere
 Of the calm moon—when, suddenly was blended
 With our repose a nameless sense of fear ;
 And from the cave behind I seemed to hear
 Sounds gathering upwards !—accents incomplete,
 And stifled shrieks.—and now, more near and near,
 A tumult and a rush of thronging feet
 The cavern's secret depths beneath the earth did beat.

V.

The scene was changed, and away, away, away !
 Through the air and over the sea we sped,
 And Cythna in my sheltering bosom lay,
 And the winds bore me ; —through the darkness spread
 Around, the gaping earth then vomited
 Legions of foul and ghastly shapes, which hung
 Upon my flight ; and ever as we fled,
 They plucked at Cythna—soon to me then clung
 A sense of actual things those monstrous dreams among.

VI.

And I lay struggling in the impotence
 Of sleep, while outward life had burst its bound,
 Though, still deluded, strove the tortured sense
 To its dire wanderings to adapt the sound
 Which in the light of morn was poured around
 Our dwelling—breathless, pale, and unaware
 I rose, and all the cottage crowded found
 With armed men, whose glittering swords were bare,
 And whose degraded limbs the tyrant's garb did wear.

VII.

And ere with rapid lips and gathered brow
 I could demand the cause—a feeble shriek—
 It was a feeble shriek, faint, far, and low,
 Arrested me—my mien grew calm and neek,
 And, grasping a small knife, I went to seek
 That voice among the crowd—'twas Cythna's cry !
 Beneath most calm resolve did agony wreak
 Its whirlwind rage :—so I past quietly
 Till I beheld, where bound, that dearest child did lie.

VIII.

I started to behold her, for delight
 And exultation, and, a joyance free,
 Solemn, serene, and lofty, filled the light
 Of the calm smile with which she looked on me :
 So that I feared some brainless ecstasy,
 Wrought from that bitter woe, had wildered her.
 "Farewell ! farewell !" she said, as I drew nigh.
 "At first my peace was marred by this strange stir,
 Now I am calm as truth--its chosen minister.

IX.

"Look not so, Laon--say farewell in hope :
 These bloody men are but the slaves who bear
 Their mistress to her task--it was my scope
 The slavery where they drag me now, to share,
 And among captives willing chains to wear
 Awhile--the rest thou knowest--return, dear friend !
 Let our first triumph trample the despair
 Which would ensnare us now, for in the end,
 In victory or in death our hopes and fears must blend."

X.

These words had fallen on my unheeding ear,
 Whilst I had watched the motions of the crew
 With seeming careless glance ; not many were Around her, for their comrades just withdrew
 To guard some other victim--so I drew
 My knife, and with one impulse, suddenly
 All unaware three of their number slew,
 And grasped a fourth by the throat, and with loud cry
 My countrymen invoked to death or liberty !

XI.

What followed then, I know not--for a stroke
 On my raised arm and naked head came down,
 Filling my eyes with blood--when I awoke,
 I felt that they had bound me in my swoon,
 And up a rock which overhangs the town,
 By the steep path were bearing me : below
 The plain was filled with slaughter,--overthrown
 The vineyards and the harvests, and the glow
 Of blazing roofs shone far o'er the white Ocean's flow.

XII.

Upon that rock a mighty column stood,
 Whose capital seemed sculptured in the sky,
 Which to the wanderers o'er the solitude
 Of distant seas, from ages long gone by,
 Had many a landmark ; e'er its height to fly
 Scarcely the cloud, the vulture, or the blast,
 Has power--and when the shades of evening lie
 On Earth and Ocean, its carved summits cast
 The sunken day-light far through the aerial waste.

xiii.

They bore me to a cavern in the hill
 Beneath that column, and unbound me there :
 And one did strip me stark ; and one did fill
 *A vessel from the putrid pool ; one bare
 A lighted torch, and four with friendless care
 Guided my steps the cavern-paths along,
 Then up a steep and dark and narrow stair
 We wound, until the torches' fiery tongue
 Amid the gushing day beamless and pallid hung.

xiv.

They raised me to the platform of the pile,
 That column's dizzy height :—the grate of brass
 Through which they thrust me, open stood the while,
 As to its ponderous and suspended mass,
 With chains which eat into the flesh, alas !
 With brazen links, my naked limbs they bound :
 The grate, as they departed to repass,
 With horrid clangour fell, and the far sound
 Of their retiring steps in the dense gloom was drowned.

xv.

The noon was calm and bright :—around that column
 The overhanging sky and circling sea
 Spread forth in silentness profound and solemn
 The darkness of brief frenzy cast on me,
 So that I knew not my own misery :
 The islands and the mountains in the day
 Like clouds reposed afar ; and I could see
 The town among the woods below that lay,
 And the dark rocks which bound the bright and glassy bay.

xvi.

It was so calm, that scarce the feathery weed
 Sown by some eagle on the topmost stone
 Swayed in the air :—so bright, that noon did breed
 No shadow in the sky beside mine own—
 Mine, and the shadow of my chain alone.
 Below the smoke of roofs involved in flame
 Pested like night, all else was clearly shown
 In the broad glare, yet sound to me none came,
 But of the living blood that ran within my frame.

xvii.

The peace of nadirs fled, and ah, too soon !
 A ship was lying on the sunny main ;
 Its sails were flagging in the breathless noon—
 Its shadow lay beyond—that sight again
 Waked, with its presence, in my strung brain
 The stings of a known sorrow, keen and cold.
 I knew that ship bore Cythna o'er the plain
 Of waters, to her blighting slavery sold,
 And watched it with such thoughts as must remain untold.

XVIII.

I watched, until the shades of evening wrapt
 Earth like an exhalation—then the bark
 Moved, for that calm was by the sunset snapt.
 It moved a speck upon the Ocean dark :
 Soon the wan stars came forth, and I could mark
 Its path no more ! I sought to close mine eyes,
 But, like the balls, their lids were stiff and stark ;
 I would have risen, but, ere that I could rise,
 My parched skin was split with piercing agonies.

XIX.

I gnawed my brazen chain, and sought to sever
 Its adamantine links, that I might die :
 O Liberty ! forgive the base endeavour,
 Forgive me, if, reserved for victory,
 The champion of thy faith e'er sought to fly. --
 That starry night, with its clear silence, sent
 Tameless resolve which laughed at misery
 Into my soul—linked remembrance lent
 To that such power, to me such a severe content.

XX.

To breathe, to be, to hope, or to despair
 And die. I questioned not ; nor, though the sun
 Its shafts of agony kindling through the air
 Moved over me, nor though in evening dun,
 Or when the stars their visible courses run,
 Or morning, the wide universe was spread
 In dreary calmness round me, did I shun
 Its presence, nor seek refuge with the dead
 From one faint hope whose flower a dropping poison shed.

XXI.

Two days thus past—I neither raved nor died—
 Thirst raged within me, like a scorpion's nest
 Built in mine entrails; I had spurned aside
 The water-vessel, while despair possest
 My thoughts, and now no drop remained ! The uprest
 Of the third sun brought hunger—but the crust
 Which had been left, was to my craving breast
 Fuel, not food. I chewed the bitter dust,
 And bit my bloodless arm, and licked the brazen rust.

XXII.

My brain began to fail when the fourth morn
 Burst o'er the golden isles—a fearful sleep,
 Which through the caverns dreary and forlorn
 Of the riven soul, sent its foul dreams to sweep
 With whirlwind swiftness<sup>4</sup> a fall far and deep.—
 A gulf, a void, a sense of senselessness—
 These things dwelt in me, even as shadows keep
 Their watch in some dim charnel's loneliness,
 A shoreless sea, a sky sunless and planetless !

XXIII.

The forms which peopled this terrific trance
 I well remember—like a quire of devils,
 Around me they involved a giddy dance ;
 Legions seemed gathering from the misty levels
 Of ocean, to supply those ceaseless revels,
 Foul, ceaseless shadows :—thought could not divide
 The actual world from these entangling evils,
 Which so bemocked themselves, that I descried
 All shapes like mine own self, hideously multiplied.

XXIV.

The sense of day and night, of false and true,
 Was dead within me. Yet two visions burst
 That darkness—one, as since that hour I knew,
 Was not a phantom of the realms accurst,
 Where then my spirit dwelt—but of the first
 I know not yet, was it a dream or no.
 But both, though not distinctor, were immersed
 In hues which, when through memory's waste they flow,
 Make their divided streams more bright and rapid now.

XXV.

Methought that grate was lifted, and the seven
 Who brought me thither, four stiff corpses bare,
 And from the freeze to the four winds of Heaven
 Hung them on high by the entangled hair :
 Swarthy were three—the fourth was very fair :
 As they retired, the golden moon upsprung,
 And eagerly, out in the giddy air,
 Leaning that I might eat, I stretched and clung
 Over the shapeless depth in which those corpses hung.

XXVI.

A woman's shape, now lank and cold and blue,
 The dwelling of the maury-coloured worm,
 Hung there, the white and hollow cheek I drew
 To my dry lips—what radiance did inform
 Those horny eyes ! whose was that withered form ?
 Alas, alas ! it seemed that Cythna's ghost
 Laughed in those looks, and that the flesh was warm
 Within my teeth !—a whirlwind keen as frost
 Then in its sinking gulfs my sickening spirit tost.

XXVII.

Then seemed it that a tuneless hurricane
 Arose, and bore me in its dark ~~veer~~
 Beyond the sun, beyond the stars that wane
 On the verge of formless space—it languished there,
 And, dying, left a silence lone and drear,
 More horrible than famine :—in the deep
 The shape of an old man did then appear,
 Stately and beautiful ; that dreadful sleep
 His heavenly smiles dispersed, and I could wake and weep.

XXVIII.

And, when the blinding tears had fallen, I saw
 That column, and those corpses, and the moon,
 And felt the poisonous tooth of hunger gnaw
 My vitals, I rejoiced, as if the boon
 Of senseless death would be accorded soon ;—
 When from that stony gloom a voice arose,
 Solemn and sweet as when low winds attune
 The midnight pines ; the grate did then unclose,
 And on that reverend form the moonlight did repose.

XXIX.

He struck my chains, and gently spake and smiled :
 As they were loosened by that Hermit old,
 Mine eyes were of their madness half beguiled,
 To answer those kind looks.—He did enfold
 His giant arms around me to uphold
 My wretched frame, my scorched limbs he wound
 In linen moist and balmy, and as cold
 As dew to drooping leaves :—the chain, with sound
 Like earthquake, through the chasm of that steep stair did bound

XXX.

As, lifting me, it fell ! —What next I heard,
 Were billows leaping on the harbour bar,
 And the shrill sea-wind, whose breath idly stirred
 My hair ;—I looked abroad, and saw a star
 Shining beside a sail and distant far
 That mountain and its column, the known mark
 Of those who in the wide deep wandering are,
 So that I feared some Spirit, fell and dark,
 In trance had lain me thus within a fiendish bark.

XXXI.

For now, indeed, over the salt sea billow
 I sailed : yet dared not look upon the shape
 Of him who ruled the helm, although the pillow
 For my light head was hollowed in his lap,
 And my bare limbs his mantle did enwrap,
 Fearing it was a fiend : at last, he bent
 O'er me his aged face ; as if to snap
 Those dreadful thoughts the gentle grandsire bent,
 And to my innmost soul his soothing looks he sent.

XXXII.

A soft and healing potion to my lips
 At intervals he raised—now looked on high,
 To mark if yet the starry giant dips
 His zone in the dim sea now cheerfully,
 Though he said little, did he speak to me.
 “It is a friend beside thee take good cheer,
 Poor victim, thou art now at liberty ! ”
 I joyed as those a human tone to hear,
 Who in cells deep and lone have languished many a year.

XXXIII.

A dim and feeble joy, whose glimpses oft
Were quenched in a relapse of wildering dreams,
Yet still methought we sailed, until aloft
The stars of night grew pallid, and the beams
Of morn descended on the ocean-streams,
And still that aged man, so grand and mild,
Tended me, even as some sick mother seems
To hang in hope over a dying child,
Till in the azure East darkness again was piled.

XXXIV.

And then the night-wind, steaming from the shore,
Sent odours dying sweet across the sea,
And the swift boat the little waves which bore,
Were cut by its keen keel, though slantingly ;
Soon I could hear the leaves sigh, and could see
The myrtle-blossoms starring the dim grove,
As past the pebbly beach the boat did flee
On sidelong wing into a silent cove,
Where ebon pines a shade under the starlight wove.

CANTO IV.

I.

THE old man took the oars, and soon the bark
Smote on the beach beside a tower of stone ;
It was a crumbling heap whose portal dark
With blooming ivy trails was overgrown :
Upon whose floor the spangling sands were strown,
And rarest sea-shells, which the eternal flood,
Slave to the mother of the months, had thrown
Within the walls of that great tower, which stood
A changeling of man's art, nursed amid Nature's brood.

II.

When the old man his boat had anchored,
He wound me in his arms with tender care,
And very few but kindly words he said,
And bore me through the tower adown a stair,
Whose smooth descent some causeless step to wear
For many a year had fallen.—We came at last
To a small chamber, which with mosses rare
Was tapestried, where me his soft hands placed Upon a couch of grass and oak leaves interlaced.

III.

The moon was darting through the lattices
 Its yellow light, wan as the beams of day—
 So warm, that to admit the dewy breeze,
 The old man opened them ; the moonlight lay
 Upon a lake whose waters wove their play
 Even to the threshold of that lonely home :
 Within was seen in the dim wavering ray,
 The antique sculptured roof, and many a tome
 Whose lore had made that sage all that he had become.

IV.

The rock-built barrier of the sea was past,—
 And I was on the margin of a lake,
 A lonely lake, amid the forests vast
 And snowy mountains :—did my spirit wako
 From sleep, as many-coloured as the snake
 That girds eternity ? in life and truth,
 Might not my heart its cravings ever slake ?
 Was Cythna then a dream, and all my youth,
 And all its hopes and fears, and all its joy and ruth ?

V.

Thus madness came again,—a milder madness,
 Which darkened nought but time's unquiet flow
 With supernatural shades of clinging sadness ;
 That gentle Hermit, in my helpless woe,
 By my sick couch was busy to and fro,
 Like a strong spirit ministrant of good :
 When I was healed, he led me forth to show
 The wonders of his sylvan solitude,
 And we together sate by that isle-fretted flood.

VI.

He knew his soothing words to weave with skill
 From all my madness told : like mine own heart,
 Of Cythna would he question me, until
 That thrilling name had ceased to make me start,
 From his familiar lips—it was not art,
 Of wisdom and of justice when he spoke :—
 When 'mid soft looks of pity, there would dart
 A glance as keen as is the lightning stroke
 When it doth rive the knots of some ancestral oak.

VII.

Thus slowly from my brain the darkness rolled,
 My thoughts their due array did re-assume
 Through the enchantments of that Hermit old ;
 Then I bethought me of the glorious doom
 Of those who sternly struggle to renew
 The lamp of Hope o'er man's bewildered lot,
 And, sitting by the waters in the gloom
 Of eve, to that friend's heart I told my thought—
 That heart which had grown old, but had corrupted not.

VIII.

That hoary man had spent his livelong ago
 In converse with the dead, who leave the stamp
 Of ever-burning thoughts on many a page,
 When they are gone into the senseless damp
 Of graves !—his spirit thus became a lamp
 Of splendour, like to those on which it fed.
 Through peopled haunts, the City and the Camp,
 Deep thirst for knowledge had his footsteps led,
 And all the ways of men among mankind he read.

IX.

But custom maketh blind and obdurate
 The loftiest hearts :—he had beheld the woe
 In which mankind was bound, but deemed that fate
 Which made them abject would preserve them so ;
 And in such faith, some stedfast joy to know,
 He sought this cell ; but, when fame went abroad
 That one in Argolis did undergo Torture for liberty, and that the crowd
 High truths from gifted lips had heard and understood,

X.

And that the multitude was gathering wide,
 His spirit leaped within his aged frame ;
 In lonely peace he could no more abide,
 But to the land on which the victor's flame
 Had fed, my native land, the Hermit came ;
 Each heart was there a shield, and every tongue
 Was as a sword of truth—young Laon's name
 Rallied their secret hopes, though tyrants sung
 Hymns of triumphant joy our scattered tribes among.

XI.

He came to the lone column on the rock,
 And with his sweet and mighty eloquence
 The hearts of those who watched it did unlock,
 And made them melt in tears of penitence.
 They gave him entrance free to bear me thence.
 "Since this," the old man said, "seven years are spent,
 While slowly truth on thy benighted sense
 Has crept : the hope which wildered it has lent,
 Meanwhile, to me the power of a sublime intent.

XII.

"Yes, from the records of my youthful state,
 And from the lore of bards and sages old,
 From whatsoever my wakened thoughts create
 Out of the hopes of thine aspirations bold,
 Have I collected language to unfold
 Truth to my countrymen ; from shore to shore
 Doctrines of human power my words have told ;
 They have been heard, and men aspire to more
 Than they have ever gained or ever lost of yore.

xiii.

"In secret chambers parents read, and weep,
 My writings to their babes, no longer blind ;
 And young men gather when their tyrants sleep,
 And vows of faith each to the other bind ;
 And marriageable maidens, who have pined
 With love, till life seemed melting through their look,
 A warmer zeal, a nobler hope now find ;
 And every bosom thus is wrapt and shook,
 Like autumn's myriad leaves in one swoln mountain brook.

xiv.

"The tyrants of the Golden City tremble
 At voices which are heard about the streets ;
 The ministers of fraud can scarce dissemble
 The lies of their own heart ; but when one meets
 Another at the shrine, he only weets,
 Though he says nothing, that the truth is known ;
 Murderers are pale upon the judgment-seats,
 And gold grows vile even to the wealthy crone,
 And laughter fills the Fane, and curses shake the Throne.

xv.

"Kind thoughts, and mighty hopes, and gentle deeds
 Abound, for fearless love, and the pure law
 Of mild equality and peace succeeds
 To faiths which long have held the world in awe,
 Bloody, and false, and cold :—as whirlpools draw
 All wrecks of Ocean to their chasm, the sway
 Of thy strong genius, Laon, which foresaw
 This hope, compels all spirits to obey,
 Which round thy secret strength now throng in wide array.

xvi.

"For I have been thy passive instrument—
 (As thus the old man spake, his countenance Gleamed on me like a spirit's)—thou hast lent
 To me, to all, the power to advance
 Towards this unforeseen deliverance
 From our ancestral chains—ay, thou didst rear
 That lamp of hope on high, which time, nor chance,
 Nor change may not extinguish, and my share
 Of good was o'er the world its gathered beams to bear.

xvii.

"But I, alas ! am both unknown and old,
 And though the woof of wisdom I know well
 To dye in hues of language, I am cold
 In seeming, and the hopes which only dwell
 My manners note that I did long repel ;
 But Laon's name to the tumultuous throng
 Were like the star whose beams the waves compel
 And tempests, and his soul-subduing tongue
 Were as a lance to quell the mailed crest of wrong.

XVIII.

"Perchance blood need not flow, if thou at length
Wouldst rise; perchance the very slaves would spare
Their brethren and themselves; great is the strength
Of words—for lately did a maiden fair,
Who from her childhood has been taught to bear
The tyrant's heaviest yoke, arise, and make
Her sex the law of truth and freedom hear;
And with these quiet words—'for thine own sake
I prithee spare me,'—did with ruth so take

XIX.

"All hearts, that even the torturer, who had bound
Her meek calm frame, ere it was yet impaled,
Loosened her weeping then; nor could be found
One human hand to harm her—unassailed
Therefore she walks through the great City, veiled
In virtue's adamantine eloquence,
'Gainst scorn, and death, and pain, thus trebly mailed,
And blinding in the smiles of that defence,
The Serpent and the Dove, Wisdom and Innocence.

XX.

"The wild eyed women throng around her path:
From their luxurious dungeons, from the dust
Of meaner thralls, from the oppressor's wrath,
Or the caresses of his sated lust,
They congregate:—in her they put their trust;
The tyrants send their armed slaves to quell
Her power; they, even like a thunder gust
Caught by some forest, bend beneath the spell
Of that young maiden's speech, and to their chiefs rebel.

XXI.

"Thus she doth equal laws and justice teach
To woman, outraged and polluted long;
Gathering the sweetest fruit in human reach
For those fair hands now free, while armed wrong
Trembles before her look, though it be strong;
Thousands thus dwell beside her, virgins bright,
And matrons with their babes, a stately throng!
Lovers renew the vows which they did plight
In early faith, and hearts long parted now unite.

XXII.

"And homeless orphans find a home near her,
And those poor victims of the proud, no less,
Fair wrecks, on whom the sinning world with stir,
Thrusts the redemption of its wickedness:—
In squalid huts, and in its palaces
Sits Lust alone, while o'er the land is borne
Her voice, whose awful sweetness doth repress
All evil, and her foes relenting turn,
And cast the vote of love in hope's abandoned urn.

xxiii.

"So in the populous City, a young maiden
Has baffled Havoc of the prey which he
Marks as his own, whene'er with chains o'erladen
Men make them arms to hurl down tyranny,
False arbiter between the bound and free :
And o'er the land, in hamlets and in towns
The multitudes collect tumultuously,
And throng in arms ; but tyranny disowns
Their claim, and gathers strength 'round its trembling thrones.

xxiv.

"Blood soon, although unwillingly, to shed
The free cannot forbear—the Queen of Slaves,
The hood-winked Angel of the blind and dead,
Custom, with iron mace points to the graves
Where her own standard desolately waves
Over the dust of Prophets and of Kings.
Many yet stand in her array—she paves
Her path with human hearts,' and o'er it flings
The wildering gloom of her immeasurable wings.

xxv.

"There is a plain beneath the City's wall,
Bounded by misty mountains, wide and vast :
Millions there lift at Freedom's thrilling call
Ten thousand standards wide ; they load the blast
Which bears one sound of many voices past,
And startles on his throne their sceptred foe :
He sits amid his idle pomp aghast,
And that his power hath past away, doth know—
Why pause the victor swords to seal his overthrow ?

xxvi.

"The tyrant's guards resistance yet maintain :
Fearless, and fierce, and hard as beasts of blood ;
They stand a speck amid the peopled plain ;
Carnage and ruin have been made their food
From infancy—ill has become their goal,
And for its hateful sake their will has wove
The chains which eat their hearts.—the multitude
Surrounding them, with words of human love,
Seek from their own decay their stubborn minds to move.

xxvii.

"Over the land is felt a sudden pause,
As night and day those ruthless bands around
The watch of love is kept :—a trance which awes
The thoughts of men with hope—as when the sound
Of whirlwind, whose fierce blasts the waves and clouds
Dies suddenly, the mariner in fear [confound,
Feels silence sink upon his heart—thus bound,
The conqueror's pause, and oh ! may freemen ne'er
Clasp the relentless knees of Dread, the murderer !

XXVIII.

"If blood be shed, 'tis but a change and choice
Of bonds,—from slavery to cowardice.
A wretched fall!—uplift thy charmed voice,
Pour on those evil men the love that lies
Hovering within those spirit-soothing eyes—
Arise, my friend, farewell!"—As thus he spake,
From the green earth lightly I did arise,
As one out of dim dreams that doth awake,
And looked upon the depth of that reposing lake.

XXIX.

I saw my countenance reflected there;—
And then my youth fell on me like a wind
Descending on still waters—my thin hair
Was prematurely grey, my face was lined
With channels, such as suffering leaves behind,
Not age; my brow was pale, but in my cheek
And lips a flush of gnawing fire did find
Their food and dwelling; though mine eyes might speak
A subtle mind and strong within a frame thus weak.

XXX.

And though their lustre now was spent and faded,
Yet in my hollow looks and withered mien
The likeness of a shape for which was braided
The brightest woof of genius, still was seen—
One who, methought, had gone from the world's scene,
And left it vacant—'twas her lover's face—
It might resemble her—it once had been
The mirror of her thoughts, and still the grace
Which her mind's shadow cast, left there a lingering trace.

XXXI.

What then was I? She slumbered with the dead.
Glory and joy and peace, had come and gone.
Doth the cloud perish, when the beams are fled
Which steeped its skirts in gold? or dark, and lone,
Doth it not through the paths of night unknown,
On outspread wings of its own wind upborne
Pour rain upon the earth? the stars are shown,
When the cold moon sharpens her silver horn
Under the sea, and make the wide night not forlorn.

XXXII.

Strengthened in heart, yet sad, that aged man
I left with interchange of looks and tears,
And lingering speech, and to the Camp began
My way. O'er many a mountain chain which rears
Its hundred crests aloft, my spirit bears
My frame; o'er many a dale and many a moor.
And gaily now the seems serene earth wears
The bloomy spring's star-bright investiture, vision which aught sad from sadness might allure.

XXXIII.

My powers revived within me, and I went
 As one whom winds waft o'er the bending grass,
 Through many a vale of that broad continent.
 At night when I reposed, fair dreams did pass
 Before my pillow ; my own Cythna was
 Not like a child of death, among them ever ;
 When I arose from rest, a woeful mass
 That gentlest sleep seemed from my life to sever,
 As if the light of youth were not withdrawn for ever.

XXXIV.

Aye, as I went, that maiden who had reared
 The torch of Truth afar, of whose high deeds
 The Hermit in his pilgrimage had heard,
 Haunted my thoughts.—Ah, Hope its sickness feeds
 With whatsoe'er it finds, or flowers or weeds !
 Could she be Cythna ?—Was that corpse a shade
 Such as self-torturing thought from madness breeds ?
 Why was this hope not torture ? yet it made
 A light around my steps which would not ever fade.

CANTO V.

OVER the utmost hill at length I sped,
 A snowy steep : —the moon was hanging low
 Over the Asian mountains and outspread
 The plain, the City, and the Camp, below,
 Skirted the midnight Ocean's glimmering flow,
 The City's moon-lit spires and myriad lamps,
 Like stars in a sublunar sky did glow,
 And fires blazed far amid the scattered camps,
 Like springs of flame, which burst where'er swift Earthquake stamps.

All slept but those in watchful arms who stood,
 And those who sate tending the beacon's light,
 And the few sounds from that vast multitude
 Made silence more profound—Oh, what a might
 Of human thought was cradled in that night !
 How many hearts impenetrably veiled
 Beat underneath its shade, what secret fight
 Evil and good, in woven passions mailed,
 Waged through that silent throng, a war that never failed !

III.

And now the Power of Good held victory,
 So, through the labyrinth of many a tent,
 Among the silent millions who did lie
 In innocent sleep, exultingly I went ;
 The moon had left Heaven desert now, but lent
 From eastern morn the first faint lustre showed
 An armed youth — over his spear he bent
 His downward face.—“A friend !” I cried aloud,
 And quickly common hopes made freemen understood.

IV.

I sate beside him while the morning beam
 Crept slowly over Heaven, and talked with him
 Of those immortal hopes, a glorious theme !
 Which led us forth, until the stars grew dim :
 And all the while, methought, his voice did swim,
 As if it drowned in remembrance were
 Of thoughts which make the moist eyes overbrim :
 At last, when daylight gan to fill the air,
 He looked on me, and cried in wonder, “Thou art here !”

V.

Then, suddenly, I knew it was the youth
 In whom its earliest hopes my spirit found ;
 But envious tongues had stained his spotless truth,
 And thoughtless pride his love in silence bound,
 And shame and sorrow mine in toils had wound,
 Whilst he was innocent, and I deluded.
 The truth now came upon me, on the ground
 Tears of repenting joy, which fast intruded,
 Felt fast, and o'er its peace our mingling spirits brooded.

VI.

Thus, while with rapid lips and earnest eyes
 We talked, a sound of sweeping conflict spread,
 As from the earth did suddenly arise ;
 From every tent, roused by that clamour dread,
 Our hands outsprung and seized their arms ; we sped
 Towards the sound : our tribes were gathering far,
 Those sanguine slaves amid ten thousand dead
 Stabbed in their sleep, trampled in treacherous war,
 The gentle hearts whose power their lives had sought to spare.

VII.

Like rabid snakes, that sting some gent'le child
 Who brings them food, when winter f'le and fair
 Allures them forth with its cold smiles, so wild
 They rage among the camp ;—they overbear
 The patriot host—confusion, then despair
 Descends like night—when “Laon !” one did cry :
 Like a bright ghost from heaven, that shout did scare
 The slaves, and, widening through the vaulted sky,
 Seamed sent from Earth to Heaven in sign of victory.

VIII.

In sudden panic those false murderers fled,
 Like insect tribes before the northern gale :
 But, swifter still, our hosts encompassed
 Their shattered ranks, and in a craggy vale,
 Where even their fierce despair might nought avail,
 Hemmed them around !—and then revenge and fear
 Made the high virtue of the patriots fail :
 One pointed on his foe the mortal spear—
 I rushed before its point, and cried, “Forbear, forbear !”

IX.

The spear transfixed my arm that was uplifted
 In swift expostulation, and the blood
 Gushed round its point : I smiled, and—“ Oh ! thou gifted
 With eloquence which shall not be withheld,
 Flow thus !”—I cried in joy, “ thou vital flood,
 Until my heart be dry, ere thus the cause
 For which thou wert aught worthy be subdued—
 Ah, ye are pale,—ye weep,—your passions pause.—
 ‘Tis well ! ye feel the truth of love’s benignant laws.

X.

“ Soldiers, our brethren and our friends are slain.
 Ye murdered them, I think, as they did sleep !
 Alas, what have ye done ? The slightest pain
 Which ye might suffer, there were eyes to weep ;
 But ye have quenched them—there were smiles to steep
 Your hearts in balm, but they are lost in woe ;
 And those whom love did set his watch to keep
 Around your tents truth’s freedom to bestow,
 Ye stabbed as they did sleep—but they forgive ye now.

XI.

“ O wherefore should ill ever flow from ill,
 And pain still keener pain for ever breed ?
 We all are brethren—even the slaves who kill
 For hire, are men ; and to avenge misdeed
 On the misdoer, doth but Misery feed
 With her own broken heart ! O Earth, O Heaven !
 And thou, dread Nature, which to every deed
 And all that lives, or is to be, hath given,
 Even as to thee have these done ill, and are forgiven.

XII.

“ Join then your hands and hearts, and let the past
 Be as a grave which gives not up its dead
 To evil thoughts.”—A film then overcast
 My sense with dimness, for the wound, which bled
 Freshly, swift shadows o’er mine eyes had shed.
 When I awoke, I lay ’mid friends and foes,
 And earnest countenances on me shed
 The light of questioning looks, whilst one did close
 My wound with balmiest herbs, and soothed me to repose ;

xiii.

And one, whose spear had pierced me, leaned beside
 With quivering lips and humid eyes ;—and all
 Seemed like some brothers on a journey wide
 Gone forth, whom now strange meeting did beset
 In a strange land, round one whom they might call
 Their friend, their chief, their father, for assay
 Of peril, which had saved them from the thrall
 Of death, now suffering. Thus the vast array
 Of those fraternal bands were reconciled that day.

xiv.

Lifting the thunder of their acclamation
 Towards the City, then the multitude,
 And I among them, went in joy—a nation
 Made free by love ;—a mighty brotherhood
 Linked by a jealous interchange of good ;
 A glorious pageant, more magnificent
 Than kingly slaves, arrayed in gold and blood ;
 When they return from carnage, and are sent
 To triumph bright beneath the populous battlement.

xv.

Afar, the City walls were thronged on high,
 And myriads on each giddy turret clung,
 And to each spire far lessening in the sky,
 Bright pennons on the idle winds were hung ;
 As we approached, a shout of joyance sprung
 At once from all the crowd, as if the vast
 And peopled Earth its boundless skies among
 The sudden clamour of delight had cast,
 When from before its face some general wreck had past.

xvi.

Our armies through the City's hundred gates
 Were poured, like brooks which to the rocky lair
 Of some deep lake, whose silence them awaits,
 Throng from the mountains when the storms are there ;
 And, as we passed through the calm sunny air,
 A thousand flower-inwoven crowns were shed,
 The token flowers of truth and freedom fair,
 And fairest hands bound them on many a head,
 Those angels of love's heaven, that over all was spread.

xvii.

I trod as one tranced in some rapturous vision :
 Those bloody bands so lately reconciled,
 Were, ever as they went, by the contrition
 Of anger turned to love from ill beguiled,
 And every one on them more gently smiled,
 Because they had done evil :—the sweet awo
 Of such mild looks made their own hearts grow mild.
 And did with soft attraction ever draw
 Their spirits to the love of freedom's equal law.

xviii.

And they, and all, in one loud symphony
 My name with Liberty commingling, lifted,
 "The friend and the preserver of the free!"
 The parent of this joy!" and fair eyes, gifted
 With feelings caught from one who had uplifted
 The light of a great spirit, round me shone;
 And all the shapes of this grand scenery shifted
 Like restless clouds before the steadfast sun,—
 Where was that Maid? I asked, but it was known of none.

xix.

Laone was the name her love had chosen,
 For she was nameless, and her birth none knew:
 Where was Laone now?—The words were frozen
 Within my lips with fear; but to subdue
 Such dreadful hope, to my great task was due,
 And when at length one brought reply, that she
 To-morrow would appear, I then withdrew
 To judge what need for that great throng might be,
 For now the stars came thick over the twilight sea.

xx.

Yet need was none for rest or food to eare,
 Even though that multitude was passing great,
 Since each one for the other did prepare
 All kindly succour—Therefore to the gate
 Of the Imperial House, now desolate,
 I passed, and there was found aghast, alone,
 The fallen Tyrant!—Silently he sate
 Upon the footstool of his golden throne,
 Which, starred with sunny gems, in its own lustre shone.

xxi.

Alone, but for one child, who led before him
 A graceful dance: the only living thing
 Of all the crowd, which thither to adore him
 Flocked yesterday, who solace sought to bring
 In his abandonment!—She knew the King
 Had praised her dance of yore, and now she wove
 Its circles, aye weeping and murmuring
 'Mid her sad task of unregarded love,
 That to no smiles it might his speechless sadness move.

xxii.

She fled to him, and wildly clasped his feet
 When human steps were heard:—he moved nor spoke,
 Nor changed his hue, nor raised his looks to meet
 The gaze of strangers.—Our loud entrance woke
 The echoes of the hall, which circling broke
 The calm of its recesses,—like a tomb
 Its sculptured walls vacantly to the stroke
 Of footfalls answered, and the twilight's gloom
 Lay like a charnel's mist within the radiant dome.

xxiii.

The little child stood up when we came nigh ;
 Her lips and cheeks seemed very pale and wan,
 But on her forehead and within her eye
 Lay beauty, which makes hearts that feed thereon
 Sick with excess of sweetness ;—on the throne
 She leaned. The King, with gathered brow and lips
 Wreathed by long scorn, did only sneer and frown
 With hue like that when some great painter dips
 His pencil in the gloom of earthquake and eclipse.

xxiv.

She stood beside him like a rainbow braided
 Within some storm, when scarce its shadows vast
 From the blue paths of the swift sun have faded.
 A sweet and solemn smile, like Cythna's, cast
 One moment's light, which made my heart beat fast
 O'er that child's parted lips—a gleam of bliss,
 A shade of vanished days,—as the tears past
 Which wrapt it, even as with a father's kiss
 Pressed those softest eyes in trembling tenderness.

xxv.

The sceptred wretch then from that solitude
 I drew, and of his change compassionate,
 With words of sadness soothed his rugged mood.
 But he, while pride and fear held deep debate,
 With sullen guile of ill-dissembled hate
 Glared on me as a toothless snake might glare :
 Pity, not scorn, I felt, though desolate
 The desolator now, and unaware
 The curses which he mocked had caught him by the hair.

xxvi.

I led him forth from that which now might seem
 A gorgeous grave : through portals sculptured deep
 With imagery beautiful as dream
 We went, and left the shades which tend on sleep
 Over its unregarded gold to keep
 Their silent watch.—The child trod faintingly,
 And, as she went, the tears which she did weep
 Glanced in the star-light ; wildered seemed she,
 And when I spake, for sobs she could not answer me.

xxvii.

At last the tyrant cried, “She hungers, slave !
 Stab her, or give her bread !”—It was a topic
 Such as sick fancies in a new-made grave
 Might hear. I trembled, for the truth was known,
 He with this child had thus been left alone,
 And neither had gone forth for food,—but he
 In mingled pride and awe cowered near his throne.
 And she, a nursling of captivity,
 Knew nought beyond those walls, nor what such change might be.

xxviii.

And he was troubled at a charm withdrawn
 Thus suddenly ; that sceptres ruled no more —
 That even from gold the dreadful strength was gone
 Which once made all things subject to its power—
 Such wonder seized him, as if hour by hour
 The past had come again ; and the swift fall
 Of one so great and terrible of yore
 To desolateness, in the hearts of all
 Like wonder stirred, who saw such awful change beset.

xxix.

A mighty crowd, such as the wide land pours
 Once in a thousand years, now gathered round
 The fallen tyrant ;—like the rush of showers
 Of hail in spring, pattering along the ground,
 Their many footsteps fell, else came no sound
 From the wide multitude : that lonely man
 Then knew the burthen of his change, and found,
 Concealing in the dust his visage wan,
 Refuge from the keen looks which thro' his bosom ran.

xxx.

And he was faint withal. I sate beside him
 Upon the earth, and took that child so fair
 From his weak arms, that ill might none bethide him
 Or her ;—when food was brought to them, her share
 To his averted lips the child did bear ;
 But when she saw he had enough, she ate
 And wept the while ;—the lonely man's despair
 Hunger then overcame, and of his state
 Forgetful, on the dust as in a trance he sate.

xxxi.

Slowly the silence of the multitudes
 Past, as when far is heard in some lone dell
 The gathering of a wind among the woods—
 And he is fallen ! they cry ; he who did dwell
 Like famine or the plague, or aught more fell,
 Among our homes, is fallen ! the murderer
 Who slaked his thirsting soul as from a well
 Of blood and tears with ruin ! He is here !
 Sunk in a gulf of scorn from which none may him rear !

xxxii.

Then was heard—He who judged let him be brought To judgment ! Blood for blood cries from the soil
 On which his crimes have deep pollution wrought !
 Shall Othman only unavenged despoil ?
 Shall they, who by the stress of grinding toil
 Wrest from the unwilling earth his luxuries,
 Perish for crime, while his foul blood may boil,
 Or creep within his veins at will ?—A wise !
 And to high justice make her chosen sacrifice.

XXXIII.

"What do ye seek? what fear ye?" then I cried,
 Suddenly starting forth, "that ye should shed
 The blood of Othman—if your hearts are tried
 In the true love of freedom, cease to dread
 This one poor lonely man—beneath Heaven shed
 In purest light above us all, through earth,
 Maternal earth, who doth her sweet smiles spread
 For all, let him go free; until the worth
 Of human nature win from these a second birth.

XXXIV.

"What call ye justice? Is there one who ne'er
 In secret thought has wished another's ill?...
 Are ye all pure? Let those stand forth who hear,
 And tremble not. Shall they insult and kill,
 If such they be? their mild eyes can they fill
 With the false anger of the hypocrite?
 Alas, such were not pure—the chastened will
 Of virtue sees that justice is the light
 Of love, and not revenge, and terror and despite."

XXXV.

The murmur of the people, slowly dying,
 Paused as I spake; then those who near me were,
 Cast gentle looks where the lone man was lying
 Shrouding his head, which now that infant fair
 Clasped on her lap in silence;—through the air
 Sobs were then heard, and many kissed my feet
 In pity's madness; and, to the despair
 Of him whom late they cursed, a solace sweet
 His very victims brought—soft looks and speeches meet.

XXXVI.

Then to a home, for his repose assigned,
 Accompanied by the still throng he went
 In silence, where, to soothe his rankling mind,
 Some likeness of his ancient state was lent;
 And, if his heart could have been innocent
 As those who pardoned him, he might have ended
 His days in peace; but his straight lips were bent,
 Men said, into a smile which guile portended,
 A sight with which that child-like hope with fear was blended.

XXXVII.

'Twas midnight now, the eve of that great day,
 Whereon the many nations at whose call
 The chains of earth like mist melted away,
 Decreed to hold a sacred Festival,
 A rite to attest the equality of all
 Who live. So to their homes, to dream or wake
 All went. The sleepless silence did recall
 Laone to my thoughts, with hopes that make
 The flood recede from which their thirst they seek to slake.

XXXVIII.

The dawn flowed forth, and from its purple fountains
 I drank those hopes which make the spirit quail,
 As to the plain between the misty mountains
 And the great City, with a countenance pale
 I went :—it was a sight which might avail
 To make men weep exulting tears, for whom
 Now first from human power the reverend veil
 Was torn, to see Earth from her general womb
 Pour forth her swarming sons to a fraternal doom:

XXXIX.

To see, far glancing in the misty morning,
 The signs of that innumerable host,
 To hear one sound of many made, the warning
 Of Earth to Heaven from its free children lost,
 While the eternal hills, and the sea lost
 In wavering light, and, staring the blue sky
 The city's myriad spires of gold, almost
 With human joy made mute society
 Its witnesses with men who must hereafter be.

XL.

To see, like some vast island from the Ocean,
 The Altar of the Federation rear
 Its pile i' the midst ; a work, which the devotion
 Of millions in one night created there.
 Sudden, as when the moonrise makes appear
 Strange clouds in the east ; a marble pyramid
 Distinct with steps : that mighty shape did wear
 The light of genius ; its still shadow hid
 Far ships : to know its height the morning mists forbid !

XLI.

To hear the restless multitudes for ever
 Around the base of that great Altar flow,
 As on some mountain islet burst and shiver
 Atlantic waves ; and solemnly and slow
 As the wind bore that tumult to and fro,
 To feel the dreamlike music, which did swim
 Like beams through floating clouds on waves below,
 Falling in pauses from that Altar dim
 As silver-sounding tongues breathed an aerial hymn.

XLII.

To hear, to see, to live, was on that morn
 Lethean joy ! so that all those assembled
 Cast off their memories of the past outworn :
 Two only bosoms with their own life trembled,
 And mine was one,—and we had both dissembled ;
 So with a beating heart I went, and one,
 Who having much, covets yet more, resembled ;
 A lost and dear possession, which not won,
 He walks in lonely gloom beneath the noonday sun.

XLIII.

To the great Pyramid I came : its stair
 With female quires was thronged : the loveliest
 Among the free, grouped with its sculptures rare.
 As I approached, the morning's golden mist,
 Which now the wonder-stricken breezes kist
 With their cold lips, fled, and the summit shone
 Like Athos seen from Samothracia, drest
 In earliest light by vintagers, and one
 Sate there, a female shape upon an ivory throne.

XLIV.

A Form most like the imagined habitant
 Of silver exhalations sprung from dawn,
 By winds which feed on sunrise woven, to enchant
 The faiths of men : all mortal eyes were drawn,
 As famished mariners through strange seas gone,
 Gaze on a burning watch-tower, by the light
 Of those divinest lineaments--alone
 With thoughts which none could share, from that fair sight
 Turned in sickness, for a veil shrouded her countenance bright.

XLV.

And, neither did I hear the acclamations
 Which, from brief silence bursting, filled the air,
 With her strange name and mine, from all the nations
 Which we, they said, in strength had gathered there
 From the sleep of bondage ; nor the vision fair
 Of that bright pageantry beheld,--but blind
 And silent, as a breathing corpse did fare,
 Leaning upon my friend, till, like a wind
 To fevered cheeks, a voice flowed o'er my troubled mind.

XLVI.

Like music of some minstrel heavenly-gifted,
 To one whom fiends enthrall, this voice to me ;
 Scarce did I wish her veil to be uplifted,
 I was so calm and joyous.--I could see
 The platform where we stood, the statues three
 Which kept their marble watch on that high shrine,
 The multitudes, the mountains, and the sea ;
 As when eclipse hath passed, things sudden shine
 To men's astonished eyes most clear and crystalline.

XLVII.

At first Laone spoke most tremulously .
 But soon her voice that calmness whi . it sh. 1
 Gathered, and—"Thou art whom I sought to see,
 And thou art our first votary here," she said :
 "I had a dear friend once, but he is dead!—
 And of all those on the wide earth who breathe,
 Thou dost resemble him alone—I spread
 This veil between us two, that thou beneath
 Should'st image one who may have been long lost in death.

XLVIII.

"For this wilt thou not henceforth pardon me ?
 Yes, but those joys which silence well requite
 Forbid reply : why men have chosen me
 To be the Priestess of this holiest rite
 I scarcely know, but that the floods of light
 Which flow over the world, have borne me hither
 To meet thee, long most dear ; and now unite
 Thine hand with mine, and may all comfort wither
 From both the hearts whose pulse in joy now beats together,

XLIX.

"If our own will as others' law we bind,
 If the foul worship trampled here we fear ;
 If as ourselves we cease to love our kind !"—
 She paused, and pointed upwards—sculptured there
 Three shapes around her ivory throne appear ; .
 One was a Giant, like a child asleep
 On a loose rock, whose grasp crushed, as it were
 In dream, sceptres and crowns ; and one did keep
 Its watchful eyes in doubt whether to smile or weep ;

<sup>L</sup>A Woman sitting on the sculptured disk
 Of the broad earth, and feeding from one breast
 A human babe and a young basilisk ;
 Her looks were sweet as Heaven's when loveliest
 In Autumn eves.—The third Image was drest
 In white wings swift as clouds in winter skies.
 Beneath his feet, 'mongst ghastliest forms, represt
 Lay Faith, an obscene worm, who sought to rise,
 While calmly on the Sun he turned his diamond eyes.

LI.

Beside that Image then I sat, while she Stood, 'mid the throngs which ever ebbed and flowed
 Like light amid the shadows of the sea
 Cast from one cloudless star, and on the crowd
 That torch, which none who feels forgets, bestowed ;
 And whilst the sun returned the stedfast gaze
 Of the great Image as o'er Heaven it glode,
 That rite had place ; it ceased when sunset's blaze
 Burned o'er the isles ; all stood in joy and deep amaze ;

LII.

When in the silence of all spirits there
 Laone's voice was felt, and through the air
 Her thrilling gestures spoke, most eloquently fair.

LIII.

"Calm art thou as yon sunset ! swift and strong
 As new-fledged Eagles, beautiful and young,
 That float among the blinding beams of morning ;
 And underneath thy feet writhè Faith, and Folly,
 Custom, and Hell, and mortal Melancholy--

Hark ! the Earth starts to hear the mighty warning
 Of thy voice sublime and holy ;
 Its free spirits here assembled,
 See thee, feel thee, know thee now :
 To thy voice their hearts have trembled,
 Like ten thousand clouds which flow
 With one wide wind as it flies !

Wisdom ! thy irresistible children rise
 To hail thee, and the elements they chain
 And their own will to swell the glory of thy train.

<sup>2.</sup>
 " O Spirit vast and deep as Night and Heaven !
 Mother and soul of all to which is given
 The light of life, the loveliness of being,
 Lo ! thou dost re-ascend the human heart,
 Thy throne of power, almighty as thou wert,
 In dreams of Poets old grown pale by seeing
 The shade of thee :—now, millions start
 To feel thy lightnings through them burning :
 Nature, or God, or Love, or Pleasure,
 Or Sympathy, the sad tears turning
 To mutual smiles, a drainless treasure,
 Descends amidst us ;—Scorn and Hate,
 Revenge and Selfishness, are desolate—
 A hundred nations swear that there shall be
 Pity and Peace and Love, among the good and free !

<sup>3.</sup>
 " Eldest of things, divine Equality !
 Wisdom and Love are but the slaves of thee,
 The Angels of thy sway, who pour around thee
 Treasures from all the cells of human thought,
 And from the Stars, and from the Ocean brought,
 And the last living heart whose beatings bound thee :

The powerful and the wise had sought
 Thy coming ; thou in light descending
 O'er the wide land which is thine own,
 Like the spring whose breath is blending
 All blasts of fragrance into one,
 Comest upon the paths of men !

Earth bares her general bosom to thy ken,
 And all her children here in glory meet
 To feed upon thy smiles, and clasp thy sacred feet.

<sup>4.</sup>
 " My brethren, we are free ! the plains and mountains,
 The grey sea-shore, the forests, and the fountains,
 Are haunts of happiest dwellers ; man and woman,
 Their common bondage burst, may freely borrow
 From lawless love a solace for their sorrow !
 For oft we still must weep, since we are human.

A stormy night's serenest morrow,

Whose showers are pity's gentle tears,
 Whose clouds are smiles of those that die
 Like infants, without hopes or fears,
 And whose beams are joys that lie
 In blended hearts, now holds dominion ;
 The dawn of mind, which, upwards on a pinion
 Borne, swift as sun-rise, far illumines space,
 And clasps this barren world in its own bright embrace !

5.

" My brethren, we are free ! the fruits are glowing
 Beneath the stars, and the night-winds are flowing
 O'er the ripe corn, the birds and beasts are dreaming -
 Never again may blood of bird or beast
 Stain with its venomous stream a human feast,
 To the pure skies in accusation steaming ;
 Avenging poisons shall have ceased
 To feed disease and fear and madness.
 The dwellers of the earth and air
 Shall throng around our steps in gladness,
 Seeking their food or refuge there.
 Our toil from thought all glorious forms shall cult,
 To make this earth, our home, more beautiful,
 And Science, and her sister Poesy,
 Shall clothe in light the fields and cities of the free !

6.

" Victory, Victory to the prostrate nations !
 Bear witness, Night, and ye, mute Constellations,
 Who gaze on us from your crystalline cars !
 Thoughts have gone forth whose powers can sleep no more !
 Victory ! Victory ! Earth's remotest shore,
 Regions which groan beneath the Antarctic stars,
 The green lands cradled in the roar
 Of western waves, and wildernesses
 Peopled and vast, which skirt the oceans
 Where morning dyes her golden tresses,
 Shall soon partake our high emotions :
 Kings shall turn pale ! Almighty Fear,
 The Fiend-God, when our charmed name he hear,
 Shall fade like shadow from his thousand fanes,
 While Truth with Joy enthroned o'er his lost empire reigns ! "

THE

Ere she had ceased, the mists of night entwining
 Their dim woof, floated o'er the infinite throng ;
 She like a spirit through the darkness shining,
 In tones whose sweetness silence did prolong,
 As if to lingering winds they did belong,
 Poured forth her inmost soul : a passionate speech
 With wild and thrilling pauses woven among,
 Which whoso heard was mute, for it could teach
 To rapture like her own all listening hearts to reach.

Her voice was as a mountain stream which sweeps
 The withered leaves of Autumn to the lake,
 And in some deep and narrow bay then sleeps
 In the shadow of the shores ; as dead leaves wake
 Under the wave, in flowers and herbs which make
 Those green depths beautiful when skies are blue,
 The multitude so moveless did partake
 Such living change, and kindling murmurs flew
 As o'er that speechless calm delight and wonder grew.

LV.

Over the plain the throngs were scattered then
 In groups around the fires, which from the sea
 Even to the gorge of the first mountain glen
 Blazed wide and far : the banquet of the free
 Was spread beneath many a dark cypress tree,
 Beneath whose spires, which swayed in the red light
 Reclining as they ate, of Liberty,
 And Hope, and Justice, and Laone's name,
 Earth's children did a woof of happy converse frame.

LVI.

Their feast was such as Earth, the general mother,
 Pours from her fairest bosom, when she smiles
 In the embrace of Autumn ;—to each other
 As when some parent fondly reconciles
 Her warring children, she their wrath beguiles
 With her own sustenance : they releuting weep :
 Such was this Festival, which from their isles,
 And continents, and winds, and ocean's deep,
 All shapes might throng to share, that fly, or walk, or creep.

LVII.

Might share in peace and innocence, for gore
 Or poison none this festal did pollute,
 But piled on high, an overflowing store
 Of pomegranates, and citrons, fairest fruit,
 Melons and dates, and figs, and many a root
 Sweet and sustaining, and bright grapes ere yet
 Accursed fire their mild juice could transmute
 Into a mortal bane, and brown corn set
 In baskets ; with pure streams their thirsting lips they wet.

LVIII.

Laone had descended from the shrine,
 And every deepest look and holiest mind
 Fed on her form, though now those tones divino
 Were silent as she past ; she did unwind
 Her veil, as with the crowds of her own kind
 She mix'd; some impulse made my heart restrain
 From seeking her that night, so I reclined
 Amidst a group, where on the utmost plain
 A festal watch-fire burned beside the dusky main.

LIX.

And joyous was our feast; pathetic talk,
 And wit, and harmony of choral strains,
 While far Orion o'er the waves did walk
 That flow among the isles, held us in chains
 Of sweet captivity, which none disdains
 Who feels: but, when his zone grew dim in mist
 Which clothes the Ocean's bosom, o'er the plains
 The multitudes went homeward, to their rest,
 Which that delightful day with its own shadow blest.

CANTO VI.

I.

BESIDE the dimness of the glimmering sea,
 Weaving swift language from impassioned themes,
 With that dear friend I lingered, who to me
 So late had been restored, bethath the gleams
 Of the silver stars; and ever in soft dreams
 Of future love and peace sweet converse lapt
 Our willing fancies, till the pallid beams
 Of the last watch-fire fell, and darkness wrapt
 The waves, and each bright chain of floating fire was snapt.

II.

And till we came even to the City's wall
 And the great gate, then, none knew whence or why,
 Disquiet on the multitudes did fall:
 And first, one pale and breathless past us by,
 And stared and spoke not; then with piercing cry
 A troop of wild-eyed women, by the shrieks
 Of their own terror driven,—tumultuously
 Hither and thither hurrying with pale cheeks,
 Each one from fear unknown a sudden refuge seeks--

III.

Then, rallying cries of treason and of danger
 Resounded: and—"They come! to arms! to arms!
 The Tyrant is amongst us, and the stranger
 Comes to enslave us in his name! to arms!"
 In vain: for Panic, the pale fiend who charms
 Strength to forswear her right, those millions swept
 Like waves before the tempest--these alarms
 Came to me, as to know their cause I leapt
 On the gate's turret, and in rage and grief and scorn I wept!

IV.

For to the North I saw the town on fire,
 And its red light made morning pallid now,
 Which burst over wide Asia.—Louder, higher,
 The yells of victory and the screams of woe
 I heard approach, and saw the throng below
 Stream through the gates like foam-wrought waterfalls
 Fed from a thousand storms—the fearful glow
 Of bombs flares overhead—at intervals
 The red artillery's bolt mangling among them falls.

V.

And now the horsemen come--and all was done
 Swifter than I have spoken--I beheld
 Their red swords flash in the unrisen sun.
 I rushed among the rout to have repelled
 That miserable flight—one moment quelled
 By voice, and looks, and eloquent despair,
 As if reproach from their own hearts withheld
 Their steps, they stood; but soon came pouring there
 New multitudes, and did those rallied bands o'erbear.

VI.

I strove, as drifted on some cataract
 F. irresistible streams, some wretch might strive
 Who hears its fatal roar: the files compact
 Whelmed me, and from the gate availed to drive
 With quickening impulse, as each bolt did rive
 Their ranks with bloodier chasm: into the plain
 Disgorged at length the dead and the alive,
 In one dread mass, were parted, and the stain
 Of blood from mortal steel fell o'er the fields like rain..

VII.

For now the despot's blood-hounds with their prey
 Unarmed and unaware, were gorging deep
 Their gluttony of death; the loose array
 Of horsemen o'er the wide fields murdering sweep,
 And with loud laughter for their tyrant reap
 A harvest sown with other hopes; the while,
 Far overhead, ships from Propontis keep
 A killing rain of fire:—when the waves smile
 As sudden earthquakes light many a volcano isle.

VIII.

Thus sudden, unexpected feast was spread
 For the carrion fowls of Heaven.—I saw the sight —
 I moved— I lived—as o'er the heaps of dead,
 Whose stony eyes glared in the morning light,
 I trod; to me there came no thought of flight
 But with loud cries of scorn which who so heard
 That dreaded death, felt in his veins the might
 Of virtuous shame return, the crowd I stirred,
 And desperation's hope in many hearts recurred.

IX.

A band of brothers gathering round me, made,
 Although unarmed, a stedfast front, and still Retreating, with stern looks beneath the shade
 Of gathered eyebrows, did the victors fill
 With doubt even in success; deliberate will
 Inspired our growing troop; not overthrown
 It gained the shelter of a grassy hill,
 And ever still our comrades were hewn down,
 And their defenceless limbs beneath our footsteps strown.

X.

Immovably we stood—in joy I found,
 Beside me then, firm as a giant pine
 Among the mountain vapours driven around,
 The old man whom I loved—his eyes divine
 With a mild look of courage answered mine,
 And my young friend was near, and ardently
 His hand grasped mine a moment—now the line
 Of war extended, to our rallying cry,
 As myriads flocked in love and brotherhood to die.

XI.

For ever while the sun was climbing Heaven
 The horsemen hewed our unarmed myriads down
 Safely, though when by thirst of carnage driven
 Too near, those slaves were swiftly overthrown
 By hundreds leaping on them: flesh and bone
 Soon made our ghastly ramparts; then the shaft
 Of the artillery from the sea was thrown
 More fast and fiery, and the conquerors laughed
 In pride to hear the wind our screams of torment waft.

XII.

For on one side alone the hill gave shelter,
 So vast that phalanx of unconquered men,
 And there the living in their blood did welter
 Of the dead and dying, which, in that green glen,
 Like stifled torrents, made a plashy fen
 Under the feet—thus was the butchery waged
 While the sun climb Heaven's eastern steep—but when
 It gan to sink, a fiercer combat raged,
 For in more doubtful strife the armies were engaged.

XIII.

Within a cave upon the hill were found
 A bundle of rude pikes, the instrument
 Of those who war but on their native ground
 For natural rights: a shout of joyance sent
 Even from our hearts the wide air pierced and rent,
 As those few arms the bravest and the best
 Seized; and each sixth, thus armed, did now present
 A line which covered and sustained the rest,
 A confident phalanx, which the foes on every side invest.

xiv.

That onset turned the foes to flight almost ;
 But soon they saw their present strength, and knew
 That coming night would to our resolute host
 Bring victory ; so dismounting close they drew
 Their glittering files, and then the combat grew
 Unequal but most horrible ;—and ever
 Our myriads, whom the swift bolt overthrew,
 Or the red sword, failed like a mountain river
 Which rushes forth in foam to sink in sands for ever.

xv.

Sorrow and shame, to see with their own kind
 Our human brethren mix, like beasts of blood
 To mutual ruin, armed by one behind,
 Who sits and scoffs !—That friend so mild and good
 Who like its shadow near my youth had stood,
 Was stabbed !—my old preserver's hoary hair,
 With the flesh clinging to its roots, was strewed
 Under my feet ! I lost all sense or care,
 And like the rest I grew desperate and unaware.

xvi.

The battle became ghastlier, in the midst
 I used, and saw, how ugly and how fell,
 O Hate ! thou art, even when thy life thou shedd'st
 For love. The ground in many a little dell
 Was broken, up and down whose steeps befell
 Alternate victory and defeat, and there
 The combatants with rage most horrible
 Strove, and their eyes started with crackling stare,
 And impotent their tongues they lolled into the air,

xvii.

Flaccid and foamy, like a mad dog's hanging ;
 Want, and Moon-madness, and the Pest's swift bane
 When its shafts smite---while yet its bow is twanging—
 Have each their mark and sign—some ghastly stain ;
 And this was thine, O War ! of hate and pain
 Thou loathed slave. I saw all shapes of death,
 And minister'd to many, o'er the plain
 While carnage in the sunbeam's warmth did seethe,
 Till twilight o'er the east wove her serenest wreath.

xviii.

The few who yet survived, resolute and firm,
 Around me fought. At the decline of day,
 Winding above the mountain's snowy term,
 New banners shone : they quivered in the ray
 Of the sun's unseen orb—ere night the array
 Of fresh troops hemmed us in—of those brave bands
 I soon survived alone—and now I lay
 Vanquished and faint, the grasp of bloody hands
 I felt, and saw on high the glare of falling brands ;

xix.

When on my foes a sudden terror came,
 And they fled, scattering.—Lo ! with reinless speed
 A black Tartarian horse of giant frame
 Comes trampling o'er the dead ; the living bleed
 Beneath the hoofs of that tremendous steed,
 On which, like to an angel, robed in white,
 Sate one waving a sword ; the hosts recede
 And fly, as through their ranks, with awful might,
 Sweeps in the shadow of eve that Phantom swift and bright ;

xx.

And its path made a solitude.—I rose
 And marked its coming ; it relaxed its course
 As it approached me, and the wind that flows
 Through night, bore accents to mine ear whose force
 Might create smiles in death.—The Tartar horse
 Paused, and I saw the shape its might which swayed,
 And heard her musical pants, like the sweet source
 Of waters in the desert, as she said.
 “ Mount with me, Laon, now”—I rapidly obeyed.

xxi.

Then “ Away ! away ! ” she cried, and stretched her sword
 As ’twere a scourge over the courser’s head,
 And lightly shook the reins.—We spake no word,
 But like the vapour of the tempest fled
 Over the plain ; her dark hair was disspread.
 Like the pine’s locks upon the lingering blast ;
 Over mine eyes its shadowy strings it spread
 Fitfully, and the hills and streams fled fast,
 As o’er their glimmering forms the steed’s broad shadow past :

xxii.

And his hoofs ground the rocks to fire and dust,
 His strong sides made the torrents rise in spray,
 And turbulence, as if a whirlwind’s gust
 Surrounded us ;—and still away ! away !
 Through the desert night we sped, while she alway
 Gazed on a mountain which we neared, whose crest
 Crowned with a marble ruin, in the ray
 Of the obscure stars gleamed ;—its rugged breast
 The steed strained up, and then his impulse did arrest.

xxiii.

A rocky hill which overhung the Ocean :—
 From that lone ruin, when the steed that panted
 Paused, might be heard the murmur of the motion
 Of waters, as in spots for ever haunted
 By the choicest winds of Heaven, which are enchanted
 To music by the wand of Solitude,
 That wizard wild, and the far tents implanted
 Upon the plain, be seen by those who stood
 Thence marking the dark shore of Ocean’s curved flood.

xxiv.

One moment these were heard and seen—another
Past ; and the two who stood beneath that night,
Each only heard, or saw, or felt, the other ;
As from the lofty steed she did alight,
Cythna (for, from the eyes whose deepest light
Of love and sadness made my lips feel pale
With influence strange of mournfullest delight,
My own sweet Cythna looked,) with joy did quail,
And felt her strength in tears of human weakness fail.

xxv.

And for a space in my embrace she rested,
Her head on my unquiet heart reposing,
While my faint arms her languid frame invested :
At length she looked on me, and half unclosing
Her tremulous lips, said : “Friend, thy bands were losing
The battle, as I stood before the King
In bonds.—I burst them then, and swiftly choosing
The time, did seize a Tartar’s sword, and spring
Upon his horse, and swift as on the whirlwind’s wing,

xxvi.

“Have thou and I been borne beyond pursuer,
And we are here.”—Then, turning to the steed,
She pressed the white moon on his front with pure
And rose-like lips, and many a fragrant weed
From the green ruin plucked, that he might feed ;—
But I to a stone seat that Maiden led,
And kissing her fair eyes, said, “Thou hast need
Of rest,” and I heaped up the courser’s bed
In a green mossy nook, with mountain flowers disspread.

xxvii.

Within that ruin, where a shattered portal
Looks to the eastern stars, abandoned now
By man, to be the home of things immortal.
Memories, like awful ghosts which come and go,
And must inherit all he builds below,
When he is gone, a hall stood ; o’er whose roof
Fair clinging weeds with ivy pale did grow,
Clasping its grey rents with a verdurous woof.
A hanging dome of leaves, a canopy moon-proof.

xxviii.

The autumnal winds, as if spell-bound, had made
A natural couch of leaves in that recess,
Which seasons none disturbed, but in the shade
Of flowering parasites, did spring love to dress
With their sweet blooms the wintry loneliness
Of those dead leaves, shedding their stars, whene’er
The wandering wind her nurslings might caress ;
Whose intertwining fingers ever there,
Made music wild and soft that filled the listening air.

xxix.

We know not where we go, or what sweet dream
 May pilot us through caverns strange and fair
 Of far and pathless passion, while the stream
 Of life our bark doth on its whirlpools bear,
 Spreading swift wings as sails to the dim air;
 Nor should we seek to know, so the devotion
 Of love and gentle thoughts be heard still there
 Louder and louder from the utmost Ocean
 Of universal life, attuning its commotion.

xxx.

To the pure all things are pure! Oblivion wrapt
 Our spirits, and the fearful overthrow
 Of public hope was from our being snapt,
 Though linked years had bound it there; for now
 A power, a thirst, a knowledge, which below
 All thoughts, like light beyond the atmosphere,
 Clothing its clouds with grace, doth ever flow,
 Came on us, as we sat in silence there,
 Beneath the golden stars of the clear azure air.

xxxI.

In silence which doth follow talk that causes
 The baffled heart to speak with sighs and tears,
 When wildering passion swalloweth up the pauses
 Of inexpressive speech:—the youthful years
 Which we together past, their hopes and fears,
 The blood itself which ran within our frames,
 That likeness of the features which endears
 The thoughts expressed by them, our very names,
 And all the winged hours which speechless memory claims,

xxxII.

Had found a voice:—and ere that voice did pass,
 The night grew damp and dim, and through a rent
 Of the ruin where we sate, from the mortiss,
 A wandering Meteor, by some wild wind sent,
 Hung high in the green dome, to which it lent
 A faint and pallid lustre; while the song
 Of blasts, in which its blue hair quivering bent,
 Strowed strangest sounds the moving leaves among;
 A wondrous light, the sound as of a spirit's tongue.

xxxIII.

The Meteor showed the leaves on which we sate,
 And Cynthia's glowing arms, and the thick ties
 Of her soft hair, which bent with gathered weight
 My neck near hers, her dark and deepening eyes,
 Which, as twin phantoms of one star that lies
 O'er a dim well, move, though the star reposes,
 Swam in our mute and liquid ecstacies,
 Her marble brow, and eager lips, like roses,
 With their own fragrance pale, which spring but half unclosed.

XXXIV.

The Meteor to its far morass returned:
 The beating of our veins one interval
 Made still; and then I felt the blood that burned
 Within her frame, mingle with mine, and fall
 Around my heart like fire; and over all
 A mist was spread, the sickness of a deep
 And speechless swoon of joy, as might befall
 Two disunited spirits when they leap
 In union from this earth's obscure and fading sleep.

XXXV.

Was it one moment that confounded thus
 All thought, all sense, all feeling, into one
 Unutterable power, which shielded us
 Even from our own cold looks, when we had gone
 Into a wide and wild oblivion
 Of tumult and of tenderness? or now
 Had agos, such as make the moon and sun,
 The seasons and mankind, their changes know,
 Left fear and time unfelt by us alone below?

XXXVI.

I know not. What are kisses whose fire clasps
 The failing heart in languishment, or limb
 Twined within limb? or the quick dying gasps
 Of the life meeting, when the faint eyes swim
 Through tears of a wide mist, boundless and dim,
 In one caress? What is the strong control
 Which leads the heart that dizzy steep to climb,
 Where far over the world those vapours roll,
 Which blend two restless frames in one reposing soul?

XXXVII.

It is the shadow which doth float unseen,
 But not unfelt, o'er blind mortality,
 Whose divine darkness fled not from that green
 And lone recess, where lapt in peace did lie
 Our linked frames, till, from the changing sky,
 That night and still another day had fled;
 And then I saw and felt. The moon was high,
 And clouds, as of a coming storm, were spread
 Under its orb,—loud winds were gathering overhead.

XXXVIII.

Cynthia's sweet lips seemed lurid in the moon,
 Her fairest limbs with the night wind were chill,
 And her dark tresses were all loosely strown
 O'er her pale bosom:—all within was still,
 And the sweet peace of joy did almost fill
 The depth of her unfathomable look:—
 And we sat calmly, though that rocky hill,
 The waves contending in its caverns strook,
 For they foreknew the storm, and the grey ruin shook.

XXXIX.

There we unheeding sate, in the communion
 Of interchanged vows, which, with a rite
 Of faith most sweet and sacred, stamped our union.—
 Few were the living hearts which could unite
 Like ours, or celebrate a bridal night
 With such close sympathies, for they had sprung
 From linked youth, and from the gentle might
 Of earliest love, delayed and cherished long,
 Which common hopes and fears made, like a tempest, strong.

XL.

And such is Nature's law divine, that those
 Who grow together cannot choose but love,
 If faith or custom do not interpose,
 Or common slavery mar what else might move
 All gentlest thoughts; as in the sacred grove
 Which shades the springs of Ethiopian Nile,
 That living tree, which, if the arrowy dove
 Strike with her shadow, shrinks in fear awhile,
 But its own kindred leaves clasps while the sunbeams smile:

XLI.

And clings to them, when darkness may disover
 The close caresses of all duller plants
 Which bloom on the wide earth: thus we for ever
 Were linked, for love had nurst us in the haunts
 Where knowledge from its secret source enchanteth
 Young hearts with the fresh music of its springing,
 Ere yet its gathered flood feeds human wants,
 As the great Nile feeds Egypt; ever flinging
 Light on the woven boughs which o'er its waves are swinging

XLII.

The tones of Cythna's voice like echoes were
 Of those far murmuring streams; they rose and fell,
 Mixed with mine own in the tempestuous air,—
 And so we sate, until our talk befel
 Of the late ruin, swift and horrible,
 And how those seeds of hope might yet be sown,
 Whose fruit is evil's mortal poison: well
 For us, this ruin made a watch-tower lone,
 But Cythna's eyes looked faint, and now two days were gone

XLIII.

Since she had food:—therefore I did awaken
 The Tartar steed, who, from his ebon mane,
 Soon as the clinging slumbers he had shaken,
 Bent his thin head to seek the brazen rein,
 Following me obediently; with pain
 Of heart, so deep and dread, that one caress,
 When lips and heart refuse to part again,
 Till they have told their fill, could scarce express
 The anguish of her mute and fearful tenderness,

Cythna beheld me part, as I bestrode
 That willing steed—the tempest and the night,
 Which gave my path its safety as I rode
 Down the ravine of rocks, did soon unite
 The darkness and the tumult of their might Borne on all winds.—Far through the streaming rain
 Floating at intervals the garments white
 Of Cythna gleamed, and her voice once again
 Came to me on the gust, and soon I reached the plain.

XLV.

I dreaded not the tempest, nor did he
 Who bore me, but his eyeballs wide and red
 Turned on the lightning's cleft exultingly ;
 And when the earth beneath his tameless tread,
 Shook with the sullen thunder, he would spread
 His nostrils to the blast, and joyously
 Mock the fierce peal with neighings ;—thus we sped
 O'er the lit plain, and soon I could deservy
 Where Death and Fire had gorged the spoil of victory.

XLVI.

There was a desolate village in a wood,
 Whose bloom inwoven leaves now scattering fed
 The hungry storm ; it was a place of blood,
 A heap of heartless walls ;—the flames were dead
 Within those dwellings now,—the life had fled
 From all those' corpses now,—but the wide sky
 Flooded with lightning was ribbed overhead
 By the black rafters, and around did lie
 Women, and babes, and men, slaughtered confusedly.

XLVII.

Beside the fountain in the market-place
 Dismounting, I beheld those corpses stare
 With horny eyes upon each otheu's face,
 And on the earth, and on the vacant air,
 And upon me, close to the waters where
 I stooped to slake my thirst ;—I shrank to taste,
 For the salt bitterness of blood was there !
 But tied the steed beside, and sought in haste
 If any yet survived amid that ghastly waste.

XLVIII.

No living thing was there beside one woman,
 Whom I found wandering in the streets, and she
 Was withered from a likeness of aught human
 Into a fiend, by some strange misery :
 Soon as she heard my steps, she leaped on me,
 And glued her burning lips to mine, and laughed
 With a loud, long, and frantic laugh of glee,
 And cried, “ Now, Mortal, thou hast deeply quaffed
 The Plague's blue kisses—soon millions shall p'age the draught !

XLIX.

"My name is Pestilence—this bosom dry
 Once fed two babes—a sister and a brother—
 When I came home, one in the blood did lie
 Of three death-wounds—the flames had ate the other !
 Since then I have no longer been a mother,
 But I am Pestilence ;—hither and thither
 I flit about, that I may slay and smother ;—
 All lips which I have kissed must surely wither,
 But Death's—if thou art he, we'll go to work together !

L.

"What seekest thou here ? the moonlight comes in flashes,-
 The dew is rising dankly from the dell ;
 'Twill moisten her ! and thou shalt see the gashes
 In my sweet boy—now full of worms—but tell
 First what thou seek'st."—"I seek for food."—"Tis well,
 Thou shalt have food ; Famine, my paramour,
 Waits for us at the feast—cruel and fell
 Is Famine, but he drives not from his door
 Those whom these lips have kissed, alone. No more, no more !"

LI.

As thus she spake, she grasped me with the strength
 Of madness, and by many a ruined hearth
 She led, and over many a corpse :—at length
 We came to a lone hut, where on the earth
 Which made its floor, she in her ghastly mirth
 Gathering from all those homes now desolate,
 Had piled three heaps of loaves, making a dearth
 Among the dead—round which she set in state
 A ring of cold, stiff babes ; silent and stark they sate.

LII.

She leaped upon a pile, and lifted high
 Her mad looks to the lightning, and cried : " Eat !
 Share the great feast—to-morrow we must die !"
 And then she spurned the loaves with her pale feet,
 Towards her bloodless guests ;—that sight to meet,
 Mine eyes and my heart ached, and but that she
 Who loved me, did with absent looks defeat
 Despair, I might have raved in sympathy ;
 But now I took the food that woman offered me ;

LIII.

And vainly having with her madness striven
 If I might win her to return with me,
 Departed. In the eastern beans of Heaven
 The lightning now grew pallid—rapidly,
 As by the shore of the tempestuous sea
 The dark steed bore me, and the mountain grey
 Soon echoed to his hoofs, and I could see
 Cythna among the rocks, where she alway
 Had sate, with anxious eyes fixed on the lingering day.

LIV.

And joy was ours to meet : she was most pale,
 Famished, and wet and weary, so I cast
 My arms around her, lest her steps should fail
 As to our home we went, and thus embraced,
 Her full heart seemed a deeper joy to taste
 Than e'er the prosperous know ; the steed behind
 Trod peacefully along the mountain waste :
 We reached our home ere morning could unbind
 Night's latest veil, and on our bridal couch reclined.

L.V.

Her chilled heart having cherished in my bosom,
 And sweetest kisses past, we two did share
 Our peaceful meal :—as an autumnal blossom,
 Which spreads its shrunk leaves in the sunny air,
 After cold showers, like rainbows woven there,
 Thus in her lips and cheeks the vital spirit
 Mantled, and in her eyes, an atmosphere
 Of health, and hope ; and sorrow languished near it,
 And fear, and all that dark despondence doth inherit.

CANTO VII.

I.
 So we sate joyous as the morning ray
 Which fed upon the wrecks of night and storm
 Now lingering on the winds ; light airs did play
 Among the dewy weeds, the sun was warm,
 And we sate linked in the inwoven charm
 Of converse and caresses sweet and deep,
 Speechless caresses, talk that might disarm
 Time, though he wield the darts of death and sleep,
 And those three mortal bars in his own poison steep.

II.

I told her of my sufferings and my madness,
 And how, awakened from that dreamy mood
 By Liberty's uprise, the strength of gladness
 Came to my spirit in my solitude ;
 And all that now I was, while tears pursued
 Each other down her fair and listening cheek
 Fast as the thoughts which fed them, like a flood
 From sunbright dales ; and when I ceased to speak,
 Her accents soft and sweet the pausing air did wake.

III.

She told me a strange tale of strange endurance,
 Like broken memories of many a heart
 Woven into one ; to which no firm assurance,
 So wild were they, could her own faith impart.
 She said that not a tear did dare to start
 From the swoln brain, and that her thoughts were firm
 When from all mortal hope she did depart,
 Borne by those slaves across the Ocean's term,
 And that she reached the port without one fear infirm.

IV.

One was she among many there, the thralls
 Of the cold tyrant's cruel lust : and they
 Laughed mournfully in those polluted halls ;
 But she was calm and sad, musing alway
 On loftiest enterprise, till on a day
 The tyrant heard her singing to her lute
 A wild and sad, and spirit-thrilling lay,
 Like winds that die in wastes--one moment mute
 The evil thoughts it made, which did his breast pollute.

V.

Even when he saw her wondrous loveliness,
 One moment to great Nature's sacred power
 He bent and was no longer passionless ;
 But when he bade her to his secret bower
 Be borne a loveless victim, and she tore
 Her locks in agony, and her words of flame
 And mightier looks availed not ; then he bore
 Again his load of slavery, and became
 A king, a heartless beast, a pageant and a name.

VI.

She told me what a loathsome agony
 Is that when selfishness mocks love's delight,
 Foul as in dreams most fearful imagery
 To dally with the mowing dead—that night
 All torture, fear, or horror, made seem light
 Which the soul dreams or knows, and when the day
 Shone on her awful frenzy, from the sight
 Where like a Spirit in fleshy chains she lay
 Struggling, aghast and pale the tyrant fled away.

VII.

Her madness was a beam of light, a power
 Which dawned through the rent soul ; and words it gave,
 Gestures and looks, such as in whirlwinds bore
 Which might not be withstood, whence none could save
 All who approached their sphere, like some calm wave
 Vexed into whirlpools by the chasms beneath ;
 And sympathy made each attendant slave
 Fearless and free, and they began to breathe
 Deep curses, like the voice of flames far underneath.

VIII.

The King felt pale upon his noon-day throne ;
 At night two slaves he to her chamber sent,
 One was a green and wrinkled eunuch, grown
 From human shape into an instrument
 Of all things ill—distorted, bowed and bent.
 The other was a wretch from infancy
 Made dumb by poison ; who nought knew or meant
 But to obey : from the fire-isles came he,
 A diver lean and strong, of Oman's coral sea.

IX.

They bore her to a bark, and the swift stroke
 Of silent rowers clove the blue moonlight seas,
 Until upon their path the morning broke ;
 They anchored then, where, be there calm or breeze,
 The gloomiest of the drear Symplegades
 Shakes with the sleepless surge ;—the Aethiop there
 Wound his long arms around her, and with knees
 Like iron clasped her feet, and plunged with her
 Among the closing waves out of the boundless air.

X.

“ Swift as an eagle stooping from the plain
 Of evening light, into some shadowy wood,
 He plunged through the green silence of the main,
 Through many a cavern which the eternal flood
 Had scooped, as dark lairs for its monster brood ;
 And among mighty shapes which fled in wonder,
 And among mightier shadows which pursued
 His heels, he wound : until the dark rocks under
 He touched a golden chain—a sound arose like thunder.

XI.

“ A tuning clang of massive bolts redoubling
 Beneath the deep—a burst of waters driven
 As from the roots of the sea, raging and bubbling :
 And in that roof of crags a space was riven
 Thro' which there shone the emerald beams of heaven,
 Shot through the lines of many waves inwoven,
 Like sunlight through acacia woods at even,
 Through which, his way the diver having cloven,
 Past like a sp'uk sent up out of a burning oven.

XII.

“ And then,” she said, “ he laid me in a cave
 Above the waters, by that chasm of sea,
 A fountain round and vast, in which the wave
 Imprisoned, boiled and leaped perpetually,
 Down which, one moment resting, he did flee,
 Winning the adverse depth ; that spacious cell
 Like an upaithric temple wide and high,
 Whose aëry dome is inaccessible,
 Was pierced with one round cleft through which the sunbeams fell.

xiii.

"Below, the fountain's brink was richly paven
 With the deep's wealth, coral, and pearl, and sand
 Like spangling gold, and purple shells engraven
 With mystic legends by no mortal hand,
 Left there, when, thronging to the moon's command,
 The gathering waves rent the Hesperian gate
 Of mountains, and on such bright floor did stand
 Columns, and shapes like statues, and the state
 Of kingless thrones, which Earth did in her heart create.

xiv.

"The fiend of madness which had made its prey
 Of my poor heart, was lulled to sleep awhile :
 There was an interval of many a day,
 And a sea-eagle brought me food the while,
 Whose nest was built in that untrodden isle,
 And who, to be the jailer, had been taught,
 Of that strange dungeon ; as a friend whose smile
 Like light and rest at morn and even is sought,
 That wild bird was to me, till madness misery brought.

xv.

"The misery of a madness slow and creeping,
 Which made the earth seem fire, the sea seem air,
 And the white clouds of noon which oft were sleeping
 In the blue heaven so beautiful and fair,
 Like hosts of ghastly shadows hovering there :
 And the sea-eagle looked a fiend who bore
 Thy mangled limbs for food ! - Thus all things were Transformed into the agony which I wore,
 Even as a poisoned robe around my bosom's core.

xvi.

"Again I knew the day and night fast fleeing,
 The eagle and the fountain and the air ;
 Another frenzy came—there seemed a being
 Within me—a strange load my heart did bear,
 As if some living thing had made its lair
 Even in the fountains of my life :—a long
 And wondrous vision wrought from my despair,
 Then grew, like sweet reality among
 Dism visionay woes, an unreposing throng.

xvii.

"Methought I was about to be a mother.—
 Month after month went by, and still I dreamed
 That we should soon be all to one another,
 I and my child ; and still new pulses seemed
 To beat beside my heart, and still I deemed
 There was a babe within—and when the rain
 Of winter through the rifted cavern streamed,
 Methought, after a lapse of lingering pain,
 I saw that lovely shape, which near my heart had lain.

xviii.

"It was a babe, beautiful from its birth,—
 It was like thee, dear love ! its eyes were thine,
 Its brow, its lips, and so upon the earth
 It laid its fingers, as now rest on mine
 Thine own, beloved !—'twas a dream divine ;
 Even to remember how it fled, how swift,
 How utterly, might make the heart repine,—
 Though 'twas a dream."—Then Cythna did uplift
 Her looks on mine, as if some doubt she sought to shift :

xix.

A doubt which would not flee, a tenderness
 Of questioning grief, a source of thronging tears ;
 Which, having past, as one whom sobs oppress,
 She spoke : " Yes, in the wilderness of years
 Her memory, aye, like a green bough appears.
 She sucked her fill even at this breast, sweet love,
 For many months I had no mortal fears ; .
 Methought I felt her lips and breath approve,--
 It was a human thing which to my bosom clove.

xx.

"I watched the dawn of her first smiles, and soon
 When zenith-stars were trembling on the wave,
 Or when the beams of the invisible moon,
 Or sun, from many a prism within the cave
 Their gem-born shadows to the water gave,
 Her looks would haunt them, and with outspread hand,
 From the swift lights which might that fountain pave,
 She would mark one, and laugh, when that command
 Slighting, it lingered there, and could not understand.

xxi.

"Methought her looks began to talk with me :
 And no articulate sounds, but something sweet
 Her lips would frame,—so sweet it could not be,
 That it was meaningless ; her touch would meet
 Mine, and our pulses calmly flow and beat
 In response while we slept ; and on a day
 When I was happiest in that strange retreat,
 With heaps of golden shells we two did play,—
 Both infants, weaving wings for time's perpetual way.

xxii.

"Ere night, methought, her waning eyes were grown
 Weary with joy, and tired with our delight,
 We, on the earth, like sister twins lay down
 On one fair mother's bosom :—from that night
 She fled ;—like those illusions clear and bright,
 Which dwell in lakes, when the red moon on high
 Pauses ere it wakens tempest ;—and her flight,
 Though 'twas the death of brainless phantasy,
 Yet smote my lonesome heart more than all misery.

xxiii.

"It seemed that in the dreary night, the diver
 Who brought me thither, came again, and bore
 My child away. I saw the waters quiver,
 When he so swiftly sunk, as once before:
 Then morning came—it shone even as of yore,
 But I was changed—the very life was gone
 Out of my heart—I wasted more and more,
 Day after day, and sitting there alone,
 Vexed the inconstant waves with my perpetual moan.

xxiv.

"I was no longer mad, and yet methought
 My breasts were swoln and changed :—in every vein
 The blood stood still one moment, while that thought
 Was passing—with a gush of sickening pain
 It ebbed even to its withered springs again :
 When my wan eyes in stern resolve I turned
 From that most strange delusion, which would fain
 Have waked the dream for which my spirit yearned
 With more than human love,—then left it unreturned.

xxv.

"So now my reason was restored to me,
 I struggled with that dream, which, like a beast
 Most fierce and beauteous, in my memory
 Had made its lair, and on my heart did feast ;
 But all that cave and all its shapes possest
 By thoughts which could not fade, renewed each one
 Some smile, some look, some gesture which had blest
 Me heretofore : I, sitting there alone,
 Vexed the inconstant waves with my perpetual moan.

xxvi.

"Time past, I know not whether months or years ;
 For day, nor night, nor change of seasons made
 Its note, but thoughts and unavailing tears :
 And I became at last even as a shade,
 A smoke, a cloud on which the winds have preyed,
 Till it be thin as air ; until, one even,
 A Nautilus upon the fountain played,
 Spreading his azure sail where breath of Heaven
 Descended not, among the waves and whirlpools driven.

xxvii.

"And when the Eagle came, that lovely thing,
 Oaring with rosy feet its silver boat,
 Fled near me as for shelter ; on slow wing,
 The Eagle, hovering o'er his prey, did float ;
 But when he saw that I with fear did note
 His purpos'd proffering my own food to him,
 The eager plumes subsided on his throat—
 He came where that bright child of sea did swim,
 And o'er it cast in peace his shadow broad and dim.

XXVIII.

"This wakened me, it gave me human strength ;
 And hope, I know not whence or wherfore, rose,
 But I resumed my ancient powers at length;
 My spirit felt again like one of those,
 Like thine, whose fate it is to make the woes
 Of humankind their prey—what was this cave ?
 Its deep foundation no firm purpose knows
 Immutable, resistless, strong to save,
 Like mind while yet it mocks the all-devouring grave.

XXIX.

"And where was Laon ? might my heart be dead,
 While that far dearer heart could move and be?
 Or whilst over the earth the pall was spread,
 Which I had sworn to rend ? I might be free,
 Could I but win that friendly bird to me,
 To bring me ropes ; and long in vain I sought
 By intercourse of mutual imagery
 Of objects, if such aid he could be taught ;
 But fruit, and flowers, and boughs, yet never ropes he brought.

XXX.

"We live in our own world, and mine was made
 From glorious phantasies of hope departed :
 Aye, we are darkened with their floating shade,
 Or cast a lustre on them—time imparted
 Such power to me, I became fearless-hearted ;
 My eye and voice grew firm, calm was my mind,
 And piercing, like the morn, now it has darted
 Its lustre on all hidden things, behind
 You dim and fading clouds which load the weary wind.

XXXI.

"My mind became the book through which I grew
 Wise in all human wisdom, and its cave,
 Which like a mine I riddled through and through,
 To me the keeping of its secrets gave—
 One mind, the type of all, the moveless wave
 Whose calm reflects all moving things that are,
 Necessity, and love, and life, the grave,
 And sympathy, fountains of hope and fear ;
 Justice, and truth, and time, and the world's natural sphere.

XXXII.

"And on the sand would I make signs to range
 These woofs, as they were woven, of my thought ;
 Clear elemental shapes, whose smallest change
 A subtler language within language wrought :
 The key of truths which once were dimly taught
 In old Crotona ;—and sweet melodies
 Of love, in that lone solitude I caught
 From mine own voice in dream, when thy dear eyes
 Shone through my sleep, and did that utterance harmonise.

XXXIII.

"Thy songs were winds whereon I fled at will,
As in a winged chariot, o'er the plain
Of crystal youth ; and thou wert there to fill
My heart with joy, and there we sate again
On the grey margin of the glimmering main.
Happy as then but wiser far, for we
Smiled on the flowery grave in which were lain
Fear, Faith, and Slavery ; and mankind was free,
Equal, and pure, and wise, in wisdom's prophecy.

XXXIV.

"For to my will my fancies were as slaves
To do their sweet and subtle ministries ;
And oft from that bright fountain's shadowy waves
They would make human throngs gather and rise
To combat with my overflowing eyes,
And voice made deep with passion—thus I grew
Familiar with the shock and the surprise
And war of earthly minds, from which I drew
The power which has been mine to frame their thoughts anew.

XXXV.

"And thus my prison was the populous earth—
Where I saw—even as misery dreams of morn
Before the east has given its glory birth—
Religion's pomp made desolate by the scorn
Of Wisdom's faintest smile, and thrones upturn,
And dwellings of mild people interspersed
With undivided fields of ripening corn,
And love made free,—a hope which we have nurst
Even with our blood and tears,—until its glory burst.

XXXVI.

"All is not lost ! There is some recompence
For hope whose fountain can be thus profound,
Even throned Evil's splendid impotence,
Girt by its hell of power, the secret sound
Of hymns to truth and freedom,—the dread bound
Of life and death passed fearlessly and well,
Dungeons wherein the high resolve is found,
Racks which degraded woman's greatness tell,
And what may else be good and irresistible.

XXXVII.

"Such are the thoughts which, like the firs that flare
In storm-encompassed isles, we cherish yet
In this dark ruin—such were mine even there ;
As in its sleep some odorous violet,
While yet its leaves with nightly dews are wet,
Breathes in prophetic dreams of day's uprise,
Or, as ere Scythian frost in fear has met
Spring's messengers descending from the skies,
The buds foreknow their life—this hope must ever rise.

XXXVIII.

" So years had past, when sudden earthquake rent
 The depth of ocean, and the cavern crackt
 With sound, as if the world's wide continent
 Had fallen in universal ruin wrackt ;
 And through the cleft streamed in one cataract
 The stifling waters : -when I woke, the flood,
 Whose banded waves that crystal cave had sacked,
 Was ebbing round me, and my bright abode
 Before me yawned---a chasm desert, and bare, and broad.

XXXIX.

" Above me was the sky, beneath the sea :
 I stood upon a point of shattered stone,
 And heard loose rocks rushing tumultuously
 With splash and shock into the deep—anon
 All ceased, and there was silence wide and lone.
 I felt that I was free ! The Ocean-spray
 Quivered beneath my feet, the broad Heaven shone
 Around, and in my hair the winds did play,
 Lingering as they pursued their unimpeded way.

XL.

" My spirit moved upon the sea like wind
 Which round some thymy cape will lag and hover,
 Though it can wake the still cloud, and unbind
 The strength of tempest : day was almost over,
 When through the fading light I could discover
 A ship approaching—its white sails were fed
 With the north wind —its moving shade did cover
 The twilight deep ;—the mariners in dread
 Cast anchor when they saw new rocks around them spread.

XLI.

" And when they saw one sitting on a crag,
 They sent a boat to me ;—the sailors rowed
 In awe through many a new and fearful jag
 Of overhanging rock, through which there flowed
 The foam of streams that cannot make abode.
 They came and questioned me, but, when they heard
 My voice, they became silent, and they stood
 And moved as men in whom new love had stirred
 Deep thoughts : so to the ship we past without a word.

CANTO VIII.

<sup>I.</sup>
 "I SATE beside the steersman then, and, gazing
 Upon the west, cried, 'Spread the sails ! behold !
 The sinking moon is like a watch-tower blazing
 Over the mountains yet ;—the City of Gold
 Yon Cape alone does from the sight withhold ;
 The stream is fleet - the north breathes steadily
 Beneath the stars ; they tremble with the cold !
 Ye cannot rest upon the dreary sea ; —
 Haste, haste to the warm home of happier destiny !'

<sup>II.</sup>
 "The Mariners obeyed—the Captain stood
 Aloof, and, whispering to the Pilot, said,
 'Alas, alas ! I fear we are pursued
 By wicked ghosts : a Phantom of the Dead,
 The night before we sailed, came to my bed
 In dream, like that !' The Pilot then replied,
 'It cannot be—she is a human Maid—
 Her low voice makes you weep—she is some bride,
 Or daughter of high birth —she can be nought beside.'

<sup>III.</sup>
 "We past the islets, borne by wind and stream,
 And as we sailed, the Mariners came near
 And thronged around to listen ;—in the gleam
 Of the pale moon I stood, as one whom fear
 May not attaint, and my calm voice did rear :
 'Ye are all human—yon broad moon gives light
 To millions who the self-same likeness wear.
 Even while I speak—beneath this very night,
 Their thoughts flow on like ours, in sadness or delight.'

<sup>IV.</sup>
 "What dream ye ? Your own hands have built a home,
 Even for yourselves on a beloved shore :
 For some, fond eyes are pining till they come,
 How they will greet him when his toils are o'er,
 And laughing babes rush from the well-known door !
 Is this your care ? ye foil for your own good—
 Ye feel and think—has some immortal power
 Such purposes ? or in a human mood,
 Dream ye some Power thus builds for man in solitude ?

“ What is that Power ? Ye mock yourselves, and give
 A human heart to what ye cannot know :
 As if the cause of life could think and live !
 Twere as if man’s own works should feel, and show
 The hopes, and fears, and thoughts, from which they flow,
 And he be like to them. Lo ! Plague is free
 To waste, Blight, Poison, Earthquake, Hail, and Snow,
 Disease, and Want, and worse necessity
 Of hate and ill, and Pride, and Fear, and Tyranny.

VI.

“ What is that Power ? Some moon-struck sophist stood
 Watching the shade from his own soul upthrown
 Fill Heaven and darken Earth, and in such mood
 The Form he saw and worshipped was his own,
 His likeness in the world’s vast mirror shown ;
 And ’twere an innocent dream, but that a faith
 Nursed by fear’s dew of poison, grows thereon,
 And that men say, that Power has chosen Death
 On all who scorn its laws, to wreak immortal wrath.

VII.

“ Men say that they themselves have heard and seen,
 Or known from others who have known such things,
 A Shade, a Form, which Earth and Heaven between Wields an invisible rod—that Priests and Kings,
 Custom, domestic sway, ay, all that brings
 Man’s free-born soul beneath the oppressor’s heel,
 Are his strong ministers, and that the stings
 Of death will make the wise his vengeance feel,
 Though truth and virtue arm their hearts with tenfold steel.

VIII.

“ And it is said, this Power will punish wrong ;
 Yes, add despair to crime, and pain to pain !
 And deepest hell, and deathless snakes among,
 Will bind the wretch on whom is fixed a stain,
 Which, like a plague, a burthen, and a bane,
 Clung to him while he lived ;—for love and hate,
 Virtue and vice, they say are difference vain—
 The will of strength is right—this human state
 Tyrants, that they may rule, with lies thus desolate.

IX.

“ Alas, what strength ? Opinion is more frail
 Than you dim cloud now fading on the noon
 Even while we gaze, though it awhile avail
 To hide the orb of truth—and every throne
 Of Earth or Heaven, though shadow rests thereon,
 One shape of many names :—for this ye plough
 The barren waves of ocean ; hence each one
 Is slave or tyrant ; all betray and bow,
 Command, or kill, or fear, or wreak, or suffer woe.

x.

“‘Its names are each a sign which maketh holy
 All power—ay, the ghost, the dream, the shade,
 Of power—lust, falsehood, hate, and pride, and folly ;
 The patteru whence all fraud and wrong is made,
 A law to which mankind has been betrayed ;
 And human love, is as the name well known
 Of a dear mother, whom the murderer laid
 In bloody grave, and, into darkness thrown,
 Gathered her wildered babes around him as his own.

xi.

“‘O love ! who to the hearts of wandering men
 Art as the calm to Ocean’s weary waves !
 Justice, or truth, or joy ! thou only can
 From slavery and religion’s labyrinth eaves
 Guide us, as one clear star the seamen saves.
 To give to all an equal share of good,
 To track the steps of freedom, though through graves
 She pass, to suffer all in patient mood,
 To weep for crime, though stained with thy friend’s dearest blood

xii.

“‘To feel the peace of self-contentment’s lot,
 To own all sympathies, and outrage none,
 And, in the inmost bowers of sense and thought,
 Until life’s sunny day is quite gone down,
 To sit and smile with Joy, or, not alone,
 To kiss salt tears from the worn cheek of Woe ;
 To live, as if to love and live were one,—
 This is not faith or law, nor those who bow
 To thrones on Heaven or Earth, such destiny may know.

xiii.

“‘But children near their parents tremble now,
 Because they must obey—one rules another,
 And as one Power rules both high and low,
 So man is made the captive of his brother,
 And Hate is throned on high with Fear her mother,
 Above the Highest—and those fountain-cells,
 Whence love yet flowed when faith had choked all other,
 Are darkened—Woman, as the bond-slave, dwells
 Of man, a slave ; and life is poisoned in its wells.

xiv.

“‘Man seeks for gold in mines, that he may weave
 A lasting chain for his own slavery ;—
 In fear and restless care that he may live
 He toils for others, who must ever be
 The joyless thralls of like captivity ;
 He murders, for his chiefs delight in ruin ;
 He builds the altar, that its idol’s fee
 May be his very blood ; he is pursuing,
 O, blind and willing wretch ! his own obscure undoing.

xv.

" ' Woman !—she is his slave, she has become
A thing I weep to speak—the child of scorn,
The outcast of a desolated home.
Falsehood, and fear, and toil, like waves have worn
Channels upon her cheek, which smiles adorn,
As calm decks the false Ocean :—well ye know
What Woman is, for none of Woman born
Can choose but drain the bitter dregs of woe,
Which ever from the oppressed to the oppressors flow.

xvi.

" ' This need not be ; ye might arise, and will
That gold should lose its power, and thrones their glory ;
That love, which none may bind, be free to fill
The world, like light ; and evil faith, grown hoary
With crime, be quenched and die.—Yon promontory
Even now eclipses the descending moon !—
Dungeons and palaces are transitory—
High temples fade like vapour. Man alone
Remains, whose will has power when all beside is gone.

xvii.

" ' Let all be free and equal !—From your hearts
I feel an echo ; through my immost frame
Lik · sweetest sound, seeking its mate, it darts—
Whence come ye, friends ? Alas, I cannot name
All that I read of sorrow, toil, and shame,
On your worn faces ; as in legends old
Which make immortal the disastrous fame
Of conquerors and impostors false and bold,
The discord of your hearts I in your looks behold.

xviii.

" ' Whence come ye, friends ? from pouring human blood
Forl ! on the earth ? or bring ye steel and gold,
That Kings may dupe and slay the multitude ?
Or from the famished poor, pale, weak, and cold,
Bear ye the earnings of their toil ? unfold !
Speak ! are your hands in slaughter's sanguine hue
Stain'd freshly ? have your hearts in guile grown old ?
Know yourselves thus ? ye shall be pure as dew,
And I will be a friend and sister unto you.

xix.

" ' Disguise it not—we have one human heart.—
All mortal thoughts confess a commen home :
Blush not for what may to thyself impart.
Stains of inevitable crime : the doom
Is this, which has, or may, or must, become Thine, and all humankind's. Ye are tl. · spoil
Which Time thus marks for the devouring toil,
Thou and thy thoughts and they, and all the toil
Wherewith ye twine the rings of life's perpetual coil.

“‘Disguise it not—ye blush for what ye hate,
And Enmity is sister unto Shame ;
Look on your mind—it is the book of fate—
Ah ! it is dark with many a blazoned name
Of misery—all are mirrors of the same ;
But the dark fiend who with his iron pen,
Dipped in scorn’s fiery poison, makes his fame
Enduring there, would o’er the heads of men
Pass harmless, if they scorned to make their hearts his den.

xxi.

“‘Yes, it is Hate, that shapeless fiendly thing
Of many names, all evil, some divine,
Whom self-contempt arms with a mortal sting :
Which, when the heart its snaky folds entwine,
Is wasted quite, aii. : when it doth repine
To gorge such bitter prey, on all beside
It turns with ninefold rage, as with its twine
When Amphisbaena some fair bird has tied,
Soon o’er the putrid mass he threats on every side.

xxii.

“‘Reproach not thine own soul, but know thyself,
Nor hate another’s crime, nor loathe thine own.
It is the dark idolatry of self,
Which, when our thoughts and actions once are one,
Demands that man should weep, and bleed, and groan :
O vacant expiation ! be at rest.—
The past is Death’s, the future is thine own :
And love and joy can make the foulest ‘breast
A paradise of flowers, where peace might build her nest.’

xxiii.

“‘Speak thou ! whence come ye ?’—A Youth made reply.
‘Wearily, wearily o’er the boundless deep
We sail ; thou readest well the misery
Told in these faded eyes, but much doth sleep
Within, which there the poor heart loves to keep,
Or dare not write on the dishonoured brow ;
Even from our childhood have we learned to steep
The bread of slavery in the tears of woe,
And never dreamed of hope or refuge until now.

xxiv.

“‘Yes—I must speak—my secret would have perished
Even with the heart it wasted, as a brand
Fades in the dying flame whose life it cherished,
But that no human bosom can withstand
Thee, wondrous Lady, and the mild command
Of thy keen eyes :—yes, we are wretched slaves,
Who from their wonted loves and native land
Are cast, and bear o’er the dividing waves
The unregarded prey of calm and happy graves.

xxv.

"We drag afar from pastoral vales the fairest
 Among the daughters of those mountains lone,
 We drag them there, where all things best and rarest
 Are stained and trampled :—years have come and gone
 Since, like the ship which bears me, I have known
 No thought ;—but now the eyes of one dear Maid
 On mine with light of mutual love have shone.—
 She is my life,—I am but as the shade
 Of her,—a smoke sent up from ashes, soon to fade.

xxvi.

"For she must perish in the tyrant's hall—
 Alas, alas !"—He ceased, and by the sail
 Sate cowering—but his sobs were heard by all,
 And still before the ocean and the gale
 The ship fled fast till the stars 'gan to fail.
 All round me gathered with mute countenance,
 The Seamen gazed, the Pilot, worn and pale
 With toil, the Captain with grey locks, whose glance
 Met mine in restless awe—they stood as in a trance.

xxvii.

"Recede not ! pause not now ! thou art grown old,
 But Hope will make thee young, for Hope and Youth
 Are children of one mother, even Love—behold !
 The eternal stars gaze on us !—is the truth
 Within your soul ? care for your own, or ruth
 For other's sufferings ? do ye thirst to bear
 A heart which not the serpent custom's tooth
 May violate ? - Be free ! and even here,
 Swear to be firm till death !" They cried, 'We swear ! we swear !'

xxviii.

"The very darkness shook, as with a blast
 Of subterranean thunder at the cry :
 The hollow shore its thousand echoes cast
 Into the night, as if the sea, and sky,
 And earth, rejoiced with new-born liberty,
 For in that name they swore ! Bolts were undrawn,
 And on the deck, with unaccustomed eye
 The captives gazing stood, and every one
 Shrank as the inconstant torch upon her countenance shone.

xxix.

"They were earth's purest children, young and fair,
 With eyes the shrines of unawakened thought,
 And brows as bright as spring or morning, ere
 Dark time had there its evil legend wrought
 In characters of cloud which wither not.—
 The change was like a dream to them : but soon
 They knew the glory of their altered lot,
 In the bright wisdom of youth's breathless noon,
 Sweet talk, and smiles, and sighs, all bosoms did attune.

xxx.

“ But one was mute, her cheeks and lips most fair,
 Changing their hue like lilies newly blown,
 Beneath a bright acacia’s shadowy hair,
 Waved by the wind amid the sunny noon,
 Showed that her soul was quivering ; and full soon
 That Youth arose, and breathlessly did look
 On her and me, as for some speechless boon :
 I smiled, and both their hands in mine I took,
 And felt a soft delight from what their spirits shook.

CANTO IX.

I.

“ THAT night we anchored in a woody bay,
 And sleep no more around us dared to hover
 Than, when all doubt and fear has passed away,
 It shades the couch of some unresting lover,
 Whose heart is now at rest : thus night passed over
 In mutual joy : -around, a forest grew
 Of poplars and dark oaks, whose shade did cover
 The waning stars, prankt in the waters blue,
 And trembled in the wind which from the morning flew.

II.

“ The joyous mariners, and each free maiden,
 Now brought from the deep forest many a bough,
 With woodland spoil most innocently laden ;
 Soon wreaths of budding foliage seemed to flow
 Over the mast and sails, the stern and prow
 Were canopied with blooming boughs,—the while
 On the slant sun’s path o’er the waves we go
 Rejoicing, like the dwellers of an isle
 Doomed to pursue those waves that cannot cease to smile.

III.

“ The many ships spotting the dark blue deep
 With snowy sails, fled fast as ours came nigh,
 In fear and wonder ; and on every steep
 Thousands did gaze, they heard the startling cry,
 Like earth’s own voice lifted uncomparably
 To all her children, the unbounded mirth,
 The glorious joy of thy name—Liberty !
 They heard ! —As o’er the mountains of the earth
 From peak to peak leap on the beams of morning’s birth :

" So from that cry over the boundless hills,
 Sudden was caught one universal sound,
 Like a volcano's voice, whose thunder fills
 Remotest skies,—such glorious madness found
 A path through human hearts with stream which drowned
 Its struggling fears and cares, dark custom's brood ;
 They knew not whence it came, but felt around
 A wide contagion pour'd—they called aloud
 On Liberty—that name lived on the sunny flood.

v.

" We reached the port—alas ! from many spirits
 The wisdom which had waked that cry, was fled,
 Like the brief glory which dark Heaven inherits.
 From the false dawn, which fades ere it is spread,
 Upon the night's devouring darkness shed :
 Yet soon bright day will burst— even like a chasm
 Of fire, to burn the shrouds outworn and dead,
 Which wrap the world ; a wide enthusiasm,
 To cleanse the fevered world as with an earthquake's spasm !

vi.

" I walked through the great City then, but free
 From shame or fear ; those toil-worn Mariners
 And happy Maidens did encompass me ;
 And like a subterranean wind that stirs
 Some forest among caves, the hopes and fears
 From every human soul, a murmur strange
 Made as I past ; and many wept, with tears
 Of joy and awe, and winged thoughts did range,
 And half-extinguished words, which prophesied of change.

vii.

" For, with strong speech I tore the veil that hid Nature, and Truth, and Liberty, and Love,--
 As one who from some mountain's pyramid,
 Points to the unrisen sun ! the shades approve
 His truth, and flee from every stream and grove.
 Thus, gentle thoughts did many a bosom fill,—
 Wisdom the mail of tried affections wove
 For many a heart, and tameless scorn of ill
 Thrice steeped in molten steel the unconquerable will.

viii.

" Some said I was a maniac wild and lost ;
 Some, that I scarce had risen from the grave
 The Prophet's virgin bride, a heavenly ghost :—
 Some said I was a fiend from my weird cave,
 Who had stolen human shape, and o'er the wave,
 The forest, and the mountain, came ;—some said
 I was the child of God, sent down to save
 Women from bonds and death, and on my head
 The burthen of their sins would frightfully be laid.

"But soon my human words found sympathy
 In human hearts : the purest and the best,
 As friend with friend made common cause with me,
 And they were few, but resolute ;—the rest,
 Ere yet success the enterprise had blest,
 Leagued with me in their hearts ;—their meals, their slumber
 Their hourly occupations, were possest
 By hopes which I had armed to overnumber
 Those hosts of meaner cares, which life's strong wings encumber

x.

"But chiefly women, whom my voice did waken
 From their cold, careless, willing slavery,
 Sought me : one truth their dreary prison has shaken,
 They looked around, and lo ! they became free !
 Their many tyrants sitting desolately
 In slave deserted halls, could none restrain ;
 For wrath's red fire had withered in the eye,
 Whose lightning once was death,—nor fear, nor gain
 Could tempt one captive now to lock another's chain.

xi.

"Those who were sent to bind me, wept, and felt
 Their minds outsoar the bonds which clasped them round,
 Even as a waxen shape may waste and melt
 In the white furnace ; and a visioned swound.
 A pause of hope and awe, the City bound,
 Which, like the silence of a tempest's birth,
 When in its awful shadow it has wound
 The sun, the wind, the ocean, and the earth,
 Hung terrible, ere yet the lightnings have leapt forth.

xii.

"Like clouds inwoven in the silent sky,
 By winds from distant regions meeting there,
 In the high name of truth and liberty,
 Around the City millions gathered were,
 By hopes which sprang from many a hidden lair ;
 Words, which the lore of truth in hues of grace
 Arrayed, thine own wild songs which in the air
 Like homeless odours floated, and the name
 Of thee, and many a tongue which thou hadst dipped in flame.

xiii.

"The Tyrant knew his power was gone, but Fear,
 The curse of Vengeance, bade him wait the event.—
 That perfidy and custom, gold and prayer,
 And whatsoe'er, when force is impotent,
 To fraud the sceptre of the world has lent,
 Might, as he judged, confirm his failing sway.
 Therefore throughout the streets, the Priests he sent
 To curse the rebels.—To their gods did they
 For Earthquake, Plague, and Want, kneel in the public way.

" And grave and hoary men were bribed to tell
 From seats where law is made the slave of wrong,
 How glorious Athens in her splendour fell,
 Because her sons were free,—and that among
 Mankind, the many to the few belong,
 By Heaven, and Nature, and Necessity.
 They said, that age was truth, and that the young
 Marred with wild hopes the peace of slavery,
 With which old times and men had quelled the vain and free

xv.

" And with the falsehood of their poisonous lips
 They breathed on the enduring memory
 Of sages and of bards a brief eclipse ;
 There was one teacher, whom necessity
 Had armed with strength and wrong against mankind,
 His slave and his avenger aye to be ;
 That we were weak and sinful, frail and blind,
 And that the will of one was peace, and we Should seek for nought on earth but toil and misery.

xvi.

" 'For thus we might avoid the hell hereafter.'
 So spake the hypocrites, who cursed and lied ;
 Alas, their sway was past and tears and laughter
 Clung to their hoary hair, withering the pride
 Which in their hollow hearts dared still abide ;
 And yet obscene slaves with smoother brow,
 And sneers on their strait lips, thin, blue, and wide,
 Said, that the rule of men was over now,
 And hence, the subject world to woman's will must bow ;

xvii.

" And gold was scattered through the streets, and wine
 Flowed at a hundred feasts within the wall.
 In vain ! The steady towers in Heaven did shine
 As they were wont, nor at the priestly call
 Left Plague her banquet in the Aethiop's hall,
 Nor Famine from the rich man's portal came,
 Where at her ease she ever preys on all
 Who throng to kneel for food : nor fear, nor shame,
 Nor faith, nor discord, dimmed hope's newly kindled flame.

xviii.

" For gold was as a god whose faith began
 To fade, so that its worshippers were few,
 And Faith itself, which in the heart of man
 Gives shape, voice, name, to spectral Terror, knew
 Its downfall, as the altars lonelier grew,
 Till the Priests stood alone within the fane ;
 The shafts of falsehood unpolluting flew,
 And the cold sneers of calumny were vain
 The union of the free with discord's brand to stain.

xix.

"The rest thou knowest.—Lo!—we two are here—
 We have survived a ruin wide and deep—
 Strange thoughts are mine.—I cannot grieve nor fear,
 Sitting with thee upon this lonely steep
 I smile, though human love should make me weep.
 We have survived a joy that knows no sorrow,
 And I do feel a mighty calmness creep
 Over my heart, which can no longer borrow
 Its hues from chance or change, dark children of to-morrow.

xx.

"We know not what will come—yet, Laon, dearest,
 Cythna shall be the prophetess of love,
 Her lips shall rob thee of the grace thou wearest,
 To hide thy heart, and clothe the shapes which rove
 Within the homeless future's wintry grove;
 For I now, sitting thus beside thee, seem
 Even with thy breath and blood to live and move,
 And violence and wrong are as a dream
 Which rolls from stedfast truth, an unreturning stream.

xxi.

"The blasts of autumn drive the winged seeds
 Over the earth,—next come the snows, and rain,
 And frosts, and storms, which dreary winter leads
 Out of his Scythian cave, a savage train;
 Behold! Spring sweeps over the world again,
 Shedding soft dews from her ethereal wings;
 Flowers on the mountains, fruits over the plain,
 And music on the waves and woods she flings,
 And love on all that lives, and calm on lifeless things.

xxii.

"O Spring! of hope, and love, and youth, and gladness,
 Wind-winged emblem! brightest, best, and fairest!
 Whence comest thou, when, with dark winter's sadness
 The tears that fade in sunny smiles thou sharest?
 Sister of joy! thou art the child who wearest
 Thy mother's dying smile, tender and sweet;
 Thy mother Autumn, for whose grave thou bearest
 Fresh flowers, and beams like flowers, with gentle feet,
 Disturbing not the leaves which are her winding-sheet.

xxiii.

"Virtue, and Hope, and Love, like light and Heaven,
 Surround the world.—We are their chosen slaves.
 Has not the whirlwind of our spirit driven
 Truth's deathless germs to thought's remotest caves?
 Lo, Winter comes!—the grief of many graves,
 The frost of death, the tempest of the sword,
 The flood of tyranny, whose sanguine waves
 Stagnate like ice at Faith, the enchanter's word,
 And bind all human hearts in its repose abhorred.

xxiv.

"The seeds are sleeping in the soil : meanwhile
 The tyrant peoples dungeons with his prey ;
 Pale victims on the guarded scaffold smile
 Because they cannot speak ; and, day by day,
 The moon of wasting Science wanes away
 Among her stars, and in that darkness vast
 The sons of earth to their foul idols pray,
 And grey Priests triumph, and like blight or blast
 A shade of selfish care o'er human looks is cast.

xxv.

"This is the Winter of the world ;—and here
 We die, even as the winds of Autumn fade,
 Expiring in the frore and foggy air.—
 Behold ! Spring comes, though we must pass, who made
 The promise of its birth,—even as the shade
 Which from our death, as from a mountain, flings
 The future, a broad sunrise ; thus arrayed
 As with the plumes of overshadowing wings,
 From its dark gulf of chains, Earth like an eagle springs.

xxvi.

"O dearest love ! we shall be dead and cold
 Before this morn may on the world arise :
 Wouldest thou the glory of its dawn behold ?
 Alas ! gaze not on me, but turn thine eyes
 On thine owa heart.. it is a paradise
 Which everlasting spring has made its own,
 And while drear winter fills the naked skies,
 Sweet streams of sunny thought, and flowers fresh blown
 Are there, and weave their sounds and odours into one.

xxvii.

"In their own hearts the earnest of the hope
 Which made them great, the good will ever find ;
 And though some envious shade may interlope
 Between the effect and it, one comes behind,
 Who aye the future to the past will bind—
 Necessity, whose sightless strength for ever
 Ev'l with evil, good with good, must wind
 In bands of union, which no power may sever :
 They must bring forth their kind, and be divided never !

xxviii.

"The good and mighty of departed ages
 Are in their graves, the innocent and free,
 Heroes, and Poets, and prevailing Sages,
 Who leave the vesture of their majesty
 To adorn and clothe this naked world ;—and we
 Are like to them—such perish, but they leave
 All hope, or love, or truth, or liberty,
 Whose forms their mighty spirits could conceive
 To be a rule and law to ages that survive.

XXIX.

" So be the turf heaped over our remains
 Even in our happy youth, and that strange lot
 Whate'er it be, when in these mingling veins
 The blood is still, be ours ; let sense and thought
 Pass from our being, or be numbered not
 Among the things that are ; let those who come
 Behind, for whom our stedfast will has bought
 A calm inheritance, a glorious doom,
 Insult with careless tread our undivided tomb.

XXX.

" Our many thoughts and deeds, our life and love,
 Our happiness, and all that we have been,
 Immortally must live, and burn, and move,
 When we shall be no more ; the world has seen
 A type of peace ; and as some most serene
 And lovely spot to a poor maniac's eye,
 After long years, some sweet and moving scene
 Of youthful hope returning suddenly,
 Quells his long madness--thus man shall remember thee.

XXXI.

" And calumny meanwhile shall feed on us,
 As worms devour the dead, and near the throne
 And at the altar, most accepted thus
 Shall sneers and curs be ;--what we have done
 None shall dare vouch, though it be truly known ;
 That record shall remain, when they must pass
 Who built their pride on its oblivion ;
 And fame, in human hope which sculptured was,
 Survive the perished scrolls of unenduring brass.

XXXII.

" The while we two, beloved, must depart,
 And Sense and Reason, those enchanters fair,
 Whose wand of power is hope, would bid the heart
 That gazed beyond the wormy grave despair.
 These eyes, these lips, this blood, seems darkly there
 To fade in hideous ruin; no calm sleep
 Peopling with golden dreams the stagnant air,
 Seems our obscure and rotting eyes to steep
 In joy ;--but senseless death—a ruin dark and deep !

XXXIII.

" These are blind fancies. Reason cannot know
 What sense can neither feel, nor thought conceive :
 There is delusion in the world--and woe,
 And fear, and pain--we know not whence we live,
 Or why, or how, or what mute Power may give
 Their being to each plant, and star, and beast,
 Or even these thoughts.—Come near me ! I do weave
 A chain I cannot break—I am possest
 With thoughts too swift and strong for one lone human breast.

XXXIV.

" Yes, yes—thy kiss is sweet, thy lips are warm—
 O ! willingly, beloved, would these eyes,
 Might they no more drink being from thy form,
 Even as to sleep whence we again arise,
 Close their faint orbs in death. I fear nor prize
 Aught that can now betide, unshared by thee—
 Yes, Love, when wisdom fails, makes Cythna wise ;
 Darkness and death, if death be true, must be
 Dearer than life and hope, if unenjoyed with thee.

XXXV.

" Alas ! our thoughts flow on with stream, whose waters
 Return not to their fountain Earth and Heaven,
 The Ocean and the Sun, the clouds their daughters,
 Winter, and Spring, and Morn, and Noon, and Even,
 All that we are or know, is darkly driven
 Towards one gulf.—Lo ! what a change is come
 Since I first spake—but time shall be forgiven,
 Though it change all but thee !" She ceased—night's gloom
 Meanwhile had fallen on earth from the sky's sunless dome.

XXXVI.

Though she had ceased, her countenance, uplifted
 To heaven, still spake, with solemn glory bright ;
 Her dark deep eyes, her lips, whose motions gifted
 The air they breathed with love, her locks undight :
 " Fair star of life and love," I cried, " my soul's delight,
 Why lookest thou on the crystalline skies ?
 O that my spirit were yon Heaven of night,
 Which gazes on thee with its thousand eyes ! "
 She turned to me and smiled—that smile was Paradise !

CANTO X.

I.

WAS there a human spirit in the steed,
 That thus with his proud voice, ere night was gone,
 He broke our linked rest ? or do indeed
 All living things a common nature own,
 And thought erect a universal throne,
 Where many shapes one tribute ever bear ?
 And Earth, their mutual mother, does she groan
 To see her sons contend ? and makes she bare
 Her breast, that all in peace its drainless stores may share ?

I have heard friendly sounds from many a tongue
 Which was not human—the lone Nightingale
 Has answered me with her most soothing song,
 Out of her ivy bower, when I sat pale
 With grief, and sighed beneath; from many a dale
 The Antelopes who flocked for food have spoken
 With happy sounds, and motions, that avail
 Like man's own speech: and such was now the token
 Of waning night, whose calm by that proud neigh was broken.

III.
 Each night, that mighty steed bore me abroad,
 And I returned with food to our retreat,
 And dark intelligence; the blood which flowed
 Over the fields, had stained the courser's feet;—
 Soon the dust sinks that bitter dew,—then meet
 The vulture, and the wild-dog, and the snake,
 The wolf, and the hyena grey, and cat
 The dead in horrid truce: their throngs did make
 Behind the steed, a chasm like waves in a ship's wake.

IV.
 For, from the utmost realms of earth, came pouring
 The banded slaves whom every despot sent
 At that throned traitor's summons: like the roaring
 Of fire, whose floods the wild deer circumvent
 In the scorched pastures of the South; so beat
 The armies of the leagued kings around
 Their files of steel and flame; —the continent
 Trembled, as with a zone of ruin bound;
 Beneath their feet, the sea shook with their navies' sound.

V.
 From every nation of the earth they came,
 The multitude of moving heartless things,
 Whom slaves call men: obediently they came,
 Like sheep whom from the fold the shepherd brings
 To the stall, red with blood; their many kings
 Led them, thus erring, from their native home;
 Tartar and Frank, and millions whom the wings
 Of Indian breezes lull, and many a band
 The Arctic Anarch sent, and Idumea's sand,

VI.
 Fertile in prodigies and lies;—so there
 Strange natures made a brotherhood of ill.
 The desert savage ceased to grasp in fear
 His Asian shield and bow, when, at the will
 Of Europe's subtler son, the bolt would kill
 Some shepherd sitting on a rock secure;
 But smiles of wondering joy his face would fill,
 And savage sympathy: those slaves impure,
 Each one the other thus from ill to ill did lure.

VII.

For traitorously did that foul Tyrant robe
 His countenance in lies ;—even at the hour
 When he was snatched from death, then o'er the globe,
 With secret signs from many a mountain tower,
 With smoke by day, and fire by night, the power
 Of kings and priests, those dark conspirators
 He called : —they knew his cause their own, and swore
 Like wolves and serpents to their mutual wars
 Strange truce, with many a rite which Earth and Heaven abhors

VIII.

Myriads had come—millions were on their way ;
 The Tyrant passed, surrounded by the steel
 Of hired assassins, through the public way,
 Choked with his country's dead ;—his footsteps reel
 On the fresh blood—he smiles. “ Ay, now I feel
 I am a King in truth ! ” he said, and took
 His royal seat, and bade the torturing wheel
 Be brought, and fire, and pincers, and the hook,
 And scorpions ! that his soul on its revenge might look.

IX.

“ But first, go slay the rebels.—Why return
 The victor bands ! ” he said : “ millions yet live,
 Of whom the weakest with one word might turn
 The scales of victory yet ; let none survive
 But those within the walls—each fifth shall give
 The expiation for his brethren here.—
 Go forth, and waste and kill ; ” “ O king, forgive
 My speech,” a soldier answered ; “ but we fear
 The spirits of the night, and morn is drawing near ;

X.

“ For we were slaying still without remorse,
 And now that dreadful chief beneath my hand
 Defenceless lay, when on a hell-black horse,
 An Angel bright as day, waving a brand
 Which flashed among the stars, passed.”—“ Dost thou stand
 Parleying with me, thou wretch ? ” the king replied :
 “ Slaves, bind him to the wheel ; and of this band,
 Whoso will drag that woman to his side
 That scared him thus, may burn his dearest foe beside ;

XI.

“ And gold and glory shall be his.—Go forth ! ”
 They rushed into the plain.—Loud was the roar
 Of their career : the horsemen shook the earth ;
 The wheeled artillery's speed the pavement tore ;
 The infantry, file after file, did pour
 Their clouds on the utmost hills. Five days they slew
 Among the wasted fields : the sixth saw gore
 Stream through the city ; on the seventh, the dew
 Of slaughter became stiff ; and there was peace anew :

Peace in the desert fields and villages,
 Between the glutted beasts and mangled dead !
 Peace in the silent streets ! save when the cries
 Of victims, to their fiery judgment led,
 Made pale their voiceless lips, who seemed to dread
 Even in their dearest kindred, lest some tongue
 Be faithless to the fear yet unbetrayed ;
 Peace in the Tyrant's palace, where the throng
 Waste the triumphal hours in festival and song !

xiii.

Day after day the burning Sun rolled on
 Over the death-polluted land ;—it came
 Out of the east like fire, and fiercely shone
 A lamp of Autumn, ripening with its flame
 The few lone ears of corn ;—the sky became
 Stagnate with heat, so that each cloud and blast
 Languished and died ; the thirsting air did claim
 All moisture, and a rotting vapour past
 From the unburied dead, invisible and fast.

xiv.

First Want, then Plague, came on the beasts ; their food
 Failed, and they drew the breath of its decay.
 Millions on millions, whom the scent of blood
 Had lured, or who, from regions far away,
 Had tracked the hosts in festival array,
 From their dark deserts ; gaunt and wasting now,
 Stalked like fell shades among their perished prey ;
 In their green eyes a strange disease did glow,
 They sank in hideous spasm, or pains severe and slow.

xv.

The fish were poisoned in the streams ; the birds
 In the green woods perished ; the insect race
 Was withered up ; the scattered flocks and herds
 Who had survived the wild beasts' hungry chase
 Died moaning, each upon the other's face
 In helpless agony gazing ; round the City
 All night, the lean hyenas their sad case
 Like starving infants wailed--a woeful ditty !
 And many a mother wept, pierced with unnatural pity.

xvi.

Amid the aerial minarets on high,
 The Aethiopian vultures fluttering fell
 From their long line of brethren in the sky,
 Startling the concourse of mankind.—Too well
 These signs the coming mischief did foretell :—
 Strange panic first, a deep and sickening dread
 Within each heart, like ice, did sink and dwell,
 A voiceless thought of evil, which did spread
 With the quick glance of eyes, like withering lightnings shed.

Day after day, when the year wanes, the frosts
 Strip its green crown of leaves, till all is bare ;
 So on those strange and congregated hosts
 Came Famine, a swift shadow, and the air
 Groaned with the burden of a new despair ;
 Famine, than whom Misrule no deadlier daughter
 Feeds from her thousand breasts, though sleeping there
 With lidless eyes, lie Faith, and Plague, and Slaughter,
 A ghastly brood ; conceived of Lethe's sullen water.

xviii.

There was no food ; the corn was trampled down,
 The flocks and herds had perished ; on the shore
 The dead and putrid fish were ever thrown :
 The deeps were foodless, and the winds no more
 Creaked with the weight of birds, but, as before
 Those winged things sprang forth, were void of shade ;
 The vines and orchards, Autumn's golden store,
 Were burned ; so that the meanest food was weighed •
 With gold, and Avarice died before the god it made.

xix.

There was no corn—in the wide market-place
 All loathliest things, even human flesh, was sold :
 They weighed it in small scales—and many a face
 Was fixed in eager horror then : his gold
 The miser brought ; the tender maid, grown bold
 Through hunger, bared her scorned charms in vain ;
 The mother brought her eldest-born, controlled
 By instinct blind as love, but turned again
 And bade her infant suck, and died in silent pain.

xx.

Then fell blue Plague upon the race of man.
 “ O, for the sheathed steel, so late which gave Oblivion to the dead, when the streets ran
 With brothers' blood ! O, that the earthquake's grave
 Would gape, or Ocean lift its stifling wave ! ”
 Vain cries—throughout the streets, thousands pursued
 Each by his fiery torture, howl and rave,
 Or sit, in frenzy's unimagined mood,
 Upon fresh heaps of dead—a ghastly multitude.

xxi.

It was not hunger now, but thirst. Each well
 Was choked with rotting corpses, and became
 A cauldron of green mist made visible
 At sunrise. Thither still the myriads came,
 Seeking to quench the agony of the flame
 Which raged like poison through their bursting veins ;
 Naked they were from torture, without shame,
 Spotted with nameless scars and lurid blains,
 Childhood, and youth, and age, writhing in savage pains.

xxiii.

It was not thirst but madness ! Many saw
 Their own lean image everywhere ; it went
 A ghastlier self beside them, till the awe
 Of that dread sight to self-destruction sent
 Those shrieking victims ; some, ere life was spent,
 Sought, with a horrid sympathy, to shed
 Contagion on the sound ; and others rent
 Their matted hair, and cried aloud, " We tread
 On fire ! the avenging Power his hell on earth has spread."

xxiv.

Sometimes the living by the dead were hid.
 Near the great fountain in the public square,
 Where corpses made a crumbling pyramid
 Under the sun, was heard one stifled prayer
 For life, in the hot silence of the air ;
 And strange 'twas, amid that hideous heap to see
 Some shrouded in their long and golden hair,
 As if ~~not~~ dead, but slumbering quietly,
 Like forms which sculptors carve, then love to agony.

xxv.

Famine had spared the palace of the king :—
 He rioted in festival the while,
 He and his guards and priests ; but Plague did fling
 One shadow upon all. Famine can smile
 On him who brings it food, and pass, with gout
 Of thankful falsehood, like a courtier gray,
 The house-dog of the throne ; but many a mile
 Comes Plague, a winged wolf, who loathes alway
 The garbage and the scum that strangers make her prey.

xxvi.

So, near the throne, amid the gorgeous feast,
 Sheathed in resplendent arms, or loosely dight
 To luxury, ere the mockery yet bad ceased
 That lingered on his lips, the warriors might
 Was loosened, and a new and ghastlier night
 In dreams of frenzy lapped his eyes ; he fell
 Headlong, or with stiff eyeballs sate upright
 Among the guests, or raving mad, did tell
 Strange truths ; a dying seer of dark oppression's hell.

xxvii.

The Princes and the Priests were pale with terror ;
 That monstrous faith wherewith they ruled mankind
 Fell, like a shaft loosed by the Bowman's error,
 On their own hearts : they sought and they could find
 No refuge—'twas the blind who led the blind!
 So, through the desolate streets to the high fane,
 The many-tongued and endless armies wind
 In sad procession : each among the train
 To his own Idol lifts his supplications vain.

xxvii.

"O God!" they cried, "we know our secret pride
 Has scorned thee, and thy worship, and thy name;
 Secure in human power, we have defied
 Thy fearful might; we bend in fear and shame
 Before thy presence; with the dust we claim
 Kindred. Be merciful, O King of Heaven!
 Most justly have we suffered for thy fame
 Made dim, but be at length our sins forgiven,
 Ere to despair and death thy worshippers be driven.

xxviii.

"O King of Glory! Thou alone hast power!
 Who can resist thy will? who can restrain
 Thy wrath, when on the guilty thou dost shower
 The shafts of thy revenge, —a blistering rain?
 Greatest and best, be merciful again!
 Have we not stabbed thine enemies, and made
 The Earth an altar, and the Heavens a fane,
 Where thou wert worshipped with their blood, and laid
 Those hearts in dust which would thy searchless works have weighed?"

"Well didst thou loosen on this impious City
 Thine angels of revenge: recall them now;
 Thy worshippers abased, here kneel for pity,
 And bind their souls by an immortal vow:
 We swear by thee! And to our oath do thou
 Give sanction, from thine hell of fiends and flame,
 That we will kill with fire and torments slow,
 The last of those who mocked thy holy name,
 And scorned the sacred laws thy prophets did proclaim."

xxx.

Thus they with trembling limbs and pallid lips
 Worshipped their own hearts' image, dim and vast,
 Seared by the shade wherewith they would eclipse
 The light of other minds;—troubled they past
 From the great Temple. Fiercely still and fast
 The arrows of the plague among them fell,
 And they on one another gazed aghast,
 And through the hosts contention wild beset,
 As each of his own god the wondrous works did tell.

xxxI.

And Oromaze, Joshua, and Mahomet,
 Moses, and Buddh, Zerdusht, and Brahm, and Foh,
 A tumult of strange names, which never met
 Before, as watch-words of a single woe,
 Arose. Each raging votary 'gan to throw
 Aloft his armed hands, and each did howl
 "Our God alone is God!" and slaughter now
 Would have gone forth, when, from beneath a cowl,
 A voice came forth, which pierced like ice through every soul."

XXXII.

'Twas an Iberian Priest from whom it came,
 A zealous man, who led the legioned west
 With words which faith and pride had steeped in flame,
 To quell the unbelievers ; a dire guest
 Even to his friends was he, for in his breast
 Did hate and guile lie watchful, intertwined,
 Twin serpents in one deep and winding nest ;
 He loathed all faith beside his own, and pined
 To wreak his fear of Heaven in vengeance on mankind.

XXXIII.

But more he loathed and hated the clear light
 Of wisdom and free thought, and more did fear,
 Lest, kindled once, its beams might pierce the night,
 Even where his Idol stood ; for, far and near
 Did many a heart in Europe leap to hear
 That faith and tyranny were trampled down ;
 Many a pale victim, doomed for truth to share
 The murderer's cell, or see, with helpless groan,
 • The priests his children drag for slaves to serve their own.

XXXIV.

He dared not kill the infidels with fire
 Or steel, in Europe : the slow agonies
 Of legal torture mocked his keen desire :
 So he made truce with those who did despise
 The expiation, and the sacrifice,
 That, though detested, Islam's kindred creed
 Might crush for him those deadlier enemies ;
 For fear of God did in his bosom breed
 A jealous hate of man, an unreposing need.

XXXV.

" Peace ! Peace ! " he cried. " When we are dead, the Day
 Of Judgment comes, and all shall surely know
 Whose God is God, each fearfully shall pay
 The errors of his faith in endless woe !
 But there is sent a mortal vengeance now
 On earth, because an impious race had spurned
 Him whom we all adore,—a subtile foe,
 By whom for ye this dread reward was earned,
 And kingly thrones, which rest on faith, nigh overturned.

XXXVI.

" Think ye, because we weep, and kneel, and pray,
 That God will lull the pestilence ? It rose
 Even from beneath his throne, where, many a day
 His mercy soothed it to a dark repose :
 It walks upon the earth to judge his foes,
 And what art thou and I, that he should deign
 To curb his ghastly minister, or close
 The gates of death, ere they receive the twain
 Who shook with mortal spells his undefended reign ?

xxxvii.

"Ay, there is famine in the gulf of hell,
 Its giant worms of fire for ever yawn,—
 Their lurid eyes are on us ! Those who fell
 By the swift shafts of pestilence ere dawn,
 Are in their jaws ! They hunger for the spawn
 Of Satan, their own brethren, who were sent
 To make our souls their spoil. See ! see ! they fawn
 Like dogs, and they will sleep with luxury spent,
 When those detested hearts their iron fangs have rent !

xxxviii.

"Our God may then lull Pestilence to sleep :—
 Pile high the pyre of expiation now !
 A forest's spoil of boughs, and on the heap
 Pour venomous gums, which sullenly and slow,
 When touched by flame, shall burn, and melt, and flow,
 A stream of clinging fire,—and fix on high
 A net of iron, and spread forth below
 A couch of snakes, and scorpions, and the fry
 Of centipedes and worms, earth's hellish progeny !

xxxix.

"Let Laon and Laone on that pyre,
 Linked tight with burning brass, perish !—then pray
 That, with this sacrifice, the withering ire
 Of Heaven may be appeased." He ceased, and they
 A space stood silent, as far, far away
 The echoes of his voice among them died ;
 And he knelt down upon the dust, alway
 Muttering the curses of his speechless pride,
 Whilst shame, and fear, and awe, the armies did divide.

xl.

His voice was like a blast that burst the portal
 Of fabled hell ; and as he spake, each one
 Saw gape beneath the chasms of fire immortal,
 And Heaven above seemed cloven, where, on a throne
 Girt round with storms and shadows, sate alone
 Their King and Judge. Fear killed in every breast
 All natural pity then, a fear unknown
 Before, and with an inward fire possest,
 They raged like homeless beasts whom burning woods invest.

xli.

'Twas morn.—At noon the public crier went forth,
 Proclaiming through the living and the dead,
 "The Monarch saith, that his great empire's worth
 Is set on Laon and Laone's head :
 He who but one yet living here can lead,
 Or who the life from both their hearts can wring,
 Shall be the kingdom's heir,—a glorious need !
 But he who both alive can hither bring,
 The Princess shall espouse, and reign an equal King."

Ere night the pyre was piled, the net of iron
 Was spread above, the fearful couch below ;
 It overtopped the towers that did environ
 That spacious square ; for Fear is never slow
 To build the thrones of Hate, her mate and foe,
 So, she scourged forth the maniac multitude
 To rear this pyramid—tottering and slow,
 Plague-stricken, foodless, like lean herds pursued
 By gad-flies, they have piled the heath, and gums, and wood.

XLIII.

Night came, a starless and a moonless gloom.
 Until the dawn, those hosts of many a nation
 Stood round that pile, as near one lover's tomb
 Two gentle sisters mourn their desolation :
 And in the silence of that expectation,
 Was heard on high the reptiles' hiss and crawl—
 It was so deep, save when the devastation
 Of the swift pest with fearful interval,
 Marking its path with shrieks, among the crowd would fall.

XLIV.

Morn came.—Among those sleepless multitudes,
 Madness, and Fear, and Plague, and Famine, still Heaped corpse on corpse, as in autumnal woods
 The frosts of many a wind with dead leaves fill
 Earth's cold and sullen brooks. In silence still
 The pale survivors stood ; ere noon, the fear
 Of hell became a panic, which did kill
 Like hunger or disease, with whispers drear, [is near !]
 As "Hush ! hark ! Come they yet ? Just Heaven ! thine hour

XLV.

And Priests rushed through their ranks, some counterfeiting
 The rage they did inspire, some mad indeed
 With their own lies. They said their god was waiting
 To see his enemies writhe, and burn, and bleed,—
 And that, till then, the snakes of Hell had need
 Of human souls.—Three hundred furnaces
 Soon blazed through the wide City, where, with speed,
 Men brought their infidel kindred to appear [knees].
 God's wrath, and while they burned, knelt round on quivering

XLVI.

The noontide sun was darkened with that smoke,
 The winds of eve dispersed those ashes grey.
 The madness which these rites had lulled, awoke
 Again at sunset.—Who shall dare to say
 The deeds which night and fear brought forth, or weigh
 In balance just the good and evil there ?
 He might man's deep and searchless heart display,
 And cast a light on those dim labyrinths, where
 Hope, near imagined chasms, is struggling with despair.

XLVII.

'Tis said, a mother dragged three children then,
 To those fierce flames which roast the eyes in the head,
 And laughed and died ; and that unholy men,
 Feasting like fiends upon the infidel dead,
 Looked from their meal, and saw an Angel tread
 The visible floor of Heaven, and it was she !
 And, on that night, one without doubt or dread
 Came to the fire, and said, " Stop, I am he !
 Kill me !"—They burned them both with hellish mockery.

XLVIII.

And, one by one, that night, young maidens came,
 Beanteous and calm, like shapes of living stone
 Clothed in the light of dreams, and by the flame
 Which shrank as overgorged, they laid them down,
 And sung a low sweet song, of which alone
 One word was heard, and that was Liberty ;
 And that some kissed their marble feet, with moan
 Like love, and died, and then that they did die
 With happy smiles, which sunk in white tranquillity.

I.

SHE saw me not—she heard me not—alone
 Upon the mountain's dizzy brink she stood ;
 She spake not, breathed not, moved not—there was thrown
 Over her look, the shadow of a mood
 Which only clothes the heart in solitude,
 A thought of voiceless death.—She stood alone,
 Above, the Heavens were spread ;—below, the flood
 Was murmuring in its caves ;—the wind had blown
 Her hair apart, thro' which her eyes and forehead shone.

II.

A cloud was hanging o'er the western mountains ;
 Before its blue and moveless depth were flying
 Grey mists poured forth from the unresting fountains
 Of darkness in the North :—the day was dying :—
 Sudden, the sun shone forth ; its beams were lying
 Like boiling gold on Ocean, strange to see,
 And on the shattered vapours, which, defying
 The power of light in vain, tossed restlessly
 In the red Heaven, like wrecks in a tempestuous sea.

It was a stream of living beams, whose bank
 On either side by the cloud's cleft was made ;
 And where its chasms that flood of glory drank,
 Its waves gushed forth like fire, and, as if swayed
 By some mute tempest, rolled on her. The shade
 Of her bright image floated on the river
 Of liquid light, which then did end and fade—
 Her radiant shape upon its verge did shiver;
 Aloft, her flowing hair like strings of flame did quiver.

IV.

I stood beside her, but she saw me not—
 She looked upon the sea, and skies, and earth.
 Rapture, and love, and admiration, wrought
 A passion deeper far than tears, or mirth,
 Or speech, or gesture, or whate'er has birth
 From common joy; which, with the speechless feeling
 That led her there, unit'd, and shot forth
 From her far eyes, a light of deep revealing,
 All but her dearest self from my regard concealing.

V.

Her lips were parted, and the measured breath
 Was now heard there :— her dark and intricate eyes
 Orb within orb, deeper than sleep or death,
 Absorbed the glories of the burning skies,
 Which, mingling with her heart's deep ecstacies,
 Burst from her looks and gestures ;—and a light
 Of liquid tenderness, like love, did rise
 From her whole frame,—an atmosphere which quite Arrayed her in its beams, tremulous and soft and bright.

VI.

She would have clasped me to her glowing frame ;
 Those warm and odorous lips might soon have shed
 On mine the fragrance and the invisible flame
 Which now the cold winds stole ;—she would have laid
 Upon my languid heart her dearest head ;
 I might have heard her voice, tender and sweet ;
 Her eyes mingling with mine, might soon have fed
 My soul with their own joy.—One moment yet
 I gazed— we parted then, never again to meet !

VII.

Never but once to meet on earth again !
 She heard me as I fled—her eager tone
 Sank on my heart, and almost wove a chain
 Around my will to link it with her own,
 So that my stern resolve was almost gone.
 “ I cannot reach thee ! whither dost thou fly ?
 My steps are faint.—Come back, thou dearest one—
 Return, ah me ! return ! ” The wind passed by
 On which those accents died, faint, far, and lingeringly.

Woo ! woe ! that moonless midnight.—Want and Pest
 Were horrible, but one more fell doth rear,
 As in a hydra's swarming lair, its crest
 Eminent among those victims—even the Fear
 Of Hell : each girt by the hot atmosphere
 Of his blind agony, like a scorpion stung
 By his own rage upon his burning bier
 Of circling coals of fire; but still there clung
 One hope, like a keen sword on starting threads uphungh :

ix.

Not death—death was no more refuge or rest ;
 Not life—it was despair to be !—not sleep,
 For fiends and chasms of fire had dispossessed
 All natural dreams; to wake was not to weep,
 But to gaze mad and pallid, at the leap
 To which the Future, like a snaky scourge,
 Or like some tyrant's eye, which aye doth keep
 Its withering beam upon its slaves, did urge
 Their steps :—they heard the roar of Hell's sulphureous surge.

x.

Each of that multitude alone, and lost
 To sense of outward things, one hope yet knew ;
 As on a foam-girt crag some seaman tost,
 Stares at the rising tide, or like the crew
 Whilst now the ship is splitting through and through ;
 Each, if the tramp of a far steed was heard,
 Started from sick despair, or if there flew
 One murmur on the wind, or if some word
 Which none can gather yet, the distant crowd has stirred.

xi.

Why became cheeks, wan with the kiss of death,
 Paler from hope ? they had sustained despair.
 Why watched those myriads with suspended breath
 Sleepless a second night ? they are not here
 The victims, and hour by hour, a vision drear,
 Warm corpses fall upon the clay-cold dead ;
 And even in death their lips are writhed with fear.—
 The crowd is mute and moveless—overhead
 Silent Arcturus shines—Ha ! hearst thou not the tread

xii.

Of rushing feet ? laughter ? the shout, the scream,
 Of triumph not to be contained ? See ! hark !
 They come, they come ! give way ! Alas, ye deem Falsely—'tis but a crowd of maniacs stark
 Driven, like a troop of spectres, through the dark
 From the choked well, whence a bright death-fire sprung,
 A lurid earth-star, which dropped many a spark
 From its blue train, and spreading widely, clung
 To their wild hair, like mist the topmost pines among.

And many, from the crowd collected there,
 Joined that strange dance in fearful sympathies ;
 There was the silence of a long despair,
 When the last echo of those terrible cries
 Came from a distant street, like agonies
 Stifled afar.—Before the Tyrant's throne
 All night his aged Senate sat, their eyes
 In stony expectation fixed ; when one
 Sudden before them stood, a Stranger and alone.

xiv.

Dark Priests and haughty Warriors gazed on him
 With baffled wonder, for a hermit's vest
 Concealed his face ; but when he spake, his tone,
 Ere yet the matter did their thoughts arrest,
 Earnest, benignant, calm, as from a breast
 Void of all hate or terror, made them start ;
 For as with gentle accents he addressed
 His speech to them, on each unwilling heart
 Unusual awe did fall—a spirit-quelling dart.

xv.

“ Ye Princes of the Earth, ye sit aghast
 Amid the ruin which yourselves have made ;
 Yes, Desolation heard your trumpet's blast,
 And sprang from sleep !—dark Terror has obeyed
 Your bidding —Oh that I, whom ye have made,
 Your foe, could set my dearest enemy free
 From pain and fear ! but evil casts a shade
 Which cannot pass so soon, and Hate must be
 The nurse and parent still of an ill progeny.

xvi.

“ Ye turn to Heaven for aid in your distress ;
 Alas, that ye, the mighty and the wise.
 Who, if ye dared, might not aspire to less
 Than ye conceive of power, should fear the lies
 Which thou, and thou, didst frame for mysteries
 To blind your slaves :—consider your own thought,
 An empty and a cruel sacrifice
 Ye now prepare, for a vain idol wrought
 Out of the fears and hate which vain desires have brought.

xvii.

“ Ye seek for happiness—alas the day !
 Ye find it not in luxury nor in gold,
 Nor in the fame, nor in the envied sway
 For which, O willing slaves to Custom old,
 Severe task-mistress ! ye your hearts have sold.
 Ye seek for peace, and when ye die, to dream
 No evil dreams ; all mortal things are cold
 And senseless then. If aught survive, I deem
 It must be love and joy, for they immortal seem.

"Fear not the future, weep not for the past.
 Oh, could I win your ears to dare be now
 Glorious, and great, and calm ! that ye would cast
 Into the dust thos symbols of your woe,
 Purple, and gold, and steel ! that ye would go
 Proclaiming to the nations whence ye came,
 That Want, and Plague, and Fear, from slavery flow ;
 And that mankind is free, and that the shame
 Of royalty and faith is lost in freedom's fame.

xix.

" If thus 'tis well—if not, I come to say
 That Laon—." While the Stranger spoke, among
 The Council sudden tumult and affray
 Arose, for many of those warriors young
 Had on his eloquent accents fed and hung
 Like bees on mountain-flowers ! they knew the truth,
 And from their thrones in vindication sprung ;
 The men of faith and law then without ruth
 Drew forth their secret steel, and stabbed each ardent youth.

xx.

They stabbed them in the back and sneered. A slave
 Who stood behind the throne, those corpses drew
 Each to its bloody, dark, and secret grave ;
 And one more daring raised his steel anew
 To pierce the Stranger : " What hast thou to do
 With me, poor wretch ?"—Calm, solemn, and severe,
 That voice unstrung his sinews, and he threw
 His dagger on the ground, and pale with fear,
 Sate silently—his voice then did the Stranger rear.

xxi.

" It doth avail not that I weep for ye .
 Ye cannot change, since ye are old and grey,
 And ye have chosen your lot --your fame must be
 A book of blood, whence in a milder day
 Men shall learn truth, when ye are wrapt in clay :
 Now ye shall triumph. I am Laon's friend,
 And him to your revenge will I betray,
 So ye concede one easy boon. Attend !
 For now I speak of things which ye can apprehend.

xxii.

" There is a People mighty in its youth,
 A land beyond the Oceans of the West,
 Where, though with rudest rites, Freedom and Truth
 Are worshipped ; from a glorious mother's breast
 Who, since high Athens fell, among the rest
 Sate like the Queen of Nations, but in woe,
 By inbred monsters outraged and oppressed,
 Turns to her chainless child for succour now,
 And draws the milk of power in Wisdom's fullest flow.

xxiii.

“ This land is like an Eagle, whose young gaze
Feeds on the noontide beam, whose golden plume
Floats moveless on the storm, and in the blaze
Of sun-rise gleams when earth is wrapt in gloom ;
An epitaph of glory for the tomb
Of murdered Europe may thy fame be made,
Great People ! As the sands shalt thou become ;
Thy growth is swift as morn, when night must fade ;
The multitudinous Earth shall sleep beneath thy shade.

xxiv.

“ Yes, in the desert then is built a home
For Freedom. Genius is made strong to rear
The monuments of man beneath the dome
Of a new heaven ; myriads assemble there,
Whom the proud lords of man, in rage or fear,
Drive from their wasted homes. The boon I pray
Is this,—that Cythna shall be convoyed there,—
Nay, start not at the name—America !
And then to you this night Laon will I betray.

xxv.

“ With me do what ye will. I am your foe ! ”
The light of such a joy as makes the stare
Of hungry snakes like living emeralds glow,
Shone in a hundred human eyes.—“ Where, where
Is Laon ? haste ! fly ! drag him swiftly here !
We grant thy boon.”—“ I put no trust in ye,
Swear by the Power ye dread.”—“ We swear, we swear ! ”
The Stranger threw his vest back suddenly,
And smiled in gentle pride, and said, “ Ho ! I am he ! ”

CANTO XII.

I.

THE transport of a fierce and monstrous gladness
Spread through the multitudinous streets, fast flying
Upon the winds of fear, from his dull madness
The starveling waked, and died in joy ; the dying,
Among the corpses in stark agony lying,
Just heard the happy tidings, and in hope
Closed their faint eyes ; from house to house replying
With loud acclaim, the living shook Heaven’s cope,
And filled the startled Earth with echoes : morn did ope

II.

Its pale eyes then ; and lo ! the long array
 Of guards in golden arms, and priests beside,
 Singing their bloody hymns, whose garbs betray
 The blackness of the faith it seems to hide ;
 And see, the Tyrant's gem-wrought chariot glide
 Among the gloomy cowls and glittering spears—
 A shape of light is sitting by his side,
 A child most beautiful. I' the midst appears
 Laon—exempt alone from mortal hopes and fears.

III.

His head and feet are bare, his hands are bound
 Behind with heavy chains, yet none do wreak
 Their scoffs on him, though myriads throng around ;
 There are no sneers upon his lip which speak
 That scorn or hate has made him bold ; his cheek
 Resolve has not turned pale,—his eyes are mild
 And calm, and like the morn about to break,
 Smile on mankind—his heart seems reconciled
 To all things and itself, like a reposing child.

IV.

Tumult was in the soul of all beside,
 Ill joy, or doubt, or fear ; but those who saw
 Their tranquil victim pass, felt wonder glide
 Into their brain, and became calm with awe.—
 See, the slow pageant near the pile doth draw.
 A thousand torches in the spacious square,
 Borne by the ready slaves of ruthless law,
 Await the signal round : the morning fair
 Is changed to a dim night by that unnatural glare.

V.

And see ! beneath a sun-bright canopy,
 Upon a platform level with the pile,
 The anxious Tyrant sit, enthroned on high,
 Girt by the chieftains of the host. All smile
 In expectation, but one child : the while
 I, Laon, led by mutes, ascend my bier
 Of fire, and look around. Each distant isle
 Is dark in the bright dawn ; towers far and near Pierce like reposing flames the tremulous atmosphere.

VI.

There was such silence through the host, as when
 An earthquake, trampling on some populous town,
 Has crushed ten thousand with one tread, and men
 Expect the second ; all were mute but one,
 That fairest child, who, bold with love, alone
 Stood up before the king, without avail,
 Pleading for Laon's life—her stifled groan
 Was heard—she trembled like an aspen pale
 Among the gloomy pines of a Norwegian vale.

VII.

What were his thoughts linked in the morning sun,
 Among those reptiles, stingsless with delay,
 Even like a tyrant's wrath ?—the signal-gun
 Roared—hark, again ! In that dread pause he lay
 As in a quiet dream—the slaves obey—
 A thousand torches drop,—and hark, the last
 Bursts on that awful silence. Far away
 Millions, with hearts that beat both loud and fast,
 Watch for the springing flame expectant and agast.

VIII.

They fly—the torches fall—a cry of fear
 Has startled the triumphant !—they recede !
 For ere the cannon's roar has died, they hear
 The tramp of hoofs like earthquake, and a steed
 Dark and gigantic, with a tempest's speed,
 Bursts through their ranks : a woman sits thereon,
 Fairer it seems than aught that earth can breed,
 Calm, radiant, like the phantom of the dawn,
 A spirit from the caves of day-light wandering gone.

IX.

All thought it was God's Angel come to sweep
 The lingering guilty to their fiery grave ;
 The tyrant from his throne in dread did leap,—
 Her innocence his child from fear did save.
 Scared by the faith they feigned, each priestly slave
 Knelt for his mercy whom they served with blood,
 And, like the reflux of a mighty wave
 Sucked into the loud sea, the multitude
 With crushing panic fled in terror's altered mood.

X.

They pause, they blush, they gaze ; a gathering shout
 Bursts like one sound from the ten thousand streams
 Of a tempestuous sea : that sudden rout
 One checked, who never in his mildest dreams
 Felt awe from grace or loveliness, the seans
 Of his rent heart so hard and cold a creed
 Had seared with blistering ice—but he misdeems
 That he is wise, whose wounds do only bleed
 Only for self; thus thought the Iberian Priest indeed ;

XI.

And others, too, thought he was wise to see,
 In pain, and fear, and hate, something divine ;
 In love and beauty—no divinity.—
 Now with a bitter smile, whose light did shine
 Like a fiend's hope upon his lips and eyne,
 He said, and the persuasion of that sneer
 Rallied his trembling comrades—“ Is it mine
 To stand alone, when kings and soldiers fear
 A woman ? Heaven has sent its other victim here.”

xii.

" Were it not impious," said the King, " to break
 Our holy oath?"—" Impious to keep it, say!"
 Shrieked the exulting Priest :—" Slaves, to the stake
 Bind her, and on my head the burthen lay
 Of her just torments :—at the Judgment Day
 Will I stand up before the golden throne
 Of Heaven, and cry, to thee I did betray
 An infidel ! but for me she would have known Another moment's joy!—the glory be thine own."

xiii.

They trembled, but replied not, nor obeyed,
 Pausing in breathless silence. Cythna sprung
 From her gigantic steed, who, like a shade
 Chased by the winds, those vacant streets among Fled tameless, as the brazen rein she flung
 Upon his neck, and kissed his moonèd brow.
 A pitous sight, that one so fair and young,
 The clasp of such a fearful death should woo
 With smiles of tender joy as beamed from Cythna now.

xiv.

The warm tears burst in spite of faith and fear,
 From many a tremulous eye, but, like soft dews
 Which feed spring's earliest buds, hung gathered there,
 Frozen by doubt,—alas ! they could not choose
 But weep ; for when her faint limbs did refuse
 To climb the pyre, upon the mutes she smiled ;
 And with her eloquent gestures, and the hues
 Of her quick lips, even as a weary child
 Wins sleep from some fond nurse with its caresses mild,

xv.

She won them, though unwilling, her to bind
 Near me, among the stakes. When then had fled
 One soft reproach that was most thrilling kind,
 She smiled on me, and nothing then we said,
 But each upon the other's countenance fed
 Looks of insatiate love ; the mighty veil
 Which doth divide the living and the dead
 Was almost rent, the world grew dim and pale,—
 All light in Heaven or Earth beside our love did fail.—

xvi.

Yet,—yet—one brief relapse, like the last beam
 Of dying flames, the stainless air around
 Hung silent and serene.—A blood-red gleam
 Burst upwards, hurling fiercely from the ground
 The globed smoke.—I heard the mighty sound
 Of its uprise, like a tempestuous ocean ;
 And, through its chasms I saw, as in a swoond,
 The tyrant's child fall without life or motion
 Before his throne, subdued by some unseen emotion.

xvii.

And is this death? The pyre has disappeared,
The Pestilence, the Tyrant, and the throng;
The flames grow silent—slowly there is heard
The music of a breath-suspending song,
Which, like the kiss of love when life is young,
Steeps the faint eyes in darkness sweet and deep;
With ever-changing notes it floats along,
Till on my passive soul there seemed to creep
A melody, like waves on wrinkled sands that leap.

xviii.

The warm touch of a soft and tremulous hand
Wakened me then; lo, Cythna sate reclined
Beside me, on the waved and golden sand
Of a clear pool, upon a bank o'er twined
With strange and star-bright flowers, which to the wind
Breathed divine odour; high above, was spread
The emerald heaven of trees of unknown kind,
Whose moonlike blooms and bright fruit overhead
A shadow, which was light, upon the waters shed.

xix.

And round about sloped many a lawny mountain
With incense-bearing forests, and vast caves
Of marble radiance to that mighty fountain;
And where the flood its own bright margin leaves,
Their echoes talk with its eternal waves,
Which, from the depths whose jagged caverns breed
Their unreposing strife, it lifts and heaves,
Till through a chasm of hills they roll, and feed
A river deep, which flies with smooth but arrowy speed.

xx.

As we sate gazing in a trance of wonder,
A boat approached, borne by the musical air
Along the waves, which sung and sparkled under
Its rapid keel—a winged shape sate there,
A child with silver-shining wings, so fair,
That as her bark did through the waters glide,
The shadow of the lingering waves did wear
Light, as from starry beams; from side to side,
While veering to the wind, her plumes the bark did guide.

xxi.

The boat was one curved shell of hollow pearl,
Almost translucent with the light divine
Of her within; the prow and stern did curl,
Horned on high, like the young moon supine,
When, o'er dim twilight mountains dark with pine,
It floats upon the sunset's sea of beams,
Whose golden waves in many a purple line
Fade fast, till, borne on sunlight's ebbing streams,
Dilating, on earth's verge the sunken meteor gleams.

xxii.

Its keel has struck the sands beside our feet ;—
 Then Cythna turned to me, and from her eyes
 Which swam with unshed tears, a look more sweet
 Than happy love, a wild and glad surprise,
 Glanced as she spake : “ Ay, this is Paradise
 And not a dream, and we are all united !
 Lo, that is mine own child, who, in the guise
 Of madness, came like day to one benighted
 In lonesome woods : my heart is now too well requited ! ”

xxiii.

And then she wept aloud, and in her arms
 Clasped that bright Shape, less marvellously fair
 Than her own human hues and living charms ;
 Which, as she leaned in passion’s silence there,
 Breathed warmth on the cold bosom of the air,
 Which seemed to blush and tremble with delight ;
 The glossy darkness of her streaming hair
 Fell o’er that snowy child, and wrapt from sight
 The fond and long embrace which did their hearts unite.

xxiv.

Then the bright child, the plumed Seraph, came,
 And fixed its blue and beaming eyes on mine,
 And said, “ I was disturbed by tremulous shame
 When once we met, yet knew that I was thine
 From the same hour in which thy lips divine
 Kindled a clinging dream within my brain,
 Which ever waked when I might sleep, to twine
 Thine image with her memory dear—again
 We meet ; exempted now from mortal fear or pain.

xxv.

“ When the consuming flames had wrapt ye round,
 The hope which I had cherished went away ;
 I fell in agony on the senseless ground,
 And hid mine eyes in dust, and far astray
 My mind was gone, when bright, like dawning day,
 The Spectre of the Plague before me flew,
 And breathed upon my lips, and seemed to say,
 ‘ They wait for thee, beloved ! ’—then I knew
 The death-mark on my breast, and became calm anew.

xxvi.

“ It was the calm of love—for I was dying.
 I saw the black and half-extinguished pyre
 In its own grey and shrunken ashes lying ;
 The pitchy smoke of the departed fire
 Still hung in many a hollow dome and spire
 Above the towers, like night ; beneath whose shade,
 Awed by the ending of their own desire,
 The armies stood ; a vacancy was made
 In expectation’s depth, and so they stood dismayed.

xxvii.

"The frightful silence of that altered mood,
 The tortures of the dying clove alone,
 Till one uprose among the multitude,
 And said—'The flood of time is rolling on,
 We stand upon its brink, whilst they are gone
 To glide in peace down death's mysterious stream.
 Have ye done well? They moulder flesh and bone,
 Who might have made this life's envenomed dream
 A sweeter draught than ye will ever taste, I deem.'

xxviii.

"These perish as the good and great of yore
 Have perished, and their murderers will repent.
 Yes, vain and barren tears shall flow before
 You smoke has faded from the firmament
 Even for this . . . , that ye, who must lament . .
 The death of those that made this world so fair,
 Cannot recall them now; but then is lent
 To man the wisdom of a high despair,
 When such can die, and he live on and linger here."

xxix.

"Ay, ye may fear not now the Pestilence,
 From fabled hell as by a charm withdrawn;
 All power and faith must pass, since calmly hence
 In pain and fire have unbelievers gone;
 And ye must sadly turn away, and moan
 In secret, to his home each one returning;
 And to long ages shall this hour be known;
 And slowly shall its memory, ever burning,
 Fill this dark night of things with an eternal morning."

xxx.

"For me the world is grown too void and cold,
 Since hope pursues immortal destiny
 With steps thus slow—therefore shall ye behold
 How those who love, yet fear not, dare to die;
 Tell to your children this! then suddenly
 He sheathed a dagger in his heart, and fell;
 My brain grew dark in death, and yet to me
 There came a murmur from the crowd to tell
 Of deep and mighty change which suddenly befell

xxxI.

"Then suddenly I stood a winged Thought
 Before the immortal Senate, and the seat
 Of that star-shining spirit, whence is wrought
 The strength of its dominion, good and great,
 The better Genius of this world's estate.
 His realm around one mighty Fane is spread,
 Elysian islands bright and fortunate,
 Calm dwellings of the free and happy dead,
 Where I am sent to lead!" These winged words she said,

xxxii.

And with the silence of her eloquent smile,
 Bade us embark in her divine canoe;
 Then at the helm we took our seat, the while
 Above her head those plumes of dazzling hue
 Into the wind's invisible stream she threw,
 Sitting beside the prow : like gossamer,
 On the swift breath of morn, the vessel flew
 O'er the bright whirlpools of that fountain fair,
 Whose shores receded fast, while we seemed lingering there;

xxxiii.

Till down that mighty stream dark, calm, and fleet,
 Between a chasm of cedar mountains riven,
 Chased by the thronging winds, whose viewless feet
 As swift as twinkling beams, had, under Heaven,
 From woods and waves wild sounds and odours driven,
 The boat flew visibly—three nights and days,
 Borne like a cloud through morn, and noon, and even,
 We sailed along the winding watery ways
 Of the vast stream, a long and labyrinthine maze.

xxxiv.

A scene of joy and wonder to behold
 That river's shapes and shadows changing ever,
 Where the broad sunrise filled with deepening gold
 Its whirlpools, where all hues did spread and quiver,
 And where melodious falls did burst and shiver
 Among rocks clad with flowers, the foam and spray
 Sparkled like stars upon the sunny river,
 Or when the moonlight poured a holier day,
 One vast and glittering lake around green islands lay.

xxxv.

Morn, noon, and even, that boat of pearl outran
 The streams which bore it, like the arrowy cloud
 Of tempest, or the speedier thought of man,
 Which lieth forth and cannot make abode ;
 Sometimes through forests, deep like night, we glode,
 Between the walls of mighty mountains crowned
 With Cyclopean piles, whose turrets proud,
 The homes of the departed, dimly frowned
 O'er the bright waves which girt their dark foundations round.

xxxvi.

Sometimes between the wide and flowering meadows,
 Mile after mile we sailed, and 'twas delight
 To see far off the sunbeams chase the shadows
 Over the grass ; sometimes beneath the night
 Of wide and vaulted caves, whose roofs were bright
 With starry gems, we fled, whilst from their deep
 And dark green chasms, shades beautiful and white,
 Amid sweet sounds across our path would sweep
 Like swift and lovely dreams that walk the waves of sleep.

xxxvii.

And ever as we sailed, our minds were full
 Of love and wisdom, which would overflow
 In converse wild, and sweet, and wonderful ;
 And in quick smiles whose light would come and go,
 Like music o'er wide waves, and in the flow
 Of sudden tears, and in the mute caress—
 For a deep shade was cleft, and we did know,
 That virtue, though obscured on Earth, not less
 Survives all mortal change in lasting loveliness.

xxxviii.

Three days and nights we sailed, as thought and feeling
 Number delightful hours—for through the sky
 The sphered lamps of day and night, revealing
 New changes and new glories, rolled on high,
 Sun, Moon, and moonlike lamps, the progeny
 Of a diviner Heaven, serene and fair :
 On the fourth day, wild as a wind-wrought sea,
 The stream became, and fast and faster bare
 The spirit-wingèd boat, steadily speeding there.

xxxix.

Steadily and swift, where the waves rolled like mountains
 Within the vast ravine, whose rifts did pour
 Tumultuous floods from their ten thousand fountains,
 The thunder of whose earth-uplifting roar
 Made the air sweep in whirlwinds from the shore,
 Calm as a shade, the boat of that fair child
 Securely fled, that rapid stress before,
 Amid the topmost spray, and sunbows wild,
 Wreathed in the silver mist : in joy and pride we smiled.

xl.

The torrent of that wide and raging river
 Is pa-sed, and our aerial speed suspended.
 We look behiud ; a golden mist did quiver
 When its wild surges with the lake were blended :
 Our bark hung there, as one line suspended
 Between two heavens, that windless waveless lake ;
 Which four great cataracts from four vales, attended
 By mists, aye feed, from rocks and clouds they break,
 And of that azure sea a silent refuge make.

xli.

Motionless resting on the lake awhile
 I saw its marge of snow-bright mountains rear
 Their peaks aloft, I saw each radiant isle,
 And in the midst, afar, even like a sphere
 Hung in one hollow sky, did there appear
 The Temple of the Spirit ; on the sound
 Which issued thence, drawn nearer and more near,
 Like the swift moon this glorious earth around,
 The charmed boat approached, and there its haven found.

PROMETHEUS UNBOUND;

A LYRICAL DRAMA, IN FOUR ACTS.

Audisne haec Amphiarae, sub terram abdite ?

PREFACE.

THE Greek tragic writers, in selecting as their subject any portion of their national history or mythology, employed in their treatment of it a certain arbitrary discretion. They by no means conceived themselves bound to adhere to the common interpretation, or to imitate in story, as in title, their rivals and predecessors. Such a system would have amounted to a resignation of those claims to preference over their competitors which incited the composition. The Agamemnonian story was exhibited on the Athenian theatre with as many variations as dramas.

I have presumed to employ a similar license. The "Prometheus Unbound" of Æschylus supposed the reconciliation of Jupiter with his victim as the price of the disclosure of the danger threatened to his empire by the consummation of his marriage with Thetis. Thetis, according to this view of the subject, was given in marriage to Peleus, and Prometheus, by the permission of Jupiter, delivered from his captivity by Hercules. Had I framed my story on this model, I should have done no more than have attempted to restore the lost drama of Æschylus; an ambition, which, if my preference to this mode of treating the subject had incited me to cherish, the recollection of the high comparison such an attempt would challenge, might well abate. But, in truth, I was averse from a catastrophe so feeble as that of reconciling the Champion with the Oppressor of mankind. The moral interest of the fable, which is so powerfully sustained by the sufferings and endurance of Prometheus, would be annihilated if we could conceive of him as unsaying his high language and quailing before his successful and perfidious adversary. The only imaginary being resembling in any degree Prometheus, is Satan: and Prometheus is, in my judgment, a more poetical character than Satan, because, in addition to courage, and majesty, and firm and patient opposition to omnipotent force, he is susceptible of being described as exempt from the taints of ambition, envy, revenge, and a desire for personal aggrandisement, which, in the Hero of Paradise Lost, interfere with the interest. The character of Satan engenders in the mind a pernicious casuistry, which leads us to weigh his faults with his wrongs, and to excuse the former because the latter exceed all measure. In the minds of those who consider that magnificent fiction with a religious feeling, it engenders something worse. But Prometheus is, as it were, the type of the highest perfection of moral and intellectual nature, impelled by the purest and the truest motives to the best and noblest ends.

This Poem was chiefly written upon the mountainous ruins of the Baths of Caracalla, among the flowery glades, and thickets of odoriferous blossoming trees, which are extending in ever-winding labyrinths upon its immense platforms and dizzy arches suspended in the air. The bright blue sky of Rome, and the effect of the vigorous awakening of spring in that divinest climate, and the new life with which it drenches the spirits even to intoxication, were the inspiration of this drama.

The imagery which I have employed will be found, in many instances, to have been drawn from the operations of the human mind, or from those external actions by which they are expressed. This is unusual in modern poetry, although Dante and Shakespeare are full of instances of the same kind : Dante indeed more than any other poet, and with greater success. But the Greek poets, as writers to whom no resource of awakening the sympathy of their contemporaries was unknown, were in the habitual use of this power; and it is the study of their works (since a higher merit would probably be denied me), to which I am willing that my readers should impute this singularity.

One word is due in candour to the degree in which the study of contemporary writings may have tinged my composition, for such has been a topic of censure with regard to poems far more popular, and, indeed, more deservedly popular, than mine. It is impossible that any one who inhabits the same age with such writers as those who stand in the foremost ranks of our own, can conscientiously assure himself that his language and tone of thought may not have been modified by the study of the productions of those extraordinary intellects. It is true, that, not the spirit of their genius, but the forms in which it has manifested itself, are due less to the peculiarities of their own minds than to the peculiarity of the moral and intellectual condition of the minds among which they have been produced. Thus a number of writers possess the form, whilst they want the spirit of those whom, it is alleged, they imitate : because the former is the endowment of the age in which they live, and the latter must be the uncommunicated lightning of their own mind.

The peculiar style of intense and comprehensive imagery which distinguishes the modern literature of England, has not been, as a general power, the product of the imitation of any particular writer. The mass of capabilities remains at every period materially the same; the circumstances which awaken it to action perpetually change. If England were divided into forty republics, each equal in population and extent to Athens, there is no reason to suppose but that, under institutions not more perfect than those of Athens, each would produce philosophers and poets equal to those who (if we except Shakspeare) have never been surpassed. We owe the great writers of the golden age of our literature to that fervid awakening of the public mind which shook to dust the oldest and most oppressive form of the Christian religion. We owe Milton to the progress and development of the same spirit: the sacred Milton was, let it ever be remembered, a republican, and a bold inquirer into morals and religion. The great writers of our own age are, we have reason to suppose, the companions and forerunners of some unimagined change in our social condition, or the opinions which cement it. The cloud of mind is discharging its collected lightning, and the equilibrium between institutions and opinions is now restoring, or is about to be restored.

As to imitation, poetry is a mimetic art. It creates, but it creates by combination and representation. Poetical abstractions are beautiful and new, not because the portions of which they are composed had no previous existence in the mind of man, or in nature, but because the whole produced by their combination has some intelligible and beautiful analogy with those sources of emotion and thought, and with the contemporary condition of them: one great poet is a masterpiece of nature, which another not only ought to study but must study. He might as wisely and as easily determine that his mind should no longer be the mirror of all that is lovely in the visible universe, as exclude from his contemplation the beautiful which exists in the writings of a great contemporary. The pretence of doing it would be a presumption in any but the greatest; the effect, even in him, would be strained, unnatural, and ineffectual. A poet is the combined product of such internal powers as modify the nature of others; and of such external influences as excite and sustain these powers: he is not one, but both. Every man's mind is, in this respect, modified by all the objects of nature and art; by every word and every suggestion which he ever admitted to act upon his consciousness; it is the mirror upon which all forms are reflected, and in which they compose one form. Poets, not otherwise than philosophers, painters, sculptors, and musicians, are, in one sense, the creators, and, in another, the creations, of their age. From this subjection the loftiest do not escape. There is a similarity between Homer and Hesiod, between Aeschylus and Euripides, between Virgil and Horace, between Dante and Petrarch, between Shakspeare and Fletcher, between Dryden and Pope; each has a generic resemblance under which their specific distinctions are arranged. If this similarity be the result of imitation, I am willing to confess that I have imitated.

Let this opportunity be conceded to me of acknowledging that I have, what a Scotch philosopher characteristically terms, "a passion for reforming the world;" what passion incited him to write and publish his book, he omits to explain. For my part, I had rather be damned with Plato and Lord Bacon, than go to heaven with Paley and Malthus. But it is a mistake to suppose that I dedicate my poetical compositions solely to the direct enforcement of reform, or that I consider them in any degree as containing a reasoned system on the theory of human life. Didactic poetry is my abhorrence; nothing can be equally well expressed in prose that is not tedious and supererogatory in verse. My purpose has hitherto been simply to familiarise the highly refined imagination of the more select classes of poetical readers with beautiful idealisms of moral excellence; aware that until the mind can love, and admire, and trust, and hope, and endure, reasoned principles of moral conduct are seeds cast upon the highway of life, which the unconscious passenger tramples into dust, although they would bear the harvest of his happiness. Should I live to accomplish what I purpose, that is, produce a systematical history of what appear to me to be the genuine elements of human society, let not the advocates of injustice and superstition flatter themselves that I should take Aeschylus rather than Plato as my model.

The having spoken of myself with unaffected freedom will need little apology with the candid; and let the uncandid consider that they injure me less than their own hearts and minds by misrepresentation. Whatever talents a person may possess to amuse and instruct others, be they ever so inconsiderable, he is yet bound to exert them: if his attempt be ineffectual, let the punishment of an unaccomplished purpose have been sufficient; let none trouble themselves to heap the dust of oblivion upon his efforts; the pile they raise will betray his grave, which might otherwise have been unknown.

ACT I.

SCENE.—A Ravine of Icy Rocks in the Indian Caucasus. PROMETHEUS is discovered bound to the Precipice. PANTHEA and IONE are seated at his feet. Time, Night. During the Scene, Morning slowly breaks.

Prometheus. Monarch of Gods and Daemons, and all Spirits But One, who throng those bright and rolling worlds Which Thou and I alone of living things Behold with sleepless eyes! regard this Earth Made multitudinous with thy slaves, whom thou Requistest for knee-worship, prayer, and praise, And toil, and hecatombs of broken hearts, With fear and self-contempt and barren hope. Whilst me, who am thy foe, eyeless in hate, Hast thou made reign and triumph, to thy scorn, O'er mine own misery and thy vain revenge. Three thousand years of sleep-unsheltered hours, And moments aye divided by keen pangs Till they seemed years, torture and solitude, Scorn and despair,—these are mine empire. More glorious far than that which thou surveyest From thine unenvied throne, O, Mighty God! Almighty, had I deigned to share the shame Of thine ill tyranny, and hung not here Nailed to this wall of eagle-baffling mountain, Black, wintry, dead, unmeasured; without herb, Insect, or beast, or shape or sound of life. Ah me, alas! pain, pain ever, for ever!

No change, no pause, no hope! Yet I endure
I ask the Earth, have not the mountains felt?

I ask yon Heaven, the all-beholding Sun,
 Has it not seen ? The Sea, in storm or calm,
 Heaven's ever-changing Shadow, spread below,
 Have its deaf waves not heard my agony ?
 Ah me ! alas, pain, pain ever, for ever !

The crawling glaciers pierce me with the spears
 Of their moon-freezing crystals ; the bright chains
 Eat with their burning cold into my bones.
 Heaven's winged hound, polluting from thy lips
 His beak in poison not his own, tears up
 My heart ; and shapeless sights come wandering by,
 The ghastly people of the realm of dream,
 Mocking me : and the Earthquake-fiends are charged
 To wrench the rivets from my quivering wounds
 When the rocks split and close again behind :
 While from their loud abysses howling throng
 The genii of the storm, urging the rage
 Of whirlwind, and afflict me with keen hail.
 And yet to me welcome is day and night,
 Whether one breaks the hoar frost of the morn,
 Or starry, dim, and slow, the other climbs
 The leaden-coloured east ; for then they lead
 The wingless, crawling hours, one among whom —As some dark Priest hales the reluctant victim—
 Shall drag thee, cruel King, to kiss the blosom
 From these pale feet, which then might trample thee
 If they disdained not such a prostrate slave.
 Disdain ! Ah no ! I pity thee. What ruin
 Will hunt thee undefended through the wide Heaven !
 How will thy soul, cloven to its depth with terror,
 Gape like a hell within ! I speak in grief,
 Not exultation, for I hate no more,
 As then ere misery made me wise. The curse
 Once breathed on thee I would recall. Ye Mountains,
 Whose many-voiced Echoes, through the mist
 Of cataracts, flung the thunder of that spell !
 Ye icy Springs, stagnant with wrinkling frost,
 Which vibrated to hear me, and then crept
 Shuddering through India ! Thou serenest Air,
 Through which the Sun walks burning without beams !
 And ye swift Whirlwinds, who on poised wings
 Hung mute and moveless o'er yon hushed abyss,
 As thunder, louder than your own, made rock
 The orb'd world ! If then my words had power,
 Though I am changed so that aught evil wish
 Is dead within ; although no memory be
 Of what is hate, let them not lose it now !
 What was that curse ? for ye all heard me speak.

FIRST VOICE : (from the mountains).
 Thrice three hundred thousand years
   O'er the Earthquake's couch we stood :
   Oft, as men convulsed with fears,
   We trembled in our multitude.

SECOND VOICE : (from the springs).
 Thunderbolts had parched our water,
   We had been stained with bitter blood,
   And had run mute, 'mid shrieks of slaughter,
   Through a city and a solitude.

THIRD VOICE : (from the air).
 I had clothed, since Earth uprose
   Its wastes in colours not their own ;
   And oft had my serene repose
   Been cloven by many a rending groan.

FOURTH VOICE : (from the whirlwinds).
 We had soared beneath these mountains
   Unresting ages ; nor had thunder,
   Nor yon volcano's flaming fountains,
   Nor any power above or under,
   Ever made us mute with wonder.

FIRST VOICE.
 But never bowed our snowy crest
 As at the voice of thine unrest.

SECOND VOICE.
 Never such a sound before
 To the Indian waves we bore.
 A pilot asleep on the howling sea
 Leaped up from the deck in agony,
 And heard, and cried, " Ah, woe is me ! "
 And died as mad as the wild waves be.

THIRD VOICE.
 By such dread words from Earth to Heaven
 My still realm was never riven :
 When its wound was closed, there stood
 Darkness o'er the day like blood.

FOURTH VOICE.
 And we shrank back : for dreams of ruin
 To frozen caves our flight pursuing
 Made us keep silence—thus—and thus—
 Though silence is as hell to us.

The Earth. The tongueless Caverns of the craggy hills
 Cried, " Misery ! " then ; the hollow Heaven replied,
 " Misery ! " And the Ocean's purple waves,
 Climbing the land, howled to the lashing winds.
 And the pale nations heard it, " Misery ! "

Prometheus. I hear a sound of voices : not the voice
 Which I gave forth. Mother, thy sons and thou
 Scorn him, without whose all-enduring will
 Beneath the fierce omnipotence of Jove,

Both they and thou had vanished, like thin mist
 Unrolled on the morning wind. Know ye not me,
 The Titan? He who made his agony
 The barrier to your else all-conquering foe?
 Oh, rook-embosomed lawns, and snow-fed streams,
 Now seen athwart from vapours, deep below,
 Through whose o'ershadowing woods I wandered once
 With Asia, drinking life from her loved eyes;
 Why scorns the spirit which informs ye, now
 To commune with me? me alone, who checked,
 As one who checks a fiend-drawn charioteer,
 The falsehood and the force of him who reigns
 Supreme, and with the groans of pining slaves
 Fills your dim glens and liquid wildernesses:
 Why answer ye not, still? Brethren!

The Earth. They dare not.

Prometheus. Who dares? for I would hear that curse again!
 Ha! what an awful whisper rises up!
 'Tis scarce like sound: it tingles through the frame
 As lightning tingles, hovering ere it strike.
 Speak, Spirit! from thine inorganic voice
 I only know that thou art moving near
 And love. How cursed I him!

The Earth. How canst thou hear,
 Who knowest not the language of the dead?

Prometheus. Thou art a living spirit; speak as they.

The Earth. I dare not speak like life, lest Heaven's fe
 King
 Should hear, and link me to some wheel of pain
 More torturing than the one whereon I roll.
 Subtle thou art and good; and though the Gods
 Hear not this voice, yet thou art more than God
 Being wise and kind: earnestly hearken now.

Prometheus. Obscurely through my brain, like shadows dim,
 Sweep awful thoughts, rapid and thick. I feel
 Faint, like one mingled in entwining love;
 Yet 'tis not pleasure.

The Earth. No, thou canst not hear:
 Thou art immortal, and this tongue is known
 Only to those who die.

Prometheus. And what art thou,
 O melancholy Voice?

The Earth. I am the Earth,
 Thy mother; she within whose stony veins,
 To the last fibre of the loftiest tree
 Whose thin leaves trembled in the frozen air,
 Joy ran, as blood within a living frame,
 When thou didst from her bosom, like a cloud
 Of glory, arise, a spirit of keen joy!

And at thy voice her pining sons uplifted
 Their prostrate brows from the polluting dust,
 And our almighty Tyrant with fierce dread
 Grew pale, until his thunder chained thee here.
 Then, see those million worlds which burn and roll,
 Around us: their inhabitants beheld
 My spher'd light wane in wide Heaven; the sea
 Was lifted by strange tempest, and new fire
 From earthquake-rifted mountains of bright snow
 Shook its portentous hair beneath Heaven's frown;
 Lightning and Inundation vexed the plains;
 Blue thistles bloomed in cities; foodless toads
 Within voluptuous chambers panting crawled;
 When Plague had fallen on man, and beast, and worm,
 And Famine; and black blight on herb and tree;
 And in the corn, and vines, and meadow-grass,
 Teemed ineradicable poisonous weeds
 Draining their growth, for my wan breast was dry
 With grief; and the thin air, my breath, was stained
 With the contagion of a mother's hate
 Breathed on her child's destroyer; ay, I heard
 Thy curse, the which, if thou rememberest not,
 Yet my innumerable seas and streams,
 Mountains and caves, and winds, and yon wide air,
 And the inarticulate people of the dead,
 Preserve, a treasured spell. We meditate
 In secret joy and hope those dreadful words
 But dare not speak them.

Prometheus.                    Venerable mother!
 All else who live and suffer take from thee
 Some comfort; flowers, and fruits, and happy sounds,
 And love, though fleeting; these may not be mine.
 But mine own words, I pray, deny me not.

The Earth. They shall be told. Ere Babylon was dust,
 The Magus Zoroaster, my dear child,
 Met his own image walking in the garden.
 That apparition, sole of men, he saw.
 For know there are two worlds of life and death:
 One that which thou beholdest; but the other
 Is underucath the grave, where do inhabit
 The shadows of all forms that think and live
 Till death unite them and they part no more;
 Dreams and the light imaginings of men,
 And all that faith creates or love desires,
 Terrible, strange, sublime and beauteous shapes.
 There thou art, and dost hang, a writhing shade,
 'Mid whirlwind-peopled mountains. all the god
 Are there, and all the powers of nameless worlds,
 Vast, sceptred phantoms; heroes, men, and beasts;
 And Demogorgon, a tremendous gloom;

And he, the supreme Tyrant, on his throne
 Of burning gold. Son, one of these shall utter
 The curse which all remember. Call at will Thine own ghost, or the ghost of Jupiter,
 Hades or Typhon, or what mightier Gods
 From all-prolific Evil, since thy ruin
 Have sprung, and trampled on my prostrate sons.
 Ask, and they must reply : so the revenge
 Of the Supreme may sweep through vacant shades,
 As rainy wind through the abandoned gate
 Of a fallen palace.

Prometheus. Mother, let not aught
 Of that which may be evil, pass again
 My lips, or those of aught resembling me.
 Phantasm of Jupiter, arise, appear !

IONE.

My wings are folded o'er mine ears :
 My wings are crossed o'er mine eyes :
 Yet through their silver shade appears,
 And through their lulling plumes arise,
 A Shape, a throng of sounds ;
 May it be no ill to thee
 O thou of many wounds !
 Near whom, for our sweet sister's sake,
 Ever thus we watch and wake.

PANTHEA.

The sound is of whirlwind underground,
 Earthquake, and fire and mountains cloven ;
 The shape is awful like the sound,
 Clothed in dark purple, star-inwoven.
 A sceptre of pale gold
 To stay steps proud, o'er the slow cloud
 His veined hand doth hold.
 Cruel he looks, but calm and strong,
 Like one who does, not suffers wrong.

Phantasm of Jupiter. Why have the secret powers of this strange world

Driven me, a frail and empty phantom, hither
 On direst storms ? What unaccustomed sounds
 Are hovering on my lips, unlike the voice
 With which our pallid race hold ghastly talk
 In darkness ? And, proud sufferer, who art thou ?

Prometheus. Tremendous Image ! as thou art must be
 He whom thou shadowest forth. I am his foe,
 The Titan. Speak the words which I would hear,
 Although no thought inform thine empty voice.

The Earth. Listen ! And though your echoes must be mute,
 Grey mountains, and old woods, and haunted springs,
 Prophetic caves, and isle-surrounding streams,
 Rejoice to hear what yet ye cannot speak.

Phantasm. A spirit seizes me and speaks within :
It tears me as fire tears a thunder-cloud.

Panthea. See, how he lifts his mighty looks, the Heaven
Darkens above.

Ione. Ho speaks ! O shelter me !

Prometheus. I see the curse on gestures proud and cold,
And looks of firm defiance, and calm hate,
And such despair as mocks itself with smiles,
Written as on a scroll : yet speak : Oh speak !

PHANTASM.

Fiend, I defy thee ! with a calm, fixed mind,
All that thou canst inflict I bid thee do ;
Foul Tyrant both of Gods and Human-kind,
One only being shalt thou not subdue.
Rain then thy plagues upon me here,
Ghastly disease, and frenzyng fear ;
And let alternate frost and fire
Eat into me, and be thine ire
Lightning, and cutting hail, and legioned forms
Of furies, driving by upon the wounding storms.
Ay, do thy worst. Thou art omnipotent.

O'er all things but thyself I gave thee power,
And my own will. Be thy swift mischiefs sent
To blast mankind, from yon ethereal tower.

Let thy malignant spirit move
In darkness over those I love :
On me and mine I imprecate
The utmost torture of thy hate ;
And thus devote to sleepless agony,
This undeclining head while thou must reign on high.

But thou, who art the God and Lord : O, thou
Who fillest with thy soul this world of woe,
To whom all things of Earth and Heaven do bow
In fear and worship : all-prevailing foe !
I curse thee ! let a sufferer's curse
Clasp thee, his torturer, like remorse !
Till thine Infinity shall be
A robe of envenomed agony ;
And thine Omnipotence a crown of pain,
To cling like burning gold round thy dissolving brain.

Heap on thy soul, by virtue of this curse,
Ill deeds, then be thou damned, beholding good ;
Both infinite as is the universe,
And thou, and thy self-torturing solitude.
An awful image of calm power
Though now thou sittest, let the hour
Come, when thou must appear to be
That which thou art internally.

And after many a false and fruitless crime,
Scorn track thy lagging fall through boundless space and time.

Prometheus. Were these my words, O Parent ?

The Earth. They were thine.

Prometheus. It doth repent me : words are quick and vain;
Grief for awhile is blind, and so was mine.
I wish no living thing to suffer pain.

THE EARTH.

Misery ! Oh misery to me,
That Jove at length should vanquish thee.
Wail, howl aloud, Land and Sea,
The Earth's rent heart shall answer ye.
Howl, Spirits of the living and the dead,
Your refuge, your defence lies fallen and vanquished.

FIRST ECHO.

Lies fallen and vanquished ?

SECOND ECHO.

Fallen and vanquished !

IONE.

Fear not : 'tis but some passing spasm,
The Titan is unvanquished still.
But see, where through the azure chasm
Of yon forked and snowy hill
Trampling the slant winds on high
With golden-sandalled feet, that glow
Under plumes of purple dye,
Like rose-ensanguined ivory,
A Shape comes now,
Stretching on high from his right hand
A serpent-cinctured wand.

Panthea. 'Tis Jove's world-wandering herald, Mercury.

IONE.

And who are those with hydra tresses
And iron wings that climb the wind,
Whom the frowning God represses
Like vapours steaming up behind,
Clanging loud, an endless crowd—

PANTHEA.

These are Jove's tempest-walking hounds,
Whom he gluts with groans and blood,
When charioted on sulphurous cloud
He bursts Heaven's bounds.

IONE.

Are they now led, from the thin dead
On new pangs to be fed ?

Panthea. The Titan looks as ever, firm, not proud.

First Fury. Ha ! I scent life !

Second Fury. Let me but look into his eyes !

Third Fury. The hope of torturing him smells like a heap
Of corpses, to a death-bird after battle.

First Fury. Darest thou delay, O Herald ! take cheer, Hounds
Of Hell : what if the Son of Maia soon
Should make us food and sport—who can please long
The Omnipotent ?

Mercury. Back to your towers of iron,
And gnash beside the streams of fire, and wail
Your foodless teeth. Geryon, arise ! and Gorgon,
Chimæra, and thou Sphinx, subtlest of fiends,
Who ministered to Thebes Heaven's poisoned wine,
Unnatural love, and more unnatural hate :
These shall perform your task.

First Fury. Oh, mercy ! mercy !
We die with our desire : drive us not back !

Mercury. Crouch then in silence. Awful Sufferer !
To thee unwilling, most unwillingly
I come, by the Great Father's will driven down,
To execute a doom of new revenge.
Alas ! I pity thee, and hate myself
That I can do no more : aye from thy sight
Returning, for a season, heaven seems hell,
So thy worn form pursues me night and day.
Smiling reproach. Wise art thou, firm and good,
But vainly woul'st stand forth alone in strife
Against the Omnipotent ; as you clear lamps
That measure and divide the weary years
From which there is no refuge, long have taught,
And long must teach. Even now thy Torturer arms
With the strange might of unimagined pains
The powers who scheme slow agonies in Hell,
And my commission is to lead them here,
Or what more subtle, foul, or savage fiends
People the abyss, and leave them to their task.
Be it not so ! there is a secret known
To thee, and to none else of living things,
Which may transfer the sceptre of wide Heaven,
The fear of which perplexes the Supreme ;
Clothe it in words, and bid it clasp his throne
In intercession ; bend thy soul in prayer,
And like a suppliant in some gorgeous fane,
Let the will kneel within thy haughty heart :
For benefits and meek submission tame
The fiercest and the mightiest.

Prometheus. Evil n-inds
Change good to their own nature. I gave all
He has ; and in return he chains me here
Years, ages, night and day ; whether the Sun

Split my parched skin, or in the moony night
 The crystal-winged snow cling round my hair :
 Whilst my beloved race is trampled down
 By his thought-executing ministers.
 Such is the tyrant's recompense : 'tis just :
 He who is evil can receive no good ;
 And for a world bestowed, or a friend lost,
 He can feel hate, fear, shame ; not gratitude :
 He but requites me for his own misdeed.
 Kindness to such is keen reproach, which breaks
 With bitter stings the light sleep of Revenge.
 Submission, thou dost know I cannot try ;
 For what submission but that fatal word,
 The death-seal of mankind's captivity,
 Like the Sicilian's hair-suspended sword,
 Which trembles o'er his crown, would he accept,
 Or could I yield ? Which yet I will not yield.
 Let others flatter Crime, where it sits throned
 In brief Omnipotence; secure are they :
 For Justice, when triumphant, will weep down
 Pity, not punishment, on her own wrongs,
 Too much avenged by those who err. I wait,
 Enduring thus, the retributive hour
 Which since we spake is even nearer now.
 But hark, the hell-hounds clamour. Fear delay !
 Behold ! Heaven lowers under thy father's frown.

Mercury. Oh, that we might be spared : I to inflict,
 And thou to suffer ! once more answer me :
 Thou knowest not the period of Jove's power ?

Prometheus. I know but this, that it must come.

Mercury. Alas !
 Thou canst not count thy years to come of pain ?
Prometheus. They last while Jove must reign ; nor more, nor less
 Do I desire or fear.

Mercury. Yet pause, and plunge
 Into Eternity, where recorded time,
 Even all that we imagine, age on age,
 Seems but a point, and the reluctant mind
 Flags, wearily in its unending flight,
 Till it sink, dizzy, blind, lost, shelterless ;
 Perchance it has not numbered the slow years
 Which thou must spend in torture, unreproved ?

Prometheus. Perchance no thought can count them, yet they pass.

Mercury. If thou might'st dwell among the Gods the while,
 Lapped in voluptuous joy ?
Prometheus. I would not quit
 This bleak ravine, these unrepentant pains.

Mercury. Alas ! I wonder at, yet pity thee.

Prometheus. Pity the self-despising slaves of Heaven,
Not me, within whose mind sits peace serene,
As light in the sun, throned : how vain is talk !
Call up the fiends.

Ione. O, sister, look ! White fire
Has cloven to the roots you huge snow-loaded cedar ;
How fearfully God's thunder howls behind !

Mercury. I must obey his words and thine : alas !
Most heavily remorse hangs at my heart !

Panthea. See where the child of Heaven, with winged feet,
Runs down the slanted sunlight of the dawn.

Ione. Dear sister, close thy plumes over thine eyes
Lest thou behold and die : they come : they come
Blackening the birth of day with countless wings,
And hollow underneath, like death.

First Fury. Prometheus !

Second Fury. Immortal Titan !

Third Fury. Champion of Heaven's slaves !

Prometheus. He whom some dreadful voice invokes is here,
Prometheus, the chained Titan. Horrible forms,
What and who are ye ? Never yet there came
Phantasms so foul through monster-teeming Hell
From the all-miscreative brain of Jove ;
Whilst I behold such execrable shapes,
Methinks I grow like what I contemplate,
And laugh and stare in loathsome sympathy.

First Fury. We are the ministers of pain and fear,
And disappointment, and mistrust, and hate,
And clinging crime ; and as lean dogs pursue
Through wood and lake some struck and sobbing fawn,
We track all things that weep, and bleed, and live,
When the great King betrays them to our will.

Prometheus. Oh ! many fearful natures in one name,
I know ye ; and these lakes and echoes know
The darkness and the clangour of your wings.
But why more hideous than your loathed selves
Gather ye up in legions from the deep ?

Second Fury. We knew not that : Sisters, rejoice, rejoice !

Prometheus. Can aught exult in its deformity ?

Second Fury. The beauty of delight makes lovers glad.
Gazing on one another : so are we.
As from the rose which the pale priestess kneels
To gather for her festal crown of flowers
The aerial crimson falls, flushing her cheek,
So from our victim's destined agony
The shade which is our form invests us round,
Else we are shapeless as our mother Night.

Prometheus. I laugh your power, and his who sent you here,
To lowest scorn. Pour forth the cup of pain.

First Fury. Thou thinkest we will rend thee bone from bone,
And nerve from nerve, working like fire within ?

Prometheus. Pain is my element, as hate is thine ;
Ye rend me now : I care not.

Second Fury. Dost imagine
We will but laugh into thy lidless eyes ?

Prometheus. I weigh not what ye do, but what ye suffer,
Being evil. Cruel was the power which called
You, or aught else so wretched, into light.

Third Fury. Thou think'st we will live through thee, one by one,
Like animal life, and though we can obscure not
The soul which burns within, that we will dwell
Beside it, like a vain loud multitude
Vexing the self-content of wisest men :
That we will be dread thought beneath thy brain,
And foul desire round thine astonished heart,
And blood within thy labyrinthine veins
Crawling like agony.

Prometheus. Why, ye are thus now ;
Yet am I king over myself, and rule
The torturing and conflicting throngs within,
As Jove rules you when Hell grows mutinous.

CHORUS OF FURIES.

From the ends of the earth, from the ends of the earth,
Where the night has its grave and the morning its birth,

Come, come, come !

Oh, ye who shake hills with the scream of your mirth,
When cities sink howling in ruin ; and ye
Who with wingless footsteps trample the sea,
And close upon Shipwreck and Famine's track,
Sit chattering with joy on the foodless wreck ;

Come, come, come !

Leave the bed, low, cold, and red,
Strewed beneath a nation dead ;

Leave the hatred, as in ashes

Fire is left for future burning :
It will burst in bloodier flashes

When ye stir it, soon returning :

Leave the self-contempt implanted
In young spirits, sense-enchanted,

Misery's yet unkindled fuel :

Leave Hell's secrets half uncharted,
To the maniac dreainer : cruel

More than ye can be with hate

Is he with fear.

Come, come, come !

We are steaming up from Hell's wide gate,
And we burthen the blasts of the atmosphere,
But vainly we toil till ye come here.

Jone. Sister, I hear the thunder of new wings.

Panthea. These solid mountains quiver with the sound
Even as the tremulous air : their shadows make
The space within my plumes more black than night.

FIRST FURY.

Your call was as a winged car,
Driven on whirlwinds fast and far ;
It rapt us from red gulfs of war.

SECOND FURY.

From wide cities, famine wasted ;

THIRD FURY.

Groans half-heard, and blood untasted ;

FOURTH FURY.

Kingly conclaves, stern and cold,
Where blood with gold is bought and sold ;

FIFTH FURY.

From the furnace, white and hot,
In which —

A FURY.

Speak not ; whisper not :
I know all that ye would tell,
But to speak might break the spell
Which must bend the Invincible,

The stern of thought ;
He yet defies the deepest power of Hell.

Fury. Tear the veil !

Another Fury. It is torn.

CHORUS.

The pale stars of the morn
Shine on a misery, dire to be borne.
Dost thou faint, mighty Titan ? We laugh thee to scorn.
Dost thou boast the clear knowledge thou waken'dst for man ?

Then was kindled within him a thirst which outran
Those perishing waters ; a thirst of fierce fever,
Hope, love, doubt, desire, which consume him for ever.

One came forth of gentle worth
Smiling on the sanguine earth :
His words outlived him, like swift poison
Withering up truth, peace, and pity.

Look ! where round the wide horizon

Many a million-peopled city
Vomits smoke in the bright air.
Mark that outcry of despair !

Tis his mild and gentle ghost
Wailing for the faith he kindled :

Look again ! the flames alight
To a glow-worm's lamp have dwindled :

The survivors round the embers
Gather in dread.

Joy, joy, joy !

Past ages crowd on thee, but each one remembers ;
And the future is dark, and the present is spread
Like a pillow of thorns for thy slumberless head.

SEMICHORUS I.

Drops of bloody agony flow
From his white and quivering brow.
Grant a little respite now :
See ! a disenchanted nation
Springs like day from desolation ;
To Truth its state is dedicate,
And Freedom leads it forth, her mate ;
A legioned band of linked brothers,
Whom Love calls children—

SEMICHORUS II.

"Tis another's.

See how kindred murder kin !
'Tis the vintage-time for death and sin.
Blood, like new wine, bubbles within :
Till Despair smothers

The struggling world, which slaves and tyrants win.

[All the Furies vanish, except one

Ione. Hark, sister ! what a low yet dreadful groan
Quite unsuppressed is tearing up the heart
Of the good Titan, as storms tear the deep,
And beasts hear the sea moan in inland caves.
Darest thou observe how the fiends torture him ?

Panthea. Alas ! I looked forth twice, but will no more.

Ione. What didst thou see ?

Panthea. A woful sight : a youth
With patient looks nailed to a crucifix.

Ione. What next ?

Panthea. The heaven around, the earth below
Was peopled with thick shapes of human death,
All horrible, and wrought by human hands,
And some appeared the work of human hearts,
For men were slowly killed by frowns and smiles :
And other sights too foul to speak and live
Were wandering by. Let us not tempt worse fear
By looking forth : those groans are grief enough.

Fury. Behold an emblem : those who do endure
Deep wrongs for man, and scorn, and chains, but heap
Thousandfold torment on themselves and him.

Prometheus. Remit the anguish of that lighted stare ;
Close those wan lips ; let that thorn-wounded brow
Stream not with blood ; it mingles with thy tears !
Fix, fix those tortured orbs in peace and death,
So thy sick throes shake not that crucifix,
So those pale fingers play not with thy gore.
O, horrible ! Thy name I will not speak,
It hath become a curse. I see, I see

The wise, the mild, the lofty, and the just,
 Whom thy slaves hate for being like to thee,
 Some hunted by foul lies from their heart's home,
 An early-chosen, late-lamented home,
 As hooded ounces cling to the driven hind ;
 Some linked to corpses in unwholesome cells :
 Some —Hear I not the multitude laugh loud ?—
 Impaled in lingering fire : and mighty realms
 Float by my feet, like sea-uprooted isles,
 Whose sons are kneaded down in common blood
 By the red light of their own burning homes.

Fury. • Blood thou canst see, and fire ; and canst hear groans :

Worse things unheard, unseen, remain behind.

Prometheus. Worse !

Fury. In each human heart terror survives
 The ravin it has gorged : the loftiest fear
 All that they would disdain to think were true :
 Hypocrisy and custom make their minds
 The fanes of many a worship, now outworn.
 They dare not devise good for man's estate,
 And yet they know not that they do not dare.
 The good want power, but to weep barren tears.
 The powerful goodness want : worse need for them.
 The wise want love ; and those who love want wisdom ;
 And all best things are thus confused to ill.
 Many are strong and rich, and would be just,
 But live among their suffering fellow-men
 As if none felt : they know not what they do.

Prometheus. Thy words are like a cloud of winged snakes :
 And yet I pity those they torture not.

Fury. Thou pitiest them ? I speak no more ! [Vanishes.]
Prometheus. Ah woe !

Ah woe ! Alas ! pain, pain ever, for ever !
 I close my tearless eyes, but see more clear
 Thy works within my woe-illumined mind,
 Thou subtle tyrant ! Peace is in the grave.
 The grave hides all things beautiful and good :
 I am a God and cannot find it there,
 Nor would I seek it : for, though dread revenge,
 This is defeat, fierce king ! not victory.
 The sights with which thou torturtest gird my soul
 With new endurance, till the hour arrives
 When they shall be no types of things which are.

Panthea. Alas ! what sawest thou ?

Prometheus. There are two woes :
 To speak and to behold ; thou spare me one.
 Names are there, Nature's sacred watch-words, they
 Were borne aloft in bright emblazonry ;
 The nations thronged around, and cried aloud,

As with one voice, Truth, liberty, and love !
 Suddenly fierce confusion fell from heaven
 Among them : there was strife, deceit, and fear :
 Tyrants rushed in, and did divide the spoil.
 This was the shadow of the truth I saw.

The Earth. I felt thy torture, son, with such mixed joy
 As pain and virtue give. To cheer thy state
 I bid ascend those subtle and fair spirits,
 Whose homes are the dim caves of human thought,
 And who inhabit, as birds wing the wind,
 Its world-surrounding ether : they behold
 Beyond that twilight realm, as in a glass,
 The future : may they speak comfort to thee !

Panthea. Look, sister, where a troop of spirits gather,
 Like flocks of clouds in spring's delightful weather,
 Thronging in the blue air !

Ione. And see ! more come,
 Like fountain-vapours when the winds are dumb,
 That climb up the ravine in scattered lines.
 And hark ! is it the music of the pines ?
 Is it the lake ? Is it the waterfall ?

Panthea. 'Tis something sadder, sweeter far than all.

CHORUS OF SPIRITS.

From unremembered ages we
 Gentle guides and guardians be
 Of heaven-oppressed mortality !
 And we breathe, and sicken not,
 The atmosphere of human thought :
 Be it dim, and dank, and grey,
 Like a storm-extinguished day,
 Travelled o'er by dying gleams :
 Be it bright as all between
 Cloudless skies and windless streams,
 Silent, liquid, and serene :
 As the birds within the wind,
 As the fish within the wave,
 As the thoughts of man's own mind
 Float through all above the grave :
 We make there our liquid lair,
 Voyaging cloudlike and unspent
 Through the boundless element :
 Thence we bear the prophecy
 Which begins and ends in thee !

Ione. More yet come, one by one : the air around them
 Looks radiant as the air around a star.

FIRST SPIRIT.

On a battle-trumpet's blast
 I fled hither, fast, fast, fast,
 'Mid the darkness upward cast.

From the dust of creeds outworn,
 From the tyrant's banner torn,
 Gathering round me, onward borne,
 There was mingled many a cry—
 Freedom! Hope! Death! Victory!
 Till they faded through the sky;
 And one sound above, around,
 One sound beneath, around, above,
 Was moving; 'twas the soul of love;
 'Twas the hope, the prophecy,
 Which begins and ends in thee.

SECOND SPIRIT.

A rainbow's arch stood on the sea,
 Which rocked beneath, immoveably;
 And the triumphant storm did flee,
 Like a conqueror, swift and proud,
 Between with many a captive cloud,
 A shapeless, dark and rapid crowd,
 Each by lightning riven in half:
 I heard the thunder hoarsely laugh:
 Mighty fleets were strewn like chaff
 And spread beneath a hell of death
 O'er the white waters. I alit
 On a great ship lightning-split,
 And speeded hither on the sigh
 Of one who gave an enemy
 His plank, then plunged aside to die.

THIRD SPIRIT.

I sate beside a sage's bed,
 And the lamp was burning red
 Near the book where he had fed,
 When a Dream with plumes of flame,
 To his pillow hovering came,
 And I knew it was the same
 Which had kindled long ago
 Pity, eloquence, and woe;
 And the world awhile below
 Wore the shade its lustre made.
 It has borne me here as fleet
 As Desire's lightning feet:
 I must ride it back ere morrow,
 Or the sage will wake in sorrow.

FOURTH SPIRIT.

On a poet's lips I slept
 Dreaming like a love-adept
 In the sound his breathing kept;
 Nor seeks nor finds he mortal blisses,
 But feeds on the aerial bises
 Of shapes that haunt thought's wildernesses.
 He will watch from dawn to gloom

The lake-reflected sun illumé
 The yellow bees in the ivy-bloom,
 Nor heed nor see, what things they be ;
 But from these create he can
 Formis more real than living man,
 Nurslings of immortality !
 One of these awakened me,
 And I sped to succour thee.

Jone. Behold'st thou not two shapes from the east and west
 Come, as two doves to one beloved nest,
 Twin nurslings of the all-sustaining air,
 On swift still wings glide down the atmosphere !
 And, hark ! their sweet sad voices ! 'tis despair
 Mingled with love and then dissolved in sound.

Panthea. Canst thou speak, sister ? all my words are drowned.

Jone. Their beauty gives me voice. See how they float
 On their sustaining wings of skiey grain,
 Orange and azure deepening into gold :
 Their soft smiles light the air like a star's fire.

CHORUS OF SPIRITS.
Hast thou beheld the form of Love ?

FIFTH SPIRIT.

As over wide dominions
 I sped, like some swift cloud that wings the wide air's wildernesses,
 That planet-crested shape swept by on lightning-braided
 pinions,
 Scattering the liquid joy of life from his ambrosial tresses :
 His footsteps paved the world with light ; but as I past 'twas fading,
 And hollow Ruin yawned behind : great sages bound in madness,
 And headless patriots, and pale youths who perished, un-
 upbraiding,
 Gleamed in the night. I wandered o'er, till thou, O King of sadness,
 Turned by thy smile the worst I saw to recollected gladness.

SIXTH SPIRIT.

Ah, sister ! Desolation is a delicate thing :
 It walks not on the earth, it floats not on the air,
 But treads with silent footstep, and fans with silent wing
 The tender hopes which in their hearts the best and gentlest bear ;
 Who, soothed to false repose by the fanning plumes above,
 And the music-stirring motion of its soft and busy feet,
 Dream visions of aerial joy, and call the monster, Love,
 And wake, and find the shadow Pain, as he whom now we greet.

CHORUS.

Though Ruin now Love's shadow be,
 Following him, destroyingly,

On Death's white and winged steed,
 Which the fleetest cannot flee,
     Trampling down both flower and weed,
 Man and beast, and foul and fair,
     Like a tempest through the air ;
 Thou shalt quell this horseman grim,
     Woundless though in heart or limb.

Prometheus. Spirits ! how know ye this shall be ?

CHORUS.

In the atmosphere we breathe,
 As buds grow red when the snow-storms flee,
     From spring gathering up beneath,
 Whose mild winds shake the elder-brake,
     And the wandering herdsmen know
 That the white-thorn soon will blow :
 Wisdom, Justice, Love, and Peace,
     When they struggle to increase,
 Are to us as soft winds be
     To shepherd boys, the prophecy
 Which begins and ends in thee.

Ione. Where are the Spirits fled ?

Panthaea. Only a sense

Remains of them, like the omnipotence
 Of music, when the inspired voice and lute
 Languish, ere yet the responses are mute,
 Which through the deep and labyrinthine soul,
 Like echoes through long caverns, wind and roil.

Prometheus. How fair these air-born shapes ! and yet I feel
 Most vain all hope but love ; and thou art far,
 Asia ! who, when my being overflowed,
 Wert like a golden chalice to bright wine
 Which else had sunk into the thirsty dust.
 All things are still : alas ! how heavily
 This quiet morning weighs upon my heart ;
 Though I should dream I could even sleep with grief,
 If slumber were denied not. I would fain
 Be what it is my destiny to be,
 The saviour and the strength of suffering man,
 Or sink into the original gulf of things.
 There is no agony, and no solace left ;
 Earth can console, Heaven can torment no more.

Panthaea. Hast thou forgotten one who watches thee
 The cold dark night, and never sleeps but when
 The shadow of thy spirit falls on her ?

Prometheus. I said all hope was vain but love : thou lovest.

Panthaea. Deeply in truth ; but the eastern star looks white,
 And Asia waits in that far Indian vale
 The scene of her sad exile ; rugged once
 And desolate and frozen, like this ravine ;
 But now invested with fair flowers and herbs,

And haunted by sweet airs and sounds, which flow
 Among the woods and waters, from the ether
 Of her transforming presence, which would fade
 If it were mingled not with thine. Farewell !

ACT. II.

SCENE I.—Morning. A lonely Vale in the Indian Caucasus.

ASIA, alone.

Asia. From all the blasts of heaven thou hast descended :
 Yes, like a spirit, like a thought, which makes
 Unwonted tears throng to the horny eyes,
 And beatings haunt the desolated heart,
 Which should have learnt repose : thou hast descended
 Cradled in tempests ; thou dost wake, O Spring !
 O child of many winds ! As suddenly
 Thou comest as the memory of a dream,
 Which now is sad because it hath been sweet ;
 Like genius, or like joy, which riseth up
 As from the earth, clothing with golden clouds
 The desert of our life.
 This is the season, this the day, the hour ;
 At sunrise thou shouldst come, sweet sister mine,
 Too long desired, too long delaying, come !
 How like death-worms the wingless moments crawl !
 The point of one white star is quivering still
 Deep in the orange light of widening morn
 Beyond the purple mountains : through a chasm
 Of wind-divided mist the darker lake
 Reflects it ; now it wanes : it gleams again
 As the waves fade, and as the burning threads
 Of woven cloud unravel in pale air :
 'Tis lost ! and through yon peaks of cloud-like snow
 The roseate sun-light quivers : hear I not
 The Aeolian music of her sea-green plumes
 Winnowing the crimson dawn ?

[PANTHEA enters.]

I feel, I see
 Those eyes which burn through smiles that fade in tears,
 Like stars half-quenched in mists of silver dew.
 Beloved and most beautiful, who wearest
 The shadow of that soul by which I live,
 How late thou art ! the sphered sun had climbed
 The sea ; my heart was sick with hope, before
 The printless air felt thy belated plumes.

Pantaea. Pardon, great Sister ! but my wings were faint

With the delight of a remembered dream,
 As are the noon-tide plumes of summer winds
 Satiate with sweet flowers. I was wont to sleep
 Peacefully, and awake refreshed and calm
 Before the sacred Titan's fall, and thy
 Unhappy love, had made, through use and pity,
 Both love and woe familiar to my heart
 As they had grown to thine: erewhile I slept
 Under the glaucous caverns of old Ocean
 Within dim bowers of green and purple moss,
 Our young Ione's soft and milky arms
 Locked then, as now, behind my dark, moist hair.
 While my shut eyes and cheek were pressed within
 The folded depth of her life-breathing bosom:
 But not as now, since I am made the wind
 Which fails beneath the music that I bear
 Of thy most wordless converse; since dissolved
 Into the sense with which love talks, my rest
 Was troubled and yet sweet; my waking hours
 Too full of care and pain.

Asia. Lift up thine eyes,
 And let me read thy dream.

Panthea. As I have said,
 With our sea-sister at his feet I slept.
 The mountain mists, condensing at our voice
 Under the moon had spread their snowy flakes,
 From the keen ice shielding our linked sleep.
 Then two dreams came. One, I remember not.
 But in the other his pale wound-worn limbs
 Fell from Prometheus, and the azure night
 Grew radiant with the glory of that form
 Which lives unchanged within, and his voice fell
 Like music which makes giddy the dim brain,
 Faint with intoxication of keen joy:
 "Sister of her whose footsteps pave the world
 With loveliness—more fair than aught but her,
 Whose shadow thou art—lift thine eyes on me."
 I lifted them: the overpowering light
 Of that immortal shape was shadowed o'er
 By love; which, from his soft and flowing limbs,
 And passion-parted lips, and keen, faint eyes,
 Steamed forth like vaporous fire; an atmosphere
 Which wrapped me in its all-dissolving power,
 As the warm ether of the morning sun
 Wraps ere it drinks some cloud of wandering dew.
 I saw not, heard not, moved not, only felt
 His presence flow and mingle through my blood
 Till it became his life, and his drew mine,
 And I was thus absorbed, until it passed,
 And like the vapours when the sun sinks down,

Gathering again in drops upon the pines,
 And tremulous as they, in the deep night
 My being was condensed ; and as the rays
 Of thought were slowly gathered, I could hear
 His voice, whose accents lingered ere they died
 Like footsteps of weak melody : thy name
 Among the many sounds alone I heard
 Of what might be articulate ; though still
 I listened through the night when sound was none.
 Ione wakened then, and said to me :
 "Canst thou divine what troubles me to-night ?
 I always knew what I desired before,
 Nor ever found delight to wish in vain.
 But now I cannot tell thee what I seek ;
 I know not ; something sweet, since it is sweet
 Even to desire ; it is thy sport, false sister ;
 Thou hast discovered some enchantment old,
 Whose spells have stolen my spirit as I slept
 And mingled it with thine : for when just now
 We kissed, I felt within thy parted lips
 The sweet air that sustained me, and the warmth
 Of the life-blood, for loss of which I faint,
 Quivered between our intertwining arms."
 I answered not, for the Eastern star grew pale,
 But fled to thee.

Asia.      Thou speakest, but thy words
 Are as the air : I feel them not : Oh, lift
 Thine eyes, that I may read his written soul !

Panthea. I lift them, though they droop beneath the load
 Of that they would express : what canst thou see
 But thine own fairest shadow imaged there ?

Asia. Thine eyes are like the deep, blue, boundless heaven
 Contracted to two circles underneath
 Their long, fine lashes ; dark, far, measureless,
 Orb within orb, and line through line inwoven.

Panthea. Why lookest thou as if a spirit passed ?

Asia. There is a change ; beyond their innost depth
 I see a shade, a shape : 'tis He, arrayed
 In the soft light of his own smiles, which spread
 Like radiance from the cloud-surrounded morn.
 Prometheus, it is thine ! depart not yet !
 Say not those smiles that we shall meet again
 Within that bright pavilion which their beams
 Shall build on the waste world ? The dream is told.
 What shape is that between us ? Its rude hair
 Roughens the wind that lifts it, its regard
 Is wild and quick, yet, 'tis a thing of air,
 For through its grey robe gleams the golden dew
 Whose stars the noon has quenched not.

Dream.      Follow ! Follow !

Panthea. It is mine other dream.

Asia. It disappears.

Panthea. It passes now into my mind. Methought
As we sate here, the flower-infolding buds
Burst on yon lightning-blasted almond tree,
When swift from the white Scythian wilderness
A wind swept forth wrinkling the Earth with frost :
I looked, and all the blossoms were blown down ;
But on each leaf was stamped, as the blue bells
Of Hyacinth tell Apollo's written grief,
O, FOLLOW, FOLLOW !

Asia. As you speak, your words
Fill, pause by pause, my own forgotten sleep
With shapes. Methought among the lawns together
We wandered, underneath the young grey dawn,
And multitudes of dense white fleecy clouds
Were wandering in thick flocks along the mountains
Shepherded by the slow, unwilling wind ;
And the white dew on the new-bladed grass,
Just piercing the dark earth, hung silently ;
And there was more which I remember not :
But on the shadows of the morning clouds,
Athwart the purple mountain slope, was written
Follow, O, FOLLOW ! As they vanished by,
And on each herb, from which Heaven's dew had fallen,
The like was stamped, as with a withering fire,
A wind arose among the pines ; it shook
The clinging music from their boughs, and then
Low, sweet, faint sounds, like the farewell of ghosts,
Were heard : O, FOLLOW, FOLLOW, FOLLOW ME !
And then I said, "Panthea, look on me."
But in the depth of those beloved eyes
Still I saw, FOLLOW, FOLLOW !

Echo. Follow, follow !

Panthea. The crags, this clear spring morning, mock our voices,
As they were spirit-tongued.

Asia. It is some being Around the crags. What fine clear sounds ! O, list !

ECHOES (unseen).

Echoes we : listen !

We cannot stay :

As dew-stars glisten

Then fade away—

Child of Ocean !

Asia. Hark ! Spirits, speak. The liquid response
Of their aerial tongues yet sound.

Panthea.

I hear.

ECHOES.

O, follow, follow !
 As our voice recedeth
 Through the caverns hollow,
 Where the forest spreadeth ;
 (More distant.)
 O, follow, follow,
 Through the caverns hollow,
 As the song floats thou pursue,
 Where the wild bee never flow,
 Through the noon-tide darkness deep,
 By the odour-breathing sleep
 Of faint night-flowers, and the waves
 At the fountain-lighted caves,
 While our music, wild and sweet,
 Meeks thy gently falling feet,
 Child of Ocean !

Asia. Shall we pursue the sound ? It grows more faint
 And distant.

Panthea. List ! the strain floats nearer now.

ECHOES.

In the world unknown
 Sleeps a voice unspoken ;
 By thy step alone
 Can its rest be broken ;
 Child of Ocean !

Asia. How the notes sink upon the ebbing wind !

ECHOES.

O, follow, follow !
 Through the caverns hollow,
 As the song floats thou pursue,
 By the woodland noon-tide dew ;
 By the forests, lakes, and fountains,
 Through the many-folded mountains ;
 To the rents, and gulfs, and chasms,
 Where the Earth repos'd from spasms,
 On the day when He and thou
 Parted, to commingle now ;
 Child of Ocean !

Asia. Come, sweet Panthea, link thy hand in mine,
 And follow, ere the voices fade away.

SCENE II.—A Forest, intermingled with Rocks and Caverns. ASIA and PANTHEA pass into it. Two young Fauns are sitting on a Rock, listening.

SEMICHORUS I. OF SPIRITS.

The path through which that lovely twain
 Have past, by cedar, pine, and yew,
 And each dark tree that ever grow,
 Is curtained out from Heaven's wide blue ;
 Nor sun, nor moon, nor wind, nor rain,
 Can pierce its interwoven bowers,
 Nor aught, save where some cloud of dew,
 Drifted along the earth-creeping breeze,
 Between the trunks of the hoar trees,
 Hangs each a pearl in the pale flowers
 Of the green laurel, blown anew ;
 And bends, and then fades silently,
 One frail and fair anemone :
 Or when some star of many a one
 That climbs and wanders through steep night,
 Has found the cleft through which alone
 Beams fall from high those depths upon
 Ere it is borne away, away,
 By the swift Heavens that cannot stay,
 It scatters drops of golden light,
 Like lines of rain that ne'er unite :
 And the gloom divine is all around ;
 And underneath is the mossy ground.

SEMICHORUS II.

There the voluptuous nightingales,
 Are awake through all the broad noon-day,
 When one with bliss or sadness fails,
 And through the windless ivy boughs.
 Sick with sweet love, droops dying away
 On its mate's music-panting bosom ;
 Another from the swinging blossom,
 Watching to catch the languid close
 Of the last strain, then lifts on high
 The wings of the weak melody,
 Till some new strain of feeling bear
 The song, and all the woods are mute ;
 When there is heard through the dim air
 The rush of wings, and rising there
 Like many a lake-surrounded flute,
 Sounds overflow the listener's brain
 So sweet, that joy is almost pain.

SEMICHORUS I.

There those enchanted eddies play
 Of echoes, music-tongued, which draw,
 By Demogorgon's mighty law,
 With melting rapture, or sweet awe,
 All spirits on that secret way ;
 As inland boats are driven to Ocean
 Down streams made strong with mountain-thaw ;
 And first there comes a gentle sound
 To those in talk or slumber bound,
 And wakes the destined, soft emotion
 Attracts, impels them ; those who saw
 Say from the breathing earth behind
 There streams a plume-uplifting wind
 Which drives them on their path, while they Believe their own swift wings and feet
 The sweet desires within obey :
 And so they float upon their way,
 Until, still sweet, but loud and strong,
 The storm of sound is driven along,
 Sucked up and hurrying : as they fleet
 Behind, its gathering billows meet
 And to the fatal mountain bear
 Like clouds amid the yielding air.

First Faun. Caust thou imagine where those spirits live
 Which make such delicate music in the woods ?
 We haunt within the least frequented caves
 And closest coverts, and we know these wilds,
 Yet never meet them, though we hear them oft :
 Where may they hide themselves ?

Second Faun. 'Tis hard to tell :
 I have heard those more skilled in spirits say,
 The bubbles, which enchantment of the sun
 Sucks from the pale faint water-flowers that pave
 The oozy bottom of clear lakes and pools,
 Are the pavilions where such dwell and float
 Under the green and golden atmosphere
 Which noon-tide kindles through the woven leaves ;
 And when these burst, and the thin fiery air,
 The which they breathed within those lucent domes,
 Ascends to flow like meteors through the night,
 They ride on them, and rein their headlong speed,
 And bow their burning crests, and glide in fire
 Under the waters of the earth again.

First Faun. If such live thus, have others other lives,
 Under pink blossoms or within the bells
 Of meadow flowers, or folded violets deep,
 Or on their dying odours, when they die,
 Or on the sunlight of the spher'd dew ?

Second Faun. Ay, many more which we may well divine.

But should we stay to speak, noon-tide would come,
 And thwart Silenus find his goats undrawn,
 And grudge to sing those wise and lovely songs
 Of Fate, and Chance, and God, and Chaos old,
 And Love, and the chained Titan's woful doom.
 And how he shall be loosed, and make the earth
 One brotherhood : delightful strains which cheer
 Our solitary twilights, and which charm
 To silence the unenvyng nightingales.

SCENE III.—A Pinnacle of Rock among Mountains. ASIA and PANTHEA.

Panthea. Hither the sound has borne us—to the realm
 Of Demogorgon, and the mighty portal,
 Like a volcano's meteor-breathing chasm,
 Whence the oracular vapour is hurled up
 Which lonely men drink wandering in their youth,
 And call truth, virtue, love, genius, or joy,
 That maulderng wine of life, whose dregs they drain
 To deep intoxication ; and uplift,
 Like Maenads who cry loud, Evoe ! Evoe !
 The voice which is contagion to the world.

Asia. Fit throne for such a Power ! Magnificent !
 How glorious art thou, Earth ! and if thou be
 The shadow of some spirit lovelier still,
 Though evil stain its work, and it should be
 Like its creation, weak yet beautiful,
 I could fall down and worship that and thee.
 Even now my heart adoreth: Wonderful !
 Look, sister, ere the vapour dim thy brain :
 Beneath is a wide plain of billowy mist,
 As a lake, paving in the morning sky,
 With azure waves which burst in silver light,
 Some Indian vale. Behold it, rolling on
 Under the curdling winds, and islanding
 The peak whereon we stand, midway, around,
 Encinctured by the dark and blooming forsts,
 Dim twilight-lawns, and stream-illumined eaves,
 And wind-enchanted shapes of wandering mist ;
 And far on high the keen sky-eaving mountains,
 From icy spires of sun-like radiance fling
 The dawn, as lifted Ocean's dazzling spray,
 From some Atlantic islet scattered up,
 Spangles the wind with lamp-like water-drops.
 The vale is girdled with their wall, a howl
 Of Cataracts from their thaw-cloven ravines
 Satiates the listening wind, continuous, vast,

Awful as silence. Hark ! the rushing snow !
 The sun-awakened avalanche ! whose mass,
 Thrice sifted by the storm, had gathered there
 Flake after flake, in heaven-defying minds
 As thought by thought is piled, till some great truth
 Is loosened, and the nations echo round,
 Shaken to their roots, as do the mountains now.

Panthea. Look how the gusty sea of mist is breaking
 In crimson foam, even at our feet ! it rises
 As Ocean at the enchantment of the moon
 Round foodless men wrecked on some oozy isle.

Asia. The fragments of the cloud are scattered up ;
 The wind that lifts them disentwines my hair ;
 Its billows now sweep o'er mine eyes ; my brain
 Grows dizzy ; I see shapes within the mist.

Panthea. A countenance with beckoning smiles : there burns
 An azure fire within its golden locks !
 Another and another : hark ! they speak !

SONG OF SPIRITS.

To the deep, to the deep,
 Down, down !
 Through the shade of sleep,
 Through the cloudy strife
 Of Death and of Life ;
 Through the veil and the bar
 Of things which seem and are,
 Even to the steps of the remotest throne,
 Down, down !

While the sound whirls around,
 Down, down !
 As the fawn draws the hound,
 As the lightning the vapour,
 As a weak moth the taper ;
 Death, despair ; love, sorrow ;
 Time both ; to-day, to-morrow ;
 As steel obeys the spirit of the stone,
 Down, down !

Through the grey, void abysm,
 Down, down !
 Where the air is no prism,
 And the moon and stars are not,
 And the cavern-crags wear not
 The radiance of Heaven,
 Nor the gloom to Earth given,
 Where there is one pervading, one alone,
 Down, down !

In the depth of the deep
 Down, down !
 Like veiled lightning asleep,
 Like the spark nursed in embers,
 The last look Love remembers,
 Like a diamond, which shines
 On the dark wealth of mines.
 A spell is treasured but for thee alone.
 Down, down !

We have bound thee, we guide thee ;
 Down, down !
 With the bright form beside thee ;
 Resist not the weakness,
 Such strength is in meekness
 That the Eternal, the Immortal,
 Must unloose through life's portal
 The snake-like Doom coiled underneath his throne
 By that alone.

SCENE IV.—The Cave of DEMOGORGON. ASIA and PANTHEA.

Panthea. What veiled form sits on that ebon throne ?
Asia. The veil has fallen.

Panthea. I see a mighty darkness
 Filling the seat of power, and rays of gloom
 Dart round, as light from the meridian sun,
 Ungazed upon and shapeless ; neither limb,
 Nor form, nor outline ; yet we feel it is
 A living spirit.

Demogorgon. Ask what thou wouldest know.

Asia. What canst thou tell ?

Demogorgon. All things thou dar'st demand.

Asia. Who made the living world ?

Demogorgon. God.

Asia. Who made all
 That it contains ? thought, passion, reason, will,
 Imagination ?

Demogorgon. God : Almighty God.

Asia. Who made that sense which, when the winds of spring
 In rarest visitation, or the voice
 Of one beloved heard in youth alone,
 Fills the faint eyes with falling tears which dim
 The radiant looks of unbewailing flowers,
 And leaves this peopled earth a solitude
 When it returns no more ?

Demogorgon. Merciful God.

Asia. And who made terror, madness, crime, remorse,
 Which from the links of the great chain of things,
 To every thought within the mind of man
 Sway and drag heavily, and each one reels
 Under the load towards the pit of death ;
 Abandoned hope, and love that turns to hate ;
 And self-contempt, bitterer to drink than blood ;
 Pain, whose unheeded and familiar speech
 Is howling, and keen shrieks, day after day ;
 And Hell, or the sharp fear of Hell ?

Demogorgon. He reigns.

Asia. Utter his name : a world pining in pain
 Asks but his name : curses shall drag him down.

Demogorgon. He reigns.

Asia. I feel, I know it : who ?

Demogorgon. He reigns.

Asia. Wh<sup>n</sup> reigns ? There was the Heaven and Earth at first,

And Light and Love ; then Saturn, from whose throne
 Time fell, an envious shadow : such the state
 Of the earth's primal spirits beneath his sway,
 As the calm joy of flowers and living leaves
 Before the wind or sun has withered them
 And semi-vital worms ; but he refused
 The birthright of their being, knowledge, power,
 The skill which wields the elements, the thought
 Which pierces this dim universe like light,
 Self-empire, and the majesty of love ;
 For thirst of which they fainted. Then Prometheus
 Gave wisdom, which is strength, to Jupiter,
 And with this law alone, " Let man be free,"
 Clothed him with the dominion of wide Heaven.
 To know nor faith, nor love, nor law ; to be Omnipotent but friendless is to reign ;
 And Jove now reigned ; for on the race of man
 First famine, and then toil, and then disease,
 Strife, wounds, and ghastly death unseen before,
 Fell ; and the unseasonable seasons drove,
 With alternating shafts of frost and fire,
 Their shelterless, pale tribes to mountain caves :
 And in their desert hearts fierce wants he sent,
 And mad disquietudes, and shadows idle
 Of unreal good, which levied mutual war,
 So ruining the lair wherein they raged.

Prometheus saw, and waked the legioned hopes
 Which sleep within folded Elysian flowers,
 Nepenthe, Moly, Amaranth, fadeless blooms,
 That they might hide with thin and rainbow wings
 The shape of Death ; and Love he sent to bind
 The disunited tendrils of that vine

Which bears the wine of life, the human heart ;
 And he tamed fire which, like some beast of prey,
 Most terrible, but lovely, played beneath
 The frown of man ; and tortured to his will
 Iron and gold, the slaves and signs of power,
 And gems and poisons, and all subtlest forms
 Hidden beneath the mountains and the waves.
 He gave man speech, and speech created thought,
 Which is the measure of the universe ;
 And Science struck the thrones of earth and heaven,
 Which shook, but fell not ; and the harmonious mind
 Poured itself forth in all-prophetic song ;
 And music lifted up the listening spirit
 Until it walked, exempt from mortal care,
 Godlike, o'er the clear billows of sweet sound ;
 And human hands first mimicked and then mocked,
 With moulded limbs more lovely than its own,
 The human form, till marble grew divine,
 And mothers, gazing, drank the love men see
 Reflected in their race, behold, and perish.
 He told the hidden power of herbs and springs,
 And Disease drank and slept. Death grew like sleep.
 He taught the implicated orbits woven
 Of the wide-wandering stars ; and how the sun
 Changes his lair, and by what secret spell
 The pale moon is transformed, when her broad eye
 Gazes not on the interlunar sea :
 He taught to rule, as life directs the limbs,
 The tempest-winged chariots of the Ocean,
 And the Celt knew the Indian. Cities then
 Were built, and through their snow-like columns flowed
 The warm winds, and the azure aether shone,
 And the blue sea and shadowy hills were seen.
 Such, the alleviations of his state,
 Prometheus gave to man, for which he hangs
 Withering in destined pain : but who rains down
 Evil, the immedicable plague, which, while
 Man looks on his creation like a God
 And sees that it is glorious, drives him on
 The wreck of his own will, the scorn of earth,
 The outcast, the abandoned, the alone ?
 Not Jove : while yet his frown shook heaven, ay, when
 His adversary from adamantine chains
 Cursed him, he trembled like a slave. Declare
 Who is his master ? Is he too a slave ?

Demogorgon. All spirits are enslaved which serve things evil
 Thou knowest if Jupiter be such or no.

Asia. Whom called'st thou God ?

Demogorgon. I spoke but as ye speak
 For Jove is the supreme of living things.

Asia. Who is the master of the slave ?

Demogorgon.

If the abyssm

Could vomit forth its secrets. But a voice
Is wanting, the deep truth is imageless ;
For what would it avail to bid thee gaze
On the revolving world ? What to bid speak
Fate, Time, Occasion, Chance and Change ? To these
All things are subject but eternal Love.

Asia. So much I asked before, and my heart gave
The response thou hast given ; and of such truths
Each to itself must be the oracle.

One more demand ; and do thou answer me
As my own soul would answer, did it know
That which I ask. Prometheus shall arise
Henceforth the sun of this rejoicing world :
When shall the destined hour arrive ?

Demogorgon.

Behold !

Asia. The rocks are cloven, and through the purple night
I see cars drawn by rainbow-winged steeds
Which trample the dim winds : in each there stands
A wild-eyed charioteer urging their flight.
Some look behind, as fiends pursued them there,
And yet I see no shapes but the keen stars :
Others, with burning eyes, lean forth, and drink
With eager lips the wind of their own speed,
As if the thing they loved fled on before,
And now, even now, they clasped it. Their bright locks
Stream like a comet's flashing hair : they all Sweep onward.

Demogorgon. These are the immortal Hours,
Of whom thou didst demand. One waits for thee

Asia. A spirit with a dreadful countenance
Checks its dark chariot by the craggy gulf.
Unlike thy brethren, ghastly charioteer,
Who art thou ? Whither wouldest thou bear me ? Speak !

Spirit. I am the shadow of a destiny
More dread than is my aspect : ere yon planet
Has set, the darkness which ascends with me
Shall wrap in lasting night heaven's kingless throne.

Asia. What meanest thou ?

Panthea. That terrible shadow floats
Up from its throne, as may the lurid smoke
Of earthquake-ruined cities o'er the sea.
Lo ! it ascends the car ; the coursers fly
Terrified : watch its path among the stars
Blackening the night !

Asia. Thus I am answered : strange !

Panthea. See, near the verge, another chariot stays ;
An ivory shell inlaid with crimson fire,
Which comes and goes within its sculptured rim

Of delicate strange tracery ; the young spirit
That guides it has the dove-like eyes of hope ;
How its soft smiles attract the soul ! as light
Lures winged insects through the lampless air.

SPIRIT.

My coursers are fed with the lightning,
They drink of the whirlwind's stream,
And when the red morning is bright'ning
They bathe in the fresh sunbeam ;
They have strength for their swiftness I deem,
Then ascend with me, daughter of Ocean.

I desire : and their speed makes night kindle ;
I fear : they outstrip the Typhoon ;
Ere the cloud piled on Atlas can dwindle
We encircle the earth and the moon :
We shall rest from long labours at noon :
Then ascend with me, daughter of Ocean.

SCENE V.—The Car pauses within a Cloud on the Top of a snowy Mountain. ASIA, PANTHEA, and the SPIRIT OF THE HOUR.

SPIRIT.

On the brink of the night and the morning
My coursers are wont to respire ;
But the Earth has just whispered a warning
That their flight must be swifter than fire :
They shall drink the hot speed of desire !
Asia. Thou breathest on their nostrils, but my breath
Would give them swifter speed.

Spirit. Alas ! it could not.

Panthea. Oh Spirit ! pause, and tell whence is the light
Which fills the cloud ! the sun is yet unrisen.

Spirit. The sun will rise not until noon. Apollo
Is held in heaven by wonder ; and the light
Which fills this vapour, as the aerial hue
Of fountain-gazing roses fills the water,
Flows from thy mighty sister.

Panthea. Yes, I feel—

Asia. What is it with thee, sister ? Thou art pale.

Panthea. How thou art changed ! I dare not look on thee ;
I feel but see thee not. I scarce endure
The radiance of thy beauty. Some good change
Is working in the elements, which suffer
Thy presence thus unveiled. The Nereids tell
That on the day when the clear hyaline
Was cloven at thy uprise, and thou didst stand

Within a veined shell, which floated on
 Over the calm floor of the crystal sea,
 Among the Egean isles, and by the shores
 Which bear thy name ; love, like the atmosphere
 Of the sun's fire filling the living world,
 Burst from thee, and illumined earth and heaven
 And the deep ocean and the sunless caves
 And all that dwells within them ; till grief cast
 Eclipse upon the soul from which it came :
 Such art thou now ; nor is it I alone,
 Thy sister, thy companion, thine own chosen one,
 But the whole world which seeks thy sympathy.
 Hearest thou not sounds i' the air which speak the love
 Of all articulate beings ? Feelest thou not
 The inanimate winds enamoured of thee ? List ! [Music]

Asia. Thy words are sweeter than aught else but his Whose echoes they are : yet all love is sweet,
 Given or returned. Common as light is love,
 And its familiar voice wearies not ever.
 Like the wide heaven, the all-sustaining air,
 It makes the reptile equal to the God :
 They who inspire it most are fortunate,
 As I am now ; but those who feel it most
 Are happier still, after long sufferings,
 As I shall soon become.

Panthea. List ! Spirits, speak.

Voice. (In the air, singing.)
 Life of Life ! thy lips enkindle
 With their love the breath between them ;
 And thy smiles before they dwindle
 Make the cold air fire ; then screen them
 In those looks, where whoso gazes
 Faints, entangled in their mazes.

Child of Light ! thy limbs are burning
 Through the vest which seems to hide them ;
 As the radiant lines of morning
 Through the clouds, ere they divide them ;
 And this atmosphere divinest
 Shrouds thee wheresoe'er thou shinest.

Fair are others ; none beholds thee,
 But thy voice sounds low and tender
 Like the fairest, for it folds thee
 From the sight, that liquid splendour,
 And all feel, yet see thee never,
 As I feel now, lost for ever !

Lamp of Earth ! wher'er thou movest
 Its dim shapes are clad with brightness,

And the souls of whom thou lovest
 Walk upon the winds with lightness,
 Till they fail, as I am tailing,
 Dizzy, lost, yet unbewailing !

ASIA.

My soul is an enchanted boat,
 Which, like a sleeping swan, doth float
 Upon the silver waves of thy sweet singing ;
 And thine doth like an angel sit
 Beside the helm conducting it,
 Whilst all the winds with melody are ringing.
 It seems to float ever, for ever,
 Upon that many-winding river,
 Between mountains, woods, abysses,
 A paradise of wildernesses !
 Till, like one in slumber bound,
 Borne to the ocean, I float down, around,
 Into a sea profound, of ever-spreading sound.

Meanwhile thy spirit lifts its pinions
 In music's most sereno dominions ;
 Catching the winds that fan that happy heaven.
 And we sail on, away, afar,
 Without a course, without a star,
 But, by the instinct of sweet music driven ;
 Till through Elysian garden islets
 By thee, most beautiful of pilots,
 Where never mortal pinnace glided,
 The bough of my desire is guided :
 Realms where the air we breathe is love,
 Which in the winds on the waves doth move,
 Harmonising this earth with what we feel above.

We have passed Age's icy caves,
 And Manhood's dark and tossing waves,
 And Youth's smooth ocean, smiling to betray :
 Beyond the glassy gulfs we flee
 Of shadow-peopled Infancy,
 Through Death and Birth, to a diviner day :
 A paradise of vaulted bowers
 Lit by downward-gazing flowers,
 And watery paths that wind between
 Wildernesses calm and green,
 Peopled by shapes too bright to see,
 And rest, having beheld ; somewhat like thee ;
 Which walk upon the sea, and chant melodiously !

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Heaven. JUPITER on his Throne ; THETIS and the other Deities assembled.

Jupiter. Yo congregated powers of heaven, who share
 The glory and the strength of him ye serve,
 Rejoice ! henceforth I am omnipotent.
 All else had been subdued to me ; alone
 The soul of man like unextinguished fire,
 Yet burns towards heaven with fierce reproach, and doubt,
 And lamentation, and reluctant prayer,
 Hurling up insurrection, which might make
 Our antique empire insecure, though built
 On eldest faith, and hell's coeval, fear ;
 And though my curses through the pendulous air,
 Like snow on herbless peaks, fall flake by flake,
 And cling to it ; though under my wrath's night
 It climb the crags of life, step after step,
 Which wound it, as ico wounds unsandalled feet,
 It yet remains supreme o'er misery,
 Aspiring, unrepressed, yet soon to fall :
 Even now have I begotten a strange wonder,
 That fatal child, the terror of the earth,
 Who waits but till the destined hour arrive,
 Bearing from Demogorgon's vacant throne
 The dreadful might of ever-living limbs
 Which clothed that awful spirit unbeheld,
 To redescend, and trample out the spark.
 Pour forth heaven's wine, Idæan Ganymede,
 And let it fill the Daedal cups like fire,
 And from the flower-inwoven soil divine,
 Ye all-triumphant harmonies arise,
 As dew from earth under the twilight stars :
 Drink ! be the nectar circling through your veins
 The soul of joy, ye ever-living Gods,
 Till exultation burst in one wide voice
 Like music from Elysian winds.

And thou
 Ascend beside me, veiled in the light
 Of the desire which makes thee one with me,
 Thetis, bright image of eternity !
 When thou didst cry, "Insufferable might !
 God ! Spare me ! I sustain not the quick flames,
 The penetrating presence ; all my being,
 Like him whom the Numidian seps did thaw

Into a dew with poison, is dissolved,
 Sinking through its foundations :" even then
 Two mighty spirits, mingling made a third
 Mightier than either, which, unbodied now,
 Between us floats, felt, although unbeloved,
 Waiting the incarnation, which ascends,
 (Hear ye the thunder of the fiery wheels
 Griding the winds?) from Demogorgon's throne.
 Victory ! victory ! Feblest thou not, O world !
 The earthquake of his chariot thundering up
 Olympus ?

[The Car of the Hour arrives. DEMOGORGON descends and moves towards the Throne of JUPITER.

Awful shape, what art thou ? Speak !

Demogorgon. Eternity. Demand no direr name.
 Descend, and follow me down the abyss.
 I am thy child, as thou wert Saturn's child ;
 Mightier than thee : and we must dwell together
 Henceforth in darkness. Lift thy lightnings not.
 The tyranny of heaven none may retain,
 Or reassume, or hold, succeeding thee :
 Yet if thou wilt, as 'tis the destiny
 Of trodden worms to writhe till they are dead,
 Put forth thy might.

Jupiter. Detested prodigy !
 Even thus beneath the deep Titanian prisons
 I trample thee ! Thou lingerest ?

Mercy ! mercy !

No pity, no release, no respite ! Oh,
 That thou wouldest make mine enemy my judge,
 Even where he hangs, scared by my long revenge,
 On Caucasus ! he would not doom me thus.
 Gentle, and just, and dreadless, is he not
 The monarch of the world ? What then art thou ?
 No refuge ! no appeal !

Sink with me then,
 We two will sink on the wide waves of ruin,
 Even as a vulture and a snake outspent
 Drop, twisted in inextricable fight,
 Into a shoreless sea. Let hell unlock
 Its mounded oceans of tempestuous fire,
 Andwhelm on them into the bottomless void
 This desolated world, and thee, and me,
 The conqueror and the conquered, and the wreck
 Of that for which they combated.

Ai ! Ai !

The elements obey me not. I sink
 Dizzily down, ever, for ever, down.
 And, like a cloud, mine enemy above
 Darkens my fall with victory ! Ai, Ai !

SCENE II.—*The Mouth of a great River in the Island Atlantis.
OCEAN is discovered reclining near the Shore ; APOLLO stands beside him.

Ocean. He fell, thou sayest, beneath his conqueror's frown ?

Apollo. Ay, when the strife was ended which made dim
 The orb I rule, and shook the solid stars,
 The terrors of his eye illumined heaven
 With sanguine light, through the thick ragged skirts
 Of the victorious darkness, as he fell :
 Like the last glare of day's red agony,
 Which, from a rent among the fiery clouds,
 Burns far along the tempest-wrinkled deep.

Ocean. He sunk to the abyss ! To the dark void ?

Apollo. An eagle so caught in some bursting cloud
 On Caucasus, his thunder-baffled wings
 Entangled in the whirlwind, and his eyes
 Which gazed on the undazzling sun, now blinded
 By the white lightning, while the ponderous hail
 Beats on his struggling form, which sinks at length
 Prone, and the aerial ice clings over it.

Ocean. Henceforth the fields of Heaven-reflecting sea
 Which are my realm, will heave, unstained with blood,
 Beneath the uplifting winds, like plains of corn
 Swayed by the summer air ; my streams will flow
 Round many peopled continents, and round
 Fortunate isles ; and from their glassy thrones
 Blue Proteus and his humid nymphs shall mark
 The shadow of fair ships, as mortals see
 The floating bark of the light laden moon
 With that white star, its sightless pilot's crest,
 Borne down the rapid sunset's ebbing sea :
 Tracking their path no more by blood and groans,
 And desolation, and the mingled voice
 Of slavery and command ; but by the light
 Of wave-reflectèd flowers, and floating odours,
 And music soft, and mild, free, gentle voices,
 That sweetest music, such as spirits love.

Apollo. And I shall gaze not on the deeds which make My mind obscure with sorrow, as eclipse
 Darkens the sphere I guide ; but list, I hear
 The small, clear, silver lute of the young Spirit
 That sits i' the morning star.

Ocean. Thou must away ;
 Thy steeds will pause at even, till when farewell :
 The loud deep calls me home even now to feed it

With azure calm out of the emerald urns
 Which stand for ever full beside my throne.
 Behold the Nereids under the green sea,
 Their wavering limbs borne on the wind-like stream,
 Their white arms lifted o'er their streaming hair
 With garlands pied and starry sea-flower crowns,
 Hastening to grace their mighty sister's joy.

[A sound of waves is heard.

It is the unpastured sea hungering for calm.

Peace, monster; I come now. Farewell.

Apollo.

Farewell.

SCENE III.—Caucasus. PROMETHEUS, HERCULES, IONE, the EARTH, SPIRITS, ASIA, and PANTHEA, borne in the Car with the SPIRIT OF THE HOUR.

HERCULES unbinds PROMETHEUS, who descends.

Hercules. Most glorious among spirits! thus doth strength
 To wisdom, courage, and long-suffering love,
 And thee, who art the form they animate,
 Minister like a slave.

Prometheus. Thy gentle words
 Are sweeter even than freedom long desired
 And long delayed.

Asia, thou light of life,
 Shadow of beauty unheld; and ye,
 Fair sister nymphs who made long years of pain
 Sweet to remember, through your love and care;
 Henceforth we will not part. There is a cave
 All overgrown with trailing odorous plants,
 Which curtain out the day with leaves and flowers,
 And paved with veined emerald, and a fountain,
 Leaps in the midst with an awakening sound.
 From its curved roof the mountain's frozen tears,
 Like snow, or silver, or long diamond spires,
 Hang downward, raining forth a doubtful light;
 And there is heard the ever-moving air,
 Whispering without from tree to tree, and birds,
 And bees; and all around are mossy seats,
 And the rough walls are clothed with long soft grass;
 A simple dwelling, which shall be our own;
 Where we will sit and talk of time and change,
 As the world ebbs and flows, ourselves unchanged.
 What can hide man from mutability?
 And if ye sigh, then I will smile; and thou,
 Lone, shall chant fragments of sea-music,
 Until I weep, when ye shall smile away
 The tears she brought, which yet were sweet to shed.

We will entangle buds and flowers and beams
 Which twinkle on the fountain's brim, and make
 Strange combinations out of common things,
 Like human babes in their brief innocence;
 And we will search with looks and words of love,
 For hidden thoughts, each lovelier than the last,
 Our unexhausted spirits; and like lutes
 Touched by the skill of the enamoured wind,
 Weave harmonies divine, yet ever new,
 From difference sweet where discord cannot be;
 And hither come, sped on the charmed winds,
 Which meet from all the points of heaven, as bees
 From every flower aerial Enna feeds,
 At their own island-homes in Himera,
 The echoes of the human world which tell
 Of the low voice of love, almost unheard,
 And dove-eyed pity's murmured pain, and music,
 Itself the echo of the heart, and all
 That tempers or improves man's life, now free;
 And lovely apparitions, dim at first,
 Then radiant as the mind, arising bright
 From the embrace of beauty, whence the forms
 Of which these are the phantoms, casts on them
 The gathered rays which are reality,
 Shall visit us, the progeny immortal
 Of Painting, Sculpture, and rapt Poesy,
 And arts, though unimagined, yet to be.
 The wandering voices and the shadows these
 Of all that man becomes, the mediators
 Of that best worship, love, by him and us
 Given and returned; swift shapes and sounds, which grow
 More fair and soft as man grows wise and kind,
 And veil by veil, evil and error fall:
 Such virtue has the cave and place around.

[Turning to the SPIRIT OF THE HOUR

For thee, fair Spirit, one toil remains. Ione,
 Give her that curved shell, which Proteus old,
 Made Asia's nuptial boon, breathing within it
 A voice to be accomplished, and which thou
 Didst hide in grass under the hollow rock.

Ione. Thou most desired Hour, more loved and lovely
 Than all thy sisters, this the mystic shell;
 See the pale azure fading into silver
 Lining it with a soft yet glowing light:
 Looks it not like lulled music sleeping there?

Spirit. It seems in truth the fairest shell of Ocean;
 Its sound must be at once both sweet and strange.

Prometheus. Go, borne over the cities of mankind
 On whirlwind-footed coursers: once again
 Outspeed the sun around the orb'd world;

And as thy chariot cleaves the kindling air,
 Thou breathe into the many-folded shell,
 Loosening its mighty music ; it shall be
 As thunder mingled with clear echoes : then
 Return : and thou shalt dwell beside our cave.

And thou, O Mother Earth !—

The Earth. I hear, I feel ;
 Thy lips are on me, and thy touch runs down
 Even to the adamantine central gloom
 Along these marble nerves ; 'tis life, 'tis joy,
 And, through my withered, old, and icy frame
 The warmth of an immortal youth shoots down
 Circling. Henceforth the many children fair
 Folded in my sustaining arms ; all plants,
 And creeping forms, and insects rainbow-winged,
 And birds, and beasts, and fish, and human shapes,
 Which drew disease and pain from my wan bosom,
 Draining the poison of despair, shall take
 And interchange sweet nutriment ; to me
 Shall they become like sister-antelopes
 By one fair dam, snow-white and swift as wind,
 Nursed among lilies near a brimming stream.
 The dew-mists of my sunless sleep shall float
 Under the stars like balm : night-folded flowers
 Shall suck unwithering hues in their repose :
 And men and beasts in happy dreams shall gather
 Strength for the coming day, and all its joy :
 And death shall be the last embrace of her
 Who takes the life she gave, even as a mother,
 Folding her child, says, "Leave me not again."

Asia. Oh, mother ! wherefore speak the name of death !
 Cease they to love, and move, and breathe, and speak,
 Who die ?

The Earth. It would avail not to reply :
 Thou art immortal, and this tongue is known
 But to the uncommunicating dead.
 Death is the veil which those who live call life :
 They sleep, and it is lifted : and meanwhile
 In mild variety the seasons mild
 With rainbow-skirted showers, and odorous winds,
 And long blue meteors cleansing the dull night,
 And the life-kindling shafts of the keen sun's
 All-piercing bow, and the dew-mingled rain
 Of the calm moonbeams, a soft influence mild,
 Shall clothe the forests and the fields, ay, even
 The crag-built deserts of the barren leep,
 With ever-living leaves, and fruits, and flowers.
 And thou ! There is a cavern where my spirit
 Was panted forth in anguish whilst thy pain

Made my heart mad, and those that did inhale it
 Became mad too, and built a temple there,
 And spoke, and were oracular, and lured
 The erring nations round to mutual war,
 And faithless faith, such as Jove kept with thee ;
 Which breath now rises, as amongst tall weeds
 A violet's exhalation, and it fills
 With a serener light and crimson air
 Intense, yet soft, the rocks and woods around ;
 It feeds the quick growth of the serpent vine,
 And the dark linked ivy tangling wild,
 And budding, blown, or odour-faded blooms
 Which star the winds with points of coloured light,
 As they rain through them, and bright golden globes
 Of fruit, suspended in their own green heaven,
 And through their veined leaves and amber stems
 The flowers whose purple and translucent bowls
 Stand ever mantling with aerial dew,
 The drink of spirits ; and it circles round,
 Like the soft waving wings of noonday dreams,
 Inspiring calm and happy thoughts like mine,
 Now thou art thus restored. This cave is thine.
 Arise ! Appear !

[A SPIRIT rises in the likeness of a winged ch
 This is my torch-bearer ;

Who let his lamp out in old time with gazing
 On eyes from which he kindled it anew
 With love, which is as fire, sweet daughter mine,
 For such is that within thine own. Run, wayward,
 And guide this company beyond the peak
 Of Bacchic Nysa, Menad-haunted mountain,
 And beyond Indus and its tribute rivers,
 Trampling the torrent streams and glassy lakes
 With feet unwet, unweared, undelaying,
 And up the green ravine, across the vale,
 Beside the windless and crystalline pool,
 Where ever lies, on unerasing waves,
 The image of a temple built above,
 Distinct with column, arch, and architrave,
 And palm-like capital, and over-wrought,
 And populous most with living imagery,
 Praxitelean shapes, whose marble smiles
 Fill the hushed air with everlasting love.
 It is deserted now, but once it bore
 Thy name, Prometheus; thero the emulous youths
 Bore to thy honour through the divine gloom
 The lamp which was thine emblem; even as those
 Who bear the untransmitted torch of hope
 Into the grave, across the night of life,
 As thou hast borne it most triumphantly

To this far goal of Time. Depart, farewell.
Beside that temple is the destined cave.

SCENE IV.—A Forest. In the Back-ground a Cave. PROMETHEUS, ASIA, PANTHEA, IONE, and the SPIRIT OF THE EARTH.

Ione. Sister, it is not earthly : how it glides
Under the leaves ! how on its head there burns
A light, like a green star, whose emerald beams
Are twined with its fair hair ! how, as it moves,
The splendour drops in flakes upon the grass !
Knowest thou it ?

Panthea. It is the delicate spirit
That guides the earth through heaven. From afar
The populous constellations call that light
The loveliest of the planets ; and sometimes
It floats along the spray of the salt sea,
Or makes its chariot of a foggy cloud,
Or walks through fields or cities while men sleep,
Or o'er the mountain tops, or down the rivers,
Or through the green waste wilderness, as now,
Wondering at all it sees. Before Jove reigned
It loved our sister Asia, and it came
Each leisure hour to drink the liquid light
Out of her eyes, for which it said it thirsted
As one bit by a dipsas, and with her
It made its childish confidence, and told her
All it had known or seen, for it saw much,
Yet idly reasoned what it saw ; and called her,
For whence it sprung it knew not, nor do I,
Mother, dear mother.

The Spirit of the Earth (running to Asia). Mother, dearest
May I then talk with thee as I was wont ? [mother ;
May I then hide my eyes in thy soft arms,
After thy looks have made them tired of joy ?
May I then play beside thee the long noons,
When work is none in the bright silent air ?

Asia. I love thee, gentlest being ! and henceforth
Can cherish thee unenvied. Speak, I pray,
Thy simple talk once solaced, now delights.

Spirit of the Earth. Mother, I am grown wiser, though child
Cannot be wise like thee, within this day ;
And happier too ; happier and wiser both.
Thou knowest that toads, and snakes, and loathly worms,
And venomous and malicious beasts, a id boughs
That bore ill berries in the woods, were ever
A hindrance to my walks o'er the green world :
And that, among the haunts of humankind,

Hard-featured men, or with proud, angry looks,
Or cold, staid gait, or false and hollow smiles,
Or the dull sneer of self-loved ignorance,
Or other such foul masks, with which ill thoughts
Hide that fair being whom we spirits call man ;
And women too, ugliest of all things evil,
(Though fair, even in a world where thou art fair,
When good and kind, free and sincere like thee),
When false or frowning made me sick at heart
To pass them, though they slept, and I unseen.
Well, my path lately lay through a great city
Into the woody hills surrounding it :
A sentinel was sleeping at the gate :
When there was heard a sound, so loud, it shook
The towers amid the moonlight, yet more sweet
Than any voice but thine, sweetest of all ;
A long, long sound, as it would never end :
And all the inhabitants leapt suddenly
Out of their rest, and gathered in the streets,
Looking in wonder up to Heaven, while yet
The music pealed along. I hid myself
Within a fountain in the public square,
Where I lay like the reflex of the moon
Seen in a wave under green leaves ; and soon
Those ugly human shapes and visages
Of which I spoke as having wrought me pain,
Past floating through the air, and fading still
Into the winds that scattered them ; and those
From whom they past seemed mild and lovely forms
After some foul disguise had fallen, and all
Were somewhat changed, and after brief surprise
And greetings of delighted wonder, all
Went to their sleep again : and when the dawn
Came, wouldst thou think that toads, and snakes, and efts
Could e'er be beautiful ? yet so they were,
And that with little change of shape or hue ;
All things had put their evil nature off :
I cannot tell my joy, when o'er a iake
Upon a drooping bough with nightshade twined,
I saw two azure haleyonis clinging downward
And thinning one bright bunch of amber berries,
With quick long beaks, and in the deep there lay
Those lovely forms imaged as in a sky ;
So with my thoughts full of these happy changes,
We meet again, the happiest change of all.

Asia. And never will we part, till thy chaste sister,
Who guides the frozen and inconstant moon,
Will look on thy more warm and equal light
Till her heart thaw like flakes of April snow,
And love thee.

Spirit of the Earth. What ! as Asia loves Prometheus ?

Asia. Peace, wanton ! thou art yet not old enough.

Think ye by gazing on each other's eyes

To multiply your lovely selves, and fill

With sphered fires the interlunar air ?

Spirit of the Earth. Nay, mother, while my sister trims her lamp

'Tis hard I should go darkling.

Asia. Listen ; look !

[The SPIRIT OF THE HOUR enters.

Prometheus. We feel what thou hast heard and seen : yet speak.

Spirit of the Hour. Soon as the sound had ceased whose thunder filled

The abysses of the sky and the wide earth,
There was a change : the impalpable thin air
And the all-circling sunlight were transformed,
As if the sense of love, dissolved in them,
Had folded itself round the sphered world.
My vision then grew clear, and I could see
Into the mysteries of the universe :
Dizzy as with delight I floated down,
Winnowing the lightsome air with languid plumes,
My coursers sought their birth-place in the sun,
Where they henceforth will live exempt from toil,
Pasturing flowers of vegetable fire.

And where my moonlike car will stand within
A temple, gazed upon by Phidian forms
Of thee, and Asia, and the Earth, and me,
And you fair nymphs, looking the love we feel ;
In memory of the tidings it has borne ;
Beneath a dome fretted with graven flowers,
Poised on twelve columns of resplendent stone,
And open to the bright and liquid sky.

Yoked to it by an amphisbenic snake
The likeness of those winged steeds will mock
The flight from which they find repose. Alas,
Whither has wandered now my partial tongue
When all remains untold which ye would hear ?

As I have said, I floated to the earth :

It was, as it is still, the pain of bliss
To move, to breathe, to be ; I wandering went
Among the haunts and dwellings of mankind,
And first was disappointed not to see
Such mighty change, as I had felt within,
Expressed in outward things ; but soon I looked,
And behold, thrones were kingless, and men walked
One with the other even as spirits do,
None fawned, none trampled ; hate, disdain, or fear,
Self-love or self-contempt, on human brows

No more inscribed, as o'er the gate of hell,
 " All hope abandon ye who enter here ; "
 None frown'd, none trembled, none with eager fear
 Gazed on another's eye of cold command,
 Until the subject of a tyrant's will
 Became, worse fato, the abject of his own,
 Which spurred him, like an outspent horse, to death.
 None wrought his lips in truth-entangling lines
 Which smiled the lie his tongue disdained to speak ;
 None, with firm sneer, trod out in his own heart
 The sparks of love and hope till there remained
 Those bitter ashes, a soul self-consumed,
 And the wretch crept a vampire among men,
 Infecting all with his own hideous ill ;
 None talked that common, false, cold, hollow talk
 Which makes the heart deny the yes it breathes,
 Yet question that unmeant hypocrisy
 With such a self-mistrust as has no name.
 And women, too, frank, beautiful, and kind
 As the free heaven which rains fresh light and dew
 On the wide earth, past ; gentle radiant forms,
 From custom's evil taint exempt and pure ;
 Speaking the wisdom once they could not think,
 Looking emotions once they feared to feel,
 And changed to all which once they dared not be.
 Yet being now, made earth like heaven ; nor pride,
 Nor jealousy, nor envy, nor ill-shame,
 The bitterest of those drops of treasured gall,
 Spoilt the sweet taste of the nepenthe, love.

Thrones, altars, judgment seats, and prisons ; wherein,
 And beside which, by wretched men were borne
 Sceptres, tiaras, swords, and chains, and tomes
 Of reasoned wrong, glazed on by ignorance,
 Were like those monstrous and barbaric shapes,
 The ghosts of a no more remembered fane,
 Which, from their unworn obelisks, look forth
 In triumph o'er the palaces and tombs
 Of those who were their conquerors : mouldering round
 Those imaged to the pride of kings and priests,
 A dark yet mighty faith, a power as wide
 As is the world it wasted, and are now
 But an astonishment ; even so the tools
 And emblems of its last captivity,
 Amid the dwellings of the peopled earth,
 Stand, not o'erthrown, but unregarded now.
 And those foul shapes, abhorred by god and man,
 Which, under many a name and many a form,
 Strange, savage, ghastly, dark, and execrable,
 Were Jupiter, the tyrant of the world ;

And which the nations, panic-stricken, served
 With blood, and hearts broken by long hope, and love
 Dragged to his altars soiled and garlandless,
 And slain among men's unreclaiming tears,
 Flattering the thing they feared, which fear was hate,
 Frown, mouldering fast, o'er their abandoned shrines:
 The painted veil, by those who were, called life,
 Which mimick'd, as with colours idly spread,
 All men believed and hoped, is torn aside;
 The loathsome mask has fallen, the man remains
 Sceptreless, free, uncircumscribed, but man
 Equal, unclassed, tribeless, and nationless,
 Exempt from awe, worship, degree, the king
 Over himself; just, gentle, wise: but man
 Passionless; no, yet free from guilt or pain,
 Which were, for his will made or suffered them,
 Nor yet exempt, though ruling them like slaves,
 From chance, and death, and mutability,
 The clogs of that which else might oversoar
 The loftiest star of unascended heaven,
 Pinnacled dim in the intense inane.

ACT IV.

SCENE.—A part of the Forest near the Cave of PROMETHEUS. PANTHEA and IONE are sleeping: they awaken gradually during the first Song.

VOICE OF UNSEEN SPIRITS.

The pale stars are gone!
 For the sun, their swift shepherd,
 To their folds them compelling,
 In the depths of the dawn,
 Hastes, in meteor-eclipsing array, and they flee
 Beyond his blue dwelling,
 As fawns flee the leopard,
 But where are ye?

A train of dark Forms and Shadings pass by confusedly singing.
 Here, oh! here:
 We bear the bier
 Of the Father of many a cancelled year!
 Spectres we
 Of the dead Hours be,
 We bear Time to his tomb in eternity.

Strew, oh! strew
 Hair, not yew!

Wet the dusty pall with tears, not dew !
 Be the faded flowers
 Of Death's bare bowers
 Spread on the corpse of the King of Hours !
 Haste, oh, haste !
 As shades are chased,
 Trembling, by day, from heaven's blue waste.
 We melt away,
 Like dissolving spray,
 From the children of a diviner day,
 With the lullaby
 Of winds that die
 On the bosom of their own harmony !

IONE.

What dark forms were they ?

PANTHEA.

The past Hours weak and grey,
 With the spoil which their toil
 Raked together
 From the conquest but One could foil.

IONE.

Have they past ?

PANTHEA.

They have past ;
 They outspeeded the blast,
 While 'tis said, they are fled :

IONE.

Whither, oh ! whither ?

PANTHEA.

To the dark, to the past, to the dead.

VOICE OF UNSEEN SPIRITS.

Bright clouds float in heaven,
 Dew-stars gleam on earth,
 Waves assemble on ocean,
 They are gathered and driven
 By the storm of delight, by the panic of glee !
 They shake with emotion,
 They dance in their mirth.
 But where are ye ?

The pine boughs are singing
 Old songs with new gladness,
 The billows and fountains
 Fresh music are flinging,
 Like the notes of a spirit from land and from sea ;
 The storms mock the mountains
 With the thunder of gladness
 But where are ye ?

Ione. What charioeers are these ?

Panthea. Where are their chariots ?

SEMICHORUS OF HOURS.

The voice of the Spirits of Air and of Earth
Have drawn back the figured curtain of sleep,
Which covered our being and darkened our birth
In the deep.

A VOICE.
In the deep?

SEMICHORUS II.

Oh! below the deep.

SEMICHORUS I.

A hundred ages we had been kept
Cradled in visions of hate and care,
And each one who waked as his brother slept,
Found the truth—

SEMICHORUS II.
Worse than his visions were!

SEMICHORUS I.

We have heard the lute of Hope in sleep;
We have known the voice of Love in dreams,
We have felt the wand of Power, and leap—

SEMICHORUS II.
As the billows leap in the morning beams.

CHORUS.

Weave the dance on the floor of the breeze,
Pierce with song heaven's silent light,
Enchant the day that too swiftly flies,
To check its flight ere the cave of night.

Once the hungry Hours were hounds
Which chased the day like a bleeding deer,
And it limped and stumbled with many wounds
Through the nightly dells of the desert year.

But now, oh! weave the mystic measure
Of music, and dance, and shapes of light,
Let the Hours, and the spirits of might and pleasure,
Like the clouds and sunbeams, unite.

A VOICE.
Unite.

Panthena. See, where the Spirits of the human mind
Wrapt in sweet sounds, as in bright veils, approach.

CHORUS OF SPIRITS.

We join the throng
Of the dance and the song,
By the whirlwind of gladness borne along;
As the flying-fish leap
From the Indian deep,
And mix with the sea-birds half-asleep.

CHORUS OF HORNS.

Whence come ye, so wild and so fleet,
For sandals of lightning are on your feet,

And your wings are soft and swift as thought,
And your eyes are as love which is veiled not?

CHORUS OF SPIRITS.

We come from the mind
Of human kind,
Which was late so dusk, and obscene, and blind :
Now, 'tis an ocean
Of clear emotion,
A heaven of serene and mighty motion.

From that deep abyss
Of wonder and bliss,
Whose caverns are crystal palaces ;
From those skyey towers
Where Thought's crowned powers
Sit watching your dance, ye happy Hours !

From the dim recesses
Of woven caresses,
Where lovers catch ye by your loose tresses ;
From the azure isles,
Where sweet Wisdom smiles,
Delaying your ships with her syren wiles.

From the temples high
Of man's ear and eye,
Roofed over Sculpture and Poesy ;
From the murmurings
Of the unsealed springs
Where Science bedews his Dædal wings.

Years after years,
Through blood, and tears,
And a thick hell of hatreds, and hopes, and fears :
We waded and flew,
And the islets were few
Where the bud-blighted flowers of happiness grew.

Our feet now, every palm,
Are sandalled with calm,
And the dew of our wings is a rain of balm ;
And, beyond our eyes,
The human love lies,
Which makes all it gazes on, Paradise.

CHORUS OF SPIRITS AND HOURS.

Then weave the web of the mystic measure ;
From the depths of the sky and the ends of the earth,
Come, swift Spirits of might and of pleasure,
Fill the dance and the music of mirth,

As the waves of a thousand streams rush by
To an ocean of splendour and harmony !

CHORUS OF SPIRITS.

Our spoil is won,
Our task is done,
We are free to dive, or soar, or run ;
Beyond and around,
Or within the bound
Which clips the world with darkness round,

We'll pass the eyes
Of the starry skies
Into the hoar deep to colonise :
Death, Chaos, and Night,
From the sound of our flight,
Shall flee, like mist from a tempest's might.

And Earth, Air, and Light,
And the Spirit of Might,
Which drives round the stars in their fiery flight
And Love, Thought, and Breath,
The powers that quell Death,
Wherever we soar shall assemble beneath.

And our singing shall build
In the void's loose field
A world for the Spirit of Wisdom to wield ;
We will take our plan
From the new world of man
And our work shall be called the Promethean..

CHORUS OF Hours.

Break the dance, and scatter the song ;
Let some depart, and some remain.

SEMICHORUS I.
We, beyond heaven, are driven along :

SEMICHORUS II.
Us the enchantments of earth retain :

SEMICHORUS I.
Ceaseless, and rapid, and fierce, and free,
With the Spirits which build a new earth and sea
And a heaven where yet heaven could never be.

SEMICHORUS II.
Solemn, and slow, and serene, and bright,
Leading the Day, and outspeeding the Night,
With the powers of a world of perfect light.

SEMICHORUS I.
We whirl, singing loud, round the gathering sphere,
Till the trees, and the beasts, and the clouds appear
From its chaos made calm by love, not fear.

SEMICHORUS II.

We encircle the ocean and mountains of earth,
And the happy forms of its death and birth
Change to the music of our sweet mirth.

CHORUS OF Hours AND SPIRITS.

Break the dance, and scatter the song,
Let some depart and some remain,
Wherever we fly we lead along
In leashes, like star-beams, soft, yet strong,
The clouds that are heavy with love's sweet rain.

Panthea. Ha ! they are gone !

Ione. Yet feel you no delight
From the past sweetness ?

Panthea. As the bare green hill
When some soft cloud vanishes into rain,
Laughs with a thousand drops of sunny water
To the unpavilioned sky !

Ione. Even whilst we speak
New notes arise. What is that awful sound ?

Panthea. 'Tis the deep music of the rolling world,
Kindling within the strings of the waved air
Æolian modulations.

Ione. Listen too,
How every pause is filled with under-notes,
Clear, silver, icy, keen awakening tones,
Which pierce the sense, and live within the soul,
As the sharp stars pierce winter's crystal air
And gaze upon themselves within the sea.

Panthea. But see where, through two openings in the forest
Which hanging branches overcanopy,
And where two runnels of a rivulet,
Between the close moss, violet inwoven,
Have made their path of melody, like sisters
Who part with sighs that they may meet in smiles,
Turning their dear disunion to an isle
Of lovely grief, a wood of sweet sad thoughts ;
Two visions of strange radiance float upon
The ocean-like enchantment of strong sound,
Which flows intenser, keener, deeper yet
Under the ground and through the windless air.

Ione. I see a chariot like that thinnest boat
In which the mother of the months is borne
By ebbing night into her western cave,
When she upsprings from interlunar dreams,
O'er which is curved an orblike canopy
Of gentle darkness, and the hills and woods
Distinctly seen through that dusk airy veil,
Regard like shapes in an enchanter's glass.
Its wheels are solid clouds, azure and gold,
Such as the genii of the thunder-storm

Pile on the floor of the illumined sea
 When the sun rushes under it ; they roll
 And move and grow as with an inward wind ;
 Within it sits a winged infant, white
 Its countenance, like the whiteness of bright snow,
 Its plumes are as feathers of sunny frost,
 Its limbs gleam white, through the wind-flowing folds
 Of its white robe, woof of aetherial pearl.
 Its hair is white, the brightness of white light
 Scattered in strings ; yet its two eyes are heavens
 Of liquid darkness, which the Deity
 Within seems pouring, as a storm is poured
 From jagged clouds, out of their arrowy lashes,
 Tempering the cold and radiant air around,
 With fire that is not brightness ; in its hand
 It sways a quivering moon-beam, from whose point
 A guiding power directs the chariot's prow
 Over its wheeled clouds, which as they roll
 Over the grass, and flowers, and waves, wake sounds,
 Sweet as a singing rain of silver dew.

Panthea. And from the other opening in the wood
 Rushes, with loud and whirlwind harmony,
 A sphere, which is as many thousand spheres,
 Solid as crystal, yet through all its mass
 Flow, as through empty space, music and light :
 Ten thousand orbs involving and involved,
 Purple and azure, white, green and golden,
 Sphere within sphere ; and every space between Peopled with unimaginable shapes,
 Such as ghosts dream dwell in the lampless deep,
 Yet each inter-transpicuous, and they whirl
 Over each other with a thousand motions,
 Upon a thousand sightless axles spinning,
 And with the force of self-destroying swiftness,
 Intensely, slowly, solemnly, roll on,
 Kindling with mingled sounds, and many tones,
 Intelligible words and music wild.
 With mighty whirl the multitudinous orb
 Grinds the bright brook into an azure mist
 Of elemental subtlety, like light ;
 And the wild odour of the forest flowers,
 The music of the living grass and air,
 The emerald light of leaf-entangled beams
 Round its intense yet self-conflicting speed,
 Seem kneaded into one aerial mass
 Which drowns the sense. Within the orb itself,
 Pillowed upon its alabaster arms,
 Like to a child o'erwearied with sweet toil,
 On its own folded wings, and wavy hair,
 The Spirit of the Earth is laid asleep,

And you can see its little lips are moving,
Amid the changing light of their own smiles,
Like one who talks of what he loves in dream.

Jone. 'Tis only mocking the orb's harmony.

Panthea. And from a star upon its forehead, shoot,
Like swords of azure fire, or golden spears
With tyrant-quelling myrtle overtwined,
Embleming heaven and earth united now,
Vast beams like spokes of some invisible wheel
Which whirl as the orb whirls, swifter than thought,
Filling the abyss with sun-like lightnings,
And perpendicular now, and now transverse,
Pierce the dark soil, and as they pierce and pass,
Make bare the secrets of the earth's deep heart ;
Infinite mine of adamant and gold,
Valueless stones and unimagined gems,
And caverus on crystalline columns poised
With vegetable silver overspread ;
Wells of unfathomed fire, and water-springs
Whence the great sea, even as a child is fed,
Whose vapours clothe the earth's monarch-mountain tops
With kingly, ermine snow. The beams flash on
And make appear the melancholy ruins
Of cancelled cycles; anchors, beaks of ships :
Planks turned to marble ; quivers, helms, and spears,
And gorgon-headed targes, and the wheels
Of scythed chariots, and the emblazonry
Of trophies, standards, and arnorial beasts,
Round which death laughed, sepulchred emblems
Of dead destruction, ruin within ruin !
The wrecks beside of many a city vast,
Whose population which the earth grew over
Was mortal, but not human ; see, they lie
Their monstrous works, and uncouth skeletons,
Their statues, homes and faunes ; prodigious shapes
Huddled in grey annihilation, split,
Jammed in the hard, black deep : and over these,
The anatomies of unknown winged things,
And fishes which were isles of living scale,
And serpents, bony chains, twisted around
The iron crags, or within heaps of dust
To which the tortuous strength of their last pangs
Had crushed the iron crags ; and over these
The jagged alligator, and the might
Of earth-convulsing behemoth, which once
Were monarch beasts, and on the slimy shores,
And weed-overgrown continents of earth,
Increased and multiplied like summer worms
On an abandoned corpse, til the blue globe
Wrapt delugo round it like a cloke, and they

Yelled, gasped, and were abolished ; or some God
Whose throne was in a comet, past, and cried,
Be not ! And like my words they were no more.

THE EARTH.

The joy, the triumph, the delight, the madness !
The boundless, overflowing, bursting gladness,
The vaporous exultation not to be confined !

Ha ! ha ! the animation of delight
Which wraps me, like an atmosphere of light,
And bears me as a cloud is borne by its own wind.

THE MOON.

Brother mine, calm wanderer,
Happy globe of land and air,
Some spirit is darted like a beam from thee,
Which penetrates my frozen frame,
And passes with the warmth of flame,
With love, and odour, and deep melody
Through me, through me !

THE EARTH.

Ha ! ha ! the caverns of my hollow mountains,
My cloven fire-crags, sound-exulting fountains,
Laugh with a vast and inextinguishable laughter.
The oceans, and the deserts, and the abysses,
And the deep air's unmeasured wildernesses,
Answer from all their clouds and billows, echoing after.

They cry aloud as I do. Sceptred curse,
Who all our green and azure universe
Threatenedst to muffle round with black destruction, sending
A solid cloud to rain hot thunder-stones,
And splinter and knead down my children's bones,
All I bring forth, to one void mass battering and blending.

Until each crag-like tower, and storied column,
Palace, and obelisk, and temple solemn,
My imperial mountains crowned with cloud, and snow, and fire
My sea-like forests, every blade and blossom
Which finds a grave or cradle in my bosom,
Were stamped by thy strong hate into a lifeless mire.

How art thou sunk, withdrawn, covered, drunk up
By thirsty nothing, as the brackish cup
Drained by a desert-troop, a little drop for all ;
And from beneath, around, within, above,
Filling thy void annihilation, love
Bursts in like light on caves cloven by the thunder-ball.

THE MOON.

The snow upon my lifeless mountains
Is loosened into living fountains,

My solid oceans flow, and sing, and shine :
 A spirit from my heart bursts forth,
 It clothes with unexpected birth
 My cold bare bosom : Oh ! it must be thine
 On mine, on mine !

Gazing on thee I feel, I know,
 Green stalks burst forth, and bright flowers grow,
 And living shapes upon my bosom move :
 Music is in the sea and air,
 Winged clouds soar here and there,
 Dark with the rain new buds are dreaming of :
 "Tis love, all love !

THE EARTH.

It interpenetrates my granite mass,
 Through tangled roots and trodden clay doth pass,
 Into the utmost leaves and delicatest flowers ;
 Upon the wind's, among the clouds 'tis spread,
 It wakes a life in the forgotten dead,
 They breathe a spirit up from their obscurest bowers.
 And like a storm bursting its cloudy prison
 With thunder, and with whirlwind, has arisen
 Out of the lumpless caves of unimagined being :
 With earthquake shock and swiftness making shiver
 Thought's steguant chaos, unremoved for ever,
 Till hate, and fear, and pain, light-vanquished shadows, fleeing,

Leave Man, who was a many-sided mirror,
 Which could distort to many a shape of error,
 This true fair world of things, a sea reflecting love ;
 Which over all his kind, as the sun's heaven
 Gliding o'er ocean, smooth, serene, and even Darting from starry depths radiance and light, doth move,

Leave Man, even as a leprous child is left,
 Who follows a sick beast to some warm cleft
 Of rocks, through which the might of healing springs is poured ;
 Then when it wanders home with rosy smile,
 Unconscious, and its mother fears awhile
 It is a spirit, then, weeps on her child restored.

Man, oh, not men ! a chain of linked thought,
 Of love and might to be divided not,
 Compelling the elements with adamantine stress ;
 As the sun rules, even with a tyrant's gaze,
 The unquiet republic of the maze
 Of planets, struggling fierce towards heaven's free wilderness.

Man, one harmonious soul of many a soul,
 Whose nature is its own divine control, .

Where all things flow to all, as rivers to the sea ;
 Familiar acts are beautiful through love ;
 Labour, and pain, and grief, in life's green grove
 Sport like tame beasts, none knew how gentle they could be !

His will, with all mean passions, bad delights,
 And selfish cares, its trembling satellites,
 A spirit ill to guide, but mighty to obey,
 Is as a tempest-winged ship, whose helm
 Love rules, through waves which dare not overwhelm,
 Forcing life's wildest shores to own its sovereign sway.

All things confess his strength. Through the cold mass
 Of marble and of colour his dreams pass ;
 Bright threads whence mothers weave the robes their children wear ;
 Language is a perpetual Orphic song,
 Which rules with Daedal harmony a throng
 Of thoughts and forms, which else senseless and shapeless were.

The lightning is his slave ; heaven's utmost deep
 Gives up her stars, and like a flock of sheep
 They pass before his eye, are numbered, and roll on !
 The tempest is his steed, he strides the air ;
 And the abyss shouts from her depth laid bare,
 Heaven, hast thou secrets ? Man unveils me ; I have none.

THE MOON.

The shadow of white death has past
 From my path in heaven at last,
 A clinging shroud of solid frost and sleep ;
 And through my newly-woven bowers,
 Wander happy paramours,
 Less mighty, but as mild as those who keep
 Thy vales more deep.

THE EARTH.

As the dissolving warmth of dawn may fold
 A half unfrozen dew-globe, green and gold,
 And crystalline, till it becomes a winged mist,
 And wanders up the vault of the blue day,
 Outlives the noon, and on the sun's last ray
 Hangs o'er the sea, a fleece of fire and amethyst.

THE MOON.

Thou art folded, thou art lying
 In the light which is undying
 Of thine own joy, and heaven's smile divine ;
 All suns and constellations shower
 On thee a light, a life, a power
 Which doth array thy sphere ; thou pourest thine
 On mine, on mine :

THE EARTH.

I spin beneath my pyramid of night,
 Which points into the heavens dreaming delight,
 Murmuring victorious joy in my enchanted sleep ;
 As a youth lulled in love-dreams faintly sighing,
 Under the shadow of his beauty lying,
 Which round his rest a watch of light and warmth doth keep.

THE MOON.

As in the soft and sweet eclipse,
 When soul meets soul on lovers' lips,
 High hearts are calm, and brightest eyes are dull ;
 So, when thy shadow falls on me,
 Then am I mute and still, by thee
 Covered; of thy love, Orb most beautiful,
 Full, oh, too full !

Thou art speeding round the sun,
 Brightest world of many a one ;
 Green and azure sphere which shiniest
 With a light which is divinest
 Among all the lamps of Heaven
 To whom life and light is given ;
 I, thy crystal paramour,
 Born beside thee by a power
 Like the polar Paradise,
 Magnet-like, of lover's eyes ;
 I, a most enamoured maiden,
 Whose weak brain is overladen
 With the pleasure of her love,
 Maniac-like around thee move
 Gazing, an insatiate bride,
 On thy form from every side,
 Like a Maenad, round the cup
 Which Agave lifted up
 In the weird Cadmeian forest.
 Brother, whereso'er thou soarest
 I must hurry, whirl and follow
 Through the heavens wide and hollow,
 Sheltered by the warm embrace
 Of thy soul from hungry space,
 Drinking from thy sense and sight
 Beauty, majesty, and might,
 As a lover or cameleon
 Grows like what it looks upon,
 As a violet's gentle eye
 Gazes on the azure sky
 Until its hue grows like what it beholds,
 As a grey and watery mist
 Glows like solid amethyst
 Athwart the western mountain it enfolds

When the sunset sleeps
Upon its snow.

THE EARTH.
And the weak day weeps
That it should be so.

O gentle Moon, the voice of thy delight
Falls on me like thy clear and tender light
Soothing the seaman, borne the summer night
Through isles for ever calm ;
O gentle Moon, thy crystal accents pierce
The caverns of my pride's deep universe,
Charming the tiger joy, whose trampings fierce
Made wounds which need thy balm.

Panthea. I rise as from a bath of sparkling water,
A bath of azure light, among dark rocks,
Out of the stream of sound.

Ione. Ah me ! sweet sister,
The stream of sound has ebbed away from us,
And you pretend to rise out of its wave,
Because your words fall like the clear soft dew
Shaken from a bathing wood-nymph's limbs and hair.

Panthea. Peace, peace ! a mighty power, which is as darkness,
Is rising out of Earth, and from the sky
Is showered like night, and from within the air
Bursts, like eclipse which had been gathered up
Into the pores of sunlight : the bright visions,
Wherein the singing spirits rode and shone,
Gleam like pale meteors through a watery night.

Ione. There is a sense of words upon mine ear.

Panthea. A universal sound like words : Oh ! list
DEMOGORGON.

Thou, Earth, calm empire of a happy soul,
Sphere of divinest shapes and harmonies,
Beautiful orb ! gathering as thou dost roll
The love which paves thy path along the skies.

THE EARTH.
I hear : I am as a drop of dew that dies.

DEMOGORGON.
Tho. Moon, which gazest on the nightly Earth
With wonder, as it gazes upon thee ;
Whilst each to men, and beasts, and the swift birth
Of birds, is beauty, love, calm, harmony :

THE MOON.
I hear : I am a leaf shaken by thee !

DEMOGORGON.
Ye kings of suns and stars ! Demons and Gods,
Aetherial Domination's ! who possess
Elysian, windless, fortunate abodes
Beyond Heaven's constellated wilderness :

A VOICE FROM ABOVE.

Our great Republic hears ; we are blest, and bless.

DEMOGORON.

Ye happy dead ! whom beams of brightest verse
Are clouds to hide, not colours to portray,
Whether your nature is that universe
Which once ye saw and suffered—

A VOICE FROM BENEATH.

Or as they
Whom we have left, we change and pass away.

DEMOGORON.

Ye elemental Genii, who have homes
From man's high mind even to the central stone
Of sullen lead ; from Heaven's star-fretted domes
To the dull weed some sea-worm battens on :

A CONFUSED VOICE.

We hear : thy words waken Oblivion.

DEMOGORON.

Spirits ! whose homes are flesh : ye beasts and birds,
Ye worms and fish ; ye living leaves and buds ;
Lightning and wind ; and ye untameable herds,
Meteors and mists, which throng air's solitudes.

A VOICE.

Thy voice to us is wind among still woods.

DEMOGORON.

Man, who wert once a despot and a slave ;
A dupe and a deceiver ; a decay ;
A traveller from the cradle to the grave
Through the dim night of this immortal day :

ALL.

Speak ! thy strong words may never pass away.

DEMOGORON.

This the day, which down the void abyss
At the Earth-born's spell yawns for heaven's despotism,
And conquest is dragged captive through the deep ;
Love, from its awful throne of patient power
In the wise heart, from the last giddy hour

Of dread endurance, from the slippery steep,
And narrow verge of crag-like agony, springs
And folds over the world its healing wings.
Gentleness, Virtue, Wisdom, and Endurance,
These are the seals of that most firm assurance

Which bars the pit over Destruction's strength ;
And if, with infirm hand, Eternity,
Mother of many acts and hours, should free

The serpent that would clasp her with his length,
These are the spells by which to re-assume
An empire o'er the disentangled doom.

To suffer woes which Hope thinks infinite ;
 To forgive wrongs darker than death or night ;
 To defy Power, which seems omnipotent ;
 To love, and bear ; to hope till Hope creates
 From its own wreck the thing it contemplates :
 Neither to change, nor falter, nor repent ;
 This, like thy glory, Titan ! is to be
 Good, great and joyous, beautiful and free ;
 This is alone Life, Joy, Empire, and Victory !

THE CENCI.

A TRAGEDY IN FIVE ACTS.

Dedication

TO LEIGH HUNT, ESQ.

MY DEAR FRIEND,

I INSCRIBE with your name, from a distant country, and after an absence whose months have seemed years, this the latest of my literary efforts.

Those writings which I have hitherto published, have been little else than visions which impersonate my own apprehensions of the beautiful and the just. I can also perceive in them the literary defects incidental to youth and impatience ; they are dreams of what ought to be, or may be. The drama which I now present to you is a sad reality. I lay aside the presumptuous attitude of an instructor, and am content to paint, with such colour as my own heart furnishes, that which has been.

Had I known a person more highly endowed than yourself with all that it becomes a man to possess, I had solicited for this work the ornament of his name. One more gentle, honourable, innocent and brave ; one of more exalted toleration for all who do and think evil, and yet himself more free from evil ; one who knows better how to receive, and how to confer a benefit, though he must ever confer far more than he can receive ; one of simpler, and, in the highest sense of the word, of purer life and manners, I never knew, and I had already been fortunate in friendships when your name was added to the list.

In that patient and irreconcileable enmity with domestic and political tyranny and imposture which the tenor of your life has illustrated, and which, had I health and talents, should illustrate mine, let us, comforting each other in our task, live and die.

All happiness attend you!

Your affectionate friend,

PERCY B. SHELLEY.

ROME, May 29, 1819.

PREFACE.

A MANUSCRIPT was communicated to me during my travels in Italy, which was copied from the archives of the Cenci Palace at Rome, and contains a detailed account of the horrors which ended in the extinction of one of the noblest and richest families of that city, during the Pontificate of Clement VIII., in the year 1599. The story is, that an old man, having spent his life in debauchery and wickedness, conceived at length an implacable hatred towards his children; which showed itself towards one daughter under the form of an incestuous passion, aggravated by every circumstance of cruelty and violence. This daughter, after long and vain attempts to escape from what she considered a perpetual contamination both of body and mind, at length plotted with her mother-in-law and brother to murder their common tyrant. The young maiden, who was urged to this tremendous deed by an impulse which overpowered its horror, was evidently a most gentle and amiable being; a creature formed to adorn and be admired, and thus violently thwarted from her nature by the necessity of circumstances and opinion. The deed was quickly discovered; and, in spite of the most earnest prayers made to the Pope by the highest persons in Rome, the criminals were put to death. The old man had, during his life, repeatedly bought his pardon from the Pope for capital crimes of the most enormous and unspeakable kind, at the price of a hundred thousand crowns; the death, therefore, of his victims can scarcely be accounted for by the love of justice. The Pope, among other motives for severity, probably felt that whosoever killed the Count Cenci deprived his treasury of a certain and copious source of revenue.* Such a story, if told so as to present to the reader all the feelings of those who once acted it, their hopes and fears, their confidences and misgivings, their various interests, passions, and opinions, acting upon and with each other, yet all conspiring to one tremendous end, would be as a light to make apparent some of the most dark and secret caverns of the human heart.

* The Papal Government formerly took the most extraordinary precautions against the publicity of facts which offer so tragical a demonstration of its own wickedness and weakness; so that the communication of the MS. had become, until very lately, a matter of some difficulty.

On my arrival at Rome, I found that the story of the Cenzi was a subject not to be mentioned in Italian society without awaking a deep and breathless interest: and that the feelings of the company never failed to incline to a romantic pity for the wrongs, and a passionate exculpation of the horrible deed to which they urged her, who has been mingled two centuries with the common dust. All ranks of people knew the outlines of this history, and participated in the overwhelming interest which it seems to have the magic of exciting in the human heart. I had a copy of Guido's picture of Beatrice, which is preserved in the Colonna Palace, and my servant instantly recognised it as the portrait of La Cenzi.

This national and universal interest which the story produces and has produced for two centuries, and among all ranks of people in a great city, where the imagination is kept for ever active and awake, first suggested to me the conception of its fitness for a dramatic purpose. In fact, it is a tragedy which has already received, from its capacity of awakening and sustaining the sympathy of men, approbation and success. Nothing remained, as I imagined, but to clothe it to the apprehensions of my countrymen in such language and action as would bring it home to their hearts. The deepest and the sublimest tragic compositions, King Lear, and the two plays in which the tale of Oedipus is told, were stories which already existed in tradition, as matters of popular belief and interest, before Shakspeare and Sophocles made them familiar to the sympathy of all succeeding generations of mankind.

This story of the Cenzi is indeed eminently fearful and monstrous: anything like a dry exhibition of it on the stage would be insupportable. The person who would treat such a subject must increase the ideal, and diminish the actual horror of the events, so that the pleasure which arises from the poetry which exists in these tempestuous sufferings and crimes, may mitigate the pain of the contemplation of the moral deformity from which they spring. There must also be nothing attempted to make the exhibition subservient to what is vulgarly termed a moral purpose. The highest moral purpose aimed at in the highest species of the drama, is the teaching of the human heart, through its sympathies and antipathies, the knowledge of itself; in proportion to the possession of which knowledge every human being is wise, just, sincere, tolerant, and kind. If dogmas can do more, it is well: but a drama is no fit place for the enforcement of them. Undoubtedly no person can be truly dishonoured by the act of another; and the fit return to make to the most enormous injuries is kindness and forbearance, and a resolution to convert the injurer from his dark passions.

by peace and love. Revenge, retaliation, atonement, are pernicious mistakes. If Beatrice had thought in this manner, she would have been wiser and better; but she would never have been a tragic character: the few whom such an exhibition would have interested, could never have been sufficiently interested for a dramatic purpose, from the want of finding sympathy in their interest among the mass who surround them. It is in the restless and anatomising casuistry with which men seek the justification of Beatrice, yet feel that she has done what needs justification; it is in the superstitious horror with which they contemplate alike her wrongs and their revenge, that the dramatic character of what she did and suffered consists.

I have endeavoured as nearly as possible to represent the characters as they probably were, and have sought to avoid the error of making them actuated by my own conceptions of right or wrong, false or true: thus under a thin veil converting names and actions of the sixteenth century into cold impersonations of my own mind. They are represented as Catholics, and as Catholics deeply tinged with religion. To a Protestant apprehension there will appear something unnatural in the earnest and perpetual sentiment of the relations between God and man which pervade the tragedy of the Cenci. It will especially be startled at the combination of an undoubting persuasion of the truth of the popular religion, with a cool and determined perseverance in enormous guilt. But religion in Italy is not, as in Protestant countries, a cloak to be worn on particular days; or a passport which those who do not wish to be railed at carry with them to exhibit; or a gloomy passion for penetrating the impenetrable mysteries of our being, which terrifies its possessor at the darkness of the abyss to the brink of which it has conducted him. Religion co-exists, as it were, in the mind of an Italian Catholic with a faith in that of which all men have the most certain knowledge. It is interwoven with the whole fabric of life. It is adoration, faith, submission, penitence, blind admiration; not a rule for moral conduct. It has no necessary connection with any one virtue. The most atrocious villain may be rigidly devout, and, without any shock to established faith, confess himself to be so. Religion pervades intensely the whole frame of society, and is, according to the temper of the mind which it inhabits, a passion, a persuasion, an excuse, a refuge; never a check. Cenci himself built a chapel in the court of his palace, and dedicated it to St. Thomas the Apostle, and established masses for the peace of his soul. Thus in the first scene of the fourth act, Lucretia's design in exposing herself to the consequences of an expostulation with Cenci after having administered the opiate, was to induce him by a feigned tale to confess himself before death; this being esteemed by Catholics as essential to salvation; and she only relinquishes her purpose when she perceives that her perseverance would expose Beatrice to new outrages.

I have avoided with great care in writing this play the introduction of what is commonly called mere poetry, and I imagine there will scarcely be found a detached simile or a single isolated description, unless Beatrice's description of the chasm appointed for her father's murder should be judged to be of that nature.*

In a dramatic composition the imagery and the passion should interpenetrate one another, the former being reserved simply for the full development and illustration of the latter. Imagination is as the immortal God which should assume flesh for the redemption of mortal passion. It is thus that the most remote and the most familiar imagery may alike be fit for dramatic purposes when employed in the illustration of strong feeling, which raises what is low, and levels to the apprehension that which is lofty, casting over all the shadow of its own greatness. In other respects I have written more carelessly; that is, without an over-fastidious and learned choice of words. In this respect, I entirely agree with those modern critics who assert, that in order to move men to true sympathy, we must use the familiar language of men; and that our great ancestors, the ancient English poets, are the writers a study of whom might incite us to do that for our own age which they have done for theirs. But it must be the real language of men in general, and not that of any particular class to whose society the writer happens to belong. So much for what I have attempted: I need not be assured that success is a very different matter; particularly for one whose attention has but newly been awakened to the study of dramatic literature.

I endeavoured whilst at Rome to observe such monuments of this story as might be accessible to a stranger. The portrait of Beatrice at the Colonna Palace is most admirable as a work of art: it was taken by Guido during her confinement in prison. But it is most interesting as a just representation of one of the loveliest specimens of the workmanship of Nature. There is a fixed and pale composure upon the features: she seems sad and stricken down in spirit, yet the despair thus expressed is lightened by the patience of gentleness. Her head is bound with cords of white drapery, from which the yellow strings of her golden hair escape, and fall about her neck. The moulding of her face is exquisitely delicate; the eye-brows are distinct and arched; the lips have that permanent meaning of imagination and sensibility which suffering has not repressed, and which it seems as if death scarcely could extinguish. Her forehead is large and clear; her eyes, which we are told were remarkable for their vivacity, are swollen with weeping and lustreless, but beautifully tender and serene. In the whole mien there is a simplicity and dignity which, united with her exquisite loveliness and deep sorrow, are inexpressibly pathetic. Beatrice Cenci appears to have been one of those rare persons in whom energy and gentleness dwell together without destroying one another : her nature was simple and profound. The crimes and miseries in which she was an actor and a sufferer, are as the mask and the mantle in which circumstances clothed her for her impersonation on the scene of the world.

The Cenci Palace is of great extent ; and, though in part modernised, there yet remains a vast and gloomy pile of feudal architecture in the same state as during the dreadful scenes which are the subject of this tragedy. The palace is situated in an obscure corner of Rome, near the quarter of the Jews, and from the upper windows you see the immense ruins of Mount Palatine, half hidden under their profuse overgrowth of trees. There is a court in one part of the palace (perhaps that in which Cenci built the chapel to St. Thomas), supported by granite columns and adorned with antique friezes of fine workmanship, and built up, according to the ancient Italian fashion, with balcony over balcony of open work. One of the gates of the palace, formed of immense stones, and leading through a passage dark and lofty, and opening into gloomy subterranean chambers, struck me particularly.

Of the Castle of Petrella, I could obtain no further information than that which is to be found in the manuscript.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

COUNT FRANCESCO CENCI.	ORSINO, a Prelate.
GIACOMO,	his Sons.	SAVELLA, the Pope's Legate.
BERNARDO,
CARDINAL CAMILLO.	OLIMPIO,	Assassins.
	MARZIO,
	ANDREA, Servant to Cenç.
Nobles, Judges, Guards, Servants.
LUCRETIA, Wife of Cenç, and step-mother of his children.
BEATRICE, his daughter.

The SCENE lies principally in Rome, but changes during the Fourth Act to Petrella, a Castle among the Apulian Apennines.

TIME.—During the Pontificate of Clement VIII.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Cenç Palace.

Enter COUNT CENCI and CARDINAL CAMILLO.

Camilla. That matter of the murder is hushed up
If you consent to yield his Holiness
Your sief that lies beyond the Pincian gate.—
It needed all my interest in the conclave
To bend him to this point: he said that you
Bought perilous impunity with your gold;
That crimes like yours if once or twice compounded
Enriched the Church, and respited from hell
An erring soul which might repent and live:
But that the glory and the interest
Of the high throne he fills, little consist
With making it a daily mart of guilt
So manifold and hideous as the deeds
Which you scarce hide from men's revolted eyes.

Cenç The third of my possessions—let it go!
Ay, I once heard the nephew of the Pope
Had sent his architect to view the ground,
Meaning to build a villa on my vines
The next time I compounded with his uncle:
I little thought he should outwit me so!
Henceforth no witness—not the lamp shall see
That which the vassal threatened to divulge,
Whose throat is choked with dust for his reward.
The deed he saw could not have rated higher
Than his most worthless life:—it augers me!

Respited from Hell!—So may the Devil
 Respite their souls from Heaven. No doubt Pope Clement,
 And his most charitable nephews, pray
 That the Apostle Peter and the saints
 Will grant for their sake that I long enjoy
 Strength, wealth, and pride, and lust, and length of days
 Wherin to act the deeds which are the stewards
 Of their revenue.—But much yet remains
 To which they show no title.

Camillo.

Oh, Count Cenci!

So much that thou might'st honourably live,
 And reconcile thyself with thine own heart
 And with thy God, and with the offended world.
 How hideously look deeds of lust and blood
 Through those snow-white and venerable hairs!
 Your children should be sitting round you now,
 But that you fear to read upon their looks
 The shame and misery you have written there.
 Where is your wife? Where is your gentle daughter?
 Methinks her sweet looks, which make all things else
 Beauteous and glad, might kill the fiend within you.
 Why is she barred from all society?
 But her own strange and uncomplaining wrongs?
 Talk with me, Count, you know I mean you well.
 I stood beside your dark and fiery youth,
 Watching its bold and bad career, as men
 Watch meteors, but it vanished not—I marked
 Your desperate and remorseless manhood; now
 Do I behold you, in dishonoured age,
 Charged with a thousand unrepented crimes.
 Yet I have ever hoped you would amend,
 And in that hope have saved your life three times.

Cenci. For which Aldobrandino owes you now
 My fief beyond the Pincian.—Cardinal,
 One thing, I pray you, recollect henceforth,
 And so we shall converse with less restraint.
 A man you knew spoke of my wife and daughter,
 He was accustomed to frequent my house;
 So the next day his wife and daughter came
 And asked if I had seen him; and I smiled:
 I think they never saw him any more.

Camillo. Thou execrable man, beware!—

Cenci. Of thee?
 Nay, this is idle:—We should know each other.
 As to my character for what men call crime,
 Seeing I please my senses as I list,
 And vindicate that right with force or guile,
 It is a public matter, and I care not
 If I discuss it with you. I may speak
 Alike to you and my own conscious heart;

For you give out that you have half reformed me,
 Therefore strong vanity will keep you silent
 If fear should not ; both will, I do not doubt.
 All men delight in sensual luxury,
 All men enjoy revenge ; and most exult
 Over the tortures they can never feel ;
 Flattering their secret peace with others' pain.
 But I delight in nothing else. I love
 The sight of agony, and the sense of joy,
 When this shall be another's, and that mine.
 And I have no remorse, and little fear,
 Which are, I think, the checks of other men.
 This mood has grown upon me, until now
 Any design my captious fancy makes
 The picture of its wish, and it forms none
 But such as men like you would start to know,
 Is as my natural food and rest debarred
 Until it be accomplished.

Camillo. Art thou not

Most miserable ?

Cenci. Why miserable ?—
 No. I am what your theologians call
 Hardened ; which they must be in impudence,
 So to revile a man's peculiar taste.
 True, I was happier than I am, while yet
 Mauhood remained to act the thing I thought ;
 While lust was sweeter than revenge ; and now
 Invention palls ; ay, we must all grow old :
 But that there yet remains a deed to act
 Whose horror might make sharp an appetite
 Duller than mine—I'd do,—I know not what.
 When I was young I thought of nothing else
 But pleasure ; and I fed on honey sweets :
 Men, by St. Thomas ! cannot live like bees,
 And I grew tired : yet, till I killed a foe,
 And heard his groans, and heard his children's groans,
 Knew I not what delight was else on earth,
 Which now delights me little. I the rather
 Look on such pangs as terror ill conceals ;
 The . ry, fixed eye-ball ; the pale, quivering lip,
 Which tell me that the spirit weeps within
 Tears bitterer than the bloody sweat of Christ.
 I rarely kill the body, which preserves,
 Like a strong prison, the soul within my power,
 Wherein I feed it with the breath of ear
 For hourly pain.

Camillo. Hell's most abandoned fiend
 Did never, in the drunkenness of guilt,
 Speak to his heart as now you speak to me,
 I thank my God that I believe you not.

Enter ANDREA.

Andrea. My lord, a gentleman from Salamanca
Would speak with you.
Cenci. Bid him attend me in the grand saloon. [Exit ANDREA.
Camillo. Farewell ; and I will pray
Almighty God that thy false impious words
Tempt not his spirit to abandon thee. [Exit CAMILLO.

Cenci. The third of my possessions ! I must use
Close husbandry, or gold, the old man's sword,
Falls from my withered hand. But yesterday
There came an order from the Pope to make
Fourfold provision for my cursed sons ;
Whom I have sent from Rome to Salamanca,
Hoping some accident might cut them off ;
And meaning, if I could, to starve them there.
I pray thee, God, send some quick death upon them !
Bernardo and my wife could not be worse
If dead and damned :— then, as to Beatrice—

[Looking around him suspiciously.

I think they cannot hear me at that door ;
What if they should ? And yet I need not speak,
Though the heart triumphs with itself in words.
O, thou most silent air, that shall not hear
What now I think ! Thou, pavement, which I tread
Towards her chamber,—let your echoes talk
Of my imperious step, scorning surprise,
But not of my intent !—Andrea !

Enter ANDREA.

Andrea. My lord !
Cenci. Bid Beatrice attend me in her chamber
This evening :—no, at midnight, and alone. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Garden of the Cenci Palace.Enter BEATRICE and ORSINO, as in conversation.

Beatrice. Pervert not truth,
Orsino. You remember where we held
That conversation ;—nay, we see the spot
Even from this cypress ;—two long years are past
Since, on an April midnight, underneath
The moonlight-ruins of Mount Palatine,
I did confess to you my secret mind.

Orsino. You said you loved me then.

Beatrice. You are a priest :
Speak to me not of love.

Orsino. I may obtain
The dispensation of the Pope to marry.

Because I am a priest, do you believe
 Your image, as the hunter some struck deer,
 Follows me not whether I wake or sleep ?

Beatrice. As I have said, speak to me not of love ;
 Had you a dispensation, I have not ;
 Nor will I leave this home of misery
 Whilst my poor Bernard, and that gentle lady
 To whom I owe life, and these virtuous thoughts,
 Must suffer what I still have strength to share.
 Alas, Orsino ! All the love that once
 I felt for you, is turned to bitter pain.
 Ours was a youthful contract, which you first
 Broke, by assuming vows no Pope will loose.
 And thus I love you still, but holily,
 Even as a sister or a spirit might ;
 And so I swear a cold fidelity.
 And it is well perhaps we shall not marry.
 You have a sly, equivocating vein
 That suits me not.—Ah, wretched that I am !
 Where shall I turn ? Even now you look on me
 As you were not my friend, and as if you
 Discovered that I thought so, with false smiles
 Making my true suspicion seem your wrong.
 Ah ! No, forgive me ; sorrow makes me seem Sterner than else my nature might have been ;
 I have a weight of melancholy thoughts,
 And they forebode,—but what can they forebode
 Worse than I now endure ?

Orsino. All will be well.
 Is the petition yet prepared ? You know
 My zeal for all you wish, sweet Beatrice ;
 Doubt not but I will use my utmost skill
 So that the Pope attend to your complaint.

Beatrice. Your zeal for all I wish !— Ah me, you are cold !
 Your utmost skill—speak but one word—(Aside.) Alas !
 Weak and deserted creature that I am,
 Here I stand bickering with my only friend !
 (To ORSINO.) This night my father gives a sumptuous feast,
 Or, no ; he has heard some happy news
 From Salamanca, from my brothers there,
 And with this outward show of love he mocks
 His inward hate. 'Tis bold hypocrisy,
 For he would gladlier celebrate their deaths,
 Which I have heard him pray for on his knees .
 Great God ! that such a father should be mine !—
 But there is mighty preparation made,
 And all our kin, the Cenci, will be there,
 And all the chief nobility of Rome.
 And he has bidden me and my pale mother
 Attire ourselves in festival array.

Poor lady ! she expects some happy change
 In his dark spirit from this act ; I none.
 At supper I will give you the petition :
 Till when —farewell.

Orsino.

Farewell.

[Exit BEATRICE.

I know the Pope

Will ne'er absolve me from my priestly vow
 But by absolving me from the revenue
 Of many a wealthy see ; and, Beatrice,
 I think to win thee at an easier rate.
 Nor shall he read her eloquent petition :
 He might bestow her on some poor relation
 Of his sixth-cousin, as he did her sister,
 And I should be debarred from all access.
 Then as to what she suffers from her father.
 In all this there is much exaggeration :
 Old men are testy, and ...! have their way ;
 A man may stab his enemy, or his vassal,
 And live a free life as to wine or women,
 And with a peevish temper may return
 To a dull home, and rate his wife and children :
 Daughters and wives call this foul tyranny.
 I shall be well content, if on my conscience
 There rest no heavier sin than what they suffer
 From the devices of my love—A net
 From which she shall escape not. Yet I fear
 Her subtle mind, her awe-inspiring gaze,
 Whose beams anatomise me, nerve by nerve,
 And lay me bare, and make me blush to see
 My hidden thoughts.—Ah, no ! a friendless girl
 Who clings to me, as to her only hope :—
 I were a fool, not less than if a panther
 Were panic-stricken by the antelope's eye,
 If she escape me.

[*Exit.*SCENE III.—A magnificent Hall in the Cenci Palace.

A Banquet. Enter CENCI, LUCRETIA, BEATRICE, ORSINO, CAMILLO, NOBLES.

Cenci. Welcome, my friends and kinsmen; welcome ye,
 Princes and Cardinals, Pillars of the Church,
 Whose presence honours our festivity.
 I have too long lived like an anchorite,
 And, in my absence from your merry meetings,
 An evil word is gone abroad of me ;
 But I do hope that you, my noble friends,
 When you have shared the entertainment here,
 And heard the pious cause for which 'tis given,

And we have pledged a health or two together,
Will think me flesh and blood as well as you ;
Sinful indeed, for Adam made all so,
But tender-hearted, meek and pitiful.

First Guest. In truth, my lord, you seem too light of heart
Too sprightly and companionable a man,
To act the deeds that rumour pins on you. [To his companion.
I never saw such blithe and open cheer
In any eye !

Second Guest. Some most desired event,
In which we all demand a common joy,
Has brought us hither ; let us hear it, Count.

Cenci. It is indeed a most desired event.
If, when a parent, from a parent's heart,
Lifts from this earth to the great Father of all
A prayer, both when he lays him down to sleep,
And when he rises up from dreaming it ;
One supplication, one desire, one hope,
That he would grant a wish for his two sons,
Even all that he demands in their regard—
And suddenly, beyond his dearest hope,
It is accomplished, he should then rejoice,
And call his friends and kinsmen to a feast,
And task their love to grace his merriment,
Then honour me thus far -for I am he.

Beatrice (to Lucretia). Great God ! how horrible ! Some
Must have betrayed my brothers. [dreadful ill

Lucretia. Fear not, child,
He speaks too frankly.

Beatrice. Ah ! My blood runs cold.
I fear that wicked laughter round his eye,
Which wrinkles up the skin even to the hair.

Cenci. Here are the letters brought from Salamanca ;
Beatrice, read them to your mother. God,
I thank thee ! In one night didst thou perform,
By ways inscrutable, the thing I sought.
My disobedient and rebellious sons
Are dead !—Why dead !—What means this change of cheer ?
You : ear me not, I tell you they are dead ;
And they will need no food or raiment more :
The tapers that did light them the dark way
Are their last cost. The Pope, I think, will not Expect I should maintain them in their coffins.
Rejoice with me —my heart is wondrous glad.

(LUCRETIA sinks, half fainting ; BEATRICE supports her.)

Beatrice. It is not true !—Dear lady, pray look up.
Had it been true, there is a God in Heaven,
He would not live to boast of such a boon.
Unnatural man, thou knowest that it is false.

Cenci. Ay, as the word of God ; whom here I call

To witness that I speak the sober truth :—
 And whose most favouring providence was shown
 Even in the manner of their deaths. For Rocco
 Was kneeling at the mass, with sixteen others,
 When the Church fell and crushed him to a mummy ;
 The rest escaped unhurt. Cristofano
 Was stabbed in error by a jealous man,
 Whilst she he loved was sleeping with his rival ;
 All in the self-same hour of the same night ;
 Which shows that Heaven has special care of me.
 I beg those friends who love me, that they mark
 The day a feast upon their calendars.
 It was the twenty-seventh of December :
 Ay, read the letters if you doubt my oath.

[The assembly appears confused ; several of the guests rise.]

First Guest. O. horrible ! I will depart.—

Second Guest. And I.—

Third Guest. No, stay !

I do believe it is some jest ; though faith,
 'Tis mocking us somewhat too solemnly.
 I think his son has married the Infanta,
 Or found a mine of gold in El Dorado :
 'Tis but to season some such news ; stay, stay !
 I see 'tis only railly by his smile.

Cenci (filling a bowl of wine, and lifting it up).
 Oh, thou bright wine, whose purple splendour leaps
 And bubbles gaily in this golden bowl
 Under the lamp-light, as my spirits do,
 To hear the death of my accursed sons !
 Could I believe thou wert their mingled blood,
 Then would I taste thee like a sacrament,
 And pledge with thee the mighty Devil in Hell ;
 Who, if a father's curses, as men say,
 Climb with swift wings after their children's souls,
 And drag them from the very throne of Heaven,
 Now triumphs in my triumph ! But thou art
 Superfluous ; I have drunken deep of joy,
 And I will taste no other wine to-night.
 Here, Andrea ! Bear the bowl around.

A Guest (rising). Thou wretch !
 Will none among this noble company
 Check the abandoned villain ?

Camillo. For God's sake,
 Let me dismiss the guests ! You are insane,
 Some ill will come of this.

Second Guest. Seize, silence him !

First Guest. I will !

Third Guest. And I !

Cenci (addressing those who rise with a threatening gesture).
 Who moves ? Who speaks ? [Turning to the company.
 'Tis nothing,

Enjoy yourselves.—Beware ! for my revenge
Is as the sealed commission of a king,
That kills, and none dare name the murderer.

[The Banquet is broken up ; several of the Guests are departing.]

Beatrice. I do entreat you, go not, noble guests ;
What although tyranny and impious hate
Stand sheltered by a father's hoary hair ?
What if 'tis he who clothed us in these limbs
Who tortures them, and triumphs ? What, if we,
The desolate and the dead, were his own flesh,
His children and his wife, whom he is bound
To love and shelter ? Shall we therefore find
No refuge in this merciless wide world ?
Oh, think what deep wrongs must have blotted out
First love, then reverence in a child's prone mind,
Till it thus vanquish shame and fear ! Oh, think !
I have borne much, and kissed the sacred hand
Which crushed us to the earth, and thought its stroke
Was perhaps some paternal chastisement !
Have excused much, doubted ; and when no doubt
Remained, have sought by patience, love and tears,
To soften him ; and when this could not be,
I have knelt down through the long sleepless nights,
And lifted up to God, the father of all,
Passionate prayers : and when these were not heard,
I have still borne ; -until I meet you here,
Prince and Lusmen, at this hideous feast
Given at my brothers' deaths. Two yet remain,
His wife remains and I, whom if ye save not,
Ye may soon share such merriment again
As fathers make over their children's graves.
Oh ! Prince Colonna, thou art our near kinsman ;
Cardinal, thou art the Pope's chamberlain ;
Camillo, thou art chief justiciary ;
Take us away !

Cenci. (He has been conversing with CAMILLO during the first part of BEATRICE'S speech ; he hears the conclusion, and now advances.)

I hope my good friends here
Will think of their own daughters---or perhaps
Of their own throats -before they lend an ear
To this wild girl.

Beatrice (not noticing the words of Cenci).

Dare no one look on me !

None answer ? Can one tyrant overbear
The sense of many best and wisest men ?
Or is it that I sue not in some form
Of scrupulous law, that ye deny i' y suit ?
Oh, God ! that I were buried wi' my brothers !
And that the flowers of this departed spring

Were fading on my grave ! and that my father
Were celebrating now one feast for all !

Camillo. A bitter wish for one so young and gentle ;
Can we do nothing ? —

Colonna. Nothing that I see.
Count Cenci were a dangerous enemy :
Yet I would second any one.

A Cardinal. And I.

Cenci. Retire to your chamber, insolent girl !
Beatrice. Retire thou, impious man ! Ay, hide thyself

Where never eye can look upon thee more !
Wouldst thou have honour and obedience,
Who art a torturer ? Father, never dream,
Though thou mayst overbear this company,
But ill must come of ill. Frown not on me !
Haste, hide thyself, lest with avenging looks
My brothers' ghosts 'ould hunt thee from thy seat !
Cover thy face from every living eye,
And start if thou but hear a human step :
Seek out some dark and silent corner, there,
Bow thy white head before offended God,
And we will kneel around, and fervently
Pray that he pity both ourselves and thee.

Cenci. My friends, I do lament this insane girl
Has spoilt the mirth of our festivity.
Good night, farewell ; I will not make you longer
Spectators of our dull domestic quarrels.
Another time.— [Exit all but CENCI and BEATRICE.]

My brain is swimming round ;
Give me a bowl of wine !
(To BEATRICE). Thou painted viper !
Beast that thou art ! Fair and yet terrible !
I know a charm shall make thee meek and tame,
Now get thee from my sight ! [Exit BEATRICE.]

Here, Andrea,
Fill up this goblet with Greek wine. I said
I would not drink this evening, but I must ;
For, strange to say, I feel my spirits fail
With thinking what I have decreed to do. [Drinking the wine.]
Be thou the resolution of quick youth
Within my veins, and manhood's purpose stern,
And age's firm, cold, subtle villainy ;
As if thou wert indeed my children's blood
Which I did thirst to drink. The charm works well ;
It must be done, it shall be done, I swear ! [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Cenci Palace.

Enter Lucretia and Bernardo.

Lucretia. Weep not, my gentle boy ; he struck but me,
Who have borne deeper wrongs. In truth, if he
Had killed me, he had done a kinder deed.
Oh, God Almighty, do thou look upon us,
We have no other friend but only thee !
Yet weep not ; though I love you as my own,
I am not your true mother.

Bernardo. Oh, more, more
Than ever mother was to any child,
That have you been to me ! Had he not been
My father, do you think that I should weep ?

Lucretia. Alas ! poor boy, what else couldst thou have done !

Enter Beatrice.

Beatrice (in a hurried voice). Did he pass this way ? Have you seen him, brother ?
Ah ! no, that is his step upon the stairs ;
'Tis nearer now ; his hand is on the door :
Mother, if I to thee have ever been
A duteous child, now save me ! Thou great God,
Whose image upon earth a father is,
Dost thou indeed abandon me ? He comes ;
The door is opening now ; I see his face ;
He frowns on others, but he smiles on me,
Even as he did after the feast last night. [Enter a Servant.
Almighty God, how merciful thou art !
'Tis but Orsino's servant. — Well, what news ?

Servant. My master bids me say, the Holy Father
Has sent back your petition thus unopened. [Giving a paper.
And he demands at what hour 'twere secure
To visit you again ?

Lucretia. At the Ave Mary. [Exit Servant.
So, daughter, our last hope has failed ; ah me,
How pale you look ! you tremble, and you stand
Wrapped in some fixed and fearful meditation,
As if one thought were over strong for you ;
Your eyes have a chill glare ; oh, dearest child !
Are you gone mad ? If not, pray speak to me.

Beatrice. You see I am not mad ; I speak to you.

Lucretia. You talked of something that your father did

After that dreadful feast? Could it be worse
 Than when he smiled, and cried, My sons are dead!
 And every one looked in his neighbour's face
 To see if others were as white as he?
 At the first word he spoke I felt the blood
 Rush to my heart, and fell into a trance;
 And when it past I sat all weak and wild;
 Whilst you alone stood up, and with strong words
 Check'd his unnatural pride; and I could see
 The devil was rebuked that lives in him.
 Until this hour thus you have ever stood
 Between us and your father's moody wrath
 Like a protecting presence: your firm mind
 Has been our only refuge and defence:
 What can have thus subdued it? What can now
 Have given you that cold melancholy look,
 Succeeding to your accustomed fear?

Beatrice. What is it that you say! I was just thinking
 'Twere better not to struggle any more.
 Men, like my father, have been dark and bloody,
 Yet never—O! before worse comes of it,
 'Twere wise to die: it ends in that at last.

Lucretia. Oh, talk not so, dear child! Tell me at once
 What did your father do or say to you?
 He stayed not after that accursed feast
 One moment in your chamber.—Speak to me.

Bernardo. Oh, sister, sister, prithee, speak to us!
Beatrice (speaking very slowly with a forced calmness). It was one word, mother, one little word;
 One look, one smile. [Wildly

Oh! he has trampled me
 Under his feet, and made the blood stream down
 My pallid cheeks. And he has given us all
 Ditch-water, and the fever-stricken flesh
 Of buffaloes, and bade us eat or starve,
 And we have eaten. He has made me look
 On my beloved Bernardo, when the rust
 Of heavy chains has gangrened his sweet limbs,
 And I have never yet despaired—but now!
 What would I say? [Recovering herself.]

Ah! no, 'tis nothing new.
 The sufferings we all share have made me wild:
 He only struck and cursed me as he past;
 He said, he looked, he did—nothing at all
 Beyond his wont, yet it disordered me.
 Alas! I am forgetful of my duty.
 I should preserve my senses for your sake.

Lucretia. Nay, Beatrice; have courage, my sweet girl.
 If any one despairs it should be I,
 Who loved him once, and now must live with him

Till God in pity call for him or me.
 For you may, like your sister, find some husband,
 And smile, years hence, with children round your knees ;
 Whilst I, then dead, and all this hideous coil,
 Shall be remembred only as a dream.

Beatrice. Talk not to me, dear lady, of a husband.
 Did you not nurse me when my mother died ?
 Did you not shield me and that dearest boy ?
 And had we any other friend but you
 In infancy, with gentle words and looks,
 To win our father not to murder us ?
 And shall I now desert you ? May the ghost
 Of my dead mother plead against my soul,
 If I abandon her who filled the place
 She left, with more even than a mother's love !

Bernardo. And I am of my sister's mind. Indeed
 I would not leave you in this wretchedness,
 Even though the Pope should make me free to live
 In some blithe place, like others of my age,
 With sports, and delicate food, and the fresh air.
 Oh, never think that I will leave you, mother !

Lucretia. My dear, dear children !

Enter CENCI, suddenly.

Cenci. What ! Beatrice here ?
 Come hither ! [She shrinks back, and covers her face.]
 Nay, hide not your face : 'tis fair :
 Look up ! Why, yesternight you dared to look
 With disobedient insolence upon me,
 Bending a stern and an inquiring brow
 On what I meant : whilst I then sought to hide
 That which I came to tell you -but in vain.

Beatrice (wildly staggering towards the door). Oh, that the earth would gape ! Hide me, oh God !

Cenci. Then it was I whose inarticulate words
 Fell from my lips, who with tottering steps
 Fled from your presence, as you now from mine.
 Stay, I command you ! From this day and hour
 Ne'er again, I think, with fearless eye,
 And brow superior, and unaltered cheek,
 And that lip made for tenderness or scorn,
 Shall thou strike dumb the meanest of mankind :
 Me least of all. Now get thee to thy chamber,
 Thou too, loathed image of thy cursed mother, [To BERNARDO.
 Thy milky, meek face makes me sick with hate !

[Enter BEATRICE and BERNARDO.

(Aside.) So much has passed between us as must make Me bold, her fearful. -'Tis an awfu' thing
 To touch such mischiof as I now conceive :
 So men sit shivering on the dewy bank

And try the chill stream with their feet ; once in—
How the delighted spirit pants for joy !

Lucretia (advancing timidly towards him). Oh, husband ! Pray forgive poor Beatrice,
She meant not any ill.

Cenci.                   Nor you perhaps ?
Nor that young imp, whom you have taught by rote
Parricide with his alphabet ! Nor Giacomo ?
Nor those two most unnatural sons, who stirred
Enmity up against me with the Pope ?
Whom in one night merciful God cut off :
Innocent lambs ! They thought not any ill.
You were not here conspiring ? you said nothing
Of how I might be dungeneoned as a madman ;
Or be condemned to death for some offence,
And you would be the witnesses ! — This failing,
How just it were to 've assassins, or
Put sudden poison in my evening drink !
Or smother me when overcome by wine ?
Seeing we had no other judge but God,
And he had sentenced me, and there were none
But you to be the executioners
Of his decree enregistered in heaven ?
Oh, no ! You said not this !

Lucretia.                   So help me God,
I never thought the things you charge me with !
Cenci. If you dare speak that wicked lie again,
I'll kill you. What ! it was not by your counsel
That Beatrice disturbed the feast last night ?
You did not hope to stir some enemies
Against me, and escape, and laugh to scorn
What every nerve of you now trembles at ?
You judged that men were bolder than they are :
Few dare to stand between their grave and me.

Lucretia. Look not so dreadfully ! By my salvation
I knew not aught that Beatrice de-signed ;
Nor do I think she designed any thing
Until she heard you talk of her dead brothers.

Cenci. Blaspheming liar ! You are damned for this !
But I will take you where you may persuade
The stones you tread on to deliver you :
For men shall there be none but those who dare
All things ; not question that which I command.
On Wednesday next I shall set out ; you know
That savage rock, the Castle of Petrelta ?
Tis safely walled, and moated round about :
Its dungeons under ground, and its thick towers
Never told tales ; though they have heard and seen
What might make dumb things speak. Why do you linger ?
Make speediest preparation for the journey !     | Exit LUCRETIA.

The all-beholding sun yet shines ; I hear
 A busy stir of men about the streets ;
 I see the bright sky through the window panes :
 It is a garish, broad, and peering day ;
 Loud, light, suspicious, full of eyes and ears ;
 And every little corner, nook, and hole,
 Is penetrated with the insolent light.
 Come, darkness ! Yet, what is the day to me ?
 And wherefore should I wish for night, who do
 A deed which shall confound both night and day ?
 'Tis she shall grope through a bewildering mist
 Of horror : if there be a sun in heaven,
 She shall not dare to look upon its beams ;
 Nor feel its warmth. Let her, then, wish for night ;
 The act I think shall soon extinguish all
 For me : I bear a darker, deadlier gloom
 Than the earth's shade, or interlunar air,
 Or constellations quenched in murkiest cloud,
 In which I walk secure and unbeheld
 Towards my purpose.—Would that it were done !

[Exit.]

SCENE II. A Chamber in the Vatican.Enter CAMILLO and GIACOMO, in conversation.

Camillo. There is an obsolete and doubtful law,
 By which you might obtain a bare provision
 Of food and clothing.

Giacomo. Nothing more ! Alas !
 Bare must be the provision which strict law
 Awards, and aged sullen avarice pays.
 Why did my father not apprentice me
 To some mechanic trade ? I should have then
 Been trained in no high-born necessities
 Which I could meet not by my daily toil.
 The eldest son of a rich nobleman
 Is heir to all his incapacities ;
 He has wide wants, and narrow powers. If you,
 Cardinal Camillo, were reduced at once
 From thrice-driven beds of down, and delicate food,
 An hundred servants, and six palaces,
 To that which nature doth indeed require ! —

Camillo. Nay, there is reason in your plea ; 'twere hard.

Giacomo. 'Tis hard for a firm man to bear ; but I
 Have a dear wife, a lady of high birth,
 Whose dowry in ill hour I lent my father,
 Without a bond or witness to the deed :
 And children, who inherit her fine senses,
 The fairest creatures in this breathing world ;

And she and they reproach me not. Cardinal,
Do you not think the Pope would interpose
And stretch authority beyond the law ?

Camillo. Though your peculiar case is hard, I know
The Pope will not divert the course of law.
After that impious feast the other night
I spoke with him, and urged him then to cheek
Your father's cruel hand; he frowned, and said,
" Children are disobedient, and they sting
Their fathers' hearts to madness and despair,
Requiting years of care with contumely.
I pity the Count Cenci from my heart;
His outraged love perhaps awakened hate,
And thus he is exasperated to ill.
In the great war between the old and young,
I, who have white hairs and a tottering body,
Will keep at least blameless neutrality."

You, my good lord Orsino, heard those words.

Orsino. What words ?

Giacomo. Alas, repeat them not again !
There then is no redress for me ; at least
None but that which I may achieve myself,
Since I am driven to the brink. But, say,
My innocent sister and my only brother
Are dying underneath my father's eye.
The memorable torturers of this land,
Galeaz Visconti, Borgia, Ezzelin,
Never inflicted on their meanest slave
What these endure ; shall they have no protection ?

Camillo. Why, if they would petition to the Pope,
I see not how he could refuse it - yet
He holds it of most dangerous example
In aught to weaken the paternal power,
Being, as 'twere, the shadow of his own.
I pray you now excuse me. I have business
That will not bear delay.

[Exit CAMILLO.]

Giacomo. But you, Orsino,
Have the petition ; wherefore not present it !

Orsino. I have presented it, and backed it with
My earnest prayers, and urgent interest :
It was returned unanswered. I doubt not
But that the strange and execrable deeds
Alleged in it - in truth they might well baffle
Any belief - have turned the Pope's displeasure
Upon the accusers from the criminal :
So I should guess from what Camillo said.

Giacomo. My friend, that palace-walking devil, Gold,
Has whispered silence to his Holiness :
And we are left, as scorpions ringed with fire,
What should we do but strike ourselves to death ?

For he who is our murderous persecutor
Is shielded by a father's holy name,
Or I would—

[Stops abruptly.]

Orsino. What? Fear not to speak your thought.
Words are but holy as the deeds they cover :
A priest who has forsaken the God he serves ;
A judge who makes the truth weep at his decree ;
A friend who should weave counsel, as I now,
But as the mantle of some selfish guile ;
A father who is all a tyrant seems,
Were the profaner for his sacred name.

Giacomo. Ask me not what I think ; the unwilling brain
Feigns often what it would not ; and we trust
Imagination with such phantasies
As the tongue dares not fashion into words ;
Which have no words, their horror makes them dim
To the mind's eye. My heart denies itself
To think what you demand.

Orsino. But a friend's bosom
Is as the inmost cave of our own mind,
Where we sit shut from the wide gaze of day,
And from the all-communicating air.
You look what I suspected—

Giacomo. Spare me now !
I am as one lost in a midnight wood,
Who dares not ask some harmless passenger
The path across the wilderness, lest he,
As my thoughts are, should be a murderer.
I know you are my friend, and all I dare
Speak to my soul that will I trust with thee.
But now my heart is heavy, and would take
Lone counsel from a night of sleepless care.
Pardon me, that I say farewell—farewell !
I would that to my own suspected self
I could address a word so full of peace.

Orsino. Farewell ! Be your thoughts better or more bold.
I had disposed the Cardinal Camillo

[Exit GIACOMO.]

To feed his hope with cold encouragement :

It fortunately serves my close designs
That 'tis a trick of this same family
To analyse their own and other minds.
Such self anatomy shall teach the will
Dangerous secrets : for it tempts our powers,
Knowing what must be thought, and may be done,
Into the depth of darkest purposes :
So Cenci fell into the pit ; even I,
Since Beatrice unveiled me to myself.
And made me shrink from what I c<sup>r</sup>e<sup>d</sup> not shun,
Show a poor figure to my own esteem,
To which I grow half reconciled. I'll do

As little mischief as I can ; that thought

Shall fee the accuser conscience.

[After a pause.

Now what harm
 If Cenzi should be murdered ?—Yet, if murdered,
 Wherefore by me ? And what if I could take
 The profit, yet omit the sin and peril
 In such an action ? Of all earthly things
 I fear a man whose blows outspeed his words ;
 And such is Cenzi : and while Cenzi lives
 His daughter's dowry were a secret grave
 If a priest wins her.—Oh, fair Beatrice !
 Would that I loved thee not, or, loving thee,
 Could but despise danger, and gold, and all
 That frowns between my wish and its effect,
 Or smiles beyond it ! There is no escape :
 Her bright form kneels beside me at the altar,
 And follows me to the resort of men,
 And fills my slumber with tumultuous dreams.
 So when I wake my blood seems liquid fire ;
 And if I strike my damp and dizzy head,
 My hot palm scorches it : her very name,
 But spoken by a stranger, makes my heart
 Sicken and pant ; and thus unprofitably
 I clasp the phantom of unfelt delights,
 Till weak imagination half possesses
 The self-created shadow. Yet much longer
 Will I not nurse this life of feverous hours :
 From the unravelled hopes of Giacomo
 I must work out my own dear purposes.
 I see, as from a tower, the end of all :
 Her father dead : her brother bound to me
 By a dark secret, surer than the grave ;
 Her mother scared and unexpostulating
 From the dread manner of her wish achieved :
 And she !—Once more take courage, my faint heart ;
 What dares a friendless maiden matched with thee ?
 I have such foresight as assures success ;
 Some unbeknown divinity doth ever,
 When dread events are near, stir up men's minds
 To black suggestions ; and he prospers best,
 Not who becomes the instrument of ill,
 But who can flatter the dark spirit, that makes
 Its empire and its prey of other hearts,
 Till it become his slave—as I will do.

[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Cenci Palace.

Lucretia; to her enter Beatrice (she enters staggering, and speaks wildly.)

Beatrice. Reach me that handkerchief!—My brain is hurt
My eyes are full of blood; just wipe them for me—
I see but indistinctly.—

Lucretia. My sweet child,
You have no wound; 'tis only a cold dew
That starts from your dear brow.—Alas! Alas!
What has befallen?

Beatrice. How comes this hair undone?
Its wandering strings must be what blind me so,
And yet I tied it fast.—O, horrible!
The pavement sinks under my feet! The walls
Spin round! I see a woman weeping there,
And standing calm and motionless, whilst I
Slide giddily as the world reels.—My God!
The beautiful blue heaven is flecked with blood!
The sunshine on the floor is black! The air
Is changed to vapours such as the dead breathe
In charnel-pits! Pah! I am choked! There creeps
A clinging, black, contaminating mist
About me—'tis substantial, heavy, thick;
I cannot pluck it from me, for it glues
My fingers and my limbs to one another,
And eats into my sinews, and dissolves
My flesh to a pollution, poisoning
The subtle, pure, and inmost spirit of life!
My God! I never knew what the mad felt
Before; for I am mad beyond all doubt!
No, I am dead! These putrefying limbs
Shut round and sepulchre the panting soul,
Which would burst forth into the wandering air! [A pause.
What hideous thought was that I had even now!
'Tis gone; and yet its burthen remains here
O'er these dull eyes—upon this weary heart!
O, world! O, life! O, day! O, misery!

[More wildly.]

Lucretia. What ails thee, my poor child? She answers not
Her spirit apprehends the sense of pain,
But not its cause; suffering has driv'd away
The source from which it sprung.—

Beatrice (franticall). Like Parricide—

Misery has killed its father : yet its father
Never like mine—O, God ! What thing am I ?

Lucretia. My dearest child, what has your father done ?

Beatrice (doubtfully). Who art thou, questioner ? I have no father. [Aside.]

She is the madhouse nurse who tends on me,
It is a piteous office. [To LUCRETIA, in a slow, subdued voice.]

Do you know,

I thought I was that wretched Beatrice

Men speak of, whom her father sometimes hales

From hall to hall by the entangled hair ;

At others, pens up naked in damp cells

Where sealy reptiles crawl, and starves her there,

Till she will eat strange flesh. This woful story

So did I overact in my sick dreams,

That I imagined— it cannot be !

Horrible things have been in this wild world,

Prodigious mixtures, and confusions strange

Of good and ill ; and worse have been conceived

Than ever there was found a heart to do.

But never fancy imaged such a deed

As— [Pauses, suddenly recollecting herself.]

Who art thou ? Swear to me, ere I die

With fearful expectation, that indeed

Thou art not what thou seemest—Mother !

Lucretia. Oh ! My sweet child, know you—

Beatrice.

Yet speak it not :

For then if this be truth, that other too

Must be a truth, a firm enduring truth,

Linked with each lasting circumstance of life,

Never to change, never to pass away.

Why so it is. This is the Cenci Palace ;

Thou art Lucretia ; I am Beatrice.

I have talked some wild words, but will no more.

Mother, come near me : from this point of time,

I am—

[Her voice dies away faintly.]

Lucretia. Alas ! what has befallen thee, child !

What has thy father done ?

Beatrice. What have I done ?

Am I not innocent ? Is it my crime

That one with white hair, and imperious brow,

Who tortured me from my forgotten years,

As parents only dare, should call himself

My father, yet should be ! Oh, what am I ?

What name, what place, what memory shall be mine ?

What retrospects, outliving even despair ?

Lucretia. He is a violent tyrant, surely, child :

We know that death alone can make us free ;

His death or ours. But what can he have done

Of deadlier outrage or worse injury ?

Thou art unlike thyself ; thine eyes shoot forth
A wandering and strange spirit. Speak to me,
Unlock those pallid hands whose fingers twine
With one another.

Beatrice.      'Tis the restless life
Tortured within them. If I try to speak
I shall go mad. Ay, something must be done ;
What, yet I know not—something which shall make
The thing that I have suffered but a shadow
In the dread lightning which avenges it ;
Brief, rapid, irreversible, destroying
The consequence of what it cannot cure.
Some such thing is to be endured or done :
When I know what, I shall be still and calm,
And never anything will move me more.
But now !—Oh blood, which art my father's blood,
Circling through these contaminated veins,
If thou, poured forth on the polluted earth,
Could wash away the crime, and punishment
By which I suffer—no, that cannot be !
Many might doubt there were a God above
Who sees and permits evil, and so die :
That faith no agony shall obscure in me.

Lucretia. It must indeed have been some bitter wrong
Yet what, I dare not guess. Oh ! my lost child,
Hide not in proud impenetrable grief
Thy sufferings from my fear.

Beatrice.      I hide them not.
What are the words which you would have me speak ?
I, who can feign no image in my mind
Of that which has transformed me. I, whose thought
Is like a ghost shrouded and folded up
In its own formless horror. Of all words,
That minister to mortal intercourse,
Which wouldst thou hear ? For there is none to tell
My misery : if another ever knew
Aught like to it, she died as I will die,
And left it, as I must, without a name.
Death ! Death ! Our law and our religion call thee
A punishment and a reward. Oh, which Have I deserved ?

Lucretia.      The peace of innocence :
Till in your season you be called to heaven.
Whate'er you may have suffered, you have done
No evil. Death must be the punishment
Of crime, or the reward of trampling down
The thorns which God has strewed upon the path
Which leads to immortality.

Beatrice.      Ay, death—
The punishment of crime. I pray thee, God,

Let me not be bewildered while I judge.
 If I must live day after day, and keep
 These limbs, the unworthy temple of thy spirit,
 As a foul den from which what thou abhorrest
 May mock thee, unavenged—it shall not be !
 Self-murder—no that might be no escape,
 For thy decree yawns like a Hell between
 Our will and it.—Oh ! in this mortal world
 There is no vindication and no law,
 Which can adjudge and execute the doom
 Of that through which I suffer.

Enter ORSINO.

(She approaches him solemnly.)    Welcome, Friend !
 I have to tell you that, since last we met,
 I have endured a wrong so great and strange,
 That neither life nor death can give me rest.
 Ask me not what it is, for there are deeds
 Which have no form, sufferings which have no tongue.
Orsino. And what is he who has thus injured you ?
Beatrice. The man they call my father : a dread name.
Orsino. It cannot be—
Beatrice.    What it can be, or not,
 Forbear to think. It is, and it has been ;
 Advise me how it shall not be again.
 I thought to die ; but a religious awe
 Restraints me, and the dread lest death itself
 Might be no refuge from the consciousness
 Of what is yet unexpiated. Oh, speak !
Orsino. Accuse him of the deed, and let the law
 Avenge thee.

Beatrice.    Oh, ice-hearted counsellor !
 If I could find a word that might make known
 The crime of my destroyer ; and that done,
 My tongue should like a knife tear out the secret
 Which cankers my heart's core ; ay, lay all bare,
 So that my unpolluted fame should be
 With vilest gossips a stale mouthed story ;
 A mock, a by-word, an astonishment :—
 If this were done, which never shall be done,
 Think of the offender's gold, his dreaded hate,
 And the strange horror of the accuser's tale,
 Baffling belief, and overpowering speech ;
 Scarce whispered, unimaginable, wrapt
 In hideous hints— Oh, most assured redress !

Orsino. You will endure it then ?
Beatrice.    Endure !—Orsino,
 It seems your counsel is small profit.
 [Turns from him, and speaks half to herself.]
 Ay,

All must be suddenly resolved and done.
 What is this undistinguishable mist
 Of thoughts, which rise, like shadow after shadow,
 Darkening each other?

Orsino. Should the offender live?
 Triumph in his misdeed? and make, by use,
 His crime, whate'er it is, dreadful no doubt,
 Thine element; until thou mayest become
 Utterly lost; subdued even to the hue
 Of that which thou permittest!

Beatrice (to herself). Mighty death!
 Thou double-visaged shadow! Only judge!
 Rightfullest arbiter! [She retires, absorbed in thought.

Lucretia. If the lightning
 Of God has e'er descended to avenge—

Orsino. Blaspheme not! His high providence commits
 Its glory on this earth, and their own wrongs
 Into the hands of men; if they neglect
 To punish crime—

Lucretia. But if one, like this wretch,
 Should mock, with gold, opinion, law, and power?
 If there be no appeal to that which makes
 The guiltiest tremble! If, because our wrongs,
 For that they are unnatural, strange, and monstrous,
 Exceed all measure of belief? Oh, God!
 If, for the very reasons which should make
 Redress most swift and sure, our injurer triumphs?
 And we, the victims, bear worse punishment
 Than that appointed for their torturer?

Orsino. Think not
 But that there is redress where there is wrong,
 So we be bold enough to seize it.

Lucretia. How?
 If there were any way to make all sure,
 I know not—but I think it might be good
 To—

Orsino. Why, his late outrage to Beatrice;
 For it is such, as I but faintly guess,
 As makes remorse dishonour, and leaves her
 Only one duty, how she may avenge:
 You, but one refuge from ills ill endured;
 Me, ut one counsel—

Lucretia. For we cannot hope
 That aid, or retribution, or resource
 Will arise thence, where every other one
 Might find them with less need. [BEATRICE advances.

Orsino. Then—

Beatrice. Peace, Orsino!
 And, honoured Lady, while I speak, I pray,
 That you put off, as garments overworn,

Forbearance and respect, remorse and fear,
 And all the fit restraints of daily life,
 Which have been borne from childhood, but which now
 Would be a mockery to my holier plea.
 As I have said, I have endured a wrong,
 Which, though it be expressionless, is such
 As asks atonement, both for what is past,
 And lest I be reserved, day after day,
 To load with crimes an overburthened soul,
 And be—what ye can dream not. I have prayed
 To God, and I have talked with my own heart,
 And have unravelled my entangled will,
 And have at length determined what is right.
 Art thou my friend, Orsino? False or true?
 Pledge thy salvation ere I speak.

Orsino. I swear
 To dedicate my cunning, and my strength,
 My silence, and whatever else is mine,
 To thy commands.

Lucretia. You think we should devise
 His death?

Beatrice. And execute what is devised,
 And suddenly. We must be brief and bold.

Orsino. And yet most cautious.
Incretia. For the jealous laws
 Would punish us with death and infamy
 For that which it became themselves to do.

Beatrice. Be cautious as ye may, but prompt. Orsino,
 What are the means?

Orsino. I know two dull, fierce outlaws,
 Who think man's spirit as a worm's, and they
 Would trample out, for any slight caprice,
 The meanest or the noblest life. This mood
 Is marketable here in Rome. They sell
 What we now want.

Lucretia. To-morrow, before dawn,
 Cenzi will take us to that lonely rock,
 Petrella, in the Apulian Apennines.
 If he arrive there—

Beatrice. He must not arrive.
Orsino. Will it be dark before you reach the tower?

Lucretia. The sun will scarce be set.
Beatrice. But I remember
 Two miles on this side of the fort, the road
 Crosses a deep ravine; 'tis rough and narrow,
 And winds with short turns down the precipice;
 And in its depth there is a mighty rock,
 Which has, from unimaginable years,
 Sustained itself with terror and with toil
 Over a gulf, and with the agony

With which it clings seems slowly coming down ;
 Even as a wretched soul hour after hour
 Clings to the mass of life ; yet, clinging, leans ;
 And, leaning, makes more dark the dread abyss
 In which it fears to fall : beneath this crag
 Huge as despair, as if in weariness,
 The melancholy mountain yawns—below,
 You hear but see not an impetuous torrent
 Raging among the caverns, and a bridge
 Crosses the chasm ; and high above there grow,
 With intersecting trunks, from crag to crag,
 Cedars, and yews, and pines ; whose tangled hair
 Is matted in one solid roof of shade
 By the dark ivy's twine. At noon-day here
 'Tis twilight, and at sunset blackest night.

Orsino. Before you reach that bridge make some excuse
 For spurring on your mules, or loitering
 Until—

Beatrice. What sound is that ?

Lucretia. Hark ! No, it cannot be a servant's step ;
 It must be Cenci, unexpectedly
 Returned—Make some excuse for being here.

Beatrice (to Orsino as she goes out). That step we hear approach must never pass
 The bridge of which we spoke.

[Exeunt LUCRETIA and BEATRICE.

Orsino. Cenci must find me here, and I must bear
 The imperious inquisition of his looks
 As to what brought me hither : let me mask
 Mine own in some inane and vacant smile.

Enter GIACOMO, in a hurried manner.

How ! Have you ventured thither ? know you then
 That Cenci is from home ?

Giacomo. I sought him here ;
 And now must wait till he returns.

Orsino. Great God !
 Weigh you the danger of this rashness ?

Giacomo. Ay !
 Does my destroyer know his danger ? We
 Are now no more, as once, parent and child,
 But man to man ; the oppressor to the oppressed ;
 The slanderer to the slandered ; foe to foe.
 He has cast Nature off, which was his shield,
 And Nature casts him off, who is her shame ;
 And I spurn both. Is it a father's broat
 Which I will shake ? and as y, I ask not gold ;
 I ask not happy year ; nor memories
 Of tranquil childhood ; nor home-sheltered love ;

Though all these hast thou torn from me, and more
But only my fair fame; only one hoard
Of peace, which I thought hidden from thy hate,
Under the penury heaped on me by theo ;
Or I will—God can understand and pardon,
Why should I speak with man ?

Orsino. Be calm, dear friend.

Giacomo. Well, I will calmly tell you what
This old Francesco Cenci, as you know,
Borrowed the dowry of my wife from me,
And then denied the loan ; and left me so
In poverty, the which I sought to mend
By holding a poor office in the state.
It had been promised to me, and already
I bought new clothing for my ragged babe
And my wife smiled ; and my heart knew
When Cenci's intercession, as I found,
Conferred this office on a wretch, whom the
He paid for vilest service. I returned
With this ill news, and we sat sad together
Solacing our despondency with tears
Of such affection and unbroken faith
As temper life's worst bitterness ; when he
As he is wont, came to upbraid and curse,
Mocking our poverty, and telling us
Such was God's scourge for disobedient sons.

And then, that I might strike him dumb with shame,
I spoke of my wife's dowry ; but he coined
A brief yet specious tale, how I had wasted
The sum in secret riot ; and he saw
My wife was touched, and he went smiling forth.
And when I knew the impression he had made,
And felt my wife insult with silent scorn
My ardent truth, and look averse and cold,
I went forth too : but soon returned again :
Yet not so soon but that my wife had taught
My children her harsh thoughts, and they all cried,
" Give us clothes, father ! Give us better food !
What you in one night squander were enough
For months ! " I looked and saw that home was hell.
And to that hell will I return no more,
Until mine enemy has rendered up
Atonement, or, as he gave life to me,
I will, reversing nature's law—

Orsino. Trust me,
The compensation which thou seekest here
Will be denied.

Giacomo. Then—Are you not my friend?
Did you not hint at the alternative,
Upon the brink of which you see I stand,

The other day when we conversed together ?
 My wrongs were then less. That word parricido,
 Although I am resolved, haunts me like fear.

Orsino. It must be fear itself, for the bare word
 Is hollow mockery. Mark, how wisest God
 Draws to one point the threads of a just doom,
 So sanctifying it : what you deviso
 Is, as it were, accomplished.

Giacomo. Is he dead ?

Orsino. His grave is ready. Know that since we met
 Cenci has done an outrage to his daughter.

Giacomo. What outrage ?

Orsino. That she speaks not, but you may Conceive such half conjectures as I do,
 From her fixed paleness, and the lofty grief
 Of her stern brow, bent on the idle air,
 And her severe unmolded voice,
 Drowning both tenderness and dread ; and last
 From this ; that whilst her step-mother and I,
 Bewildered in our horror, talk together
 With obscure hints ; both self-misunderstood,
 And darkly guessing, stumbling, in our talk,
 Over the truth, and yet to its revenge,
 She interrupted us, and with a look
 Which told, before she spoke it, he must die--

Giacomo. It is enough. My doubts are well appeased ;
 There is a higher reason for the act
 Than mine ; there is a holier judge than me,
 A more unblamed avenger. Beatrice,
 Who in the gentleness of thy sweet youth
 Hast never trodden on a worm, or bruised
 A living flower, but thou hast pitied it
 With needless tears ! Fair sister, thou in whom Men wondered how such loveliness and wisdom
 Did not destroy each other ! Is there made
 Ravage of thee ? O, heart, I ask no more
 Justification ! Shall I wait, Orsino,
 Tid he return, and stab him at the door ?

Orsino. Not so ; some accident might interpose
 To rescue him from what is now most sure ;
 And you are unprovided where to fly,
 How to excuse or to conceal. Nay, listen :
 All is contrived ; success is so assured
 That--

Enter BEATRICE.

- * Beatrice. 'Tis my brother's voice ! You know me not ?
- Giacomo.* My sister, my lost sister !
- Beatrice.* Lost indeed !

I see Orsino has talked with you, and
 That you conjecture things too horrible
 To speak, yet far less than the truth. Now, stay not,
 He might return : yet kiss me ; I shall know
 That then thou hast consented to his death.
 Farewell, farewell ! Let piety to God,
 Brotherly love, justice and clemency,
 And all things that make tender hardest hearts,
 Make thine hard, brother. Answer not—farewell.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE II. - A mean Apartment in GIACOMO's House.

GIACOMO alone.

Giacomo. 'Tis midnight, and Orsino comes not yet.

[Thunder, and the sound of a storm.]

What ! can the everlasting elements
 Feel with a worm like man ? If so, the shaft
 Of mercy-winged lightning would not fall
 On stones and trees. My wife and children sleep :
 They are now living in unmeaning dreams :
 But I must wake, still doubting if that deed
 Be just which was most necessary. O,
 Thou unreplenished lamp ! whose narrow fire
 Is shaken by the wind, and on whose edge
 Devouring darkness hovers ! Thou small flame,
 Which, as a dying pulse rises and falls,
 Still flickerest up and down, how very soon,
 Did I not feed thee, wouldest thou fail and be
 As thou hadst never been ! So wastes and sinks
 Even now, perhaps, the life that kindled mine :
 But that no power can fill with vital oil
 That broken lamp of flesh. Ha ! 'tis the blood
 Which fed these veins that ebbs till all is cold :
 It is the form that moulded mine, that sinks
 Into the white and yellow spasms of death :
 It is the soul by which mine was arrayed
 In God's immortal likeness which now stands
 Naked before Heaven's judgment-seat !

[A bell strikes.]

One ! Two !

The hours crawl on ; and when my hairs are white
 My son will then perhaps be waiting thus,
 Tortured between just hate and vain remorse ;
 Chiding the tardy messenger of news
 Like those which I expect. I almost wish

He be not dead, although my wrongs are great ;
Yet—'tis Orsino's step.

[Enter ORSINO.]

Speak !

Orsino. I am come
To say he has escaped.

Giacomo. Escaped !

Orsino. And safe
Within Petrella. He passed by the spot
Appointed for the deed an hour too soon.

Giacomo. Are we the fools of such contingencies ?
And do we waste in blind misgivings thus
The hours when we should act ? Then wind and thunder,
Which seemed to howl his knell, is the loud laughter
With which Heaven mocks our weakness ! I henceforth
Will ne'er repent of aught designed or done,
But my repentance.

Orsino. See, the lamp is out.

Giacomo. If no remorse is ours when the dim air
Has drank this innocent flame, why should we quail
When Cenci's life, that light by which ill spirits
See the worst deeds they prompt, shall sink for ever ?
No, I am hardened.

Orsino. Why, what need of this ?
Who feared the pale intrusion of remorse
In a just deed ? Although our first plan failed,
Doubt not but he will soon be laid to rest.
But light the lamp ; let us not talk i' the dark.

Giacomo (Lighting the lamp.) And yet, once quenched, I cannot thus relume

My father's lie : do you not think his ghost
Might plead that argument with God ?

Orsino. Once gone,
You cannot now recal your sister's peace ;
Your own extinguished years of youth and hope ;
Nor your wife's bitter words ; nor all the taunts
Which, from the prosperous, weak misfortune takes ;
Nor your dead mother ; nor—

Giacomo. O, speak no more !
I am resolved, although this very hand
Must quench the life that animated it.

Orsino. There is no need of that. Listen : you know
Olimpio, the castellan of Petrella
In old Colonna's time ; him whom your father
Degraded from his post ? And Marzio,
That desperate wretch, whom he deprived last year
Of a reward of blood, well earned and due ?

Giacomo. I knew Olimpio ; and they say he hated
Old Cenci so, that in his silent rage
His lips grew white, only to see him pass.
Of Marzio I know nothing.

Orsino. Marzio's hate
 Matches Olimpio's. I have sent these men,
 But in your name, and as at your request,
 To talk with Beatrice and Lucretia.

Giacomo. Only to talk ?

Orsino. The moments which even now
 Pass onward to to-morrow's midnight hour,
 May memorise their flight with death : ere then
 They must have talked, and may perhaps have done,
 And made an end.

Giacomo. Listen ! What sound is that ?

Orsino. The house-dog moans, and the beams crack : nought else.

Giacomo. It is my wife complaining in her sleep :
 I doubt not she is saying bitter things
 Of me ; and all my children round her dreaming
 That I deny them sustenance.

Orsino. Whilst he
 Who truly took it from them, and who fills
 Their hungry rest with bitterness, now sleeps
 Lapped in bad pleasures, and triumphantly
 Mocks thee in visions of successful hate
 Too like the truth of day.

Giacomo. If e'er he wakes
 Again, I will not trust to hireling hands—

Orsino. Why, that were well. I must be gone ; good night !
 When next we meet may all be done !

Giacomo. And all
 Forgotten : Oh, that I had never been ! [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Castle of Petrella. Enter CENCI.

Cenci. She comes not ; yet I left her even now
 Vanquished and faint. She knows the penalty
 Of her delay ; yet what if threats are vain ?
 Am I not now within Petrella's moat ?
 Or fear I still the eyes and ears of Rome ?
 Might I not drag her by the golden hair ?
 Stamp on her ? Keep her sleepless, till her brain
 Be overworn ? Tame her with chains and famine ?
 Less would suffice. Yet so to leave undone
 What I most seek ! No, 'tis her stubborn will,
 Which, by its own consent, shall stoop as low
 As that which drags it down. [Enter LUCRETIA.
 Thou loathed wretch !

Hide thee from my abhorrence ; fly, begone !
Yet stay ! Bid Beatrice come hither.

Lucretia. Oh,
Husband ! I pray, for thine own wretched sake,
I heed what thou dost. A man who walks like thee
Through crimes, and through the danger of his crimes,
Each hour may stumble o'er a sudden grave.
And thou art old ; thy hairs are hoary grey ;
As thou wouldst save thyself from death and hell,
Pity thy daughter ; give her to some friend
In marriage ; so that she may tempt thee not
To hatred, or worse thoughts, if worse there be.

Cenci. What ! like her sister, who has found a home
To mock my hate from with prosperity ?
Strange ruin shall destroy both her and thee,
And all that yet remain. My death may be
Rapid, her destiny outspeeds it. Go,
Bid her come hither, and before my mood
Be changed, lest I should drag her by the hair.

Lucretia. She sent me to thee, husband. At thy presence
She fell, as thou dost know, into a trance ;
And in that trance she heard a voice which said,
“Cenci must die ! Let him confess himself !
Even now the accusing angel waits to hear
If God, to punish his enormous crimes,
Harden his dying heart !”

Cenci. Why—such things are :
No doubt divine revealings may be made.
Tis plain I have been favoured from above,
For when I cursed my sons, they died.—Ay—so—
As to the right or wrong, that's talk—repentance—
Repentance is an easy moment's work,
And more depends on God than me. Well—well—
I must give up the greater point, which was
To poison and corrupt her soul. [A pause ; LUCRETIA approaches anxiously, and then shrinks back as he speaks.]

One, two ; .

Ay—Rocco and Cristofano my curse
Strangled : and Giacomo, I think, will find
Life a worse Hell than that beyond the grave :
Beatrice shall, if there be skill in hate,
Die in despair, blaspheming : to Bernardo,
He is so innocent, I will bequeath
The memory of these deeds, and make his youth
The sepulchre of hope, where evil thoughts
Shall grow like weeds on a neglected tomb.
When all is done, out in the wide Campagna,
I will pile up my silver and my gold ;
My costly robes, paintings, and tapestries ;
My parchments, and all records of my wealth ;

And make a bonfire in my joy, and leave
 Of my possessions nothing but my name ;
 Which shall be an inheritance to strip
 Its wearer bare as infamy. That done,
 My soul, which is a scourge, will I resign
 Into the hands of him who wielded it ;
 Be it for its own punishment or theirs,
 He will not ask it of me till the lash
 Be broken in its last and deepest wound ;
 Until its hate be all inflicted. Yet,
 Lest death outspeed my purpose, let me make
 Short work and sure.

[Going.]

Lucretia (stops him). Oh, stay ! It was a feint :
 She had no vision, and she heard no voice.
 I said it but to awe thee.

Cenci. That is well.
 Vile palterer with the sacred truth of God,
 Be thy soul choked with that blaspheming lie !
 For Beatrice, worse terrors are in store,
 To bend her to my will.

Lucretia. Oh ! to what will ?
 What cruel sufferings, more than she has known,
 Caust thou inflict ?

Cenci. Andrea ! go, call my daughter,
 And if she comes not, tell her that I come.
 What sufferings ? I will drag her, step by step,
 Through infantries unheard of among men ;
 She shall stand shelterless in the broad noon
 Of public scorn, for acts blazoned abroad,
 One among which shall be -What ? Canst thou guess ?
 She shall become (for what she most abhors
 Shall have a fascination to entrap
 Her loathing will), to her own conscious self
 All she appears to others ; and when dead,
 As she shall die unshrived and unforgiven,
 A rebel to her father and her God,
 Her corpse shall be abandoned to the hounds ;
 Her name shall be the terror of the earth ;
 Her spirit shall approach the throne of God
 Plague-spotted with my curses. I will make
 Body and soul a monstrous lump of ruin.

Enter ANDREA.

Andrea. The lady Beatrice —

Cenci. Speak, pale slave ! What Said she ?

Andrea. My lord, 'twas what she looked ; she said :
 " Go tell my father that I see the gulf
 Of Hell between us two, which he may pass ;
 I will not."

[Exit ANDREA.]

Cenci. Go thou quick, Lucretia,
Tell her to come ; yet let her understand
Her coming is consent : and say, moreover,
That if she come not I will curse her. [Exit LUCRETIA.]

Ha !

With what but with a father's curse doth God
Panic-strike armed victory, and make pale
Cities in their prosperity ? The world's Father
Must grant a parent's prayer against his child,
Be he who asks even what men call me.
Will not the death of her rebellious brothers
Awe her before I speak ? For I on them
Did implore quick ruin, and it came. [Enter LUCRETIA.]
Well ; what ? Speak, wretch !

Lucretia. She said, "I cannot come ;
Go tell my father that I see a torrent
Of his own blood raging between us."

Cenci (kneeling) God !
Hear me ! If this most specious mass of flesh,
Which thou hast made my daughter ; this my blood,
This particle of my divided being ;
Or rather, this my bane and my disease,
Whose sight infects and poisons me ; this devil,
Which sprung from me as from a hell, was meant
To aught good use ; if her bright loveliness
Was kindled to illumine this dark world ;
If nursed by thy selectest dew of love,
Such virtues blossom in her as should make
The pearl of life, I pray thee for my sake,
As thou the common God and Father art
Of her, and me, and all ; reverse that doom !
Earth, in the name of God, let her food be
Poison, until she be encrusted round
With leprous stains ! Heaven, rain upon her head
The blistering drops of the Marcinna's dew,
Till she be speckled like a toad ; parch up
Those love-ekindled lips, warp those fine limbs
To loathed laueness ! All-beholding sun,
Strike in thine envy those life-darting eyes
With thine own blinding beams !

Lucretia. Peace ! peace !
For thine own sake unsay those dreadful words.
When high God grants, he punishes such prayers.

Cenci (leaping up, and throwing his right hand towards Heaven). He does his will, I mine ! This in addition,
That if she have a child —

Lucretia. Horrible thought !
Cenci. That if she ever have a child ; and thou,
Quick Nature ! I adjure thee by thy God,
That thou be fruitful in her, and increase

And multiply, fulfilling his command,
 And my deep imprecation ! May it be
 A hideous likeness of herself; that as
 From a distorting mirror, she may see
 Her image mixed with what she most abhors,
 Smiling upon her from her nursing breast.
 And that the child may from its infancy
 Grow, day by day, more wicked and deformed,
 Turning her mother's love to misery :
 And that both she and it may live, until
 It shall repay her care and pain with hate,
 Or what may else be more unnatural.
 So he may hunt her through the clamorous scoffs
 Of the loud world to a dishonoured grave.
 Shall I revoke this curse ? Go, bid her come,
 Before my word, are chronicled in heaven. [Exit LUCRETIA.
 I do not feel as if I were a man,
 But like a fiend appointed to chastise
 The offences of some unremembered world.
 My blood is running up and down my veins !
 A fearful pleasure makes it prick and tingle :
 I feel a giddy sickness of strange awe ;
 My heart is beating with an expectation
 Of horrid joy. [Enter LUCRETIA.

What? Speak!

Lucretia. She bids thee curse ;
 And if thy curses, as they cannot do,
 Could kill her soul—

Cenci. She would not come. 'Tis well,
 I can do both : first take what I demand,
 And then extort concession. To thy chamber !
 Fly ere I spurn thee : and beware this night
 That thou cross not my footsteps. It were safer
 To come between the tiger and his prey. [Exit LUCRETIA.
 It must be late : mine eyes grow weary dim
 With unaccustomed heaviness of sleep.
 Conscience ! Oh, thou most insolent of lies !
 They say that sleep, that healing dew of heaven,
 Steeps not in balm the foldings of the brain
 Which thinks thee an impostor. I will go,
 First to belie thee with an hour of rest,
 Which will be deep and calm, I feel ; and then—
 O, multitudinous Hell, the fiends will shake
 Thine arches with the laughter of their joy !
 There shall be lamentation heard in Heaven
 As o'er an angel fallen ; and upon Earth
 All good shall droop and sicken, and ill things
 Shall, with a spirit of unnatural life,
 Stir and be quickened—even as I am now. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Before the Castle of Petrella.

Enter BEATRICE and LUCRETIA above on the ramparts.

Beatrice. They come not yet.

Lucretia. 'Tis scarce midnight.

Beatrice. How slow

Behind the course of thought, even sick with speed,
Lags leaden-footed Time !

Lucretia. The minutes pass--

If he should wake before the deed is done ?

Beatrice. O, Mother ! He must never wake again.
What thou hast said persuades me that our act
Will but dislodge a spirit of deep hell
Out of a human form.

Lucretia. 'Tis true he spoke
Of death and judgment with strange confidence
For one so wicked ; as a man believing
In God, yet recking not of good or ill,
And yet to die without confession !--

Beatrice. Oh !
Believe that Heaven is merciful and just,
And will not add our dread necessity
To the amount of his offences.

[Enter OLIMPIO and MARZIO, below.

Lucretia. See,

They come.

Beatrice. All mortal things must hasten thus
To their dark end. Let us go down.

[Exit LUCRETIA and BEATRICE from above.

Olimpio. How feel you to this work ?

Marzio. As one who thinks
A thousand crowns excellent market price
For an old murderer's life. Your cheeks are pale.

Olimpio. It is the white reflection of your own,
Which you call pale.

Marzio. Is that their natural hue ?

Olimpio. Or 'tis my hate, and the deferred desire
To wreak it, which extinguishes their blood.

Marzio. You are inclined then to this business ?

Olimpio. Ay,
If one should bribe me with a thousand crowns
To kill a serpent which had stung my child,
I could not be more willing.

[Enter BEATRICE and LUCRETIA below.
Noble ladies !

Beatrice. Are ye resolved ?

Olimpio. Is he asleep ?

Marzio. Is all

Quiet ?

Lucretia. I mixed an opiate with his drink :
He sleeps so soundly—

Beatrice. That his death will be
But as a change of sin-chastising dreams,
A dark continuance of the Hell within him,
Which God extinguish ! But ye are resolved ?
Ye know it is a high and holy deed ?

Olimpio. We are resolved.

Marzio. As to the how this act
Be warranted, it rests with you.

Beatrice. Well, follow !

Olimpio. Hush ! Hark ! What noise is that ?

Marzio. Ha ! some one comes !

Beatrice. Ye conscience-stricken cravens, rock to rest
Your baby hearts. It is the iron gate,
Which ye left open, swinging to the wind,
That enters whistling as in scorn. Come, follow !
And be your steps like mine, light, quick, and bold.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—An Apartment in the Castle.

Enter BEATRICE and LUCRETIA.

Lucretia. They are about it now.

Beatrice. Nay, it is done.

Lucretia. I have not heard him groan.

Beatrice. He will not groan.

Lucretia. What sound is that ?

Beatrice. List ! 'tis the tread of feet
About his bed.

Lucretia. My God !

If he be now a cold stiff corpse—

Beatrice. O, fear not
What may be done, but what is left undone :
The act seals all.

[Enter OLIMPIO and MARZIO.

Is it accomplished ?

What ?

Olimpio. Did you not call ?

Beatrice. When ?

Olimpio. Now.

Beatrice. I ask if all is over ?

Olimpio. We dare not kill an old and sleeping man ;
His thin grey hair, his stern and reverent brow,
His veined hands crossed on his heaving breast,

And the calm innocent sleep in which he lay,
Quelled me. Indeed, indeed, I cannot do it.

Marzio. But I was bolder ; for I chid Olimpio,
And bade him bear his wrongs to his own grave,
And leave me the reward. And now my knife
Touched the loose wrinkled throat, when the old man
Stirred in his sleep, and said, "God ! hear, O hear,
A father's curse ! What, art thou not our father ?"
And then he laughed. I knew it was the ghost
Of my dead father speaking through his lips,
And could not kill him.

Beatrice. Miserable slaves !
Where, if ye dare not kill a sleeping man,
Found ye the boldness to return to me
With such a deed undone ? Base palterers !
Cowards and traitors ! Why, the very conscience
Which ye would sell for gold and for revenge
Is an equivocation : it sleeps over
A thousand daily acts disgracing men ;
And when a deed, where mercy insults Heaven—
Why do I talk !

[Snatching a dagger from one of them, and raising it.

Hadst thou a tongue to say,

She murdered her own father, I must do it !
But never dream ye shall outlive him long !

Olimpio. Stop, for God's sake !

Marzio. I will go back and kill him.

Olimpio. Give me the weapon, we must do thy will.

Beatrice. Take it ! Depart ! Return !

[Exeunt Olimpio and Marzio.

How pale thou art !

We do but that which 'twere a deadly crime
To leave undone.

Luretia. Would it were done !

Beatrice. Even whilst

That doubt is passing through your mind, the world
Is conscious of a change. Darkness and hell
Have swallowed up the vapour they sent forth
To blacken the sweet light of life. My breath
Comes, methinks, lighter, and the jellied blood
Runs freely through my veins. Hark !

[Enter Olimpio and Marzio.

He is —

Dead !

Marzio. We strangled him, that there might be no blood ;
And then we threw his heavy Corpse i' the garden
Under the balcony ; 'twill seem it fell.

Beatrice (giving them a bag of coin). Here, take this gold, and hasten to your homes.
And, Marzio, because thou wast only awed

By that which made me tremble, wear thou this !
 [Clothes him in a rich mantle
 It was the mantle which my grandfather
 Wore in his high prosperity, and men
 Envied his state : so may they envy thine.
 Thou wert a weapon in the hand of God
 To a just use. Live long and thrive ! And, mark,
 If thou hast crimes, repent : this deed is none.

[A horn is sounded.]

Lucretia. Hark, 'tis the castle horn : my God ! it sounds
 Like the last trump.

Beatrice. Some tedious guest is coming.

Lucretia. The drawbridge is let down ; there is a tramp
 Of horses in the court ! fly, hide yourselves !

[Exit OLOMPIO and MARZIO]

Beatrice. Let us retire to counterfeit deep rest ;
 I scarcely need to counterfeit it now ;
 The spirit which doth reign within these limbs
 Seemeth strangely undisturbed. I could even sleep
 Fearless and calm : all ill is surely past.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Another Apartment in the Castle.

Enter on one side the Legate SAVELLA, introduced by a Servant, and on the other LUCRETIA and BERNARDO.

Savella. Lady, my duty to his Holiness
 Be my excuse that thus unseasonably
 I break upon your rest. I must speak with Count Cenci ; doth he sleep ?

Lucretia (in a hurried and confused manner.) I think he sleeps
 Yet, wake him not, I pray, spare me awhile,
 He is a wicked and a wrathful man ;
 Should he be roused out of his sleep to-night,
 Which is, I know, a hell of angry dreams,
 It were not well ; indeed it were not well.
 Wait till day-break,-- (Aside.) O, I am deadly sick !

Savella. I grieve thus to distress you, but the Count
 Must answer charges of the gravest import,
 And suddenly ; such my commission is.

Lucretia (with increased agitation.) I dare not rouse him, I know none who dare ;
 'Twere perilous ;—you might as safely waken
 A serpent ; or a corpse in which some fiend
 Were laid to sleep.

Savella. Lady, my moments here
 Are counted. I must rouse him from his sleep,
 Since none else dare.

Lucretia (aside.) O, terror ! O, despair !
 (To BERNARDO.) Bernardo, conduct you the Lord Legate to Your father's chamber. [Exit SAVELLA and BERNARDO]

Enter BEATRICE.

Beatrice. 'Tis a messenger
 Come to arrest the culprit who now stands
 Before the throne of unappealable God.
 Both Earth and Heaven, consenting arbiters,
 Acquit our deed.

Lucretia. Oh, agony of fear !
 Would that he yet might live ! Even now I heard
 The legate's followers whisper as they passed
 They had a warrant for his instant death.
 All was prepared by unforbidden means,
 Which we must pay so dearly, having done.
 Even now they search the tower, and find the body ;
 Now they suspect the truth ; now they consult,
 Before they come to tax us with the fact ;
 O horrible, 'tis all discovered !

Beatrice. Mother,
 What is done wisely, is done well. Be bold
 As thou art just. 'Tis like a truant child,
 To fear that others know what thou hast done,
 Even from thine own strong consciousness, and thus
 Write on unsteady eyes and altered cheeks
 All thou wouldst hide. Be faithful to thyself,
 And fear no other witness but thy fear.
 For if, as cannot be, some circumstance
 Should rise in accusation, we can blind
 Suspicion with such cheap astonishment,
 Or overbear it with such guiltless pride,
 As murderers cannot feign. The deed is done,
 And what may follow now regards not me.
 I am as universal as the light ;
 Free as the earth-surrounding air ; as firm
 As the world's centre. Consequence, to me,
 Is as the wind which strikes the solid rock,
 But shakes it not. [A cry within and tumult
Beatrix. Murder ! Murder ! Murder !

Enter BERNARDO and SAVELLA.

Savella (to his followers.) Go, search the castle round ; sound the alarm ;
 Look to the gates, that none escape

Beatrice. What now ?
Bernardo. I know not what to say—my father's dead.
Beatrice. How, dead ? he only sleeps ; you mistake, brother.
 His sleep is very calm, very like death ;

'Tis wonderful how well a tyrant sleeps.
He is not dead?

Bernardo. Dead ; murdered !

Lucretia (with extreme agitation.) Oh, no, no,
He is not murdered, though he may be dead ;
I have alone the keys of those apartments.

Sarella. Ha ! Is it so ?

Beatrice. My lord, I pray excuse us ;
We will retire ; my mother is not well ;
She seems quite overcome with this strange horror.

| Exeunt LUCRETIA and BEATRICE.

Sarella. Can you suspect who may have murdered him ?

Bernardo. I know not what to think.

Sarella. Can you name any
Who had an interest in his death ?

Bernardo. Alas !

I can name none who had not, and those most
Who most lament that such a deed is done ;
My mother, and my sister, and myself.

Sarella. 'Tis strange ! There were clear marks of violence.
I found the old man's body in the moonlight,
Hanging beneath the window of his chamber
Among the branches of a pine : he could not
Have fallen there, for all his limbs lay heaped
And effortless ; 'tis true there was no blood.—
Favour me, sir — it much imports your house
That all should be made clear — to tell the ladies
That I request their presence. | Exit BERNARDO.

Enter Guards, bringing in MARZIO.

Guard. We have one.

Officer. My lord, we found this ruffian and another
Lurking among the rocks : there is no doubt
But that they are the murderers of Count Cenci :
Each had a bag of coin ; this fellow wore
A gold-inwoven robe, which, shining bright
Under the dark rocks to the glimmering moon,
Betrayed them to our notice : the other fell
Desperately fighting.

Sarella. What does he confess ?

Officer. He keeps firm silence ; but these lines found on him
May speak.

Sarella. Their language is at least sincere. | Reads.

" TO THE LADY BEATRICE.

" That the atonement of what my nature sickens to conjecture may soon arrive, I send thee, at thy brother's desire, those who will speak and do more than I dare write.

" Thy devoted servant,

" ORSINO."

Enter LUCRETIA, BEATRICE, and BERNARDO.

Knowest thou this writing, lady?

Beatrice.

No.

Sarella.

Nor thou?

Lucretia (her conduct throughout the scene is marked by extreme agitation.)

Where was it found? What is it? It should be Orsino's hand! It speaks of that strange horror
Which never yet found utterance, but which made
Between that hapless child and her dead father
A gulf of obscure hatred.

Sarella. Is it so?

Is it true, lady, that thy father did
Such outrages as to awaken in thee
Unfilial hate?

Beatrice. Not hate, 'twas more than hate:
This is most true, yet wherefore question me?

Sarella. There is a deed demanding question done;
Thou hast a secret which will answer not.

Beatrice. What sayest? My lord, your words are bold and rash.

Sarella. I do arrest all present in the name
Of the Pope's Holiness. You must to Rome.

Lucretia. O, not to Rome! Indeed we are not guilty.

Beatrice. Guilty! Who dares talk of guilt? My lord,
I am more innocent of parricide
Than is a child born fatherless. Dear mother,
Your gentleness and patience are no shield
For this keen judging world, this two-edged lie,
Which seems, but is not. What! will human laws,
Rather will ye who are their ministers,
Bar all access to retribution first,
And then, when Heaven doth interpose to do
What ye neglect, arming familiar things
To the redress of an unwonted crime,
Make ye the victims who demanded it
Culpits? 'Tis ye are culprits! That poor wretch
Who stands so pale, and trembling, and amazed,
If it be true he murdered Cenci, was
A word in the right hand of justest God.
Wherefore should I have wielded it? unless
The crimes which mortal tongue dare never name,
God therefore scruples to avenge.

Sarella. You own
That you desired his death?

Beatrice. It would have been
A crime no less than his, if for one moment
That fierce desire had faded in my heart.
'Tis true I did believe, and hope, and pray,
Ay, I even knew— for God is wise and just,

That some strange sudden death hung over him.
 'Tis true that this did happen, and most true
 There was no other rest for me on earth,
 No other hope in Heaven:—now what of this? [both:
Sarella. Strange thoughts beget strange deeds; and here are
 I judge thee not.

Beatrice. And yet, if you arrest me,
 You are the judge and executioner
 Of that which is the life of life: the breath
 Of accusation kills an innocent name,
 And leaves for lame acquittal the poor life,
 Which is a mask without it. 'Tis most false
 That I am guilty of foul parricide;
 Although I must rejoice, for justest cause,
 That other hands have sent my father's soul
 To ask the mercy he denied to me.
 Now leave us free: stain not a noble house
 With vague surmises of rejected crime;
 Add to our sufferings and your own neglect
 No heavier sum: let them have been enough:
 Leave us the wreck we have.

Sarella. I dare not, lady.
 I pray that you prepare yourselves for Rome:
 There the Pope's further pleasure will be known.

Lucretia. O, not to Rome! O, take us not to Rome!
Beatrice. Why not to Rome, dear mother? There, as here,
 Our innocence is as an armed heel
 To trample accusation. God is there,
 As here, and with his shadow ever clothes
 The innocent, the injured and the weak;
 And such are we. Cheer up, dear lady! lean
 On me; collect your wandering thoughts. My lord,
 As soon as you have taken some refreshment,
 And had all such examinations made
 Upon the spot, as may be necessary
 To the full understanding of this matter,
 We shall be ready. Mother, will you come?

Lucretia. Ha! they will bind us to the rack, and wrest
 Self-accusation from our agony!
 Will Giacomo be there? Orsino? Marzio?
 All present; all confronted; all demanding
 Each from the other's countenance the thing
 Which is in every heart! O, misery!

[She faints, and is borne out.

Sarella. She faints; an ill appearance this.

Beatrice. My lord,
 She knows not yet the uses of the world.
 She fears that power is as a beast which grasps
 And loosens not: a snake whose look transmutes
 All things to guilt, which is its nutriment.

She cannot know how well the supine slaves
 Of blind authority read the truth of things
 When written on a brow of guilelessness :
 She sees not yet triumphant Innocence
 Stand at the judgment-seat of mortal man,
 A judge and an accuser of the wrong
 Which drags it there. Prepare yourself, my lord ;
 Our suite will join yours in the court below. [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. - An Apartment in ORSINO's Palace.

Enter ORSINO and GIACOMO.

Giacomo. Do evil deeds thus quickly come to end ?
 O that the vain remorse which must chastise
 Crimes done, had but as loud a voice to warn,
 As its keen sting is mortal to avenge !
 O that the hour when present had cast off
 The mantle of its mystery, and shown
 The ghastly form with which it now returns
 When its scared game is roused, cheering the hounds
 Of conscience to their prey ! Alas, alas !
 It was a wicked thought, a piteous deed,
 To kill an o'd and hoary-headed father.

Orsino. It has turned out unluckily, in truth.

Giacomo. To violate the sacred doors of sleep ;
 To cheat kind nature of the placid death
 Which she prepares for overwearied age ;
 To drag from Heaven an unrepentant soul,
 Which might have quenched in reconciling prayers
 A life of burning crimes ...

Orsino. You cannot say
 I urged you to the deed.

Giacomo. O, had I never Found in thy smooth and ready countenance
 The mirror of my darkest thoughts ; hadst thou
 Never with hints and questions made me look Upon the monster of my thought, until
 It grew familiar to desire -

Orsino. 'Tis thus
 Men cast the blame of their unprosperous acts
 Upon the abettors of their own resolve ;
 Or any thing but their weak, guilty selves.
 And yet, confess the truth, it is the peril
 In which you stand that gives you this pale sickness

Of penitence ; confess, 'tis fear disguised
From its own shame that takes the mantle now
Of thin remorse. What if we yet were safe ?

Giacomo. How can that be ! Already Beatrice,
Lucretia, and the murderer, are in prison.
I doubt not officers are, whilst we speak,
Sent to arrest us.

Orsino. I have all prepared
For instant flight. We can escape even now,
So we take fleet occasion by the hair.

Giacomo. Rather expire in tortures, as I may.
What ! will you cast by self-accusing flight
Assured conviction upon Beatrice ?
She who alone, in thi~~s~~ unnatural work,
Stands like God's angel ministered upon
By fiends ; avenging such a nameless wrong
As turns black parricide to piety ;
Whilst we for basest ends - I fear, Orsino,
While I consider all your words and looks,
Comparing them with your proposal now,
That you must be a villain. For what end
Could you engage in such a perilous crime,
Training me on with hints, and signs, and smiles,
Even to this gulf ! Thou art no liar ! No,
Thou art a lie ! Traitor and murderer !
Coward and slave ! But no - defend thyself ; {Drawing.
Let the sword speak what the indignant tongue
Disdains to brand thee with.

Orsino. Put up your weapon.
Is it the desperation of your fear
Makes you thus rash and sudden with your friend,
Now ruined for your sake ! If honest anger
Have moved you, know, that what I just proposed
Was but to try you. As for me, I think
Thankless affection led me to this point,
From which, if my firm temper could repent,
I cannot now recede. Even whilst we speak,
The ministers of justice wait below :
They grant me these brief moments. Now, if you
Have any word of melancholy comfort
To speak to your pale wife, 'twere best to pass
Out at the postern, and avoid them so.

Giacomo. Oh, generous friend ! How canst thou pardon me
Would that my life could purchase thine !

Orsino. That wish
Now comes a day too late. Haste ; fare thee well !
Hear'st thou not steps along the corridor ? {Exit GIACOMO.
I'm sorry for it ; but the guards are waiting
At his own gate, and such was my contrivance
That I might rid me both of him and them.

I thought to act a solemn comedy
 Upon the painted scene of this new world,
 And to attain my own peculiar ends
 By some such plot of mingled good and ill
 As others weave ; but there arose a Power
 Which grasped and snapped the threads of my device,
 And turned it to a net of ruin—Ha !      [A shout is heard.]
 Is that my name I hear proclaimed abroad ?
 But I will pass, wrapt in a vile disguise ;
 Rags on my back, and a false innocence
 Upon my face, through the misdeeming crowd,
 Which judges by what seems. 'Tis easy then,
 For a new name, and for a country new,
 And a new life, fashioned on old desires,
 To change the honours of abandoned Rome.
 And these must be the masks of that within,
 Which must remain unaltered. Oh, I fear
 That what is past will never let me rest !
 Why, when none else is conscious, but myself,
 Of my misdeeds, should my own heart's contempt
 Trouble me ? Have I not the power to fly
 My own reproaches ? Shall I be the slave
 Of—what ? A word ! which those of this false world
 Employ against each other, not themselves ;
 As men wear daggers not for self offence.
 But if I am mistaken, where shall I
 Find the disguise to hide me from myself,
 As now I skulk from every other eye !      [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Hall of Justice.

CAMILLO, JUDGES, &c., are discovered seated ; MARZIO is led in.

First Judge. Accused, do you persist in your denial ?
 I ask you, are you innocent, or guilty ?
 I demand who were the participators
 In your offence ! Speak truth, and the whole truth.

Marzio. My God ! I did not kill him ; I know nothing ;
 Olimpio sold the robe to me from which
 You would infer my guilt.

Second Judge. Away with him !

First Judge. Dare you, with lips yet white from the rack's kiss,
 Speak false ! Is it so soft a questioner,
 That you would bandy lover's talk with it,
 Till it wind out your life and soul ? Away !

Marzio. Spare me ! O, spare ! I will confess.

First Judge. Then speak.

Marzio. I strangled him in his sleep.

First Judge. Who urged you to it ?

Marzio. His own son Giacomo, and the young prelate
Orsino sent me to Petrella; there
The ladies Beatrice and Lucretia
Tempted me with a thousand crowns, and I
And my companion forthwith murdered him.
Now let me die.

First Judge. This sounds as bad as truth. Guards, there,
Lead forth the prisoners.

[Enter LUCRETIA, BEATRICE, and GIACOMO, guarded.
Look upon this man;

When did you see him last?

Beatrice. We never saw him.

Marzio. You know me too well, Lady Beatrice.

Beatrice. I knew thee! How! where? when?

Marzio. You know 'twas I
Whom you did urge with menaces and bribes
To kill your father. When the thing was done,
You clothed me in a robe of woven gold,
And bade me thrive; how I have thriven, you see.
You, my Lord Giacomo, Lady Lucretia,
You know that what I speak is true.

[BEATRICE advances towards him; he covers his face, and shrinks back.

Oh, dart

The terrible resentment of those eyes
On the dread earth! Turn them away from me!
They wound: 'twas torture forced the truth. My lords,
Having said this, let me be led to death.

Beatrice. Poor wretch, I pity thee: yet stay awhile.

Camillo. Guards, lead him not away.

Beatrice. Cardinal Camillo,
You have a good repute for gentleness
And wisdom: can it be that you sit here
To countenance a wicked farce like this?
When some obscure and trembling slave is dragged
From sufferings which might shake the sternest heart,
And bade to answer, not as he believes,
But as those may suspect or do desire,
Whose questions thence suggest their own reply:
And that in peril of such hideous torments
As merciful God spares even the damned. Speak now
The thing you surely know, which is, that you,
If your fine frame were stretched upon that wheel,
And you were told, "Confess that you did poison
Your little nephew: that fair blue-eyed child
Who was the load-star of your life;" and though
All see, since his most swift and piteous death,
That day and night, and heaven and earth, and time,
And all the things hoped for or done therein,
Are changed to you, through your exceeding grief,

Yet you would say, "I confess anything"--
And beg from your tormentors, like that slave,
The refuge of dishonourable death.
I pray thee, Cardinal, that thou assert
My innocence.

Camillo (much moved). What shall we think, my lords ?
Shame on these tears ! I thought the heart was frozen
Which is their fountain. I would pledge my soul
That she is guiltless.

Judge. Yet she must be tortured.

Camillo. I would as soon have tortured mine own nephew
(If he now lived, he would be just her age ;
His hair, too, was her colour, and his eyes
Like hers in shape, but blue, and not so deep :)
As that most perfect image of God's love
That ever came sorrowing upon the earth.
She is as pure as speechless infancy !

Judy. Well, be her purity on your head, my lord,
If you forbid the rack. His Holiness
Enjoined us to pursue this monstrous crime
By the severest forms of law ; nay, even
To stretch a point against the criminals.
The prisoners stand accused of parricide,
Upon such evidence as justifies Torture.

Beatrice. What evidence ? This man's ?

Judge. Even so.

Beatrice (to MARZIO). Come near. And who art thou, thus chosen forth
Out of the multitude of living men,
To kill the innocent ?

Marzio. I am Marzio,
Thy father's vassal.

Beatrice. Fix thine eyes on mine ;
Answer to what I ask. [Turning to the Judges.]

I prithee mark
His countenance : unlike bold calumny,
Which sometimes dares not speak the thing it looks,
He dares not look the thing he speaks, but bends
His gaze on the blind earth.

(To MARZIO.) What ! wilt thou say
That I did murder my own father ?

Marzio. Oh !
Spare me ! My brain swims round—I cannot speak --
It was that horrid torture forced t e truth,
Take me away ! Let her not look on me !
I am a guilty miserable wretch !
I have said all I know ; now, let me die !

Beatrice. My lords, if by my nature I had been
So stern, as to have planned the crime alleged,

Which your suspicions dictate to this slave,
 And the rack makes him utter, do you think
 I should have left this two-edged instrument
 Of my misdeed; this man; this bloody knife,
 With my own name engraven on the hilt,
 Lying unsheathed amid a world of foes,
 For my own death? That with such horrible need
 For deepest silence, I should have neglected
 So trivial a precaution, as the making
 His tomb the keeper of a secret written
 On a thief's memory! What is his poor life?
 What are a thousand lives? A paricide
 Had trampled them like dust; and see, he lives!

[Turning to Marzio.

And thou --

Marzio. Oh, spare me! Speak to me no more!
 That stern yet piteous look, those solemn tones,
 Wound worse than torture.

(To the Judges.) I have told it all;
 For pity's sake lead me away to death.

Camillo. Guards, lead him nearer the Lady Beatrice,
 He shrinks from her regard like autumn's leaf
 From the keen breath of the serenest north.

Beatrice. Oh, thou who tremblest on the giddy verge
 Of life and death, pause ere thou answerest me;
 So myst thou answer God with less dismay:
 What evil have we done thee? I, alas!
 Have lived but on this earth a few sad years,
 And so my lot was ordered, that a father
 First turned the moments of awakening life
 To drops, each poisoning youth's sweet hope; and then
 Stabbed with one blow my everlasting soul,
 And my untainted fane; and even that peace
 Which sleeps within the core of the heart's heart.
 But the wound was not mortal; so my hate
 Became the only worship I could lift
 To our great Father, who in pity and love,
 Armed thee, as thou dost say, to eat him off;
 And thus his wrong becomes my accusation:
 And art thou the accuser? If thou hopest
 Mercy in heaven, show justice upon earth:
 Worse than a bloody hand is a hard heart.
 If thou hast done murders, made thy life's path
 Over the trampled laws of God and man.
 Rush not before thy Judge, and say: "My Maker,
 I have done this and more; for there was one
 Who was most pure and innocent on earth;
 And because she endured what never any,
 Guilty or innocent, endured before;
 Because her wrongs could not be told, nor thought;

Because thy hand at length did rescue her ;
 I with my words killed her and all her kin."—
 Think, I adjure you, what it is to slay
 The reverence living in the minds of men
 Towards our ancient house, and stainless fame !
 Think what it is to strangle infant pity,
 Cradled in the belief of guileless looks,
 Till it become a crime to suffer. Think
 What 'tis to blot with infamy and blood
 All that which shows like innocence, and is,—
 Hear me, great God ! I swear, most innocent,—
 So that the world lose all discrimination
 Between the sly, fierce, wild regard of guilt,
 And that which now compels thee to reply
 To what I ask : Am I, or am I not

A parricide ?

Marzio. Thou art not !

Judge. What is this ?

Marzio. I here declare those whom I did accuse
 Are innocent. 'Tis I alone am guilty.

Judge. Drag him away to torments ; let them be Subtle and long drawn out, to tear the folds
 Of the heart's inmost cell. Unbind him not Till he confess.

Marzio. Torture me as ye will :
 A keener pain has wrung a higher truth
 From my last breath. She is most innocent !
 Bloodhounds, not men, glut yourselves well with me !
 I will not give you that fine piece of nature
 To rend and ruin.

[Exit MARZIO, guarded.]

Camillo. What say ye now, my lords ?

Judge. Let tortures strain the truth till it be white
 As snow thrice-sifted by the frozen wind.

Camillo. Yet stained with blood.

Judge (to BEVTRICE). Know you this paper, lady ?

Bevtrice. Entrap me not with questions. Who stands here
 As my accuser ! Ha ! wilt thou be he,
 Who art my judge ? Accuser, witness, judge,
 What, all in one ! Here is Orsino's name ;
 Where is Orsino ? Let his eye meet mine.
 What means this scrawl ? Alas ! ye know not what,
 And therefore on the chance that it may be
 Some evil, will ye kill us ?

Enter an Officer.

Officer. Marzio's dead.

Judge. What did he say ?

Officer. Nothing. As soon as we
 Had bound him on the wheel, he smiled on us,

As one who baffles a deep adversary ;
And, holding his breath, died.

Judge. There remains nothing
But to apply the question to those prisoners,
Who yet remain stubborn.

Camillo. I overrule
Further proceedings, and in the behalf
Of these most innocent and noble persons
Will use my interest with the Holy Father.

Judge. Let the Pope's pleasure then be done. Meanwhile Conduct these culprits each to separate cells ;
And be the engines ready : for this night,
If the Pope's resolution be as grave,
Pious, and just as once, I'll wring the truth
Out of those nerves and sinews, groan by groan. [Exit].

SCENE III.—The Cell of a Prison. BEATRICE is discovered asleep on a couch.

Enter BERNARDO.

Bernardo. How gently slumber rests upon her face,
Like the last thoughts of some day sweetly spent,
Closing in night and dreams, and so prolonged.
After such torments as she bore last night,
How light and soft her breathing comes. Ah, me !
Methinks that I shall never sleep again.
But I must shake the heavenly dew of rest
From this sweet folded flower, thus—wake; awake;
What, sister, canst thou sleep ?

Beatrice (awaking). I was just dreaming
That we were all in Paradise. Thou knowest
This cell seems like a kind of Paradise
After our father's presence.

Bernardo. Dear, dear sister,
Would that thy dream were not a dream ! O, God !
How shall I tell ?

Beatrice. What wouldst thou tell, sweet brother ?

Bernardo. Look not so calm and happy, or, even whilst
I stand considering what I have to say,
My heart will break.

Beatrice. See now, thou mak'st me weep :
How very friendless thou wouldst be, dear child,
If I were dead. Say what thou hast to say.

Bernardo. They have confessed ; they could endure no more
The tortures—

Beatrice. Ha ! What was there to confess ?
They must have told some weak and wicked lie
To flatter their tormentors. Have they said

That they were guilty ? O white innocence,
 That thou shouldst wear the mask of guilt to hide
 Thine awful and serenest countenance
 From those who know thee not !

Enter JUDGE, with LUCRETIA and GIACOMO, guarded.

Ignoble hearts !

For some brief spasms of pain, which are at least
 As mortal as the limbs through which they pass,
 Are centuries of high splendour laid in dust ?
 And that eternal honour which should live
 Sunlike, above the reek of mortal fame,
 Changed to a mockery and a by-word ? What !
 Will you give up these bodies to be dragged
 At horses' heels, so that our hair should sweep
 The footsteps of the vain and senseless crowd,
 Who, that they may make our calamity
 Their worship and their spectacle, will leave
 The churches and the theatres as void
 As their own hearts ? Shall the light multitude
 Fling, at their choice, curses or faded pity,
 Sad funeral flowers to deck a living corpse,
 Upon us as we pass, to pass away,
 And leave what memory of our having been ?
 Infamy, blood, terror, despair ! O thou,
 Who wert a mother to the parentless,
 Kill not thy child ! Let not her wrongs kill thee !
 Brother, lie down with me upon the rack,
 And let us each be silent as a corpse ;
 It soon will be as soft as any grave.
 'Tis but the falsehood it can wring from fear
 Makes the rack cruel.

Giacomo. They will tear the truth
 Even from thee at last, those cruel pains :
 For pity's sake say thou art guilty now.

Lucrètia. O, speak the truth ! Let us all quickly die ;
 An' after death, God is our judge, not they ;
 He will have mercy on us.

Bernardo. If indeed
 It can be true, say so, dear sister mine ;
 And then the Pope will surely pardon you,
 And all be well.

Judge. Confess, or I will warp
 Your limbs with such keen tortures--

Beatrice. Tortures ! Turn
 The rack henceforth into a spinning wheel !
 Torture your dog, that he may ten when last
 He lapped the blood his master shed—not me !
 My pangs are of the mind, and of the heart

And of the soul ; ay, of the inmost soul,
 Which weeps within tears as of burning gall
 To see, in this ill world where none are true,
 My kindred false to their deserted selves.
 And with considering all the wretched life
 Which I have lived, and its now wretched end ;
 And the small justice shown by Heaven and Earth
 To me or mine ; and what a tyrant thou art,
 And what slaves these ; and what a world we make,
 The oppressor and the oppressed—such pangs compel
 My answer. What is it thou wouldest with me ?

Judge. Art thou not guilty of thy father's death ?

Beatrice. Or wilt thou rather tax high-judging God
 That he permitted such an act as that
 Which I have suffered, and which he beheld ;
 Made it unutterable, and took from it
 All refuge, all revenge, all consequence,
 But that which thou hast called my father's death ?
 Which is or is not what men call a crime,
 Which either I have done, or have not done ;
 Say what ye will. I shall deny no more.
 If ye desire it thus, thus let it be,
 And so an end of all. Now do your will ;
 No other pains shall force another word.

Judge. She is convicted, but has not confessed.

Be it enough. Until their final sentence
 Let none have converse with them. You, young lord,
 Linger not here !

Beatrice. O, tear him not away !

Judge. Guards ! do your duty.

Bernardo (embracing BEATRICE). Oh ! would ye divide
 Body from soul ?

Officer. That is the headsman's business.

[Exeunt all but LUCRETIA, BEATRICE, and GIACOMO.

Giacomo. Have I confessed ? Is it all over now ?
 No hope ? no refuge ? O weak, wicked tongue,
 Which hast destroyed me, would that thou hadst been Cut out and thrown to dogs first ! To have killed
 My father first, and then betrayed my sister ;
 Ay, thee ! the one thing innocent and pure
 In this black, guilty world, to that which I
 So well deserve ! My wife ! my little ones !
 Destitute, helpless ; and I—Father ! God !
 Canst thou forgive even the unforgiving,
 When their full hearts break thus, thus ?—

Lucretia.

O, my child !

To what a dreadful end are we all come !
 Why did I yield ? Why did I not sustain
 Those torments ? Oh ! that I were all dissolved

Into these fast and unavailing tears,
Which flow and feel not !

Beatrice.                    What 'twas weak to do,
'Tis weaker to lament, once being done ;
Take cheer ! The God who knew my wrong, and made
Our speedy act the angel of his wrath,
Seems, and but seems, to have abandoned us.
Let us not think that we shall die for this.
Brother, sit near me ; give me your firm hand,
You had a manly heart. Bear up ! bear up !
Oh ! dearest lady, put your gentle head
Upon my lap, and try to sleep awhile :
Your eyes look pale, hollow, and overworn,
With heaviness of watching and slow grief.
Come, I will sing you some low, sleepy tune,
Not cheerful, nor yet sad ; some dull old thing,
Some outworn and unused monotony,
Such as our country gossips sing and spin,
'Till they almost forget they live : lie down !
So ; that will do. Have I forgot the words ?
Faith ! they are sadder than I thought they were.

False friend, wilt thou smile or weep
When my life is laid asleep ?
Little cares for a smile or a tear,
The clay cold corpse upon the bier ;
Far-well ! Heigh ho !
What is this whispers low ?
There is a snake in thy smile, my dear ;
And bitter poison within thy tear.

Sweet sleep ! were death like to thee,
Or if thou couldst mortal be,
I would close these eyes of pain ;
When to wake ? Never again.
O World ! farewell !
Listen to the passing bell !
It says, thou and I must part,
With a light and a heavy heart.

[The scene closes.

SCENE IV.- A Hall of the Prison.

Enter CAMILLO and BERNARDO.

Camillo. The Pope is stern ; not to be moved or bent.
He looked as calm and keen as is the engine
Which tortures and which kills, exempt itself
From aught that it inflicts ; a marble form,
A rite, a law, a custom ; not a man.
He frowned, as if to frown had been the trick
Of his machinery, on the advocates

Presenting the defences, which he tore
 And threw behind, muttering with hoarse, harsh voice :
 " Which among ye defended their old father
 Killed in his sleep ? " Then to another : " Thou
 Dost this in virtue of thy place ; 'tis well."
 He turned to me then, looking depreciation,
 And said these three words, coldly : " They must die."

Beruardo. And yet you left him not ?

Camillo. I urged him still ;

Pleading, as I could guess, the devilish wrong
 Which prompted your unnatural parent's death.
 And he replied, " Paolo Santa Croce
 Murdered his mother yester evening,
 And he is fled. Parricide grows so rife,
 That soon, for some just cause no doubt the young
 Will strangle us all, dozing in our chairs.
 Authority, and power, and hoary hair
 Are grown crimes capital. You are my nephew,
 You come to ask their pardon ; stay a moment ;
 Here is their sentence ; never see me more
 Till, to the letter, it be all fulfilled."

Beruardo. O, God, not so ! I did believe indeed
 That all you said was but sad preparation
 For happy news. O, there are words and looks
 To bely the sternest purpose ! Once I knew them,
 Now I forget them at my dearest need.
 What think you if I seek him out, and bathe
 His feet and robe with hot and bitter tears ?
 Importune him with prayers, vexing his brain
 With my perpetual cries, until in rage
 He strike me with his pastoral cross, and trample
 Upon my prostrate head, so that my blood
 May stain the senseless dust on which he treads,
 And remorse waken mercy ? I will do it !

O, wait till I return !

[Rushes out]

Camillo. Alas ! poor boy !
 A wreck-devoted scaman thus might pray
 To the deaf sea.

Enter LUCRETIA, BEATRICE, and GIACOMO guarded.

Beatrice. I hardly dare to fear
 That thou bring'st other news than a just pardon.
Camillo. May God in heaven be less inexorable
 To the Pope's prayers, than he has been to mine.
 Here is the sentence and the warrant.

Beatrice (wildly). Oh,
 My God ! Can it be possible I have
 To die so suddenly ? So young to go
 Under the obscure, cold, rotting, wormy ground !
 To be nailed down into a narrow place ;

To see no more sweet sunshine ; hear no more
 Blithe voice of living thing ; muse not again
 Upon familiar thoughts, sad, yet thus lost !
 How fearful ! to be nothing ! Or to be—
 What ? O, where am I ? Let me not go mad !
 Sweet Heaven, forgive weak thoughts ! If there should be
 No God, no Heaven, no Earth in the void world ;
 The wide, grey, lampless, deep, uncopied world !
 If all things then should be—my father's spirit,
 His eye, his voice, his touch surrounding me ;
 The atmosphere and breath of my dead life !
 If sometimes, as a shape more like himself,
 Even the form which tortured me on earth,
 Masked in grey hairs and wrinkles, he should come,
 And wind me in his hellish arms, and fix
 His eyes on mine, and drag me down, down, down !
 For was he not alone omnipotent
 On Earth, and ever present ? even though dead,
 Does not his spirit live in all that breathe,
 And work for me and mine still the same ruin,
 Scorn, pain, despair ? Who ever yet returned
 To teach the laws of death's untrodden realm ?
 Unjust perhaps as those which drive us now,
 O, whither, whither ?

Lucretia. Trust in God's sweet love,
 The tender promises of Christ : ere night
 Think we shall be in Paradise.

Beatrice. 'Tis past !
 Whatever comes, my heart shall sink no more.
 And yet, I know not why, your words strike chill :
 How tedious, false and cold seem all things ! I
 Have met with much injustice in this world ;
 No difference has been made by God or man,
 Or any power moulding my wretched lot,
 'Twixt good or evil, as regarded me.
 I am cut off from the only world I know,
 From light and life, and love, in youth's sweet prime.
 You do well telling me to trust in God ;
 I hope I do trust in him. In whom else
 Can my trust ? And yet my heart is cold.

[During the latter speeches GIACOMO has retired conversing with CAMILLO, who now goes out ; GIACOMO advances.

Giacomo. Know you not, mother—sister, know you not ?
 Bernardo even now is gone to implore
 The Pope to grant our pardon.

Lucretia. Child, perhaps
 It will be granted. We may all then live
 To make these woes a tale for distant years :
 O, what a thought ! It gushes to my heart
 Like the warm blood.

Beatrice. Yet both will soon be cold :
 O, trample out that thought ! Worse than despair,
 Worse than the bitterness of death, is hope :
 It is the only ill which can find place
 Upon the giddy, sharp, and narrow hour
 Tottering beneath us. Plead with the swift frost
 That it should spare the eldest flower of spring :
 Plead with awakening earthquake, o'er whose couch
 Even now a city stands, strong, fair and free ;
 Now stench and blackness yawns, like death. O, plead
 With famine, or wind-walking pestilence,
 Blind lightning, or the deaf sea, not with man !
 Cruel, cold, formal man ; righteous in words,
 In deeds a Cain. No, mother, we must die :
 Since such is the reward of innocent lives ;
 Such the alleviation of worst wrongs.
 And whilst our murderers live, and hard, cold men,
 Smiling and slow, walk through a world of tears
 To death as to life's sleep ; 'twere just the grave
 Were some strange joy for us. Come, obscure Death,
 And wind me in thine all-embracing arms !
 Like a fond mother hide me in thy bosom,
 And rock me to the sleep from which none wake.
 Live ye, who live, subject to one another
 As we were once, who now— [BERNARDO rushes in.

Bernardo. O, horrible !
 That tears, that looks, that hope poured forth in prayer,
 Even till the heart is vacant and despairs,
 Should all be vain ! The ministers of death
 Are waiting round the doors. I thought I saw
 Blood on the face of one—what if 'twere fancy ?
 Soon the heart's blood of all I love on earth
 Will sprinkle him, and he will wipe it off
 As if 'twere only rain. O, life ! O, world !
 Cover me ! let me be no more ! To see
 That perfect mirror of pure innocence
 Wherein I gazed, and grew happy and good,
 Shivered to dust ! To see thee, Beatrice,
 Who made all lovely thou didst look upon—
 Thine, light of life—dead, dark ! while I say, sister,
 To hear I have no sister ; and thou, mother,
 Whose love was a bond to all our loves—
 Dead ! The sweet bond broken.

Enter CAMILLO and Guards.

They come ! Let me
 Kiss those warm lips before their crimson leaves
 Are blighted—white—cold. Say farewell, before
 Death chokes that gentle voice ! O let me hear
 You speak !

Beatrice. Farewell, my tender brother. Think
Of our sad fate with gentleness, as now :
And let mild, pitying thoughts lighten for thee
Thy sorrow's load. Err not in harsh despair,
But tears and patience. One thing more, my child :
For thine own sake be constant to the love
Thou bearest us ; and to the faith that I,
Though wrapt in a strange cloud of crime and shame,
Lived ever holy and unstained. And though
Ill tongues shall wound me, and our common name
Be as a mark stamped on thine innocent brow
For men to point at as they pass, do thou
Forbear, and never think a thought unkind
Of those who perhaps love thee in their graves.
So mayst thou die as I do ; fear and pain
Being subdued. Farewell ! Farewell ! Farewell !

Bernardo. I cannot say farewell !

Camillo. O, Lady Beatrice !

Beatrice. Give yourself no unnecessary pain,
My dear Lord Cardinal. Here, mother, tie
My girdle for me, and bind up this hair
In any simple knot : ay, that does well.
And yours I see is coming down. How often
Have we done this for one another ! now
We shall not do it any more. My lord,
We are quite ready. Well, 'tis very well.

HELLAS;

A LYRICAL DRAMA.

HIS EXCELLENCY

PRINCE ALEXANDER MAVROCORDATO,

LATE SECRETARY FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS TO THE HOSPODAR OF WALLACHIA.

THE DRAMA OF HELLAS

Is Inscribed,

AS AN IMPERFECT TOKEN OF THE ADMIRATION, SYMPATHY, AND FRIENDSHIP

OF

THE AUTHOR.

Pisa, November 1, 1821.

PREFACE.

The poem of "Hellas," written at the suggestion of the events of the moment, is a mere improvise, and derives its interest (should it be found to possess any) solely from the intense sympathy which the Author feels with the cause he would celebrate.

The subject, in its present state, is insusceptible of being treated otherwise than lyrically, and if I have called this poem a drama, from the circumstance of its being composed in dialogue, the licence is not greater than that which has been assumed by other poets, who have called their productions epics, only because they have been divided into twelve or twenty-four books.

The Persæ of Æschylus afforded me the first model of my conception, although the decision of the glorious contest now waging in Greece being yet suspended, forbids a catastrophe parallel to the return of Xerxes and the desolation of the Persians. I have, therefore, contented myself with exhibiting a series of lyric pictures, and with having wrought upon the curtain of futurity, which falls upon the unfinished scene, such figures of indistinct and visionary delineation as suggest the final triumph of the Greek cause as a portion of the cause of civilisation and social improvement.

The drama (if drama it must be called) is, however, so inartificial that I doubt whether, if recited on the Thespian waggon to an Athenian village at the Dionysiaca, it would have obtained the prize of the goat. I shall bear with equanimity any punishment greater than the loss of such a reward which the Aristarchi of the hour may think fit to inflict.

The only goat-song which I have yet attempted has, I confess, in spite of the unfavourable nature of the subject, received a greater and a more valuable portion of applause than I expected, or than it deserved.

Common fame is the only authority which I can allege for the details which form the basis of the poem, and I must trespass upon the forgiveness of my readers for the display of newspaper erudition to which I have been reduced. Undoubtedly, until the conclusion of the war, it will be impossible to obtain an account of it sufficiently authentic for historical materials; but poets have their privilege, and it is unquestionable that actions of the most exalted courage have been performed by the Greeks—that they have gained more than one naval victory, and that their defeat in Wallachia was signalised by circumstances of heroism more glorious even than victory.

The apathy of the rulers of the civilised world, to the astonishing circumstances of the descendants of that nation to which they owe their civilisation—rising as it were from the ashes of their ruin, is something perfectly inexplicable to a mere spectator of the shows of this mortal scene. We are all Greeks. Our laws, our literature, our religion, our arts, have their root in Greece. But for Greece—Rome the instructor, the conqueror, or the metropolis of our ancestors, would have spread no illumination with her arms, and we might still have been savages and idolators; or, what is worse, might have arrived at such a stagnant and miserable state of social institutions as China and Japan possess.

The human form and the human mind attained to a perfection in Greece which has impressed its image on those faultless productions, whose very fragiments are the despair of modern art, and has propagated impulses which cannot cease, through a thousand channels of manifest or imperceptible operation, to ennoble and delight mankind until the extinction of the race.

The modern Greek is the descendant of those glorious beings whom the imagination almost refuses to figure to itself as belonging to our kind; and he inherits much of their sensibility, their rapidity of conception, their enthusiasm, and their courage. If in many instances he is degraded by moral and political slavery to the practice of the basest vices it engenders, and that below the level of ordinary degradation ; let us reflect that the corruption of the best produces the worst, and that habits which subsist only in relation to a peculiar state of social institution may be expected to cease, as soon as that relation is dissolved. In fact, the Greeks, since the admirable novel of "Anastasius" could have been a faithful picture of their manners, have undergone most important changes ; the flower of their youth, returning to their country from the universities of Italy, Germany, and France, have communicated to their fellow-citizens the latest results of that social perfection of which their ancestors were the original source. The university of Chios contained before the breaking out of the revolution, eight hundred students, and among them several Germans and Americans. The munificence and energy of many of the Greek princes and merchants, directed to the renovation of their country, with a spirit and a wisdom which has few examples, is above all praise.

The English permit their own oppressors to act according to their natural sympathy with the Turkish tyrant, and to brand upon their name the indelible blot of an alliance with the enemies of domestic happiness, of Christianity, and civilisation.

Russia desires to possess, not to liberate Greece ; and is contented to see the Turks, its natural enemies, and the Greeks, its intended slaves, enfeeble each other, until one or both fall into its net. The wise and generous policy of England would have consisted in establishing the independence of Greece, and in maintaining it both against Russia and the Turks ;—but when was the oppressor generous or just ?

The Spanish Peninsula is already free. France is tranquil in the enjoyment of a partial exemption from the abuses which its unnatural and feeble government are vainly attempting to revive. The seed of blood and misery has been sown in Italy, and a more vigorous race is arising to go forth to the harvest. The world waits only the news of a revolution of Germany, to see the tyrants who have pinnacled themselves on its supineness, precipitated into the ruin from which they shall never arise. Well do these destroyers of mankind know their enemy, when they impute the insurrection in Greece to the same spirit before which they tremble throughout the rest of Europe ; and that enemy well knows the power and cunning of its opponents, and watches the moment of their approaching weakness and inevitable division, to wrest the bloody sceptres from their grasp.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

MAHMUD,
HASSAN,

DAOOD,
AHASUERUS, a JEW.

CHORUS of Greek Captive Women. Messengers, Slaves, and Attendants.

SCENE—Constantinople. TIME—Sunset.

SCENE, a Terrace, on the Seraglio.

MAHMUD (sleeping), an Indian slave sitting beside his Couch.

CHORUS OF GREEK CAPTIVE WOMEN.

We strew these opiate flowers

On thy restless pillow,—

They were stript from Orient bowers,

By the Indian billow.

Be thy sleep

Calm and deep,

Like theirs who fell—not ours who weep !

INDIAN.

Away, unlovely dreams !

Away, false shapes of sleep !

Be his, as Heaven seems,

Clear, and bright, and deep !

Soft as love, and calm as death,

Sweet as a summer night without a breath.

CHORUS.

Sleep, sleep ! our song is laden

With the soul of slumber ;

It was sung by a Samian maiden,

Whose lover was of the number

Who now keep

That calm sleep

Whence none may wake, where none shall weep.

INDIAN.

I touch thy temples pale !

I breathe my soul on thee !

And could my prayers avail,

All my joy should be

Dead, and I would live to weep,

So thou mightst win one hour of quiet sleep.

CHORUS.

Breathe low, low,

The spell of the mighty mistress now !

When Conscience lulls her sated snake,

And Tyrants sleep, let Freedom wake.

Breathe low, low,

The words, which, like secret fire, shall flow
Through the veins of the frozen earth—low, low !

SEMICHORUS I.

Life may change, but it may fly not ;
 Hope may vanish, but can die not ;
 Truth be veiled, but still it burneth ;
 Love repulsed,—but it returneth !

SEMICHORUS II.

Yet were life a charnel, where
 Hope lay confined with Despair ;
 Yet were truth a sacred lie,
 Love were lust--

SEMICHORUS I.

If Liberty
 Lent not life its soul of light,
 Hope its iris of delight,
 Truth its prophet's robe to wear,
 Love its power to give and bear.

CHORUS.

In the great morning of the world,
 The spirit of God with might unfurled
 The flag of Freedom over Chaos,
 And all its banded anarchs fled,
 Like vultures frightened from Imaus,
 Before an earthquake's trea' --
 So from Time's tempestuous d wn
 Freedom's splendour burst and shone :—
 Thermopylae and Marathon
 Caught, like mountains beacon-lighted,
 The springing Fire.—The winged glory
 On Philippi half-alighted,
 Like an eagle on a promontory.
 Its unwearied wings could fan
 The quenchless ashes of Milan.
 From age to age, from man to man
 It lived ; and lit from land to land
 Florence, Albion, Switzerland.
 Then night fell ; and, as from night,
 Re-assuming fiery flight,
 From the West swift Freedom came,
 Against the course of heaven and doom,
 A second sun arrayed in flame,
 To burn, to kindle, to illume.
 From far Atlantis its young beams
 Chased the shadows and the dreams.
 France, with all her sanguine steams,
 Hid, but quenched it not ; again
 Through clouds its shafts of glory rain
 From utmost Germany to Spain.
 As an eagle fed with morning
 Scorns the embattled tempest's warning,

When she seeks her acrie hanging
 In the mountain-cedar's hair,
 And her brood expect the clanging
 Of her wings through the wild air,
 Sick with famine ;—Freedom, so
 To what of Greece remaineth now
 Returns ; her hoary ruins glow
 Like orient mountains lost in day ;
 Beneath the safety of her wings
 Her renovated nurselings play,
 And in the naked lightnings
 Of truth they purge their dazzled eyes.
 Let Freedom leave, where'er she flies,
 A Desert, or a Paradise ;
 Let the beautiful and the brave
 Share her glory, or a grave.

SEMICHORUS I.

With the gifts of gladness
 Greece did thy cradle strew ;
 SEMICHORUS II.
 With the tears of sadness
 Greece did thy shroud bedew ;
 SEMICHORUS I.
 With an orphan's affection
 She followed thy bier through time !

SEMICHORUS II.

And at thy resurrection
 Re-appeareth, like thou, sublime !

SEMICHORUS I.

If Heaven should resume thee,
 To Heaven shall her spirit ascend

SEMICHORUS II.

If Hell should entomb thee,
 To Hell shall her high hearts bend.

SEMICHORUS I.

If Annihilation—

SEMICHORUS II.

Dust let her glories be ;
 And a name and a nation
 Be forgotten, Freedom with thee !

INDIAN.

His brow grows darker—breathe not—move not !
 He starts—he shudders ;—ye that love not,
 With your panting loud and fast
 Have awakened him at last.

Mahmud (starting from his sleep). Man the Seraglio-guard ! make fast the gate.

What ! from a cannonade of three short hours ?
 'Tis false ! that breach towards the Bosphorus
 Cannot be practicable yet—Who stirs ?

Stand to the match ; that when the foe prevails,
 One spark may mix in reconciling ruin
 The conqueror and the conquered ! Heave the tower
 Into the gap—wrench off the roof. [Enter HASSAN.]

Ha ! what !

The truth of day lightens upon my dream,
 And I am Mahmud still.

Hassan. Your Sublime Highness
 Is strangely moved.

Mahmud. The times do cast strange shadows
 On those who watch and who must rule their course,
 Lest they, being first in peril as in glory,
 Be whelmed in the fierce ebb : —and these are of them.
 Thrice has a gloomy vision hunted me
 As thus from sleep into the troubled day ;
 It shakes me as the tempest shakes the sea,
 Leaving no figure upon memory's glass.
 Would that—no matter. Thou didst say thou knewst
 A Jew, whose spirit is a chronicle
 Of strange and secret and forgotten things.
 I bade thee summon him : —'tis said his tribe
 Dream, and are wise interpreters of dreams.

Hassan. The Jew of whom I spake is old,—so old
 He seems to have outlived a world's decay ;
 The hoary mountains and the wrinkle ocean
 Seem younger still than he ; his hair and beard
 Are whiter than the tempest-sifted snow ;
 His cold pale limbs and pulseless arteries
 Are like the fibres of a cloud instinct
 With light, and to the soul that quickens them
 Are as the atoms of the mountain-drift
 To the winter wind : —but from his eye looks forth
 A life of unconsumed thought, which pierces
 The present, and the past, and the to-come.
 Some say that this is he whom the great prophet
 Jesus, the son of Joseph, for his mockery,
 Mocked with the curse of immortality.
 Some feign that he is Enoch ; others dream
 He was pre-adamite, and has survived
 Cycles of generation and of ruin.
 The sage, in truth, by dreadful abstinence,
 And conquering penance of the mutinous flesh,
 Deep contemplation, and unwearied study,
 In years outstretched beyond the date of man,
 May have attained to sovereignty and science
 Over those strong and secret things and thoughts
 Which others fear and know not.

Mahmud. I would talk
 With this old Jew.

Hassan. Thy will is even now

Made known to him, where he dwells in a sea-cavern
 'Mid the Demonesi, less accessible
 Than thou or God ! He who would question him
 Must sail alone at sun-set, where the stream
 Of ocean sleeps around those foamless isles
 When the young moon is westerling as now,
 And evening airs wander upon the wave ;
 And when the pines of that bee-pasturing isle,
 Green Erebintus, quench the fiery shadow
 Of his gilt prow within the sapphire water,
 Then must the lonely helmsman cry aloud,
 Ahasuerus ! and the caverns round
 Will answer, Ahasuerus ! If his prayer
 Be granted, a faint meteor will arise,
 Lighting him over Marmora, and a wind
 Will rush out of the sighing pine-forest,
 And with the wind a storm of harmony
 Unutterably sweet, and pilot him
 Through the soft twilight to the Bosphorus :
 Thence, at the hour and place and circumstance
 Fit for the matter of their conference,
 The Jew appears. Few dare, and few who dare,
 Win the desired communion—but that shout
 Bodes— [A shout within.
Mahmud. Evil, doubtless ; like all human sounds.
 Let me converse with spirits.
Hassan. That shout again.
Mahmud. This Jew whom thou hast summoned—
Hassan. Will be here—
Mahmud. When the omnipotent hour, to which are yoked
 He, I, and all things, shall compel—enough.
 Silence those mutineers—that drunken crew
 That crowd about the pilot in the storm.
 Ay ! strike the foremost shorter by a head !
 They weary me, and I have need of rest.
 Kings are like stars—they rise and set, they have
 The worship of the world, but no repose. [Exeunt severally.

CHORUS.

Worlds on worlds are rolling over
 From creation to decay,
 Like the bubbles on a river,
 Sparkling, bursting, borne away.
 But they are still immortal
 Who, through birth's orient portal,
 And death's dark chasm hurrying to and fro,
 Clothe their unceasing flight
 In the brief dust and light
 Gathered around their chariots as they go ;
 New shapes they still may weave,
 New Gods, new laws receive,

Bright or dim are they, as the robes they last
On Death's bare ribs had cast.

A power from the unknown God ;
A Promethean conqueror came ;
Like a triumphal path he trod
The thorns of death and shame.

A mortal shape to him
Was like the vapour dim
Which the orient planet animates with light ;
Hell, Sin, and Slavery came,
Like blood-hounds mild and tame,
Nor preyed until their lord had taken flight.
The moon of Mahomet
Arose, and it shall set :
While blazoned as on heaven's immortal noon
The cross leads generations on.

Swift as the radiant shapes of sleep
From one whose dreams are paradise,
Fly, when the fond wretch wakes to weep,
And day peers forth with her blauk eyes :
So fleet, so faint, so fair,
The Powers of earth and air
Fled from the folding star of Bethlehem :
Apollo, Pan, and Love,
And even Olympian Jove
Grew weak, for killing Truth had glared on them.
Our hills, and seas, and streams,
Dispeopled of their dreams,
Their waters turned to blood, their dew to tears,
Wailed for the golden years.

Enter MAHMUD, HASSAN, DAOOD, and others.

Mahmud. More gold ? our ancestors bought gold with victory.
And shall I sell it for defeat ?

Daood. The Janizars
Clamour for pay.

Mahmud. Go ! bid them pay themselves
With Christian blood ! Are there no Grecian virgins
Whose shrieks and spasms and tears they may enjoy ?
No infidel children to impale on spears ?
No hoary priests after that Patriarch
Who bent the curse against his country's heart,
Which clove his own at last ? Go ! bid them kill :
Blood is the seed of gold.

Daood. It has been sown,
And yet the harvest to the sickle-men
Is as a grain to each.

Mahmud. Then take this signet,

Unlock the seventh chamber, in which lie
 The treasures of victorious Solyman.
 An empire's spoils stored for a day of ruin.
 O spirit of my sires ! is it not come ?
 The prey-birds and the wolves are gorged and sleep ;
 But these, who spread their feast on the red earth,
 Hunger for gold, which fills not.—See them fed ;
 Then lead them to the rivers of fresh death.      [Exit DAOOD.]
 Oh ! miserable dawn, after a night
 More glorious than the day which it usurped !
 O, faith in God ! O, power on earth ! O, word
 Of the great Prophet, whose overshadowing wings
 Darkened the thrones and idols of the west,
 Now bright !—For thy sake cursed be the hour,
 Even as a father by an evil child,
 When the orient moon of Islam rolled in triumph
 From Caucasus to white Ceraunia !
 Ruin above, and anarchy below ;
 Terror without, and treachery within ;
 The chalice of destruction full, and all
 Thirsting to drink ; and who among us dares
 To dash it from his lips ? and where is Hope ?

Hassan. The lamp of our dominion still rides high ;
 One God is God—Mahomet is his Prophet.
 Four hundred thousand Moslems, from the limits
 Of utmost Asia, irresistibly
 Throng, like full clouds at the Sirocco's cry,
 But not like them to weep their strength in tears ;
 They have destroying lightning, and their step
 Wakes earthquake, to consume and overwhelm,
 And reign in ruin. Phrygian Olympus,
 Tinolus, and Latmos, and Mycale, roughen
 With horrent arms, and lofty ships, even now,
 Like vapours anchored to a mountain's edge,
 Freighted with fire and whirlwind, wait at Scala
 The convoy of the ever-veering wind.
 Samos is drunk with blood ;—the Greek has paid
 Brief victory with swift loss and long despair.
 The false Moldavian serfs fled fast and far
 When the fierce shout of Allah-illa-Allah !
 Rose like the war-cry of the northern wind,
 Which kills the sluggish clouds, and leaves a flock
 Of wild swans struggling with the naked storm.
 So were the lost Greeks on the Danube's day !
 If night is mute, yet the returning sun
 Kindles the voices of the morning birds ;
 Nor at thy bidding less exultingly
 Than birds rejoicing in the golden day,
 The Anarchies of Africa unleash
 Their tempest-winged cities of the sea,

To speak in thunder to the rebel world.
 Like sulphureous clouds half-shattered by the storm,
 They sweep the pale Aegean, while the Queen
 Of Ocean, bound upon her island throne,
 Far in the West, sits mourning that her sons,
 Who frown on Freedom, spare a smile for thee
 Russia still hovers, as an eagle might
 Within a cloud, near which a kite and crane
 Hang tangled in inextricable fight,
 To stoop upon the victor; for she fears
 The name of Freedom, even as she hates thine:
 But recreant Austria loves thee as the Grave
 Loves Pestilence, and her slow dogs of war,
 Fleshed with the chase, come up from Italy,
 And howl upon their limits: for they see
 The panther Freedom fled to her old cover,
 Amid seas and mountains, and a mightier brood
 Crouch around. What Anarch wears a crown or mitre,
 Or bears the sword, or grasps the key of gold,
 Whose friends are not thy friends, whose foes thy foes?
 Our arsenals and our armories are full;
 Our forts defy assaults; ten thousand cannon
 Lie ranged upon the beach, and hour by hour
 Their earth-crushing wheels affright the city;
 The galloping of fiery steeds makes pale
 The Christian merchant, and the yellow Jew
 Hides his hoard deeper in the faithless earth.
 Like clouds, and like the shadows of the clouds,
 Over the hills of Anatolia,
 Swift in wide troops the Tartar chivalry
 Sweep;—the fair-flashing of their starry lances
 Reverberates the dying light of day.
 We have one God, one King, one Hope, one Law;
 But many-headed Insurrection stands
 Divided in itself, and soon must fall.

Mahmud. Proud words, when deeds come short, are seasonable:
 Look, Hassan, on yon crescent moon, emblazoned
 Upon that shattered flag of fiery cloud
 Which leads the rear of the departing day,
 Wan emblem of an empire fading now!
 See how it trembles in the blood-red air,
 And like a mighty lamp whose oil is spent,
 Shrinks on the horizon's edge, while, from above,
 One star with insolent and victorious light
 Hovers above its fall, and with keen beams,
 Like arrows through a fainting antelope,
 Strikes its weak form to death.

Hassan. Even as that moon
 Renews itself——

Mahmud. Shall we be not renewed!

Far other bark than ours were needed now
 To stem the torrent of descending time :
 The spirit that lifts the slave before its lord
 Stalks through the capitals of armed kings,
 And spreads his ensign in the wilderness ;
 Exults in chains ; and when the rebel falls,
 Cries like the blood of Abel from the dust ;
 And the inheritors of earth, like beasts
 When earthquake is unleashed, with idiot fear
 Cower in their kingly dens—as I do now.
 What were Defeat, when Victory must appal ?
 Or Danger, when Security looks pale ?
 How said the messenger—who from the fort
 Islanded in the Danube, saw the battle
 Of Bucharest?—that—

Hassan.                                   Ibrahim's cimeter
 Drew with its gleam swift victory from heaven,
 To burn before him in the night of battle—
 A light and a destruction.

Mahmud.                               Ay ! the day
 Was ours ; but how ?—

Hassan.                                   The light Wallachians,
 The Arnaut, Servian, and Albanian allies,
 Fled from the glance of our artillery
 Almost before the thunder-stone alit ;
 One half the Grecian army made a bridge
 Of safe and slow retreat, with Moslem dead ;
 The other—

Mahmud.                               Speak—tremble not—

Hassan.                                   Islanded
 By victor myriads, formed in hollow square
 With rough and steadfast front, and thrice flung back
 The deluge of our foaming cavalry ;
 Thrice their keen wedge of battle pierced our lines.
 Our baffled army trembled like one man
 Before a host, and gave them space ; but soon,
 From the surrounding hills, the batteries blazed,
 Kneading them down with fire and iron rain.
 Yet none approached ; till, like a field of corn
 Under the hook of the swart sickle-man,
 The bands, intrenched in mounds of Turkish dead,
 Grew weak and few. Then said the Pacha, “ Slaves,
 Render yourselves—they have abandoned you—
 What hope of refuge, or retreat, or aid ?

We grant your lives.”—“ Grant that which is thine own,”
 Cried one, and fell upon his sword and died !
 Another—“ God, and man, and hope abandon me ;
 But I to them and to myself remain
 Constant ;” he bowed his head, and his heart burst.
 A third exclaimed, “ There is a refuge, tyrant,

Where thou darest not pursue, and canst not harm,
 Shouldst thou pursue; there we shall meet again."—
 Then held his breath, and, after a brief spasm,
 The indignant spirit cast its mortal garment
 Among the slain—dead earth upon the earth!
 So these survivors, each by different ways,
 Some strange, all sudden, none dishonourable,
 Met in triumphant death; and when our army
 Closed in, while yet wonder, and awe, and shame
 Held back the base hyenas of the battle
 That feed upon the dead and fly the living,
 One rose out of the chaos of the slain;
 And if it were a corpse which some dread spirit
 Of the old saviours of the land we rule
 Had lit in its anger, wandering by;
 Or if there burned within the dying man
 Unquenchable disdain of death, and faith
 Creating what it feigned;—I cannot tell:
 But he cried, "Phantoms of the free, we come!
 Armies of the Eternal, ye who strike
 To dust the citadels of sanguine kings,
 And shake the souls throned on their stony hearts,
 And thaw their frost-work diadems like dew;—
 O ye who float around this clime, and weave
 The garment of the glory which it wears;
 Whose fame, though earth betray the dust it clasped,
 Lies sepulchred in monumental thought;—
 Progenitors of all that yet is great,
 Ascribe to your bright senate, O accept
 In your high ministrations, us, your sons—
 Us first, and the more glorious yet to' come!
 And ye, weak conquerors! giants who look pale
 When the crushed worm rebels beneath your tread—
 The vultures, and the dogs, your pensioners tame,
 Are overgorged; but, like oppressors, still
 They crave the relic of Destruction's feast.
 The exhalations and the thirsty winds
 Are sick with blood; the dew is foul with death—
 Heaven's light is quenched in slaughter: Thus where'er
 Upon your camps, cities, or towers, or fleets,
 The obscene birds the reeking remnats cast
 Of these dead limbs, upon your streams and mountainis,
 Upon your fields, your garnens, and your house-tops,
 Where'er the winds shall creep, or the clouds fly,
 Or the dews fall, or the angry sun look down
 With poisoned light—Famine, and Pestilence,
 And Panic, shall wage war upon our side!
 Nature from all her boundaries is moved
 Against ye: Time has found ye light as foam.
 The earth rebels; and Good and Evil stake
 Their empire o'er the unborn world of men

On this one cast—but ere the die be thrown,
 The renovated genius of our race,
 Proud umpire of the impious game, descends
 A seraph-winged Victory, bestriding
 The tempest of the Omnipotence of God,
 Which sweeps all things to their appointed doom,
 And you to oblivion!"—More he would have said,
 But—

Mahmud. Died—as thou shouldst ere thy lips had painted
 Their ruin in the hues of our success.
 A rebel's crime, gilt with a rebel's tongue?
 Your heart is Greek, Hassan.

Hassan. It may be so:
 A spirit not my own wrenched me within,
 And I have spoken words I fear and hate;
 Yet would I die for—.

Mahmud. Live! O live! outlive
 Me and this sinking empire:—but the fleet—.

Hassan. Alas!

Mahmud. The fleet which, like a flock of clouds
 Chased by the wind, flies the insurgent banner.
 Our winged castles from their merchant ships!
 Our myriads before their weak pirate bands!
 Our arms before their chains! Our years of empire
 Before their centuries of servile fear!
 Death is awake! Repulsed on the waters,
 They own no more the thunder-bearing banner
 Of Mahmud; but like hounds of a base breed,
 Gorge from a stranger's hand, and rend their master.

Hassan. Latmos, and Ampelos, and Phanae, saw
 The wreck—

Mahmud. The caves of the Icarian isles
 Hold each to the other in loud mockery,
 And with the tongue as of a thousand echoes
 First of the sea-convulsing fight—and then—
 Thou darest to speak—senseless are the mountains,
 Interpret thou their voice!

Hassan. My presence bore
 A part in that day's shame. The Grecian fleet
 Bore down at day-break from the North, and hung
 As multitudinous on the ocean line
 As cranes upon the cloudless Thracian wind.
 Our squadron, convoying ten thousand men,
 Was stretching towards Nauplia when the battle
 Was kindled.—
 First through the hail of our artillery
 The agile Hydriote barks with press of sail
 Dashed:—ship to ship, cannon to cannon, man
 To man, were grappled in the embrace of war,
 Inextricable but by death or victory.

The tempest of the raging fight convulsed
 To its crystalline depths that stainless sea,
 And shook heaven's roof of golden morning clouds
 Poised on an hundred azure mountain-isles.
 In the brief truces of the artillery,
 One cry from the destroyed and the destroyer
 Rose, and a cloud of desolation wrapt
 The unforeseen event, till the north wind
 Sprung from the sea, lifting the heavy veil
 Of battle-smoke—then victory—victory !
 For, as we thought, three frigates from Algiers
 Bore down from Naxos to our aid, but soon
 The abhorred cross glimmered behind, before,
 Among, around us : and that fatal sign
 Drièl with its beams the strength of Moslem hearts,
 As the sun drinks the dew.—What more ! We fled !
 Our noonday path over the sanguine foam
 Was beaconed, and the glare struck the sun pale,
 By our consuming transports ; the fierce light
 Made all the shadows of our sails blood-red,
 And every countenance blank. Some ships lay feeding
 The ravening fire even to the water's level :
 Some were blown up ; some, settling heavily,
 Sunk ; and the shrieks of our companions died
 Upon the wind, that bore us fast and far,
 Even after they were dead. Nine thousand perished !
 We met the vultures legioned in the air,
 Stemming the torrent of the tainted wind :
 They, screaming from their cloudy mountain peaks,
 Stooped through the sulphureous battle-smoke, and perched
 Each on the weltering carcase that we loved,
 Like its ill angel or its damned soul.
 Riding upon the bosom of the sea,
 We saw the dog-fish hastening to their feast.
 Joy waked the voiceless people of the sea,
 And ravening famine left his ocean-cave
 To dwell with war, with us, and with despair.
 We met night three hours to the west of Patmos,
 As with night, tempest—

Mahmud. Cease !

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger. Your Sublime Highness,
 That Christian hound, the Muscovite ambassador,
 Has left the city. If the rebel fleet
 Had anchored in the port, had victory
 Crowned the Greek legions in the Hippodrome,
 Panic were tamer.—Obedience and Mutiny,
 Like giants in contention planet-struck,
 Stand gazing on each other.—There is peace
 In Stamboul.—

Mahmud. Is the grave not calmer still ?
Its ruins shall be mine.

Hassan. Fear not the Russian ;
The tiger leagues not with the stag at bay
Aginst the hunter.—Cunning, base and cruel,
He crouches, watching till the spoil be won,
And must be paid for his reserve in blood.
After the war is fought, yield the sleek Russian
That which thou canst not keep, his deserved portion
Of blood, which shall not flow through streets and fields,
Rivers and seas, like that which we may win,
But stagnate in the veins of Christian slaves !

Enter Second Messenger.

Second Messenger. Nauplia, Tripolizza, Mothon, Athens,
Navarin, Artas, Monembasia,
Corinth and Thebes, are carried by assault ;
And every Islamite who made his dogs
Fat with the flesh of Galilean slaves,
Passed at the edge of the sword : the lust of blood,
Which made our warriors drunk, is quenched in death ;
But like a fiery plague breaks out anew
In deeds which make the Christian cause look pale
In its own light. The garrison of Patras
Has store but for ten days, nor is there hope
But from the Briton ; at once slave and tyrant,
His wi-hes still are weaker than his fears ;
Or he would sell what faith may yet remain
From the oaths broke in Genoa and in Norway ;
And if you buy him not, your treasury
Is empty even of promises—his own coin.
The freeman of a western poet chief
Holds Attica with seven thousand rebels,
And has beat back the pacha of Negropont ;
The aged Ali sits in Yanina,
A crownless metaphor of empire ;
His name, that shadow of his withered might,
Holds our besieging army like a spell
In prey to famine, pest, and mutiny :
He, bastioned in his citadel, looks forth
Joyless upon the sapphire lake that mirrors
The ruins of the city where he reigned
Childless and sceptreless. The Greek has reaped
The costly harvest his own blood matured,
Not the sower, Ali—who has bought a truce
From Ypsilanti, with ten camel-loads
Of Indian gold.

Enter a Third Messenger.

Mahmud. What more ?
Third Messenger. The Christian tribes
Of Lebanon and the Syrian wilderness

Are in revolt — Damascus, Hems, Aleppo,
 Tremble ;—the Arab menaces Medina ;
 The Ethiop has entrenched himself in Sennaar,
 And keeps the Egyptian rebel well employed,
 Who denies homage, claims investiture
 As price of tardy aid. Persia demands
 The cities on the Tigris, and the Georgians
 Refuse their living tribute. Crete and Cyprus,
 Like mountain-twins that from each other's veins
 Catch the volcano-fire and earthquake spasm,
 Shake in the general fever. Through the city,
 Like birds before a storm, the Santons shriek,
 And prophesyings horrible and new
 Are heard among the crowd ; that sea of men
 Sleeps on the wrecks it made, breathless and still.
 A Dervise, learned in the Koran, preaches
 That it is written how the sins of Islam
 Must raise up a destroyer even now.
 The Greeks expect a Saviour from the west ;
 Who shall not come, men say, in clouds and glory,
 But in the omnipresence of that spirit
 In which all live and are. Ominous signs
 Are blazoned broadly on the noon-day sky ;
 One saw a red cross stamped upon the sun ;
 It has rained blood ; and monstrous births declare
 The secret wrath of Nature and her Lord.
 The army encamped upon the Cydaris
 Was roused last night by the alarm of battle,
 And saw two hosts conflicting in the air,—
 The shadows doubtless of the unborn time,
 Cast on the mirror of the night. While yet
 The fight hung balanced, there arose a storm
 Which swept the phantoms from among the stars.
 At the third watch the spirit of the plague
 Was heard abroad flapping among the tents :
 Those who relieved watch found the sentinels dead.
 The last news from the camp is, that a thousand
 Have sickened, and—

Enter a Fourth Messenger.

Mahmud. And thou, pale ghost, dim shadow
 Of some untimely rumour, speak !

Fourth Messenger. One comes
 Fainting with toil, covered with foam and blood ;
 He stood, he says, upon Cleonit's
 Promontory, which o'erlooks the isles that groan
 Under the Briton's frown, and all their waters
 Then trembling in the splendour of the moon ;
 When, as the wandering clouds unveiled or hid
 Her boundless light, he saw two adverse fleets
 Stalk through the night in the horizon's glimmer,

Mingling fierce thunders and sulphureous gleams,
 And smoke which strangled every infant wind
 That soothed the silver clouds through the deep air.
 At length the battle slept, but the Sirocco
 Awoke, and drove his flock of thunder-clouds
 Over the sea-horizon, blotting out
 All objects—save that in the faint moon-glimpse
 He saw, or dreamed he saw the Turkish admiral
 And two, the loftiest, of our ships of war,
 With the bright image of that Queen of Heaven,
 Who hid, perhaps, her face for grief, reversed ;
 And the abhorred cross--

Enter an Attendant.

Attendant.	Your Sublime Highness,
The Jew, who——
Mahmud.	Could not come more seasonably : Bid him attend. I'll hear no more ! too long We gaze on danger through the mist of fear, And multiply upon our shattered hopes The images of ruin. Come what will ! To-morrow and to-morrow are as lamps Set in our path to light us to the edge, Through rough and smooth ; nor can we suffer aught Which he inflicts not in whose hand we are.
	[ Eexit. ]

SEMICHORUS I.

Would I were the winged cloud
 Of a tempest swift and loud !
 I would scorn
 The smile of morn,
 And the wave where the moon-rise is born !
 I would leave
 The spirits of eve
 A shroud for the corpse of the day to weave
 From other threads than mine !
 Bask in the blue noon divine
 Who would, not I.

SEMICHORUS II.

Whither to fly ?

SEMICHORUS I.

Where the rocks that gird th' Egean
 Echo to the battle paean
 Of the free—
 I would flee
 A tempestuous herald of victory !
 My golden aim
 For the Grecian slain
 Should mingle in tears with the bloody main ;
 And my solemn thunder knell
 Should ring to the world the passing-bell
 Of tyranny !

SEMICHORUS

Ah king ! wilt thou chain
The rack and the rain ?
Wilt thou fetter the lightning and hurricane ?
The storms are free,
But we—

CHORUS.

O Slavery ! thou frost of the world's prime,
Killing its flowers and leaving its thorns bare !
Thy touch has stamped these limbs with crime,
These brows thy branding garland bear ;
But the free heart, the impassive soul,
Scorn thy control !

SEMICHORUS I.

Let there be light ! said Liberty ;
And like sunrise from the sea,
Athens arose !—Around her born,
Shone like mountains in the morn,
Glorious states ;—and are they now
Ashes, wrecks, oblivion ?

SEMICHORUS II.

Go

Where Thermae and Asopus swallowed
Persia, as the sand does foam.
Deluge upon deluge followed,
Discord, Macedon, and Rome :
And, lastly, thou !

SEMICHORUS I.

Temples and towers,
Citadels and marts, and they
Who live and die there, have been ours,
And may be thine, and must decay ;
But Greece and her foundations are Built below the tide of war,
Based on the crystalline sea
Of thought and its eternity ;
Her citizens, imperial spirits,
Rule the present from the past,
On all this world of men inherits
Their seal is set.

SEMICHORUS II.

Hear ye the blast,
Whose Orphic thunder thrilling calls
From ruin her Titanian walls ?
Whose spirit shakes the sapless bones
Of Slavery ? Argos, Corinth, Crete,
Hear, and from their mountain thrones
The daemons and the nymphs repeat
The harmony.

SEMICHORUS I.
I hear ! I hear !

SEMICHORUS II.

The world's eyeless charioteer,
Destiny, is hurrying by !
What faith is crushed, what empire bleeds
Beneath her earthquake-footed steeds ?
What eagle-winged victory sits
At her right hand ? what shadow flits
Before ? what splendour rolls behind ?
Ruin and Renovation cry,
Who but we ?

SEMICHORUS I.
I hear ! I hear !

The hiss as of a rushing wind,
The roar as of an ocean foaming,
The thunder as of earthquake coming
I hear ! I hear !
The crash as of an empire falling,
The shrieks as of a people calling
Mercy ! Mercy !—How they thrill !
Then a shout of “ Kill ! kill ! kill ! ”
And then a small still voice, thus—

SEMICHORUS II. For
Revenge and wrong bring forth their kind,
The foul cubs like their parents are,
Their den is in their guilty mind,
And Conscience feeds them with despair.

SEMICHORUS I.
In sacred Athens, near the fane
Of wisdom, Pity's altar stood ;
Sacrifice not the unknown God in vain,
But pay that broken shrine again
Love for hate, and tears for blood.

Enter MAHMUD and AHASUERUS.

Mahmud. Thou art a man, thou sayest, even as we—
Ahasuerus. No more !

Mahmud. But raised above thy fellow-men
By thought, as I by power.

Ahasuerus. Thou sayest so.

Mahmud. Thou art an adept in the difficult lore
Of Greek and Frank philosophy ; thou numberest
The flowers, and thou measurest the stars ;
Thou severest element from element ;
Thy spirit is present in the past, and sees
The birth of the old world through all its cycles
Of desolation and of leveliness ;
And when man was not, and how man became

The monarch and the slave of this low sphere,
 And all its narrow circles—it is much.
 I honour thee, and would be what thou art
 Were I not what I am; but the unborn hour,
 Cradled in fear and hope, conflicting storms,
 Who shall unveil? Nor thou, nor I, nor any Mighty or wise. I apprehend not
 What thou hast taught me, but I now perceive
 That thou art no interpreter of dreams;
 Thou dost not own that art, device, or God,
 Can make the future present—let it come!
 Moreover thou disdainest us and ours!
 Thou art as God, whom thou contemplatest.

Ahasuerus. Disdain thee?—not the worm beneath my feet!

The Fathomless has care for meaner things
 Than thou canst dream, and has made pride for those Who would be what they may not, or would seem
 That which they are not. Sultan! talk no more
 Of thee and me, the future and the past;
 But look on that which cannot change—the One
 The unborn, and the undying. Earth and ocean,
 Space, and the isles of life or light that gem
 The sapphire floods of interstellar air,
 This firmament pavilioned upon chaos,
 With all its cresses of immortal fire,
 Whose outwall, bastioned impregnably
 Against the escape of boldest thoughts, repels them
 As Calpe the Atlantic clouds—this whole
 Of suns, and worlds, and men, and beasts, and flowers,
 With all the silent or tempestuous workings
 By which they have been, are, or cease to be,
 Is but a vision;—all that it inherits
 Are motes of a sick eye, bubbles, and dreams;
 Thought is its cradle and its grave, nor less
 The future and the past are idle shadows
 Of thought's eternal flight—they have no being;
 Nought is but that it feels itself to be.

Mahmud. What meanest thou? thy words stream like a tempest

Of dazzling mist within my brain—they shake
 The earth on which I stand, and hang like night
 On Heaven above me. What can they avail?
 They cast on all things, surest, brightest, best,
 Doubt, insecurity, astonishment.

Ahasuerus. Mistake me not! All is contained in each.
 Dodona's forest to an acorn's cup
 Is that which has been or will be, to that
 Which is—the absent to the present. Thought
 Alone, and its quick elements, Will, Passion,

Reason, Imagination, cannot die;
 They are what that which they regard appears,
 The stuff whence mutability can weave
 All that it hath dominion o'er,—worlds, worms,
 Empires, and superstitions. What has thought
 To do with time, or place, or circumstance?
 Wouldst thou behold the future?—ask and have!
 Knock and it shall be opened—look, and lo!
 The coming age is shadowed on the past,
 As on a glass.

Mahmud. Wild, wilder thoughts convulse
 My spirit—Did not Mahomet the Second Win Stamboul?

Ahasuerus. Thou wouldest ask that giant spirit
 The written fortunes of thy house and faith.
 Thou wouldest cite one out of the grave to tell
 How what was born in blood must die.

Mahmud. Thy words
 Have power on me! I see—

Ahasuerus. What hearest thou?
Mahmud. A far whisper—

Terrible silence.

Ahasuerus. What succeeds?

Mahmud. The sound
 As of the assault of an imperial city,
 The hiss of inextinguishable fire,
 The roar of giant cannon:—the earthquakeing
 Fall of vast bastions and precipitous towers,
 The shock of crags shot from strange engin'ry,
 The clash of wheels, and clang of armed hoofs,
 And clash of brazen mail, as of the wreck
 Of adamantine mountains—the mad blast
 Of trumpets, and the neigh of raging steeds,
 And shrieks of women whose thrill jars the blood,
 And one sweet laugh, most horrible to hear,
 As of a joyous infant waked, and playing
 With its dead mother's breast; and now more loud
 The mingled battle-cry—ha! hear I not

'Εν τούτῳ νίκη. Allali-illah-Allah!

Ahasuerus. The sulphureous mist is raised—thou seest—
Mahmud. A chasm,

As of two mountains, in the wall of Stamboul;
 And in that ghastly breach the Islamites,
 Like giants on the ruins of a world,
 Stand in the light of sunrise. In the dust
 Glimmers a kingless diadem, and one
 Of regal port has cast himself beneath
 The stream of war. Another, proudly clad
 In golden arms, spurs a tartarian barb
 Into the gap, and with his iron mace

Directs the torrent of that tide of men,
And seems—he is—Mahomet !

Ahasuerus. What thou see'st
Is but the ghost of thy forgotten dream ;
A dream itself, yet less, perhaps than that Thou call'st reality. Thou mayst behold
How cities, on which empire sleeps enthroned,
Bow their towered crests to mutability.
Poised by the flood, e'en on the height thou holdest,
Thou mayst now learn how the full tide of power
Ebbs to its depths.—Inheritor of glory,
Conceived in darkness, born in blood, and nourished
With tears and toil, thou see'st the mortal throes
Of that whose birth was but the same. The Past
Now stands before thee like an Incarnation
Of the To-come ; yet wouldest thou commune with
That portion of thyself which was ere thou
Didst start for this brief race whose crown is death ;
Dissolve with that strong faith and fervent passion
Which called it from the uncreated deep,
You cloud of war with its tempestuous phantoms
Of raging death ; and draw with mighty will
The imperial shade hither. [Exit AHASUERUS.]

Mahmud. Approach !

Phantom. I come
Thence whither thou must go ! The grave is fitter
To take the living, than give up the dead ;
Yet has thy faith prevailed, and I am here.
The heavy fragments of the power which fell
When I arose, like shapeless crags and clouds,
Hang round my throne on the abyss, and voices
Of strange lament soothe my supreme repose,
Wailing for glory never to return. - -

A later Empire nods in its decay ;
The autumn of a greener faith is come,
And wolfish change, like winter, howls to strip
The foliage in which Fame, the eagle, built
Her aërie, while Dominion whelped below.
The storm is in its branches, and the frost
Is on its leaves, and the blank deep expects
Oblivion on oblivion, spoil on spoil,
Ruin on ruin : thou art slow, my son ;
The Anarchs of the world of darkness keep
A throne for thee, round which thine empire lies
Boundless and mute ; and for thy subjects thou,
Like us, shall rule the ghosts of murdered life,
The phantoms of the powers who rule thee now—
Mutinous passions and conflicting fears,
And hopes that sate themselves on dust and die !
Stript of their mortal strength, as thou of thine.

Islam must fall, but we will reign together
 Over its ruins in the world of death :—
 And if the trunk be dry, yet shall the seed
 Unfold itself even in the shape of that
 Which gathers birth in its decay. Woe ! woe !
 To the weak people tangled in the grasp
 Of its last spasms.

Mahmud. Spirit, woe to all !
 Woe to the wronged and the avenger ! Woe
 To the destroyer, woe to the destroyed !
 Woe to the dupe, and woe to the deceiver !
 Woe to the oppressed and woe to the oppressor !
 Woe both to those that suffer and inflict ;
 Those who are born, and those who die ! But say,
 Imperial shadow of the thing I am,
 When, how, by whom, Destruction must accomplish
 Her consummation ?

Phantom. Ask the cold pale Hour,
 Rich in reversion of impending death,
 When he shall fall upon whose ripe grey hairs
 Sit care, and sorrow, and infirmity—
 The weight which Crime, whose wings are plumed with years,
 Leaves in his flight from ravaged heart to heart
 Over the heads of men, under which burthen
 They bow themselves unto the grave : fond wretch !
 He leans upon his crutch, and talks of years
 To come, and how in hours of youth renewed
 He will renew lost joys, and—

Voice without.

Victory ! victory !

[The Phantom vanishes.

Mahmud. What sound of the importunate earth has broken
 My mighty trance !

Voice without.

Victory ! victory !

Mahmud. Weak lightning before darkness ! poor faint smile
 Of dying Islam ! Voice which art the response
 Of hollow weakness ! Do I wake and live ?
 Were there such things ? or may the unquiet brain,
 Vexed by the wise mad talk of the old Jew,
 Have shaped itself these shadows of its fear ?
 It matters not !—for nought we see or dream,
 Possess, or lose, or grasp at, can be worth
 More than it gives or teaches. Come what may,
 The future must become the past, and I
 As they were, to whom once this present hour,
 This gloomy crag of time to which I cling,
 Seemed an Elysian isle of peace . and joy
 Never to be attained.—I must rebuke
 This drunkenness of triumph ere it die,
 And dying, bring despair.—Victory ! -poor slaves !

[Exit MAHMUD.

Voice without. Shout in the jubilee of death ! The Greeks
 Are as a brood of lions in the net,
 Round which the kingly hunters of the earth
 Stand smiling. Anarchs, ye whose daily food
 Are curses, groans, and gold, the fruit of death,
 From Thule to the girdle of the world,
 Come, feast ! the board groans with the flesh of men—
 The cup is foaming with a nation's blood,
 Famine and thirst await : eat, drink, and die !

SEMICHORUS I.

Victorious Wrong, with vulture scream,
 Salutes the risen sun, pursues the flying day !

I saw her ghastly as a tyrant's dream,
 Perch on the trembling pyramid of night,
 Beneath which earth and all her realms pavilioned lay
 In visions of the dawning undelight.

Who shall impede her flight ?
 Who rob her of her prey ?

Voice without. Victory ! victory ! Russia's famished eagles
 Dare not to prey beneath the crescent's light.
 Impale the remnant of the Greeks ! despoil !
 Violate ! make their flesh cheaper than dust !

SEMICHORUS II.

Thou voice which art
 The herald of the ill in splendour hid !

Thou echo of the hollow heart
 Of monarchy, bear me to thine abode
 When desolation flashes o'er a world destroyed.
 Oh bear me to those isles of jagged clou'd
 Which float like mountains on the earthquakes, 'mid
 The momentary oceans of the lightning ;
 Or to some toppling promontory proud
 Of solid tempest, whose black pyramid,
 Riven, overhangs the founts intensely brightening
 Of those dawn-tinted deluges of fire
 Before their waves expire,
 When heaven and earth are light, and only light
 In the thunder-night !

Voice without. Victory ! victory ! Austria, Russia, England,
 And that tame serpent, that poor shadow, France,
 Cry peace, and that means death when monarchs speak.
 Ho, there ! bring torches, sharpen those red stakes !
 These chains are light, fitter for slaves and poisoners
 Than Greeks. Kill ! plunder ! burn ! let none remain.

SEMICHORUS I.

Alas for Liberty !

If numbers, wealth, or unfulfilling years,
 Or fate, can quell the free ;
 Alas for Virtue ! when

Torments, or contumely, or the sneers
 Of erring judging men
 Can break the heart where it abides.
 Alas ! if Love, whose smile makes this obscure world splendid,
 Can change, with its false times and tides,
 Like hope and terror—
 Alas for Love !
 And Truth, who wanderest lone and unbefriended,
 If thou canst veil thy lie-consuming mirror
 Before the dazzled eyes of Error.
 Alas for thee ! Image of the Above.

SEMICHORUS II.

Repulse, with plumes from conquest torn,
 Led the ten thousand from the limits of the morn
 Through many an hostile Anarchy !
 At length they wept aloud and cried, “ The sea ! the sea ! ”
 Through exile, persecution, and despair,
 Rome was, and young Atlantis shall become
 The wonder, or the terror, or the tomb
 Of all whose step wakes power lulled in her savage lair :
 But Greece was as a hermit child.
 Whose fairest thoughts and limbs were built
 To woman's growth, by dreams so mild
 She knew not pain or guilt :
 And now, O Victory, blush ! and Empire, tremble,
 When ye desert the free !
 If Greece must be
 A wreck, yet shall its fragments reassemble,
 And build themselves again impregnably
 In a diviner clime,
 To Amphionic music, on some Cape sublime,
 Which frowns above the idle foam of Time.

SEMICHORUS I.

Let the tyrants rule the desert they have made ;
 Let the free possess the paradise they claim ;
 Be the fortune of our fierce oppressors weighed
 With our ruin, our resistance, and our name !

SEMICHORUS II.

Our dead shall be the seed of their decay,
 Our survivors be the shadows of their pride,
 Our adversity a dream to pass away—
 Their dishonour a remembrance to abide !
Voice without. Victory ! Victory ! The bought Briton sends
 The keys of ocean to the Islamite.
 Now shall the blazon of the cross be veiled,
 And British skill directing Othman might,
 Thunder-strike r'bel victory. O keep holy
 This jubilee of unrevenged blood !
 Kill ! crush ! Despoil ! Let not a Greek escape !

SEMICHORUS I.

Darkness has dawned in the East
 On the noon of time :
 The death-birds descend to their feast,
   From the hungry clime.
 Let Freedom and Peace flee far
   To a sunnier strand,
 And follow Love's folding star !
   To the Evening land !

SEMICHORUS II.

The young moon has fed
   Her exhausted horn
 With the sunset's fire :
   The weak day is dead,
     But the night is not born :
 And, like loveliness panting with wild desire,
 While it trembles with fear and delight,
 Hesperus flies from awakening night,
 And pants in its beauty and speed with light
   Fast-flashing, soft and bright.
 Thou beacon of love ! thou lamp of the free !
   Guide us far, far away,
 To climes where now, veiled by the ardour of day,
   Thou art hidden
   From waves on which weary noon
   Faints in her summer swoon,
   Between kingless continents, sinless as Eden,
   Around mountains and islands inviolably
   Prankt on the sapphire sea.

SEMICHORUS I.

Through the sunset of hope,
 Like the shapes of a dream,
 What Paradise islands of glory gleam
   Beneath Heaven's cope.
 Their shadows more clear float by--
 The sound of their oceans, the light of their sky,
 The music and fragrance their solitudes breathe,
 Burst like morning on dreams, or like Heaven on death,
   Through the walls of our prison ;
   And Greece, which was dead, is arisen !

CHORUS.

The world's great age begins anew,
   The golden years return,
 The earth doth like a snake renew
   Her winter weeds outworn :
 Heaven smiles, and faiths and empires gleam
   Like wrecks of a dissolving dream.

A brighter Hellas rears its mountains
   From waves serener far ;

A new Pencus rolls its fountains
 Against the morning-star.
 Where fairer Tempes bloom, there sleep
 Young Cyclads on a sunnier deep.

A loftier Argo cleaves the main,
 Fraught with a later prize ;
 Another Orpheus sings again,
 And loves, and weeps, and dies.
 A new Ulysses leaves once more
 Calypso for his native shore.

O write no more the tale of Troy,
 If earth Death's scroll must be !
 Nor mix with Laiian rage the joy
 Which dawns upon the free :
 Although a subtler sphinx renew
 Riddles of death Thebes never knew.

Another Athens shall arise,
 And to remoter time
 Bequeath, like sunset to the skies,
 The splendour of its prime ;
 And leave, if nought so bright may live,
 All earth can take or heaven can give.

Saturn and Love their long repose
 Shall burst, more bright and good
 Than all who fell, than One who rose,
 Than many unsubdued :
 Not gold, not blood, their altar dowers,
 But votive tears, and symbol flowers.

O cease ! must hate and death return ?
 Cease ! must men kill and die ?
 Cease ! drain not to its dregs the urn
 Of bitter prophecy.
 The world is weary of the past,
 O might it die or rest at last ! *

OEDIPUS TYRANNUS;

OR,
SWELLFOOT THE TYRANT.

A TRAGEDY IN TWO ACTS, TRANSLATED FROM THE ORIGINAL DORIC.

Choose Reform or Civil War,
When through thy streets, instead of hare with dogs,
A CONSORT-QUEEN shall hunt a KING with hogs,
Riding on the IONIAN MINOTAUR.

ADVERTISEMENT.

THIS Tragedy is one of a triad, or system of three Plays, (an arrangement according to which the Greeks were accustomed to connect their Dramatic representations,) elucidating the wonderful and appalling fortunes of the SWELLFOOT dynasty. It was evidently written by some learned Thelion, and from its characteristic dulness, apparently before the duties on the importation of Attic salt had been repealed by the Boeotarchs. The tenderness with which he beats the Pigs proves him to have been a sus Baotiae; possibly Epicuri de grege Porcus; for, as the poet observes,

"A fellow feeling makes us wond'rous kind."

No liberty has been taken with the translation of this remarkable piece of antiquity, except the suppressing a seditious and blasphemous chorus of the Pigs and Bulls at the last act. The word Hoypiponse, (or more properly Oedipus,) has been rendered literally SWELLFOOT, without its having been conceived necessary to determine whether a swelling of the hind or the fore feet of the Swinish Monarch is particularly indicated.

Should the remaining portions of this Tragedy be found, entitled, "Swellfoot in Angaria," and "Charité," the Translator might be tempted to give them to the reading Public.

SCENE—Thebes.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A magnificent Temple, built of thigh-bones and death's-heads, and tiled with scalps. Over the Altar the statue of Famine, veiled; a number of boars, sows, and sucking-pigs, crowned with thistle, shamrock, and oak, sitting on the steps, and clinging round the Altar of the Temple.

Enter SWELLFOOT, in his royal robes, without perceiving the Pigs.

Sir 'Foot. Thou supreme Goddess ! by whose power divine
These graceful limbs are clothed in proud array

[He contemplates himself with satisfaction.]

Of gold and purple, and this kingly paunch
Swall like a sail before a favouring breeze,
And these most sacred nether prominories
Lie satisfied with layers of fat ; and these
Boeotian cheeks, like Egypt's pyramid,
(Nor with less toil were their foundations laid,*)
Sustain the cone of my untroubled brain,
That point, the emblem of a pointless nothing !
Thou to whom Kings and laurelled Emperors,
Radical-butchers, Paper-money-millers,
Bishops and deacons, and the entire army
Of those fat martyrs to the persecution
Of stilling turtle soup, and brandy-devils,
Offer their secret vows ! Thou plenteous Ceres
Of their Eleusis, hail !

The Swine. Eigh ! eigh ! eigh ! eigh !

Swellfoot. Ha ! what are ye,

Who, crowned with leaves devoted to the Furies,
Cling round this sacred shrine ?

Swine. Aigh ! aigh ! aigh !

Swellfoot. What ! ye that are

The very beasts that offered at her altar
With blood and groans, salt-cake, and fat, and inwards,
Ever propitiate her reluctant will
When taxes are withheld ?

Swine. Ugh ! ugh ! ugh !

Swellfoot. What ! ye who grub

With filthy snouts my red potatoe : up
In Allan's rushy bog ? Who eat the oats
Up, from my cavalry in the Hebrides ?

* See Universal History for an account of the number of people who died, and the immense consumption of garlic by the wretched Egyptians, who made a sepulchre for the name as well as the bodies of their tyrants.

Who swill the hog-wash soup my cooks digest
From bones, and rags, and scraps of shoe-leather,
Which should be given to cleaner pigs than you?

THE SWINE.—SEMICHORUS I.
The same, alas ! the same ;
Though only now the name
Of pig remains to me.

SEMICHORUS II.
If 'twere your kingly will
Us wretched swine to kill,
What should we yield to thee ?

Swellfoot. Why skin and bones, and some few hairs for mortar.

CHORUS OF SWINE.
I have heard your Laureate sing,
That pity was a royal thing ;
Under your mighty ancestors, we pigs
Were blessed as nightingales on myrtle sprigs,
Or grasshoppers that live on noon-day dew,
And sung, old annals tell, as sweetly too :
But now our sties are fallen in, we catch
The Murrain and the mange, the scab and itch ;
Sometimes your royal dogs tear down our thatch,
And then we seek the shelter of a ditch ;
Hog-wash or grains, or ruta-baga, none
Has yet been ours since your reign begun.

FIRST SOW.
My pigs, 'tis in vain to tug !

SECOND SOW.
I could almost eat my litter !

FIRST PIG.
I suck, but no milk will come from the dug.

SECOND PIG.
Our skin and our bones would be bitter.

THE BOARS.
We fight for this rag of greasy rug,
Though a trough of wash would be fitter.

SEMICHORUS.
Happier swine were they than we,
Drowned in the Gadarean sea—
I wish that pity would drive out the devils
Which in your royal bosom hold their revels,
And sink us in the waves of your compassion !
Alas ! the pigs are an unhappy nation !
Now if your majesty would have our bristles
To bind your mortar with, or fill our colons
With rich blood, or make brawn out of our gristles,
In policy—ask else your royal Solons—
You ought to give us hog-wash and clean straw,
And sties well thatched ; besides, it is the law !

Swellfoot. This is sedition, and rank blasphemy !
Ho ! there, my guards !

Enter a GUARD.

Guard. Your sacred Majesty ?

Swellfoot. Call in the Jews, Solomon the court porkman,
Moses the sow-gelder, and Zephaniah the hog-butcher.

Guard. They are in waiting, sire.

Enter SOLOMON, MOSES, and ZEPHANIAH.

Swellfoot. Out with your knife, old Moses, and spay those sows,
[The Pigs run about in consternation.

That load the earth with pigs ; cut close and deep.

Moral restraint I see has no effect,

Nor prostitution, nor our own example,

Starvation, typhus-fever, war, nor prison—

This was the art which the arch-priest of Famine

Hinted at in his charge to the Theban clergy —

Cut close and deep, good Moses.

Moses. Let your majesty
Keep the boars quiet, else—

Swellfoot. Zephaniah, cut
That fat hog's throat, the brute seems overfed ;
Seditious hunks ! to whine for want of grains.

Zephaniah. Your sacred majesty, he has the dropsy ;—
We shall find pints of hydatids in 's liver,
He has not half an inch of wholesome fat
Upon his carious ribs—

Swellfoot. 'Tis all the same,
He'll serve instead of riot-money, when
Our murmuring troops bivouaque in Thebes' streets ;
And January winds, after a day
Of butchering, will make them relish carrion.
Now, Solomon, I'll sell you in a lump
The whole kit of them.

Solomon. Why, your majesty,
I could not give—

Swellfoot. Kill them out of the way,
That shall be price enough, and let me hear
Their everlasting grunts and whines no more !

Enter MAMMON, the Arch Priest ; and PURGANAX, Chief of the Council of Wizards.

Purganax. The future looks as black as death, a cloud,
Dark as the frown of Hell, hangs over it.—
The troops grow mutinous—the revenue fails—
There's something rotten in us—for the level
Of the State slopes, its very bases tottle ;
The boldest turn their backs upon themselves !

Mammon. Why what's the matter, my dear fellow, now ?
 Do the troops mutiny ?—decimate some regiments ;
 Does money fail ?—come to my mint—coin paper,
 Till gold be at a discount, and, ashamed
 To show his bilious face, go purge himself,
 In emulation of her vestal whiteness.

Purganax. Oh, would that this were all ! The oracle !

Mammon. Why it was I who spoke that oracle,
 And whether I was dead drunk or inspired,
 I cannot well remember ; nor, in truth,
 The oracle itself !

Purganax. The words went thus :— “ Boetia, choose reform or civil war !
 When through the streets, instead of hare with dogs,
 A Consort-Queen shall hunt a King with hogs,
 Riding on the Ionian Minotaur.”

Mammon. Now if the oracle had ne'er foretold
 This sad alternative, it must arrive,
 Or not, and so it must now that it has ;
 And whether I was urged by grace divine,
 Or Lesbian liquor to declare these words,
 Which must, as all words must, be false or true ;
 It matters not : for the same power made all,
 Oracle, wine, and me and you—or none . . .
 ‘Tis the same thing. If you knew as much
 Of oracles as I do —

Purganax. You arch-priests
 Believe in nothing ; if you were to dream
 Of a particular number in the lottery,
 You would not buy the ticket !

Mammon. Yet our tickets
 Are seldom blanks. But what steps have you taken ?
 For prophecies, when once they get abroad,
 Like liars who tell the truth to serve their ends,
 Or hypocrites, who, from assuming virtue,
 Do the same actions that the virtuous do,
 Contrive their own fulfilment. This Iona —
 Well—you know what the chaste Pasiphae did,
 Wife to that most religious King of Crete,
 And still how popular the tale is here ;
 And these dull swine of Thebes boa + their descent
 From the free Minotaur. You know they still
 Call themselves bulls, though thus degenerate ;
 And everything relating to a bull
 Is popular and respectable in Thebes :
 Their arms are seven bulls in a field gules.
 They think their strength consists in eating beef,—
 Now there were danger in the precedent
 If Queen Iona —

Purganax. I have taken good care

That shall not be. I struck the crust o' the earth
 With this enchanted rod, and Hell lay bare !
 And from a cavern full of ugly shapes,
 I chose a LEECH, a GADFLY, and a RAT.
 The gadfly was the same which Juno sent
 To agitate Io,* and which Ezechiel † mentions
 That the Lord whistled for out of the mountains
 Of utmost Ethiopia, to torment
 Mesopotamian Babylon. The beast
 Has a loud trumpet like the Scarabee ;
 His crooked tail is barbed with many stings,
 Each able to make a thousand wounds, and each
 Immedicable ; from his convex eyes
 He sees fair things in many hideous shapes,
 And trumpets all his falsehood to the world.
 Like other beetles he is fed on dung—
 He has eleven feet with which he crawls,
 Trailing a blistering slime ; and this foul beast
 Has tracked Iona from the Theban limits,
 From isle to isle, from city unto city,
 Urging her flight from the far Chersonese
 To fabulous Solyma, and the Ætnean Isle,
 Ortygia, Melite, and Calypso's Rock,
 And the swart tribes of Garamant and Fez,
 Æolia and Elysium, and thy shores, *
 Parthenope, which now, alas ! are free !
 And through the fortunate Saturnian land,
 Into the darkness of the West.

Mammon. But if
 Thus Gadfly should drive Iona hither ?

Purganax. Gods ! what an if ! but there is my grey RAT ;
 So thin with want, he can crawl in and out
 Of any narrow chink and filthy hole,
 And he shall creep into her dressing-room,
 And—

Mammon. My dear friend, where are your wits ? as if
 She does not always toast a piece of cheese,
 And bait the trap ? and rats, when lean enough
 To crawl through such chinks—

Purganax. But my LEECH—a leech
 Fit to suck blood, with lubricous round rings,
 Capacious expatiative, which make
 His little body like a red balloon,
 As full of blood as that of hydrogen,
 Sucked from men's hearts ; insatiably he sucks
 And clings and pulls—a horse-leech, whose deep maw

* The Prometheus Bound of Aeschylus.

† And the Lord whistled for the gadfly out of Ethiopia, and for the bee ou' of Egypt, &c.—EZECHIEL.

The plethoric King Swellfoot could not fill,
And who, till full, will cling for ever.

Mammon. This
For Queen Iona might suffice, and less;
But 'tis the swinish multitude I fear,
And in that fear I have——

Purganax. Done what?

Mammon. Disinherited
My eldest son Chrysaor, because he Attended public meetings, and would always
Stand prating there of commerce, public faith,
Economy, and unadulterate coin,
And other topics, ultra-radical;
And have entailed my estate, called the Fool's Paradise,
And funds, in fairy-money, bonds and bills,
Upon my accomplished daughter Banknotina,
And married her to the Gallows.*

Purganax. A good match!

Mammon. A high connection, Purganax. The bridegroom
Is of a very ancient family
Of Hounslow Heath, Tyburn, and the New Drop,
And has great influence in both Houses;—Oh!
He makes the fondest husband; may too fond:—
New-married people should not kiss in public;—
But the poor souls love one another so!
And then my little grandchildren, the Gibbets,
Promising children as you ever saw, —
The young playing at hanging, the elder learning
How to hold radicals. They are well taught too,
For every Gibbet says its catechism,
And reads a select chapter in the Bible
Before it goes to play. [A most tremendous humming is heard.

Purganax. Ha! what do I hear?

Enter GADFLY.

Mammon. Your Gadfly, as it seems, is tired of gadding.
GADFLY.

Hum! hum! hum!
From the lakes of the Alps, and the cold grey scalps
Of the mountains, I come!
Hum! hum! hum!
From Morocco and Fez, and the high palaces
Of golden Byzantium;
From the temples divine of old Palestine,
From Athens and Rome,
With a ha! and a hum!
I come! I come!

* "If one should marry a gallows, and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone."—CYMBELINE.

All inn-doors and windows
Were open to me !
I saw all that sin does,
Which lamps hardly see

That burn in the night by the curtained bed,—
The impudent lamps ! for they blushed not red.

Dinging and singing,
From slumber I rung her,
Loud as the clank of an ironmonger !
Hum ! hum ! hum !

Far, far, far,
With the trump of my lips, and the sting at my hips,
I drove her—afar !

Far, far, far,
From city to city, abandoned of pity,
A ship without needle or star ;—
Homeless she past, like a cloud on the blast,
Seeking peace, finding war ;—
She is here in her ear,
From afar, and afar ;—
Hum ! hum !

I have stung her and wrung her !
The venom is working ;—
And if you had hung her
With canting and quirking,
She could not be deader than she will be soon ;—
I have driven her close to you under the moon.
Night and day, hum ! hum ! ha !
I have hummed her and drummed her
From place to place, till at last I have dumbed her.
Hum ! hum ! hum !

LEECH.

I will suck
Blood or muck !
The disease of the state is a plethora,
Who so fit to reduce it as I ?

RAT.

I'll slyly seize and
Let blood from her weasand,—
Creeping through crevice, and chink, and cranny,
With my snaky tail, and my sides so scranny.

Purganax. Aroint ye ! thou unprofitable worm !

And thou, dull beetle, get thee back to hell ! [To the GADFLY.
To sting the ghosts of Babylonian kings,
And the ox-headed lo.—

SWINE (within).

Ugh, ugh, ugh !
Hail ! Iona the divine,
We will be no longer swine,
But bulls with horns and dewlaps.

For,

You know, my lord, the Minotaur—

Purganax (fiercely). Be silent ! get to hell ! or I will call
The cat out of the kitchen. Well, Lord Mammon,
This is a pretty business ! [Exit the RAT.
Mammon. I will go
And spell some scheme to make it ugly then.] [Exit.

Enter SWELFOOT.

Swellfoot. She is returned ! Taurina is in Thebes
When Swellfoot wishes that she were in hell !
Oh, Hymen ! clothed in yellow jealousy,
And waving o'er the couch of wedded kings
The torch of Discord with its fiery hair ;
This is thy work, thou patron saint of queens !
Swellfoot is wived ! though parted by the sea,
The very name of wife had conjugal rights ;
Her cursed image ate, drank, slept with me,
And in the arms of Adiposa oft
Her memory has received a husband's—

[A loud tumult, and cries of "Iona for ever!—No Swellfoot!"
Swellfoot. Hark !

How the swine cry Iona Taurina !
I suffer the real presence : Purganax,
Off with her head !

Purganax. But I must first impanel
A jury of the pigs.

Swellfoot. Pack them then.

Purganax. Or fattening some few in two separate sties,
And giving them clean straw, tying some bits
Of ribbon round their legs—giving their sows
Some tawdry lace, and bits of lustre glass,
And their young boars white and red rags, and tails
Of cows, and jay feathers, and sticking cauliflowers
Between the ears of the old ones ; and when
They are persuaded, that by the inherent virtue
Of these things, they are all imperial pigs,
Good Lord ! they'd rip each other's bellies up,
Not to say help us in destroying her.

Swellfoot. This plan might be tried too ;—where's General Laoctonus ?

Enter LAOCTONOS and DAKRY.

It is my royal pleasure

That you, Lord General, bring the head and body,
If separate it would please me better, hither
Of Queen Iona.

Laocoonos. That pleasure I well knew,
And made a charge with those battalions bold,
Called, from their dress and grin, the royal apes,
Upon the swine, who in a hollow square
Enclosed her, and received the first attack
Like so many rhinoceroses, and then
Retreating in good order, with bare tusks
And wrinkled snouts presented to the foe,
Bore her in triumph to the public sty.
What is still worse, some sows upon the ground
Have given the ape-guards apples, nuts, and gin,
And they all whisk their tails aloft, and cry,
"Long live Iona ! down with Swellfoot !

Purganax.

Hark !

The Swine (without). Long live Iona ! down with Swellfoot !

Dukry. I went to the garret of the swineherd's tower,
Which overlooks the sty, and made a long
Harangue (all words) to the assembled swine,
Of delicacy, mercy, judgment, law,
Morals, and precedents, and purity,
Adultry, destitution, and divorce,
Piety, faith, and state necessity,
And how I loved the queen !—and then I wept,
With the pathos of my own eloquence,
And every tear turned to a mill-stone, which Brained many a gaping pig, and there was made
A sluagh of blood and brains upon the place,
Greased with the pounded bacon ; round and round
The millstones rolled, ploughing the pavement up,
And hurling sucking pigs into the air,
With dust and stones.—

Enter MAMMON.

Mammon. I wonder that grey wizards
Like you should be so beardless in their schemes ;
It had been but a point of policy
To keep Iona and the swine apart.
Divide and rule ! but ye have made a junction
Between two parties who will govern you,
But for my art.—Behold this BAG ! it is
The poison BAG of that Green Spider huge,
On which our spies skulked in ovation through
The streets of Thebes, when they were paved with dead :
A bane so much the deadlier 'lls it now,
As calumny is worse than death,—for here
The Gadfly's venom, fifty times distilled,
Is mingled with the vomit of the Leech,

In due proportion, and black ratsbane, which
 That very Rat, who like the Pontic tyrant,
 Nurtures himself on poison, dare not touch ;—
 All is sealed up with the broad seal of Fraud,
 Who is the Devil's Lord High Chancellor,
 And over it the primate of all Hell
 Murmured this pious baptism :—" Be thou called
 The GREEN BAG ; and this power and grace be thine :
 That thy contents, on whomsoever poured,
 Turn innocence to guilt, and gentlest looks
 To savage, foul, and fierce deformity.
 Let all, baptised by thy infernal dew,
 Be called adulterer, drunkard, liar, wretch !
 No name left out which orthodoxy loves,
 Court Journal or legitimate Review !—
 Be they called tyrant, beast, fool, glutton, lover
 Of other wives and husbands than their own. —
 The heaviest sin on this side of the Alps !
 Wither they to a ghastly caricature
 Of what was human !—let not man nor beast
 Behold their face with unaverted eyes !
 Or hear their names with ears that tingle not
 With blood of indignation, rage, and shame !"’
 This is a perilous liquor ;—good my lords.

[SWELLFOOT approaches to touch the GREEN BAG.

Beware ! for God's sake, beware !—if you should break
 The seal, and touch the fatal liquor—

Purganax.

There !

Give it to me. I have been used to handle
 All sorts of poisons. His dread majesty
 Only desires to see the colour of it.

Mammon. Now, with a little common sense, my lords,
 Only undoing all that has been done,
 (Yet so as it may seem we but confirm it,)
 Our victory is assured. We must entice
 Her majesty from the sty, and make the pigs
 Believe that the contents of the GREEN BAG
 Are the true test of guilt or innocence.
 And that, if she be guilty, 'twill transform her
 To manifest deformity like guilt.

If innocent, she will become transfigured
 Into an angel, such as they say she is ;
 And they will see her flying through the air,
 So bright that she will diurn the noon-day sun ;
 Showering down blessings in the shape of confits.
 This, trust a priest, is just the sort of thing
 Swine will believe. I'll wager you will see them
 Climbing upon the thatch of their low sties ;
 With pieces of smoked glass, to watch her sail
 Among the clouds, and some will hold the flaps

Of one another's ears between their teeth,
To catch the coming hail of comfits in.
You, Purganax, who have the gift o' the gab,
Make them a solemn speech to this effect :
I go to put in readiness the feast
Kept to the honour of our goddess Fumine,
Where, for more glory, let the ceremony
Take place of the uglification of the Queen.

Dakry (to Swellfoot.) I, as the keeper of your sacred conscience,
Humbly remind your majesty that the care
Of your high office, as man-milliner
To red Bellona, should not be deferred.

Purganax. All part, in happier plight to meet again. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Public Sty. The Boars in full Assembly.

Enter PURGANAX.

Purganax. Grant me your patience, gentlemen and boars,
Ye, by whose patience under public burthens
The glorious constitution of these sties
Subsists, and shall subsist. The lean pig-rates
Grow with the growing populace of swine,
The taxes, that true source of piggishness,
(How can I find a more appropriate term
To include religion, morals, peace, and plenty,
And all that fit Baetia as a nation
To teach the other nations how to live ?)
Increase with piggishness itself ; and still Does the revenue, that great spring of all
The patronage, and pensions, and by-payments,
Which free-born pigs regard with jealous eyes,
Diminish, till at length, by glorious steps,
All the land's produce will be merged in taxes,
And the revenue will amount to——nothing !
The failure of a foreign market for
Sausages, bristles, and blood puddings,
And such home manufactures, is but partial ;
And, that the population of the pigs,
Instead of hog-wash, has been fed on straw
And water, is a fact which is—you know—
That is—it is a state necessity—
Temporary, of course. Those impious pigs,
Who, by frequent squeaks, have dared impugn
The settled Swellfoot system, or to make

Irreverent mockery of the genuflexions
 Inculcated by the arch-priest, have been whipt
 Into a loyal and an orthodox whine.
 Things being in this happy state, the Queen
 Iona —

A loud cry from the Pigs. She is innocent ! most innocent !

Puryanax. That is the very thing that I was saying,
 Gentlemen swine ; the Queen Iona being
 Most innocent, no doubt, returns to Thebes,
 And the lean sows and boars collect about her,
 Wishing to make her think that we believe
 (I mean those more substantial pigs, who swill Rich hog-wash, while the others mouth damp straw,) —
 That she is guilty ; thus, the lean pig faction
 Seeks to obtain that hog-wash, which has been
 Your immemorial right, and which I will Maintain you in to the last drop of —

A Boar (interrupting him). What Does any one accuse her of ?

Puryanax. Why, no one
 Makes any positive accusation : —but
 There were hints dropped, and so the privy wizards
 Conceived that it became them to advise
 His majesty to investigate their truth ; —
 Not for his own sake ; he could be content
 To let his wife play any pranks she pleased,
 If, by that sufferance, he could please the pigs ;
 But then he fears the morals of the swine,
 The sows especially, and what effect
 It might produce upon the purity and Religion of the rising generation
 Of sucking-pigs, if it could be suspected
 That Queen Iona —

[A pause.]

First Boar. Well, go on ; we long
 To hear what she can possibly have done.

Puryanax. Why, it is hinted, that a certain bull—
 Thus much is known : —the milk-white bulls that feed
 Beside Clitumnus and the crystal lakes
 Of the Cisalpine mountains, in fresh dews
 Of lotus-grass and blossoming asphodel,
 Sleeking their silken hair, and with sweet breath
 Loading the morning winds until they faint
 With living fragrance, are so beautiful ! —
 Well, I say nothing ; —but Europa rode
 On such a one from Asia into Creto,
 And the enamoured sea grew calm beneath
 His gliding beauty. And Pasiphae,
 Iona's grandmother, —but she is innocent !
 And that both you and I, and all assert.

First Boar. Most innocent !

Purganax.

Behold this BAG ; a bag—

Second Boar. Oh ! no GREEN BAGS !! Jealousy's eyosare green,
Scorpions are green, and water-snakes, and efts,
And verdigris, and—

Purganax.

Honourable swine,

In piggish souls can prepossessions reign ?
Allow me to remind you, grass is green—
All flesh is grass;—no bacon but is flesh—
Ye are but bacon. This divining BAG
(Which is not green, but only bacon colour)
Is filled with liquor, which if sprinkled o'er
A woman guilty of—we all know what—
Makes her so hideous, till she finds one blind,
She never can commit the like again.
If innocent, she will turn into an angel,
And rain down blessings in the shape of comfits
As she flies up to heaven. Now, my proposal
Is to convert her sacred majesty
Into an angel, (as I am sure we shall do,)
By pouring on her head this mystic water. [Showing the Bag.
I know that she is innocent ; I wish
Only to prove her so to all the world.

First Boar. Excellent, just, and noble Purganax !

Second Boar. How glorious it will be to see her majesty
Flying above our heads, her petticoats
Streaming like —like—like—

Third Boar.

Any thing.

Purganax. Oh, no !
But like a standard of an admiral's ship,
Or like the banner of a conquering host,
Or like a cloud dyed in the dying day,
Um welled on the blast from a white mountain ;
Or like a meteor, or a war-steed's mane,
Or water-fall from a dizzy precipice
Scattered upon the wind.

First Boar.

Or a cow's tail,—

Second Boar. Or any thing, as the learned boar observed.

Purganax. Gentlemen boars, I move a resolution,
That her most sacred majesty should be Invited to attend the feast of Famine,
And to receive upon her chaste white body
Dews of Apotheosis from this BAG.

[A great confusion is heard of the Pigs out of Doors, which communicates itself to those within. During the first Strophe, the doors of the Sty are staved in, and a number of exceedingly lean Pigs and Sows and Boars rush in.

SEM' HORUS I.

No ! Yes !

SEMICHORUS II.

Yes ! No !

SEMICHORUS I.

A law!

SEMICHORUS II.

A flaw!

SEMICHORUS I.

Porkers, we shall lose our wash,
Or must share it with the lean pigs!

FIRST BOAR.

Order! order! be not rash!

Was there ever such a scene, pigs!

AN OLD SOW (rushing in).

I never saw so fine a dash
Since I first began to wean pigs.

SECOND BOAR (solenally).

The Queen will be an angel time enough.
I vote, in form of an amendment, that
Purganax rub a little of that stuff
Upon his face—

Purganax. [His heart is seen to beat through his waistcoat.
Gods! What would ye be at?

SEMICHORUS I.

Purganax has plainly shown a
Cloven foot and jack-daw feather.

SEMICHORUS II.

I vote Swellfoot and Iona
Try the magic test together;
Whenever royal spouses bicker,
Both should try the magic liquor.

AN OLD BOAR (aside).

A miserable state is that of pigs,
For if their drivers would tear caps and wigs,
The swine must bite each other's ear therefore.

AN OLD SOW (aside).

A wretched lot Jove has assigned to swine,
Squabbling makes pig-herds hungry, and they dine
On bacon, and whip sucking-pigs the more.

CHORUS.

Hog-wash has been ta'en away:
If the Bull-Queen is divested,
We shall be in every way
Hunted, stript, exposed, molested;
Let us do whate'er we may,
That she shall not be arrested.

QUEEN, we entrench you with walls of brawn,
And palisades of tusks, sharp as a bayonet:
Place your most sacred person here. We pawn
Our lives that none a finger dare to lay on it.
Those who wrong you, wrong us;
Those who hate you, hate us;

Those who sting you, sting us ;
 Those who bait you, bait us ;
 The oracle is now about to be
 Fulfilled by circumvolving destiny ;
 Which says : " Thebes, choose reform or civil war,
 When through your streets, instead of hare with dogs,
 A CONSORT-QUEEN shall hunt a KING with hogs,
 Riding upon the IONIAN MINOTAUR."

Enter IONA TAURINA.

Iona Taurina (coming forward). Gentlemen swine, and gentle lady-pigs,
 The tender heart of every boar acquits
 Their QUEEN, of any act incongruous
 With native piggishness, and she reposing
 With confidence upon the grunting nation,
 Has thrown herself, her cause, her life, her all,
 Her innocence, into their hoggish arms ;
 Nor has the expectation been deceived
 Of finding shelter there. Yet know, great boars,
 (For such who ever lives among you finds you,
 And so do I) the innocent are proud !
 I have accepted your protection only
 In compliment of your kind love and care,
 Not for necessity. The innocent
 Are safest there where trials and dangers wait ;
 Innocent Queens o'er white-hot plough-shares tread
 Unsinged ; and ladies, Eriu's laureate sings it,*
 Decked with rare gems, and beauty rarer still,
 Walked from Killarney to the Giant's Causeway,
 Through rebels, smugglers, troops of yeomanry,
 White-boys, and orange-boys, and constables,
 Tithe-proctors, and excise-people, uninjured !
 Thus I !—
 Lord PURGANAX, I do commit myself
 Into your custody, and am prepared
 To stand the test, whatever it may be !

Purganax. This magnanimity in your sacred majesty
 Must please the pigs. You cannot fail of being
 A heavenly angel. Smoke your bits of glass,
 Ye loyal swine, or hot transfiguration
 Will blind your wondering eyes.

An Old Boar (aside). Take care, my lord,
 They do not smoke you first.

Purganax. At the approaching feast
 Of Famine, let the expiation be.

* "Rich and rare were the gems she wore."

See Moore's Irish Melodies.

Swine. Content! content!

Iona Taurina (aside). I, most content of all,
Know that my foes even thus prepare their fall!

[Exeunt omnes.

SCENE II.—The interior of the Temple of Famine. The statue of the Goddess, a skeleton clothed in party-coloured rays, seated upon a heap of skulls and loaves intermingled. A number of exceedingly fat Priests in black garments arrayed on each side, with marrow-bones and cleavers in their hands. A flourish of trumpets.

Enter MAMMON as Arch-priest, SWELLFOOT, DAKRY, PURGANAX, LAOCTOKOS, followed by IOA TAURINA guarded. On the other side enter the Swine.

CHORUS OF PRIESTS.

Accompanied by the Court Porkman on marrow-bones and cleavers.

Goddess bare, and gaunt, and pale,
Empress of the world, all hail!

What though Cretans old called thee
City-crested Cybele?
We call thee FAME!

Goddess of fasts and feasts, starving and cramming ;
Through thee, for emperors, kings, and priests and lords,
Who rule by viziers, sceptres, bank-notes, words,
The earth pours forth its plenteous fruits,
Corn, wool, linen, flesh, and roots—

Those who consume these fruits through thee grow fat,
Those who produce these fruits through thee grow lean,
Whatever change takes place, oh, stick to that!

And let things be as they have ever been ;
At least while we remain thy priests,
And proclaim thy fasts and feasts !
Through thee the sacred SWELLFOOT dynasty
Is based upon a rock amid that sea
Whose waves are swine—so let it ever be !

Mammon. I fear your sacred majesty has lost
The appetite which you were used to have.
Allow me now to recommend this dish—
A simple kickshaw by your Persian cook,
Such as is served at the great King's second table.

The price and pains which its ingredients cost,
Might have maintained some dozen families
A winter or two—not more—so plain a dish
Could scarcely disagree.—

Swellfoot. After the trial,
And these fastidious pigs are gone, perhaps
I may recover my lost appetite,—
I feel the gout flying about my stomach—
Give me a glass of Maraschino punch.

Purganax (filling his glass and standing up).
.The glorious constitution of the pigs.

All. A toast ! a toast ! stand up, and three times three !

Dakry. No heel-taps—darken day-lights !

Laoctonos. Claret, somehow,
Puts me in mind of blood, and blood of claret !

Swellfoot. Laoctonos is fishing for a compliment,
But 'tis his due. Yes, you have drunk more wine,
And shed more blood, than any man in Thebes.

[To PURGANAX.

For God's sake stop the grunting of those pigs.

Purganax. We dare not, sire ! 'tis Famine's privilege.

CHORES OF SWINE.

Hail to thee, hail to thee, Famine !

Thy throne is on blood, and thy robe is of rags ;
Thou devil which livest on dauning ;

Saint of new churches, and cant, and GREEN BAGS ;

Till in pity and terror thou risest,
Confounding the schemes of the wisest.

When thou liftest thy skeleton form,

When the loaves and the skulls roll about,
We will greet thee—the voice of a storm

Would be lost in our terrible shout !

Then hail to thee, hail to thee, Famine !

Hail to thee, Empress of Earth !

When thou risest, dividing possessions ;

When thou risest, uprooting oppressions ;

In the pride of thy ghastly mirth.

Over palaces, temples, and graves,

We will rush as thy minister-slaves,

Trampling behind in thy train,

Till all be made level again !

Mammon. I hear a crackling of the giant bones
Of the dread image, and in the black pits
Which once were eyes, I see two livid flames :
These prodigies are oracular, and show
The presence of the unseen Deity.
Mighty events are hastening to their doom !

Swellfoot. I only hear the lean and mutinous swine
Grunting about the temple.

Dukry. In a crisis
Of such exceeding delicacy, I think
We ought to put her majesty, the QUEEN,
Upon her trial without delay.

Mammon. The BAG
Is here.

Purganax. I have rehearsed the entire scene
With an ox-bladder and some ditch-water,
On Lady P.—it cannot fail. [Taking up the bag.]

Your majesty (to SWELLFOOT)
In such a filthy business had better
Stand on one side, lest it should sprinkle you.
A spot or two on me would do no harm;
Nay, it might hide the blood, which the sad genius
Of the Green Isle has fixed, as by a spell,
Upon my brow—which would stain all its seas,
But which those seas could never wash away!

Iona Taurina. My lord, I am ready—nay I am impatient,
To undergo the test.

[A graceful figure in a semi-transparent veil passes unnoticed through the temple; the word LIBERTY is seen through the veil, as if it were written in fire upon its forehead. Its words are almost drowned in the furious grunting of the Pigs, and the business of the trial. She kneels on the steps of the Altar, and speaks in tones at first faint and low, but which ever become louder and louder.

Mighty Empress! Death's white wife!
Ghastly mother-in-law of life!
By the God who made thee such,
By the magic of thy touch,
By the starving and thy cramming,
Of fasts and feasts!—by thy dread self. O Famine!
I charge thee! when thou wake the multitude,
Thou lead them not upon the paths of blood.
The earth did never mean her foison
For those who crown life's cup with poison
Of fanatic rage and meaningless revenge—

But for those radiant spirits, who are still
The standard-bearers in the van of Change.

Be they th' appointed stewards, to fill
The lap of Pain, and Toil, and Age!—
Remit, O Queen! thy accustom'd rage!
Be what thou art not! In voice faint and low
FREEDOM calls Famine,—her eternal foe,
To brief alliance, hollow truce.—Rise now!

[Whilst the veiled figure has been chanting this strophe,

MAMMON, DAKRY, LAOCTONOS, and SWELLFOOT, have surrounded JONA TAURINA, who, with her hands folded on her breast, and her eyes lifted to Heaven, stands, as with saint-like resignation, to wait the issue of the business, in perfect confidence of her innocence.

[PURGANAX, after unsealing the GREEN BAG, is gravely about to pour the liquor upon her head, when suddenly the whole expression of her figure and countenance changes ; she snatches it from his hand with a loud laugh of triumph, and empties it over SWELLFOOT and his whole Court, who are instantly changed into a number of filthy and ugly animals, and rush out of the Temple. The image of FAMINE then arises with a tremendous sound, the Pigs begin scrambling for the loaves, and are tripped up by the skulls ; all those who eat the loaves are turned into Bulls, and arrange themselves quietly behind the altar. The image of FAMINE sinks through a chasm in the earth, and a MINOTAUR rises.

Minotaur. I am the Ionian Minotaur, the mightiest
Of all Europa's taurine progeny—
I am the old traditional man bull ;
And from my ancestors having been Ionian,
I am called Ion, which, by interpretation,
Is JOHN : in plain Theban, that is to say,
My name's JOHN BULL ; I am a famous hunter,
And can leap any gate in all Boeotia,
Even the palings of the royal park,
Or dore to ditch about the new inclosures ;
And if your majesty will deign to mount me,
At least till you have hunted down your game,
I will not throw you.

Jona Taurina.

[During this speech she has been putting on boots and spurs, and a hunting-cap, buckishly cocked on one side, and tucking up her hair, she leaps nimbly on his back.

Hoa ! hoa ! tallyho ! tallyho ! ho ! ho !
Come, let us hunt these ugly badgers down,
These stinking foxes, these devouring otters,
These hares, these wolves, these anything but men.
Hey, for a whipper-in ! my loyal pigs,
Now let your noses be as keen as beagles',
Your steps as swift as greyhounds', and your cries
More dulcet and symphonious than the bells
Of village towers, on sunshir : holiday ;
Wake all the dewy woods with jangling music.
Give them no law (are they not beasts of blood ?)
But such as they gave you. Tallyho ! ho !

Through forest, furze, and bog, and den, and desert,
Pursue the ugly beasts ! tallyho ! ho !

FULL CHORUS OF IONA AND THE SWINE.

Tallyho ! tallyho !
Through rain, hail, and snow,
Through brake, gorse, and briar,
Through fen, flood, and mire,
We go ! we go !

Tallyho ! tallyho !
Through pond, ditch, and slough,
Wind them, and find them,
Like the devil behind them,
Tallyho ! tallyho !

[Except, in full cry; IONA driving on the SWINE, with the empty GREEN BAG.

EARLY POEMS.

A SUMMER-EVENING CHURCH-YARD.

LECHDALE, GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

THE wind has swept from the wide atmosphere
Each vapour that obscured the sun-set's ray;
And pallid evening twines its beaming hair
In duskier braids around the languid eyes of day :
Silence and twilight, unbeloved of men,
Creep hand in hand from you obscurest glen.

They breathe their spells towards the departing day,
Encompassing the earth, air, tars, and sea ;
Light, sound, and motion own the potent sway,
Responding to the charm with its own mystery.
The winds are still, or the dry church-tower grass
Knows not their gentle motions as they pass.

Thou 'oc, aërial Pile ! whose pinnacles
Point from one shrine like pyramids of fire,
Obeyest in silence their sweet solemn spells,
Clothing in hues of heaven thy dim and distant spire,
Around whose lessening and invisible height
Gather among the stars the clouds of night.

The dead are sleeping in their sepulchres :
And, mouldering as they sleep, a thrilling sound,
Half sense, half thought, among the darkness stirs,
Breathed from their worny beds all living things around,
And mingling with the still night and mute sky
Its awful hush is felt inaudibly.

Thus solemnised and softened, death is mild
And terrorless as this serene st night :
Here could I hope, like son' inquiring child
Sporting on graves, that death did hide from human sight
Sweet secrets, or beside its breathless sleep
That loveliest dreams perpetual watch did keep.

MUTABILITY.

We are as clouds that veil the midnight moon ;
 How restlessly they speed, and gleam, and quiver,
 Streaking the darkness radiantly !—yet soon
 Night closes round, and they are lost for ever ;

Or like forgotten lyres, whose dissonant strings
 Give various response to each varying blast,
 To whose frail frame no second motion brings
 One mood or modulation like the last.

We rest—A dream has power to poison sleep ;
 We rise—One wandering thought pollutes the day ;
 We feel, conceive or reason, laugh or weep ;
 Embrace fond woe, or cast our cares away :

It is the same !—For, be it joy or sorrow,
 The path of its departure still is free ;
 Man's yesterday may ne'er be like his morrow ;
 Nought may endure but Mutability.

ON DEATH.

There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest.—ECCELESIASTES.

The pale, the cold, and the moony smile
 Which the meteor beam of a starless night
 Sheds on a lonely and sea-girt isle,
 Ere the dawning of morn's undoubted light,
 Is the flame of life so fickle and wan
 That flits round our steps till their strength is gone.

O man ! hold thee on in courage of soul
 Through the stormy shades of thy worldly way.
 And the billows of cloud that around thee roll
 Shall sleep in the light of a wondrous day,
 Where hell and heaven shall leave thee free
 To the universe of destiny.

This world is the nurse of all we know,
 This world is the mother of all we feel,
 And the coming of death is a fearful blow,
 To a brain unencompassed with nerves of steel ;
 When all that we know, or feel, or see,
 Shall pass like an unreal mystery.

The secret things of the grave are there,
 Where all but this frame must surely be,
 Though the fine-wrought eye and the wondrous ear
 No longer will live to hear or to see
 All that is great and all that is strange
 In the boundless realm of unending change.

Who telleth a tale of unspeaking death ?
 Who lifteth the veil of what is to come ?
 Who painteth the shadows that are beneath
 The wide-winding caves of the peopled tomb ?
 Or uniteth the hopes of what shall be
 With the fears and the love for that which we see ?

TO * * * *

ΔΑΚΡΥΤΗ ΔΙΟΙΣΩ ΗΟΤΜΟΝ ΑΙΟΤΜΟΝ.

Oh ! there are spirits in the air,
 And genii of the evening breeze,
 As I gentle ghosts, with eyes as fair
 As star-beams among twilight trees :—
 Such lovely ministers to meet
 Oft hast thou turned from men thy lonely feet.

With mountain winds, and babbling springs,
 And mountain seas, that are the voice
 Of these inexplicable things,
 Thou didst hold commune, and rejoice
 When they did answer thee ; but they
 Cast, like a worthless boon, thy love away.

And thou hast sought in starry eyes
 Beams that were never meant for thine,
 Another's wealth ;—tame sacrifice
 To a fond faith ! still dost thou pine ?
 Still dost thou hope that ungreeting hands,
 Voice, looks, or lips, may answer thy demands ?

Ah ! wherefore didst thou build thine hope
 On the false earth's inconstancy ?
 Did thine own mind afford no scope
 Of love, or moving thoughts to thee ?
 That natural scenes or human smiles
 Could steal the power to wind thee in their wiles.

Yes, all the faithless smiles are fled
 Whose falsehood left thee broken-hearted ;
 The glory of the moon is dead ;
 Night's ghosts and dreams have now departed ;
 Thine own soul still is true to thee,
 But changed to a foul fiend through misery.

This fiend, whose ghastly presence ever
 Beside thee like thy shadow hangs,
 Dream not to chase ;—the mad endeavour
 Would scourge thee to severer pangs.
 Be as thou art. Thy settled fate,
 Dark as it is, all change would aggravate.

TO WORDSWORTH.

POET of Nature, thou hast wept to know
 That things depart which never may return ;
 Childhood and youth, friendship and love's first glow,
 Have fled like sweet dreams, leaving thee to mourn.
 These common woes I feel. One loss is mine,
 Which thou too feel'st; yet I alone deplore.
 Thou wert as a lone star, whose light did shine
 On some frail bark in winter's midnight roar :
 Thou hast like to a rock built refuge stood
 Above the blind and battling multitude :
 In honoured poverty thy voice did weave
 Songs consecrate to truth and liberty,—
 Deserting these, thou leavest me to grieve,
 Thus having been, that thou shouldst cease to be.

LINES.

THE cold earth slept below,
 Above the cold sky shone,
 And all around
 With a chilling sound,
 From caves of ice and fields of snow,
 The breath of night like death did flow
 Beneath the sinking moon.

The wintry hedge was black,
 The green grass was not seen,
 The birds did rest
 On the bare thorn's Breast,
 Whose roots beside the pathway track,
 Had bound their folds o'er many a crack
 Which the frost had made between.

Thine eyes glowed in the glare
 Of the moon's dying light,
 As a fen-fire's beam
 On a sluggish stream
 Gleams dimly—so the moon shone there,
 And it yellowed the strings of thy tangled hair,
 That shook in the wind of night.

The moon made thy lips pale, beloved ;
 The wind made thy bosom chill ;
 The night did shed
 On thy dear head
 Its frozen dew, and thou didst lie
 Where the bitter breath of the naked sky
 Might visit thee at will.

STANZAS.—APRIL, 1814.

Away ! the moor is dark beneath the moon,
 Rapid clouds have drunk the last pale beam of even :
 Away ! the gathering winds will call the darkness soon,
 And profoundest midnight shroud the serene lights of heaven.
 Pause not ! The time is past ! Every voice cries, Away !
 Tempt not with one last glance thy friend's ungentle mood :
 Thy lover's eye, so glazed and cold, dares not entreat thy stay :
 Duty and dereliction guide thee back to solitude.

Away, away ! to thy sad and silent home ;
 Pour bitter tears on its desolated hearth ;
 Watch the dim shades as like ghosts they go and come,
 And complicate strange webs of melancholy mirth.
 The leaves of wasted autumn woods shall float around thine head,
 The blooms of dewy spring shall gleam beneath thy feet :
 But thy soul or this world must fade in the frost that binds
 the dead,
 Ere midnight's frown and morning's smile, ere thou and peace may meet.

The cloud shadows of midnight possess their own repose,
 For the weary winds are silent, or the moon is in the deep ;
 Some respite to its turbulence unresting ocean knows ;
 Whatever moves, or toils, or grieves hath its appointed sleep.
 Thou in the grave shalt rest—yet till the phantoms flee
 Which that house and heath and garden made dear to thee
 erewhile,
 Thy remembrance, and repentance, and deep musings, are not free
 From the music of two voices, and the light of one sweet smile.

FEELINGS OF A REPUBLICAN ON THE FALL OF BONAPARTE.

I HATED thee, fallen tyrant ! I did groan
To think that a most unambitious slave,
Like thou, shouldst dance and revel on the grave
Of Liberty. Thou mightst have built thy throne
Where it had stood even now : thou didst prefer
A frail and bloody pomp, which time has swept
In fragments towards oblivion. Massacre,
For this I prayed, would on thy sleep have crept,
Treason and Slavery, Rapine, Fear and Lust,
And stifled thee, their minister. I know
Too late, since thou and France are in the dust,
That Virtue owns a more eternal foe
Than force or fraud : old Custom, legal Crime,
And bloody Faith, the foulest birth of time.

POEMS WRITTEN IN 1816.

THE SUNSET.

THERE late was One, within whose subtle being,
As light and wind within some delicate cloud
That fades amid the blue noon's burning sky,
Genius and death contended. None may know
The sweetness of the joy which made his breath
Fail, like the trances of the summer air,
When, with the Lady of his love, who then
First knew the unreserve of mingled being,
He walked along the pathway of a field,
Which to the east a hoar wood shadowed o'er,
But to the west was open to the sky.
There now the sun had sunk, but lines of gold
Hung on the ashen clouds, and on the points
Of the far level grass and nodding flowers,
And the old dandelion's hoary beard,
And, mingled with the shades of twilight, lay
On the brown massy woods—and in the east
The broad and burning moon lingeringly rose

Between the black trunks of the crowded trees,
While the faint stars were gathering overhead.—
“ Is it not strange, Isabel,” said the youth,
“ I never saw the sun ? We will walk here
To-morrow ; thou shalt look on it with me.”
That night the youth and lady mingled lay
In love and sleep—but when the morning came
The lady found her lover dead and cold.
Let none believe that God in mercy gave
That stroke. The lady died not, nor grew wild,
But year by year lived on—in truth I think
Her gentleness and patience and sad smiles,
And that she did not die, but lived to tend
Her aged father, were a kind of madness,
If madness ’tis to be unlike the world.
For but to see her were to read the tale
Woven by some subtlest bard, to make hard hearts
Dissolve away in wisdom-working grief ;—
Her eye-lashes were torn away with tears,
Her lips and checks were like things dead—so pale ;
Her hands were thin, and through their wandering veins
And weak articulations might be seen
Day’s ruddy light. The tomb of thy dead self
Which one vexed ghost inhabits, night and day,
Is all, lost child, that now remains of thee !

“ Inheritor of more than earth can give,
Passionless calm, and silence unreproved,
Whether the dead find, oh, not sleep ! but rest,
And are the uncomplaining things they seem,
Or live, or drop in the deep sea of Love ;
Oh, that like thine, mine epitaph were—Peace ! ”
This was the only moan she ever made.

HYMN TO INTELLECTUAL BEAUTY.

THE awful shadow of some unseen Power
Floats tho’ unseen among us ; visiting
This various world with as inconstant wing
As summer winds that creep from flower to flower :
Like moonbeams that behind some piny mountain shower,
It visits with inconstant glance
Each human heart and countenance ;
Like hues and harmonies of evening,
Like clouds in starlight widely spread,
Like memory of music fled,
Like aught that for its grace may be
Dear, and yet dearer for its mystery.—

Spirit of BEAUTY, that dost consecrate
 With thine own hues all thou dost shine upon
 Of human thought or form, where art thou gone ?
 Why dost thou pass away and leave our state,
 This dim vast vale of tears, vacant and desolate ?
 Ask why the sunlight not for ever
 Weaves rainbows o'er yon mountain river ;
 Why aught should fail and fade that once is shown ;
 Why fear and dream and death and birth
 Cast on the daylight of this earth
 Such gloom ; why man has such a scope
 For love and hate, despondency and hope ;

No voice from some sublimer world hath ever
 To sage or poet these responses given :
 There're the names of Demon, Ghost, and Heaven,
 Remain the records of their vain endeavour ;
 Frail spells, whose uttered charm might not avail to sever,
 From all we hear and all we see,
 Doubt, chance, and mutability.
 Thy light alone, like mist o'er mountains driven,
 Or music by the night wind sent
 Through strings of some still instrument,
 Or moonlight on a midnight stream,
 Gives grace and truth to life's unquiet dream.

Love, Hope, and Self-esteem, like clouds depart
 And come, for some uncertain moments lent.
 Man were immortal and omnipotent,
 Didst thou, unknown and awful as thou art,
 Keep with thy glorious train firm stato within his heart.
 Thou messenger of sympathies
 That wax and wane in lovers' eyes ;
 Thou, that to human thought art nourishment,
 Like darkness to a dying flame !
 Depart not as thy shadow came :
 Depart not, lest the grave should be,
 Like life and fear, a dark reality.

While yet a boy I sought for ghosts, and sped
 Thro' many a listening chamber, cave, and ruin,
 And starlight wood, with fearful steps pursuing
 Hopes of high talk with the departed dead.
 I called on poisonous names with which our youth is fed :
 I was not heard, I saw them not ;
 When musing deeply on the lot
 Of life, at that sweet time when winds are wooing
 All vital things that wake to bring
 News of birds and blossoming,
 Sudden, thy shadow fell on me ;
 I shrieked, and clasped my hands in ecstasy !

I vowed that I would dedicate my powers
 To thee and thine : have I not kept the vow ?
 With beating heart and streaming eyes, even now
 I call the phantoms of a thousand hours
 Each from his voiceless grave : they have in visioned bowers
 Of studious zeal or love's delight
 Outwatched with me the envious night :
 They know that never joy illumined my brow,
 Unlinked with hope that thou wouldest free
 This world from its dark slavery,
 That thou, O awful LOVELINESS,
 Wouldest give whate'er these words cannot express.

The day becomes more solemn and serene
 When noon is past : there is a harmony
 In autumn, and a lustre in its sky,
 Which thro' the summer is not heard nor seen,
 As if it could not be, as if it had not been !
 Thus let thy power, which like the truth
 Of nature on my passive youth
 Descended, to my onward life supply
 Its calm, to one who worships thee,
 And every form containing thee,
 Whom, SPIRIT fair, thy spells did bind
 To fear himself, and love all human kind.

I.

THE everlasting universe of things
 Flows through the mind, and rolls its rapid waves,
 Now dark—now glittering —now reflecting gloom --
 Now lending splendour, where from secret springs
 The source of human thought its tribute brings
 Of waters,—with a sound but half its own,
 Such as a feeble brook will oft assume
 In the wild woods, among the mountains lone,
 Where waterfalls around it leap for ever,
 Where woods and winds contend, and a vast river
 Over its rocks ceaselessly bursts and raves.

II.

Thus thou, Ravine of Arve—dark, deep Ravine—
 Thou many-coloured, many-voiced vale,
 Over whose pines and crags and caverns sail
 Fast clouds, shadows, and sunbeams ; awful scene,

Where Power in likeness of the Arve comes down
 From the ice-gulfs that gird his secret throne,
 Bursting through these dark mountains like the flame
 Of lightning through the tempest ; thou dost lie,
 The giant brood of pines around thee clinging,
 Children of elder time, in whose devotion,
 The chainless winds still come and ever came
 To drink their odours, and their mighty swinging
 To hear—an old and solemn harmony :—
 Thine earthly rainbows stretched across the sweep
 Of the ethereal waterfall, whose veil
 Robes some unsculptured image ; the strange sleep
 Which, when the voices of the desert fail,
 Wraps all in its own deep eternity ;—
 Thy caverns echoing to the Arve's commotion
 A low<sup>d</sup>. lone sound, no other sound can tame ;
 Thou art pervaded with that ceaseless motion,
 Thou art the path of that unresting sound—
 Dizzy Ravine ! and when I gaze on thee,
 I seem as in a trance sublime and strange
 To muse on my own separate fantasy,
 My own, my human mind, which passively
 Now renders and receives fast influencings,
 Holding an unremitting interchange
 With the clear universe of things around ;
 One legion of wild thoughts, whose wandering wings
 Now float above thy darkness, and now rest
 Where, that or thou art no unbidden guest,
 In the still cave of the witch Poesy,
 Seeking among the shadows that pass by
 Ghosts of all things that are, some shade of thee,
 Some phantom, some faint image ; till the breast
 From which they fled recalls them, thou art there !

III.

Some say that gleams of a remoter world
 Visit the soul in sleep, — that death is slumber,
 And that its shapes the busy thoughts outnumber
 Of those who wake and live. I look on high ;
 Has some unknown omnipotence unfurled
 The veil of life and death ? or do I lie
 In dream, and does the mightier world of sleep
 Speed far around and inaccessible
 Its circles ? For the very spirit fails,
 Driven like a homeless cloud from steep to steep
 That vanishes among the viewless gales !
 Far, far above, piercing the infinite sky,
 Mont Blanc appears,—still, snowy, and serene—
 Its subject mountains their unearthly forms
 Pile around it, ice and rock ; broad vales between

Of frozen floods, unfathomable deeps,
 Blue as the overhanging heaven, that spread
 And wind among the accumulated steeps;
 A desert peopled by the storms alone,
 Save when the eagle brings some hunter's bone,
 And the wolf tracks her there—how hideously
 Its shapes are heaped around ! rude, bare, and high,
 Ghastly, and scarred, and riven.—Is this the scene
 Where the old Earthquake-demon taught her young
 Ruin? Were these their toys? or did a sea
 Of fire envelope once this silent snow?
 None can reply—all seems eternal now.
 The wilderness has a mysterious tongue
 Which teaches awful doubt, or faith so mild,
 So solemn, so serene, that man may be
 But for such faith with nature reconciled ;
 Thou hast a voice, great Mountain, to repeal
 Large codes of fraud and woe ; not understood,
 By all, but which the wise, and great, and good,
 Interpret or make felt, or deeply feel.

The fields, the lakes, the forests, and the streams,
 Ocean, and all the living things that dwell
 Within the daedal earth ; lightning, and rain,
 Earthquake, and fiery flood, and hurricane,
 The torpor of the year when feeble dreams
 Visit the hidden buds, or dreamless sleep
 Holds every future leaf and flower,—the bound
 With which from that detested trance they leap ;
 The works and ways of man, their death and birth,
 And that of him, and all that his may be ;
 All things that move and breathe with toil and sound
 Are born and die, revolve, subside, and swell.
 Power dwells apart in its tranquillity,
 Remote, serene, and inaccessible :
 And this, the naked countenance of earth,
 On which I gaze, even these primæval mountains,
 Teach the advertiring mind. The glaciers creep,
 Like snakes that watch their prey, from their far fountains
 Slowly rolling on ; there, many a precipice
 Frost and the Sun in scorn of mortal power
 Have piled—dome, pyramid, and pinnacle,
 A city of death, distinct with many a tower
 And wall impregnable of beaming ice.
 Yet not a city, but a flood of ruin
 Is there, that from the boundaries of the sky
 Rolls its perpetual stream ; vast pines are strewing
 Its destined path, or in the mangled soil
 Branchless and shattered stand ; the rocks, drawn down

From yon remotest waste, have overthrown
 The limits of the dead and living world,
 Never to be reclaimed. The dwelling-place
 Of insects, beasts, and birds, becomes its spoil ;
 Their food and their retreat for ever gone,
 So much of life and joy is lost. The race
 Of man flies far in dread ; his work and dwelling
 Vanish, like smoke before the tempest's stream,
 And their place is not known. Below, vast caves
 Shine in the rushing torrent's restless gleam,
 Which from those secret chasms in tumult welling
 Meet in the Vale, and one majestic River,
 The breath and blood of distant lands, for ever
 Rolls its loud waters to the ocean waves,
 Breathes its swift vapours to the circling air.

v.

Mont Blanc yet gleams on high : the power is there,
 The still and solemn power of many sights
 And many sounds, and much of life and death.
 In the calm darkness of the moonless nights,
 In the lone glare of day, the snows descend
 Upon that Mountain : none beholds them there,
 Nor when the flakes burn in the sinking sun,
 Or the star-beams dart through them : -Winds contend
 Silently there, and heap the snow, with breath
 Rapid and strong, but silently ! Its home
 The voiceless lightning in these solitudes
 Keeps innocently, and like vapour broods
 O'er the snow. The secret strength of things,
 Which governs thought, and to the infinite dome
 Of heaven is as a law, inhabits thee !
 And what were thou, and earth, and stars, and sea,
 If to the human mind's imaginings
 Silence and solitude were vacancy ?

PRINCE ATHANASE.

A FRAGMENT.

PART I.

THERE was a youth, who, as with toil and travel,
Had grown quite weak and grey before his time ;
Nor any could the restless griefs unravel

Which burned within him, withering up his prime
And goading him, like fiends, from land to land.
Not his the load of any secret crime,

For nought of ill his heart could understand,
But pity and wild sorrow for the same ;
Not his the thirst for glory or command,

Baffled with blast of hope-consuming shame ;
Nor evil joys which fire the vulgar breast,
And quench in speedy smoke its feeble flame,

Had left within his soul the dark unrest :
Nor what religion fables of the grave
Feared he,—Philosophy's accepted guest.

For none than he a purer heart could have,
Or that loved good more for itself alone ;
Of nought in heaven or earth was he the slave.

What sorrow, strange, and shadowy, and unknown,
Sent him, a hopeless wanderer, through mankind ?—
If with a human sadness he did groan,

He had a gentle yet aspiring mind ;
Just, innocent, with varied learning fed ;
And such a glorious consolation find

In others' joy, when all their own is dead :
He loved, and laboured for his kind in grief.
And yet, unlike all others, it is said

That from such toil he never found relief.
Although a child of fortune and of power,
Of an ancestral name the orphan chief,

His soul had wedded wisdom, and her dower
Is love and justice, clothed in which he sate
Apart from men, as in a lonely tower,

Pitying the tumult of their dark estate.—
Yet even in youth did he not e'er abuse
The strength of wealth or thought, to consecrate

Those false opinions which the harsh rich use
To blind the world they famish for their pride ;
Nor did he hold from any man his dues,

But, like a steward in honest dealings tried,
With those who toiled and wept, the poor and wise,
His riches and his cares he did divide.

Fearless he was, and scorning all disguise,
What he dared do or think, though men might start,
He spoke with mild yet unaverted eyes ;

Liberal he was of soul, and frank of heart,
And to his many friends—all loved him well—
Whate'er he knew or felt he would impart,

If words he found those inmost thoughts to tell ;
If not, he smiled or wept ; and his weak foes
He neither spurned nor hated—though with fell

And mortal hate their thousand voices rose,
They past like aimless arrows from his ear.—
Nor did his heart or mind its portal close

To those, or them, or any, whom life's sphere
May comprehend within its wide array.
What sadness made that vernal spirit sere ?

He knew not. Though his life day after day,
Was failing, like an unreplenished stream,
Though in his eyes a cloud and burthen lay,

Through which his soul, like Vesper's serene beam
Piercing the chasms of ever rising clouds,
Shone, softly burning ; though his lips did seem

Like reeds which quiver in impetuous floods ;
And through his sleep, and o'er each waking hour,
Thoughts after thoughts, unresting multitudes,

Were driven within him by some secret power,
Which bade them blaze, and live, and roll afar,
Like lights and sounds, from haunted tower to tower,

O'er castled mountains borne, when tempest's war
Is levied by the night-contending winds,
And the pale dalesmen watch with eager ear ;—

Though such were in his spirit, as the fiends
Which wake and feed on everliving woe,—
What was this grief, which ne'er in other minds

A mirror found,—he knew not—none could know ;
But on whoe'er might question him he turned
The light of his frank eyes, as if to show

He knew not of the grief within that burned,
But asked forbearance with a mournful look ;
Or spoke in words from which none ever learned

The cause of his disquietude ; or shook
With spasms of silent passion ; or turned pale :
So that his friends soon rarely undertook

To stir his secret pain without avail ;—
For all who knew and loved him then perceived
That there was drawn an adamantine veil

Between his heart and mind,—both unrelieved
Wrought in his brain and bosom separate strife.
Some said that he was mad, others believed

That memories of an antenatal life
Made this, where now he dwelt, a penal hell :
And others said that such mysterious grief

From God's displeasure, like a darkness, fell
On souls like his, which owned no higher law
Than love ; love calm, steadfast, invincible

By mortal fear or supernatural awe ;
And others,—“ ‘Tis the shadow of a dream
Which the veiled eye of memory never saw,

“ But through the soul's abyss, like some dark stream
Through shattered minces and caverns underground
Rolls, shaking its foundations ; and no beam

“ Of joy may rise, but it is quenched and drowned
In the dim whirlpools of this dream obscure.
Soon its exhausted waters will have found

"A lair of rest beneath thy spirit pure.
O Athanase!—in one so good and great,
Evil or tumult cannot long endure."

So spake they : idly of another's state
Babbling vain words and fond philosophy :
This was their consolation ; such debate

Men held with one another ; nor did he,
Like one who labours with a human woe,
Decline this talk ; as if its theme might be

Another, not himself, he to and fro
Questioned and canvassed it with subtlest wit ;
And none but those who loved him best could know

That which he knew not, how it galled and bit
His weary mind, this converse vain and cold ;
For like an eyeless nightmare grief did sit

Upon his being ; a snake which fold by fold
Pressed out the life of life, a clinging fiend
Which clenched him if he stirred with deadlier hold ;
And so his grief remained—let it remain—untold.*

FRAGMENTS OF PRINCE ATHANASE.†

PART II.

FRAGMENT I.

PRINCE ATHANASE had one beloved friend,
An old, old man, with hair of silver white,
And lips where heavenly smiles would hang and blend

With his wise words ; and eyes whose arrowy light
Shone like the reflex of a thousand minds.
He was the last whom superstition's blight

* The Author was pursuing a fuller development of the ideal character of Athanase, when it struck him that in an attempt at extreme refinement and analysis, his conceptions might be betrayed into the assuming a morbid character. The reader will judge whether he is a loser or gainer by this difference.—Author's Note.

† The idea Shelley had formed of Prince Athanase was a good deal modelled on Alastor. In the first sketch of the Poem he named it Pandemos and Urania. Athanase seeks through the world the One whom he may love. He meets, in the ship in which he is embarked, a lady, who appears to him to embody his ideal of love and beauty. But she proves to be Pandemos, or the earthly and unworthy Venus, who, after disappointing his cherished dreams and hopes, deserts him. Athanase, crushed by sorrow,

Had spared in Greece--the blight that cramps and blinds,—
And in his olive bower at Cœnoe
Had sate from earliest youth. Like one who finds

A fertile island in the barren sea,
One mariner who has survived his mates
Many a drear month in a great ship—so he

With soul-sustaining songs, and sweet debates
Of ancient lore, there fed his lonely being :
“The mind becomes that which it contemplates,”—

And thus Zonoras, by for ever seeing
Their bright creations, grew like wisest men :
And when he heard the crash of nations fleeing

A bloodier power than ruled thy ruins then,
O sacred Hellas ! many weary years
He wandered, till the path of Laian's glen

Was grass-grown—and the unremembered tears
Were dry in Laian for their honoured chief,
Who fell in Byzant, pierc'd by Moslem spears :—

And as the lady looked with faithful grief
From her high lattice o'er the rugged path,
Where she once saw that horseman toil, with brief

And blighting hope, who with the news of death
Struck body and soul as with a mortal blight,
She saw beneath the chesnuts far beneath,

An old man toiling up, a weary wight ;
And soon within her hospitable hall
She saw his white hairs glittering in the light

Of the wood fire, and round his shoulders fall,
And his wan visage and his withered mien,
Yet calm and gentle and majestical.

pines and dies. “On his death-bed the lady, who can really reply to his soul, comes and kisses his lips.”—The Death-bed of Athanase.
The poet describes her—

Her hair was brown, her sphered eyes were brown,
And in their dark and liquid moisture swam,
Like the dim orb of the eclipsed moon ;

Yet when the spirit flashed beneath, there came
The light from them, as when tears of delight
Double the western planet's serene frame.

This slender note is all we have to aid our imagination in shaping out the form of the poem, such as its author imaged.—M.S.

And Athanase, her child, who must have been
Then three years old, sate opposite and gazed
In patient silence.

FRAGMENT II.

SUCH was Zonoras; and as daylight finds
One amaranth glittering on the path of frost,
When autumn nights have nipt all weaker kinds,

Thus through his age, dark, cold, and tempest-tost,
Shone truth upon Zonoras; and he filled
From fountains pure, nigh overgrown and lost,

The spirit of Prince Athanase, a child,
With soul-sustaining songs of ancient lore
And philosophic wisdom, clear and mild.

And sweet and subtle talk now evermore,
The pupil and the master shared; until,
Sharing that undiminishable store,

The youth, as shadows on a grassy hill
Outrun the winds that chase them, soon outran
His teacher, and did teach with native skill

Strange truths and new to that experienced man.
Still they were friends, as few have ever been
Who mark the extremes of life's discordant span.

So in the caverns of the forest green,
Or by the rocks of echoing ocean hoar,
Zonoras and Prince Athanase were seen

By summer woodmen; and when winter's roar
Sounded o'er earth and sea its blast of war,
The Balearic fisher, driven from shore,

Hanging upon the peaked wave afar,
Then saw their lamp from Laian's turret gleam,
Piercing the stormy darkness, like a star

Which pours beyond the sea one steadfast beam,
Whilst all the constellations of the sky
Seemed reeling through the storm; they did but seem-

For, lo! the wintry clouds are all gone by,
And bright Arcturus through yon pines is glowing,
And far o'er southern waves, immoveably

Belted Orion hangs—warm light is flowing
From the young moon into the sunset's chasm.—
“O summer eve ! with power divine, bestowing

“On thine own bird the sweet enthusiasm
Which overflows in notes of liquid gladness,
Filling the sky like light ! How many a spasm

“Of fevered brains, oppressed with grief and madness,
Were lulled by thee, delightful nightingale !
And these soft waves, murmuring a gentle sadness,

“And the far sighings of yon piny dale
Made vocal by some wind, we feel not here.—
I bear alone what nothing may avail

“To lighten—a strange load !”—No human ear
Heard this lament ; but o'er the visage wan
Of Athanase, a ruffling atmosphere

Of dark emotion, a swift shadow ran,
Like wind upon some forest-bosomed lake,
Glassy and dark.—And that divine old man

Beheld his mystic friend's whole being shake,
Even where its inmost depths were gloomiest—
And with a calm and measured voice he spake,

And, with a soft and equal pressure, prest
That cold lean hand :—“Dost thou remember yet
When the curved moon then lingering in the west

“Paused, in yon waves her mighty horns to wet,
How in those bays we walked, half resting on the sea ?
‘Tis just one year—sure thou dost not forget—

“Then Plato's words of light in thee and me
Lingered like moonlight in the moonless east,
For we had just then read—thy memory

“Is faithful now—the story of the feast ;
And Agathon and Diotima seemed
From death and dark forgetfulness released.”

FRAGMENT III.

‘TWAS at the season when the Earth upsprings
From slumber, as a sphered angel's child,
Shadowing its eyes with green and golden wings,

Stands up before its mother bright and mild,
Of whose soft voice the air expectant seems—
So stood before the sun, which shone and smiled

To see it rise thus joyous from its dreams,
The fresh and radiant Earth. The hoary grove
Waxed green--and flowers burst forth like starry beams;—

The grass in the warm sun did start and move,
And sea-buds burst beneath the waves serene :—
How many a one, though none be near to love,

Loves then the shade of his own soul, half seen
In any mirror—or the spring's young minions,
The winged leaves amid the copses green ;—

How many a spirit then puts on the pinions
Of fancy, and outstrips the lagging blast,
And his own steps- and over wide dominions

Sweeps in his dream-drawn chariot, far and fast,
More fleet than storms—the wide world shrinks below,
When winter and despondency are past.

'Twas at this season that Prince Athanase
Puss'd the white Alps—those eagle-battling mountains
Slept in their shrouds of snow ;—beside the ways

The waterfalls were voiceless—for their fountains
Were changed to mines of sunless crystal now,
Or by the curdling winds—like brazen wings

Which clanged along the mountain's marble brow—
Warped into adamantine fretwork, hung
And filled with frozen light the chasm below.

FRAGMENT IV.

THOU art the wine whose drunkenness is all
We can desire, O Love ! and happy souls,
Ere from thy vine the leaves of autumn fall,

Catch thee, and feed from their o'erflowing bowls
Thousands who thirst for thy ambrosial dew ;
Thou art the radiance which where ocean rolls

Investest it ; and when the heavens are blue
Thou fillest them ; and when the earth is fair,
The shadow of thy moving wings imbue

Its deserts and its mountains, till they wear
 Beauty like some bright robe ;—thou ever soarest
 Among the towers of men, and as soft air

In spring, which moves the unawakened forest,
 Clothing with leaves its branches bare and bleak,
 Thou floatest among men ; and aye implore

That which from thee they should implore :— the weak
 Alone kneel to thee, offering up the hearts
 The strong have broken—yet where shall any seek

A garment whom thou clothest not ?

MARLOW, 1817.

MARIANNE'S DREAM.

A PALE dream came to a Lady fair,
 And said, A boon, a boon, I pray !
 I know the secrets of the air ;
 And things are lost in the glare of day,
 Which I can make the sleeping see,
 If they will put their trust in me.

And thou shalt know of things unknown,
 If thou wilt let me rest between
 The veiny lids, whose fringe is thrown
 Over thine eyes so dark and sheen :
 And half in hope, and half in fright,
 The Lady closed her eyes so bright.

At first all deadly shapes were driven
 Tumultuously across her sleep,
 And o'er the vast cope of bending heaven
 All ghastly-visaged clouds did sweep ;
 And the Lady ever looked to spy
 If the gold sun shone forth on high.

And as towards the east she turned,
 She saw aloft in the morning air,
 Which now with hues of sunrise burned,
 A great black Anchor rising there ;
 And wherever the Lady turned her eyes
 It hung before her in the skies.

The sky was blue as the summer sea,
 The depths were cloudless over-head.
 The air was calm as it could be,
 There was no sight nor sound of dread,

But that black Anchor floating still
Over the piny eastern hill.

The Lady grew sick with a weight of fear,
To see that Anchor ever hanging,
And veiled her eyes ; she then did hear
The sound as of a dim low clanging,
And looked abroad if she might know
Was it aught else, or but the flow
Of the blood in her own veins, to and fro.

There was a mist in the sunless air,
Which shook as it were with an earthquake shock,
Till the very weeds that blossomed there
Were moveless, and each mighty rock
Stood on its basis steadfastly ;
The Anchor was seen no more on high.

But piled around with summits hid
In lines of cloud at intervals,
Stood many a mountain pyramid
Among whose everlasting walls
Two mighty cities shone, and ever
Through the red mists their domes did quiver.

On two dread mountains, from whose crest,
Might seem, the eagle for her brood
Would ne'er have hung her dizzy nest
Those tower-encircled cities stood.
A vision strange such towers to see,
Sculptured and wrought so gorgeously,
Where human art could never be.

And columns framed of marble white,
And giant funes, dome over dome
Piled, and triumphant gates, all bright
With workmanship, which could not come
From touch of mortal instrument,
Shot o'er the vales, or lustre lent
From its own shapes magnificent.

But still the Lady heard that clang
Filling the wide air far away ;
And still the mist whose light did hang
Among the mountains shook alway,
So that the Lady's heart beat fast,
As half in joy and half aghast,
On those high domes her look she cast.

Sudden from out that city sprung
 A light that made the earth grow red ;
 Two flames that each with quivering tongue
   Licked its high domes, and over-head
 Among those mighty towers and fanes
 Dropped fire, as a volcano rains
 Its sulphurous ruin on the plains.

And hark ! a rush, as if the deep
   Had burst its bonds ; she looked behind
 And saw over the western steep
   A raging flood descend, and wind
 Through that wide vale : she felt no fear,
 But said within herself, 'Tis clear
 These towers are Nature's own, and she
 To save them has sent forth the sea.

And now those raging billows came
   Where that fair Lady sate, and she
 Was borne towards the showering flame
   By the wild waves heaped tumultuously,
 And, on a little plank, the flow
 Of the whirlpool bore her to and fro.

The waves were fiercely vomited
   From every tower and every dome,
 And dreary light did widely shed
   O'er that vast flood's suspended foam,
 Beneath the smoke which hung its night
 On the stained cope of heaven's light.

The plank whereon that Lady sate
   Was driven through the chasms, about and about,
 Between the peaks so desolate
   Of the drowning mountain, in and out,
 As the thistle-beard on a whirlwind sails--
 While the flood was filling those hollow vales.

At last her plank an eddy crost,
   And bore her to the city's wall,
 Which now the flood had reached almost ;
   It might the stoutest heart appal
 To hear the fire roar and hiss
 Through the domes of those mighty palaces.

The eddy whirled her round and round
   Before a gorgeous gate, which stood
 Piercing the clouds of smoke which bound
   Its airy arch with light like blood ;
 She looked on that gate of marble clear
 With wonder that extinguished fear :

For it was filled with sculptures rarest,
 Of forms most beautiful and strange,
 Like nothing human, but the fairest
 Of winged shapes, whose legions range
 Throughout the sleep of those who are,
 Like this same Lady, good and fair.

And as she looked, still lovelier grew
 Those marble forms; the sculptor sure
 Was a strong spirit, and the hue
 Of his own mind did there endure
 After the touch, whose power had braided
 Such grace, was in some sad change faded.

She looked, the flames were dim, the flood
 Grew tranquil as a woodland river
 Winding through hills in solitude;
 Those marble shapes then seemed to quiver,
 And their fair limbs to float in motion,
 Like weeds unfolding in the ocean.

And their lips moved; one seemed to speak,
 When suddenly the mountain crackt,
 And through the chasm the floor did break
 With an earth-uplifting cataract:
 The statues gave a joyous scream,
 And on its wings the pale thin dream
 Lifted the Lady from the stream.

The dizzy flight of that phantom-pale
 Waked the fair Lady from her sleep,
 And she arose, while from the veil
 Of her dark eyes the dream did creep;
 And she walked about as one v'ho knew
 That sleep has sights as clear and true
 As any waking eyes can view.

DEATH.

THEY die—the dead return not—Misery
 Sits near an open grave and calls them over,
 A youth with hoary hair and haggard eye—
 They are names of kindred, friend and lover,
 Which lie so feebly calls—they all are gone!
 Fond wretch, all dead, those vacant names alone,
     This most familiar scene, my pain—
     These tombs alone remain.

Misery, my sweetest friend—oh ! weep no more !
 Thou wilt not be consoled—I wonder not :
 For I have seen thee from thy dwelling's door
 Watch the calm sunset with them, and this spot
 Was even as bright and calm, but transitory,
 And now thy hopes are gone, thy hair is hoary ;
 This most familiar scene, my pain—
 These tombs alone remain.

TO CONSTANTIA.

THUS to be lost and thus to sink and die,
 Perchance were death indeed !— Constantia, turn !
 In thy dark eyes a power like light doth lie,
 Even though the sounds which were thy voice, which burn
 Between thy lips, are laid to sleep ;
 Within thy breath, and on thy hair, like odour, it is yet,
 And from thy touch like fire doth leap.
 Even while I write, my burning cheeks are wet,
 Alas, that the torn heart can bleed, but not forget !

A breathless awe, like the swift change
 Unseen but felt in youthful slumbers,
 Wild, sweet, but uncannily strange,
 Thou breathest now in fast as sending numbers.
 The cope of heaven seems rent and cloven
 By the enchantment of thy strain,
 And on my shoulders wings are woven,
 To follow its sublime career,
 Beyond the mighty moons that wane
 Upon the verge of nature's utmost sphere,
 Till the world's shadowy walls are past and disappear.

Her voice is hovering o'er my soul—it lingers
 O'ershadowing it with soft and lulling wings.
 The blood and life within those snowy fingers
 Teach witchcraft to the instrumental strings.
 My brain is wild, my breath comes quick—
 The blood is listening in my frame,
 And thronging shadows, fast and thick,
 Fall on my overflowing eyes ;
 My heart is quivering like a flame ;
 As morning dew, that in the sunbeam dies,
 I am dissolved in these consuming ecstasies.

I have no life, Constantia, now, but thee,
 Whilst, like the world-surrounding air, thy song
 Flows on, and fills all things with melody.—
 Now is thy voice a tempest swift and strong,
 On which, like one in trance upborne,
 Secure o'er rocks and waves I sweep,
 Rejoicing like a cloud of morn.
 Now 'tis the breath of summer night,
 Which, when the starry waters sleep,
 Round western isles, with incense-blossoms bright
 Lingered, suspends my soul in its voluptuous flight.

TO CONSTANTIA.

THE rose that drinks the fountain dew
 In the pleasant air of noon,
 Grows pale and blue with altered hue—
 In the gaze of the nightly moon :
 For the planet of frost, so cold and bright,
 Makes it wan with her borrowed light.

Such is my heart—roses are fair.
 And that at best a withered blossom ;
 But thy false care did idly wear
 Its withered leaves in a faithless bosom !
 And fed with love, like air and dew,
 Its growth———

SONNET.—OZYMANDIAS.

I MET a traveller from an antique land
 Who said : Two vast and trunkless legs of stone
 Stand in the desert. Near them, on the sand,
 Half sunk, a shattered visage lies, whose frown,
 And wrinkled lip, and sneer of cold command,
 Tell that its sculptor well those passions read
 Which yet survive, stamped on these lifeless things,
 The hand that mocked them and the heart that fed ;
 And on the pedestal these words appear :
 “ My name is Ozymandias, king of kings :
 Look on my works, ye mighty, and despair ! ”
 Nothing beside remains. Round the decay
 Of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare,
 The lone and level sands stretch far away.

LINES TO A CRITIC.

HONEY from silkworms who can gather,
 Or silk from the yellow bee !
 The grass may grow in winter weather
 As soon as hate in me.

Hate men who cant, and men who pray,
 And men who rail like thee ;
 An equal passion to repay
 They are not coy like me.

Or seek some slave of power and gold.
 To be thy dear heart's mate ;
 Thy love will move that bigot cold,
 Sooner than me thy hate.

A passion like the one I prove Cannot divided be ;
 I hate thy want of truth and love—
 How should I then hate thee ?

LINES.

THAT time is dead for ever, child,
 Drowned, frozen, dead for ever !
 We look on the past,
 And stare aghast
 At the spectres wailing, pale, and ghast,
 Of hopes which thou and I beguiled
 To death on life's dark river.

The stream we gazed on then rolled by ;
 Its waves are unreturning ;
 But we yet stand
 In a lone land,
 Like tombs to mark the memory
 Of hopes and fears, which fade and flee
 In the light of life's dim morning.

ON F. G.

HER voice did quiver as we parted,
 Yet knew I not that heart was broken
 From which it came, and I departed
 Heeding not the words then spoken.
 Misery—O Misery,
 This world is all too wide for thee.

POEMS WRITTEN IN 1818.

TO ROSALIND AND HELEN, AND LINES WRITTEN AMONG THE EUGANEAN HILLS.

NAPLES, Dec. 20, 1818.

THE story of ROSALIND and HELEN is, undoubtedly, not an attempt in the highest style of poetry. It is in no degree calculated to excite profound meditation; and if, by interesting the affections and amusing the imagination, it awaken a certain ideal melancholy favourable to the reception of more important impressions, it will produce in the reader all that the writer experienced in the composition. I resigned myself, as I wrote, to the impulse of the feelings which moulded the conception of the story; and this impulse determined the pauses of a measure, which only pretends to be regular, inasmuch as it corresponds with, and expresses, the irregularity of the imaginations which inspire it.

I do not know which of the few scattered poems I left in England will be selected by my bookseller to add to this collection. One, which I sent from Italy, was written after a day's excursion among those lovely mountains which surround what was once the retreat, and where is now the sepulchre, of Petrarch. If any one is inclined to condemn the insertion of the introductory lines, which image forth the sudden relief of a state of deep despondency by the radiant visions disclosed by the sudden burst of an Italian sunrise in autumn, on the highest peak of those delightful mountains, I can only offer as my excuse, that they were not erased at the request of a dear friend, with whom added years of intercourse only add to my apprehension of its value, and who would have had more right than any one to complain, that she has not been able to extinguish in me the very power of delineating sadness.

ROSALIND AND HELEN.

SCENE.—The Shore of the Lake of Como.

ROSALIND, HELEN, and her Child.

HELEN.

Come hither, my sweet Rosalind.
 'Tis long since thou and I have met :
 And yet methinks it were unkind
 Those moments to forget.
 Come, sit by me. I see thee stand
 By this lone lake, in this far land,
 Thy loose hair in the light wind flying,
 Thy sweet voice to each tone of even
 United, and thine eyes replying
 To the hues of yon fair heaven.
 Come, gentle friend ! wilt sit by me ?
 And be as thou wert wont to be
 Ere we were disunited !
 None doth behold us now : the power
 That led us forth at this lone hour
 Will be but ill requited
 If thou depart in scorn : oh ! come
 And talk of our abandoned home.
 Remember, this is Italy,
 And we are exiles. Talk with me
 Of that our land, whose wilds and floods,
 Barren and dark although they be,
 Were dearer than these chesnut woods ;
 Those heathy paths, that inland stream,
 And the blue mountains, shapes which seem
 Like wrecks of childhood's sunny dream :
 Which that we have abandoned now,
 Weighs on the heart like that remorse
 Which altered friendship leaves. I seek
 No more our youthful intercourse.
 That cannot be ! Rosalind, speak,
 Speak to me. Leave me not.—When morn did come,
 When evening fell upon'our common home,
 When for one hour we parted,—do not frown ;
 I would not chide thee, though thy faith is broken ;
 But turn to me. Oh ! by this cherished token

Of woven hair, which thou wilt not disown,
Turn, as were but the memory of me,
And not my scorned self who prayed to thee.

ROSALIND.

Is it a dream, or do I see
And hear frail Helen? I would flee
Thy tainting touch; but former years
Arise, and bring forbidden tears;
And my o'erburthened memory
Seeks yet its lost repose in thee.
I share thy crime. I cannot choose
But weep for thee: mine own strange grief
But seldom stoops to such relief;
Nor ever did I love thee less,
Though mourning o'er thy wickedness
Even with a sister's woe. I knew
What to the evil world is due,
And therefore sternly did refuse
To link me with the infamy
Of one so lost as Helen. Now
Bewildered by my dire despair,
Wondering I blush and weep that thou
Shouldst love me still,—thou only!—There,
Let us sit on that grey stone,
Till our mournful talk be done.

HELEN.

Alas! not there; I cannot bear
The murmur of this lake to hear.
A sound from thee, Rosalind dear,
Which never yet I heard elsewhere
But in our native land, recurs,
Even here where now we meet. It stirs
Too much of suffocating sorrow!
In the dell of yon dark chesnut wood
Is a stone seat, a solitude
Less like our own. The ghost of peace
Will not desert this spot. To-morrow,
If thy kind feelings should not cease,
We may sit here.

ROSALIND.

Thou lead, my sweet,
And I will follow.

HENRY.

"Tis Fenici's seat

Where you are going! —This is not the way,
Mama; it leads behind those trees that grow
Close to the little river.

HELEN.

Yes; I know;

I was bewildered. Kiss me, and be gay,
Dear boy, why do you sob ?

HENRY.

I do not know :

But it might break any one's heart to see
You and the lady cry so bitterly.

HELEN.

It is a gentle child, my friend. Go home,
Henry, and play with Lilla till I come.
We only cried with joy to see each other ;
We are quite merry now—Good night.

The boy

Lifted a sudden look upon his mother,
And in the gleam of forced and hollow joy
Which lightened o'er her face, laughed with the glea
Of light and unsuspecting infancy,
And whispered in her ear, " Bring home with you
That sweet, strange lady-friend." Then off he flew,
But stopped, and beckoned with a meaning smile,
Where the road turned. Pale Rosalind the while,
Hiding her face, stood weeping silently.

In silence then they took the way
Beneath the forest's solitude.
It was a vast and antique wood,
Through which they took their way ;
And the grey shades of evening
O'er that green wilderness did fling
Still deeper solitude.
Pursuing still the path that wound
The vast and knotted trees around,
Through which slow shades were wandering,
To a deep lawny dell they came,
To a stone seat beside a spring,
O'er which the columned wood did frame
A roofless temple, like the fane
Where, ere new creeds could faith obtain,
Man's early race once knelt beneath
The overhanging deity.
O'er this fair fountain hung the sky,
Now spangled with rare stars. The snake,
The pale snake, that with eager breath
Creeps here his noontide thirst to slake,
Is beaming with many a mingled hue,
Shed from yon dome's eternal blue,
When he floats on that dark and lucid flood
In the light of his own loveliness ;
And the birds that in the fountain dip
Their plumes, with fearless fellowship
Above and round him wheel and hover.

The fitful wind is heard to stir
 One solitary leaf on high ;
 The chirping of the grasshopper
 Fills every pause. There is emotion
 In all that dwells at noontide here :
 Then, through the intricate wild wood,
 A maze of life and light and motion
 Is woven. But there is stillness now ;
 Gloom, and the trance of Nature now :
 The snake is in his cave asleep ;
 The birds are on the branches dreaming ;
 Only the shadows creep ;
 Only the glow-worm is gleaming ;
 Only the owls and the nightingales
 Wake in this dell when day-light fails,
 And grey shades gather in the woods ;
 And the owls have all fled far away
 In a merrier glen to hoot and play,
 For the moon is veiled and sleeping now.
 The accustomed nightingale still broods
 On her accustomed bough,
 But she is mute ; for her false mate
 Has fled and left her desolate.

This silent spot tradition old
 Had peopled with the spectral dead.
 For the roots of the speaker's hair felt cold
 And stiff, as with tremulous lips he told
 That a hellish shape at midnight led
 The ghost of a youth with hoary hair,
 And sate on the seat beside him there,
 Till a naked child came wandering by,
 When the fiend would change to a lady fair !
 A fearful tale ! The truth was worse :
 For here a sister and a brother
 Had solemnised a monstrous curse,
 Meeting in this fair solitude :
 For beneath yon very sky,
 Had they resigned to one another
 Body and soul. The multitude,
 Tracking them to the secret wood,
 Tore limb from limb their innocent child,
 And stabbed and trampled on its mother ;
 But the youth, for God's most holy grace,
 A priest saved to burn in the market-place.

Duly at evening Helen came
 To this lone silent spot,
 From the wrecks of a tale of wilder sorrow
 So much of sympathy to borrow

As soothed her own dark lot.
 Duly each evening from her home,
 With her fair child would Helen come
 To sit upon that antique seat,
 While the hues of day were pale ;
 And the bright boy beside her feet
 Now lay, lifting at intervals
 His broad blue eyes on her ;
 Now, where some sudden impulse calls
 Following. He was a gentle boy
 And in all gentle sports took joy ;
 Oft in a dry leaf for a boat,
 With a small feather for a sail,
 His fancy on that spring would float,
 If some invisible breeze might stir
 Its marble calm : and Helen smiled
 Through tears of awe on the gay child,
 To think that a boy as fair as he,
 In years which never more may be,
 By that same fount, in that same wood,
 The like sweet fancies had pursued ;
 And that a mother, lost like her,
 Had mournfully sate watching him.
 Then all the scene was wont to swim
 Through the mist of a burning tear.

For many months had Helen known
 This scene ; and now she thither turn'd
 Her footsteps, not alone.
 The friend whose falsehood she had mourn'd,
 Sate with her on that seat of stone.
 Silent they sate ; for evening,
 And the power its glimpses bring
 Had, with one awful shadow, quelled
 The passion of their grief. They sate
 With linked hands, for unrepelled
 Had Helen taken Rosalind's.
 Like the autumn wind, when it unbinds
 The tangled locks of the nightshade's hair,
 Which is twined in the sultry summer air
 Round the walls of an outworn sepulchre,
 Did the voice of Helen, sad and sweet,
 And the sound of her heart that ever beat,
 As with sighs and words she breathed on her,
 Unbind the knots of her friend's despair,
 Till her thoughts were free to float and flow ;
 And from her labouring bosom now,
 Like the bursting of a prisoned flame,
 The voice of a long-pent sorrow came.

ROSALIND.

I saw the dark earth fall upon
 The coffin ; and I saw the stone
 Laid over him whom this cold breast
 Had pillow'd to his nightly rest !
 Thou knowest not, thou caust not know
 My agony. Oh ! I could not weep :
 The sources whence such blessings flow
 Were not to be approached by me !
 But I could smile, and I could sleep,
 Though with a self-accusing heart.
 In morning's light, in evening's gloom,
 I watched,—and would not thence depart.—
 My husband's unlamented tomb.
 My children knew their sire was gone ;
 But when I told them, “ he is dead,”
 They laughed aloud in frantic glee,
 They clapped their hands and leaped about,
 Answering each other's ecstasy
 With many a prank and merry shout ;
 But I sat silent and alone,
 Wrapped in the mock of mourning weed.

They laughed, for he was dead : but I
 Sate with a hard and tearless eye,
 And with a heart which would deny
 The secret joy it could not quell,
 Low muttering o'er his loathed name ;
 Till from that self-contention came
 Remorse where sin was none ; a hell
 Which in pure spirits should not dwell.

I'll tell the truth. He was a man
 Hard, selfish, loving only gold,
 Yet full of guile : his pale eyes ran
 With tears, which each some falsehood told,
 And oft his smooth and bridled tongue
 Would give the lie to his flushing cheek :
 He was a coward to the strong ;
 He was a tyrant to the weak,
 On whom his vengeance he would wreak :
 For scorn, whose arrows search the heart,
 From many a stranger's eye would dart,
 And on his memory cling, and follow
 His soul to its home so cold and hollow.
 He was a tyrant to the weak,
 And we were such, alas the day !
 Oft, when my little ones at play,
 Were in youth's natural lightness gay,
 Or if they listened to some tale

Of travellers, or of fairy land,—
 When the light from the wood-fire's dying brand
 Flashed on their faces,—if they heard
 Or thought they heard upon the stair
 His footstep, the suspended word
 Died on my lips: we all grew pale;
 The babe at my bosom was hushed with fear
 If it thought it heard its father near;
 And my two wild boys would near my knee
 Cling, cowed and cowering fearfully.
 I'll tell the truth: I loved another,
 His name in my ear was ever ringing,
 His form to my brain was ever clinging;
 Yet if some stranger breathed that name,
 My lips turned white, and my heart beat fast:
 My nights were once haunted by dreams of flame,
 My days were dim in the shadow cast,
 By the memory of the same!
 Day and night, day and night,
 He was my breath and life and light,
 For three short years, which soon were past.
 On the fourth, my gentle mother
 Led me to the shrine, to be
 His sworn bride eternally.
 And now we stood on the altar stair,
 When my father came from a distant land,
 And with a loud and fearful cry,
 Rushed between us suddenly.
 I saw the stream of his thin grey hair,
 I saw his lean and lifted hand,
 And heard his words, "and live! O God!"
 Wherefore do I live?—"Hold, hold!"
 He cried,—"I tell thee 'tis her brother!
 Thy mother, boy, beneath the sod
 Of yon church-yard rests in her shroud so cold.
 I am now weak, and pale, and old:
 We were once dear to one another,
 I and that corpse! Thou art our child!"
 Then with a laugh both long and wild
 The youth upon the pavement fell:
 They found him dead! All looked on me,
 The spasms of my despair to see; .
 But I was calm. I went away;
 I was clammy-cold like clay!
 I did not weep—I did not speak;
 But day by day, week after week,
 I walked about like a corpse alive!
 Alas! sweet friend, you must believe
 This heart is stone—it did not break.

My father lived a little while,
 But all might see that he was dying,
 He smiled with such a woeful smile !
 When he was in the church-yard lying
 Among the worms, we grew quite poor,
 So that no one would give us bread ;
 My mother looked at me, and said
 Faint words of cheer, which only meant
 That she could die and be content ;
 So I went forth from the same church door
 To another husband's bed.
 And this was he who died at last,
 When weeks and months and years had past,
 Through which I firmly did fulfil
 My duties, a devoted wife,
 With the stern step of vanquish'd will,
 Walking beneath the night of life,
 Whose hours extinguished, like slow rain
 Falling for ever, pain by pain,
 The very hope of death's dear rest ;
 Which, since the heart within my breast
 Of natural life was dispossess'd,
 Its strange sustainer there had been.

When flowers were dead, and grass was green
 Upon my mother's grave,—that mother
 Whom to outlive, and cheer, and make
 My wan eyes glitter for her sake,
 Was my vowed task, the single care
 Which once gave life to my despair,—
 When she was a thing that did not stir,
 And the crawling worms were cradling her
 To a sleep more deep and so more sweet
 Than a baby's rocked on its nurse's knee,
 I lived ; a living pulse then beat
 Beneath my heart that awakened me.
 What was this pulse so warm and free ?
 Alas ! I knew it could not be
 My own dull blood : 'twas like a thought
 Of liquid love, that spread and wrought
 Under my bosom and in my brain,
 And crept with the blood through every vein ;
 And hour by hour, day after day,
 The wonder could not charm away,
 But laid in sleep my wakeful pain,
 Until I knew it was a child,
 And then I wept. For long, long years
 These frozen eyes had shed no tears :
 But now—'twas the season fair and mild
 When April has wept itself to May :

I sate through the sweet sunny day
 By my window bowered round with leaves,
 And down my cheeks the quick tears ran
 Like twinkling rain-drops from the eaves,
 When warm spring showers are passing o'er :
 O Helen, none can ever tell
 The joy it was to weep once more !

I wept to think how hard it were
 To kill my babe, and take from it
 The sense of light, and the warm air,
 And my own fond and tender care,
 And love and smiles ; ere I knew yet
 That these for it might, as for me,
 Be the masks of a grinning mockery.
 And haply, I would dream, 'twere sweet
 To feed it from my faded breast,
 Or mark my own heart's restless beat
 Rock it to its untroubled rest ;
 And watch the growing soul beneath
 Dawn in faint smiles ; and hear its breath,
 Half interrupted by calm sighs ;
 And search the depth of its fair eyes
 For long departed memories !
 And so I lived till that sweet load
 Was lightened. Darkly forward flowed
 The stream of years, and on it bore
 Two shapes of gladness to my sight ;
 Two other babes, delightful more
 In my lost soul's abandoned night,
 Than their own country -hips may be
 Sailing towards wrecked mariners,
 Who cling to the rock of a wintry sea.
 For each, as it came, brought soothing tears,
 And a loosening warmth, as each one lay
 Sucking the sullen milk away,
 About my frozen heart did play,
 And weaned it, oh how painfully !—
 As they themselves were weaned each one
 From that sweet food,— even from the thirst
 Of death, and nothingness, and rest,
 Strange inmate of a living breast !
 Which all that I had undergone
 Of grief and shame, since she, who first
 The gates of that dark refuge closed,
 Came to my sight, and almost burst
 The seal of that Lethean spring ;
 But these fair shadows interposed :
 For all delights are shadows now !
 And from my brain to my dull brow

The heavy tears gather and flow :
I cannot speak—Oh let me weep !

The tears which fell from her wan eyes
Glimmered among the moonlight dew !
Her deep hard sobs and heavy sighs
Their echoes in the darkness threw.
When she grew calm, she thus did keep
The tenor of her tale : ..

He died,

I know not how. He was not old,
If age be numbered by its years ;
But he was bowed and bent with fears,
Pale with the quenchless thirst of gold,
Which, like stereo fever, left him weak ;
And his strait lip and bloated cheek
Were warped in spasms by hollow sneers ;
And selfish cares with barren plough,
Not age, had lined his narrow brow,
And foul and cruel thoughts, which feed
Upon the withering life within,
Like vipers on some poisonous weed.
Whether his ill were death or sin
None knew, until he died indeed,
And then men owned they were the same.

Seven days within my chamber lay
That corpse, and my babes made holiday :
At last, I told them what is death :
The eldest with a kind of shame,
Came to my knees with silent breath,
And sate awe-stricken at my feet ;
And soon the others left their play,
And sate there too. It is unmeet
To shed on the brief flower of youth
The withering knowledge of the grave ;
From me remorse then wrung that truth.
I could not bear the joy which gave
Too just a response to mine own.
In vain. I dared not feign a groan ;
And in their artless looks I saw,
Between the mists, of fear and awe,
That my own thought was theirs ; and they Expressed it not in words, but said,
Each in its heart, how every day
Will pass in happy work and play,
Now he is dead and gone away !

After the funeral all our kin
Assembled, and the will was read.

My friend, I tell thee, even the dead
 Have strength, their putrid shrouds within,
 To blast and torture. Those who live
 Still fear the living, but a corpse
 Is merciless, and power doth give
 To such pale tyrants half the spoil
 He rends from those who groan and toil,
 Because they blush not with remorse
 Among their crawling worms. Behold,
 I have no child ! my tale grows old
 With grief, and staggers : let it reach
 The limits of my feeble speech,
 And languidly at length recline
 On the brink of its own grave and mine.

Thou knowest what a thing is Poverty
 Among the fallen on evil days :
 'Tis Crime, and Fear, and Infamy,
 And houseless Want in frozen ways
 Wandering ungarmented, and Pain,
 And, worse than all, that inward stain,
 Foul Self-contempt, which drowns in sneers
 Youth's star-light smile, and makes its tears
 First like hot gall, then dry for ever !
 And well thou knowest a mother never
 Could doom her children to this ill,
 And well he knew the same. The will Imported, that if e'er again
 I sought my children to behold,
 Or in my birth-place did remain
 Beyond three days, whose hours were told,
 They should inherit nought : and he,
 To whom next came their patrimony,
 A sallow lawyer, cruel and cold,
 Aye watched me, as the will was read,
 With eyes askance, which sought to see
 The secrets of my agony ;
 And with close lips and anxious brow
 Stood canvassing still to and fro
 The chance of my resolve, and all
 The dead man's caution just did call ;
 For in that killing lie 'twas said —
 " She is adulterous, and doth hold
 In secret that the Christian creed
 Is false, and therefore is much need
 That I should have a care to save
 My children from eternal fire."
 Friend, he was sheltered by the grave,
 And therefore dared to be a liar !
 In truth, the Indian on the pyre

Of her dead husband, half-consumed,
 As well might there be false, as I
 To those abhorred embraces doomed,
 Far worse than fire's brief agony.
 As to the Christian creed, if true
 Or false, I never questioned it :
 I took it as the vulgar do :
 Nor my next soul had leisure yet
 To doubt the things men say, or deem
 That they are other than they seem.

All present who those crimes did hear,
 In feigned or actual scorn and fear,
 Men, women, children, slunk away,
 Whispering with self-contented pride,
 Which half suspects its own base lie.
 I spoke to none, nor did abide,
 But silently I went my way,
 Nor noticed I where joyously
 Sate my two younger babes at play,
 In the court-yard through which I past ;
 But went with footsteps firm and fast
 Till I came to the brink of the ocean green,
 And there, a woman with grey hairs,
 Who had my mother's servant been,
 Kneeling, with many tears and prayers,
 Made me accept a purse of gold,
 Half of the earnings she had kept
 To refugio her when weak and old.

With woe, which never sleeps or slept,
 I wander now. 'Tis a vain thought --
 But on yon alp, whose snowy head
 'Mid the azure air is islanded
 (We see it o'er the flood of cloud,
 Which sunrise from its eastern caves
 Drives, wrinkling into golden waves,
 Hung with its precipices proud,
 From that grey stone where first we met),
 There, now who knows the dead feel nought ?
 Should be my grave ; for he who yet
 Is my soul's soul, once said : "Twere sweet
 'Mid stars and lightnings to abide,
 And winds and lulling snows, that beat
 With their soft flakes the mountain wide,
 When weary meteor lamps repose,
 And languid storms their pinions close :
 And all things strong and bright and pure,
 And ever during, aye endure :
 Who knows, if one were buried there,

But these things might our spirits make,
 Amid the all-surrounding air,
 Their own eternity partake?"
 Then 'twas a wild and playful saying
 At which I laughed or seemed to laugh:
 They were his words: now heed my praying,
 And let them be my epitaph.
 Thy memory for a term may be
 My monument. Wilt remember me?
 I know thou wilt, and can't forgive
 Whilst in this erring world to live
 My soul disdained not, that I thought
 Its lying forms were worthy aught,
 And much less thee.

HELEN.

O speak not so,

But come to me and pour thy woe
 Into this heart, full though it be,
 Aye overflowing with its own:
 I thought that grief had severed me
 From all beside who weep and groan;
 Its likeness upon earth to be,
 Its express image; but thou art
 More wretched. Sweet! we will not part
 Henceforth, if death be not division;
 If so, the dead feel no contrition.
 But wilt thou hear, since last we parted
 All that has left me broken hearted?

ROSALIND.

Yes, speak. The faintest stars are scarcely shorn
 Of their thin beams, by that delusive morn
 Which sinks again in darkness, like the light
 Of early love, soon lost in total night.

HELEN.

Alas! Italian winds are mild,
 But my bosom is cold—wintry cold—
 When the warm air weaves, among the fresh leaves,
 Soft music, my poor brain is wild,
 And I am weak like a nursing child,
 Though my soul with grief is grey and old.

ROSALIND.

Weep not at thine own words, tho' they must make Me weep. What is thy tale?

HELEN.

I fear 'twill shake
 Thy gentle heart with tears. Thou well
 Rememberest when we met no more,
 And, though I dwelt with Lionel,
 That friendless caution pierced me sore
 With grief—a wound my spirit bore

Indignantly ; but when he died,
With him lay dead both hope and pride.

Alas ! all hope is buried now.
But then men dreamed the aged earth
Was labouring in that mighty birth,
Which many a poet and a sage
Has aye foreseen —the happy age
When truth and love shall dwell below
Among the works and ways of men ;
Which on this world not power but will
Even now is wanting to fulfil.
Among mankind what thence befel
Of strife, how vain, is known too well ;
When Liberty's dear paean fell
'Mid murderous howls. To Lionel,
Though of great wealth and lineage high,
Yet through those dungeon walls there came
Thy thrilling light, O Liberty !
And as the meteor's midnight flame
Startles the dreamer, sun-light truth
Flashed on his visionary youth,
And filled him, not with love, but faith,
And hope, and courage nato in death ;
For love and life in him were twins,
Born at one birth : in every other
First life, then love its course begins,
Though they be children of one mother ;
And so through this dark world they fleet
Divided, till in death they meet :
But he loved all things ever. Then
He passed amid the strife of men,
And stood at the throne of armed power
Pleading for a world of woe :
Secure as one on a rock-built tower
O'er the wrecks which the surge trails to and fro,
'Mid the passions wild of human kind
He stood, like a spirit calming them ;
For, it was said, his words could bind
Like music the lulled crowd, and stem
That torrent of unquiet dream
Which mortals truth and reason deem,
But is revenge and fear, and pride.
Joyous he was ; and hope and peace
On all who heard him did abide,
Raining like dew from his sweet talk,
As where the evening star may walk
Along the brink of the gloomy seas,
Liquid mists of splendour quiver.

His very gestures touched to tears
 The unpersuaded tyrant, never
 So moved before: his presence stung
 The torturers with their victims' pain,
 And none knew how; and through their ears,
 The subtle witchcraft of his tongue
 Unlocked the hearts of those who keep
 Gold, the world's bond of slavery.
 Men wondered and some sneered to see
 One sow what he could never reap:
 For he is rich, they said, and young,
 And might drink from the depths of luxury.
 If he seeks fame, fame never crowned
 The champion of a trampled creed:
 If he seeks power, power is enthroned
 'Mid ancient rights and wrongs, to feed
 Which hungry wolves with praise and spoil,
 Those who would sit near power must toil;
 And such, there sitting, all may see.
 What seeks he? All that others seek
 He casts away, like a vile weed
 Which the sea casts unreturningly.

That poor and hungry men should break
 The laws which wreak them toil and scorn,
 We understand; but Lionel
 We know is rich and nobly born.
 So wondered they; yet all men loved
 Young Lionel, though few approved;
 All but the priests, whose hatred fell
 Like the unseen blight of a smiling day,
 The withering honey-dew, which clings
 Under the bright green buds of May,
 Whilst they unfold their emerald wings:
 For he made verses wild and queer
 On the strange creeds priests hold so dear,
 Because they bring them land and gold.
 Of devils and saints, and all such gear,
 He made tales which whoso heard or read
 Would laugh till he were almost dead.
 So this grew a proverb: "Don't get old
 Till Lionel's 'banquet in hell' you hear,
 And then you will laugh yourself young again.
 So the priests hated him, and he
 Repaid their hate with cheerful glee.
 Ah! smiles and joyance quickly died,
 For public hope grew pale and dim
 In an altered time and tide,
 And in its wasting withered him,
 As a summer flower that blows too soon

Droops in the smile of the waning moon,
 When it scatters through an April night
 The frozen dews of wrinkling blight.
 None now hoped more. Grey Power was seated
 Safely on her ancestral throne;
 And Faith, the Python, undefeated
 Even to its blood-stained steps dragged on
 Her foul and wounded train; and men
 Were trampled and deceived again,
 And words and shows again could bind
 The wailing tribes of humankind
 In scorn and famine. Fire and blood
 Raged round the raging multitude,
 To fields remote by tyrants sent
 To be the scorned instrument,
 With which they drag from mines of gore
 The chains their slaves yet ever wore;
 And in the streets men met each other,
 And by old altars and in halls,
 And smiled again at festivals.
 But each man found in his heart's brother
 Cold cheer; for all, though half deceived,
 The outworn creeds again believed,
 And the same round anew began,
 Which the weary world yet ever ran.

Many then wept, not tears, but gall,
 Within their hearts, like drops which fall
 Wasting the fountain-stone away.
 And in that dark and evil day
 Did all desires and thoughts, that claim
 Men's care—ambition, friendship, fame,
 Love, hope, though hope was now despair—
 Indue the colours of this change,
 As from the all-surrounding air
 The earth takes hues obscure and strange,
 When storm and earthquake linger there.

And so, my friend, it then befel
 To many, most to Lionel,
 Whose hope was like the life of youth
 Within him, and when dead, became
 A spirit of unresting flame,
 Which goaded him in his distress
 Over the world's vast wilderness.
 Three years he left his native land,
 And on the fourth, when he returned,
 None knew him: he was stricken deep
 With some disease of mind, and turned Into aught unlike Lionel.

On him—on whom, did he pause in sleep,
 Serenest smiles were wont to keep,
 And, did he wake, a winged band
 Of bright persuasions, which had fed
 On his sweet lips and liquid eyes,
 Kept their swift pinions half outspread,
 To do on men his least command—
 On him, whom once 'twas paradise
 Even to behold, now misery lay :
 In his own heart 'twas merciless,
 To all things else none may express
 Its innocence and tenderness.

'Twas said that he had refuge sought
 In love from his unquiet thought
 In distant lands, and been deceived
 By some strange show ; for there were found,
 Blotted with tears, as those relieved
 By their own words are wont to do,
 These mournful verses on the ground,
 By all who read them blotted too.
 "How am I changed ! my hopes were once like fire :
 I loved, and I believed that life was love.
 How am I lost ! on wings of swift desire
 Among Heaven's winds my spirit once did move.
 I slept, and silver dreams did aye inspire
 My liquid sleep. I woke, and did approve
 All nature to my heart, and thought to make
 A paradise of earth for one sweet sake.
 I love, but I believe in love no more :
 I feel desire, but hope not. O, from sleep
 Most vainly must my weary brain implore
 Its long-lost flattery now. I wake to weep,
 And sit through the long day gnawing the core
 Of my bitter heart, and, like a miser, keep,
 Since none in what I feel take pain or pleasure,
 To my own soul its self-consuming treasure."

He dwelt beside me near the sea ;
 And oft in evening did we meet,
 When the waves, beneath the star-light, flee
 O'er the yellow sands with silver feet,
 And talked. Our talk was sad and sweet,
 Till slowly from his mien there passed
 The desolation which it spoke ;
 And smiles,—as when the lightning's blast
 Has parched some heaven-delighting oak,
 The next spring shows leaves pale and rare,
 But like flowers delicate and fair,
 On its rent boughs—again arrayed

His countenance in tender light :
His words grew subtle fire, which made
The air his hearers breathed delight :
His motions, like the winds, were free,
Which bend the bright grass gracefully,
Then fade away in circlets faint :
And winged Hope, on which upborne
His soul seemed hovering in his eyes,
Like some bright spirit newly-born
Floating amid the sunny skies,
Sprang forth from his rent heart anew.
Yet o'er his talk, and looks, and mien,
Tempering their loveliness too keen,
Past woe its shadow backward threw,
Till like an exhalation, spread
From flowers half drunk with evening dew,
They did become infectious : sweet
And subtle mists of sense and thought
Which wrapt us soon, when we might meet,
Almost from our own looks, and aught
The wide world holds. And so, his mind
Was healed, while mine grew sick with fear .
For ever now his health declined,
Like some frail bark which cannot bear
The impulse of an altered wind,
Though prosperous ; and my heart grew full
'Mid its new joy of a new care :
For his cheek became, not pale, but fair,
As rose-o'ershadowed lilies are ;
And soon his deep and sunny hair,
In this alone less beautiful,
Like grass in tombs grew wild and rare.
The blood in his translucent veins
Beat, not like animal life, but love
Seemed now its sullen springs to move,
When life had failed, and all its pains ;
And sudden sleep would seize him oft
Like death, so calm, but that a tear,
His pointed eye-lashes between,
Would gather in the light sereno
Of smiles, whose lustre bright and soft
Beneath lay undulating there.
His breath was like inconstant flame,
As eagerly it went and came ;
And I hung o'er him in his sleep,
Till, like an image in the lake
Which rains disturb, my tears would break
The shadow of that slumber deep ;
Then he would bid me not to weep,
And say, with flattery false, yet sweet,

That death and he could never meet,
 If I would never part with him.
 And so we loved, and did unite
 All that in us was yet divided :
 For when he said, that many a rite,
 By men to bind but once provided,
 Could not be shared by him and me,
 Or they would kill him in their glee.
 I shuddered, and then laughing said,
 " We will have rites our faith to bind,
 But our church shall be the starry night,
 Our altar the grassy earth outspread,
 And our priest the muttering wind."

'Twas sunset as I spoke : one star
 Had scarce burst forth, when from afar
 The ministers of misrule sent,
 Seized upon Lionel, and bore
 His chained limbs to a dreary tower,
 In the midst of a city vast and wide.
 For he, they said, from his mind had bent
 Against their gods keen blasphemy,
 For which, though his soul must roasted be
 In hell's red lakes immortally,
 Yet even on earth must he abide
 The vengeance of their slaves—a trial.
 I think, men call it. What avail
 Are prayers and tears, which chase denial
 From the fierce savage, nursed in hate ?
 What the knit soul that pleading and pale
 Makes wan the quivering cheek, which late
 It painted with its own delight ?
 We were divided. As I could,
 I stilled the tingling of my blood,
 And followed him in their despite,
 As a widow follows, pale and wild,
 The murderers and corse of her only child :
 And when we came to the prison door,
 And I prayed to share his dungeon floor
 With prayers which rarely have been spurned,
 And when men drove me forth and I
 Stared with blank frenzy on the sky,
 A farewell look of love he turned,
 Half-calming me ; then gazed awhile,
 As if through that black and massy pile,
 And through the crowd around him there,
 And through the dense and murky air,
 And the thronged streets, he did espy
 What poets knew and prophesy ;
 And said, with voice that made them shiver,

And clung like music in my brain,
 And which the mute walls spoke again
 Prolonging it with deepened strain—
 “ Fear not the tyrants shall rule for ever,
 Or the priests of the bloody faith ;
 They stand on the brink of that mighty river,
 Whose waves they have tainted with death :
 It is fed from the depths of a thousand dells,
 Around them it foams, and rages, and swells,
 And their swords and their sceptres I floating see,
 Like wrecks, in the surge of eternity.”

I dwelt beside the prison gate,
 And the strange crowd that out and in
 Passed, some, no doubt, with mine own fate,
 Might have fretted me with its ceaseless din,
 But the fever of care was louder within.
 Soon, but too late, in penitence
 Or fear, his foes released him thence :
 I saw his thin and languid form,
 As leaning on the jailer's arm,
 Whose hardened eyes grew moist the while,
 To meet his mute and faded smile,
 And hear his words of kind farewell,
 He tottered forth from his damp cell.
 Many had never wept before,
 From whom fast tears then gushed and fell :
 Many will relent no more,
 Who sobbed like infants then ; aye, all
 Who thronged the prison's stony hall,
 The rulers or the slaves of law
 Felt with a new surprise and awe
 That they were human, till strong shame
 Made them again become the same.
 The prison blood-hounds, huge and grim,
 From human looks the infection caught,
 And fondly crouched and fawned on him ;
 And men have heard the prisoners say,
 Who in their rotting dungeons lay,
 That from that hour, throughout one day,
 The fierce despair and hate, which kept
 Their trampled bosoms, almost slept :
 When, like twin vultures, they hung feeding
 On each heart's wound, wide torn and bleeding,
 Because their jailer's rule, they thought,
 Grew merciful, like a parent's sway.

I know not how, but we were free :
 And Lionel sate alone with me,
 As the carriage drove through the streets apace ;

And we looked upon each other's face ;
And the blood in our fingers intertwined
Ran like the thoughts of a single mind,
As the swift emotions went and came
Through the veins of each united frame.
So through the long long streets we past
Of the million-peopled city vast ;
Which is that desert, where each one
Seeks his mate yet is alone,
Beloved and sought and mourned of none ;
Until the clear blue sky was seen,
And the grassy meadows bright and green,
And then I sunk in his embrace,
Enclosing there a mighty space
Of love : and so we travelled on
By woods, and fields of yellow flowers,
And towns, and villages, and towers,
Day after day of happy hours.
It was the azure time of June,
When the skies are deep in the stainless noon,
And the warm and fitful breezes shake
The fresh green leaves of the hedge-row brier ;
And there were odours then to make
The very breath we did respire
A liquid element, whereon
Our spirits, like delighted things
That walk the air on subtle wings,
Floated and mingled far away,
'Mid the warm winds of the sunny day.
And when the evening star came forth
Above the curve of the new bent moon,
And light and sound ebbed from the earth,
Like the tide of the full and weary sea
To the depths of its own tranquillity,
Our natures to its own repose
Did the earth's breathless sleep attune :
Like flowers, which on each other close
Their languid leaves when daylight's gone,
We lay, till new emotions came,
Which seemed to make each mortal frame
One soul of interwoven flame,
A life in life, a second birth,
In worlds diviner far than earth,
Which, like two strains of harmony
That mingle in the silent sky,
Then slowly disunite, past by
And left the tenderness of tears,
A soft oblivion of all fears,
A sweet sleep : so we travelled on
Till we came to the home of Lionel,

Among the mountains wild and lone,
Beside the hoary western sea,
Which near the verge of the echoing shore
The massy forest shadowed o'er.

The ancient steward, with hair all hoar,
As we alighted, wept to see,
His master changed so fearfully;
And the old man's sobs did waken me
From my dream of unremaining gladness;
The truth flashed o'er me like quick madness
When I looked, and saw that there was death
On Lionel: yet day by day
He lived, till fear grew hope and faith,
And in my soul I dared to say,
Nothing so bright can pass away:
Death is dark, and foul, and dull,
But he is—O how beautiful!
Yet day by day he grew more weak,
And his sweet voice, when he might speak,
Which ne'er was loud, became more low;
And the light which flashed through his waxen cheek
Grew faint, as the rose-like hues which flow
From sunset o'er the alpine snow:
And death seemed not like death in him,
For the spirit of life o'er every limb
Lingered, a mist of sense and thought.
When the summer wind faint odours brought
From mountain flowers, even as it passed,
His cheek would change, as the noon-day sea
Which the dying breeze sweeps fitfully.
If but a cloud the sky o'ercast,
You might see his colour come and go,
And the softest strain of music made
Sweet smiles, yet sad, arise and fade
Amid the dew of his tender eyes:
And the breath, with intermitting flow,
Made his pale lips quiver and part.
You might hear the beatings of his heart,
Quick, but not strong; and with my tresses
When oft he playfully would bind
In the bowers of mossy lonelinesses
His neck, and win me so to mingle
In the sweet depth of woven caresses,
And our faint limbs were intertwined,
Alas! the unquiet life did tingle
From mine own heart through every vein,
Like a captive in dreams of liberty,
Who beats the walls of his stony cell.
But his, it seemed already free,

Like the shadow of fire surrounding me !
On my faint eyes and limbs did dwell
That spirit as it passed, till soon,
As a frail cloud wandering o'er the moon,
Beneath its light invisible,
Is seen when it folds its grey wings again
To alight on midnight's dusky plain,
I lived and saw, and the gathering soul
Passed from beneath that strong control,
And I fell on a life which was sick with fear
Of all the woe that now I bear.
Amid a bloomless myrtle wood,
On a green and sea-girt promontory,
Not far from where we dwelt, there stood
In record of a sweet sad story,
An altar and a temple bright
Circled by steps, and o'er the gate
Was sculptured, " To Fidelity ;"
And in the shrine an image sate,
All veiled : but there was seen the light
Of smiles, which faintly could express
A mingled pain and tenderness,
Through that ethereal drapery.
The left hand held the head, the right—
Beyond the veil, beneath the skin,
You might see the nerves quivering within—
Was forcing the point of a barbed dart
Into its side-convulsing heart.
An unskilled hand, yet one informed
With genius, had the marble warmed
With that pathetic life. This tale
It told : A dog had from the sea,
When the tide was raging fearfully,
Dragged Lionel's mother, weak and pale,
Then died beside her on the sand,
And she that temple thence had planned ;
But it was Lionel's own hand
Had wrought the image. Each new moon
That lady did, in this lone fane,
The rites of a religion sweet,
Whose god was in her heart and brain :
The seasons' loveliest flowers were strown
On the marble floor beneath her feet,
And she brought crowns of sea-buds white,
Whose odour is so sweet and faint,
And weeds, like branching chrysolite,
Woven in devices fine and quaint,
And tears from her brown eyes did stain
The altar : need but look upon
That dying statue, fair and wan,

If tears should cease, to weep again :
 And rare Arabian odours came,
 Through the myrtle copses, steaming thence
 From the hissing frankincense,
 Whose smoke, wool-white as ocean foam,
 Hung in dense flocks beneath the dome,
 That ivory dome, whose azure night
 With golden stars, like heaven, was bright
 O'er the split cedars' pointed flame ;
 And the lady's harp would kindle there
 The melody of an old air,
 Softer than sleep ; the villagers
 Mixt their religion up with hers,
 And as they listened round, shed tears.

One eve he led me to this fane :
 Daylight on its last purple cloud
 Was lingering grey, and soon her strain
 The nightingale began ; now loud,
 Climbing in circles the windless sky,
 Now dying music ; suddenly
 'Tis scattered in a thousand notes,
 And now to the hushed ear it floats
 Like field-smells known in infancy,
 Then failing, soothes the air again.
 We sate within that temple lone,
 Pavilioned round with Parian stone :
 His mother's harp stood near, and oft
 I had awakened music soft
 Amid its wires : the nightingale
 Was pausing in her heaven-taught tale :
 "Now drain the cup," said Lionel,
 "Which the poet-bird has crowned so well
 With the wine of her bright and liquid song !
 Heardst thou not sweet words among
 That heaven-resounding minstrelsy ?
 Heardst thou not, that those who die
 Awake in a world of ecstasy ?
 That love, when limbs are interwoven,
 And sleep when the night of life is cloven,
 And thought, to the world's dim boundaries clinging,
 And music, when one beloved is singing,
 Is death ? Let us drain right joyously
 The cup which the sweet bird fills for me."

He paused, and to my lips he bent
 His own : like spirit his words went
 Through all my limbs with the speed of fire ;
 And his keen eycs, glittering through mine,
 Filled me with the flame divine,

Which in their orbs was burning far,
 Like the light of an unmeasured star,
 In the sky of midnight dark and deep :
 Yes, 'twas his soul that did inspire
 Sounds, which my skill could ne'er awaken ;
 And first, I felt my fingers sweep
 The harp, and a long quivering cry
 Burst from my lips in symphony :
 The dusk and solid air was shaken,
 As swift and swifter the notes came
 From my touch, that wandered like quick flame,
 And from my bosom, labouring
 With some unutterable thing :
 The awful sound of my own voice made
 My faint lips tremble ; in some mood
 Of wordless thought Lionel stood
 So pale, that even beside his cheek
 The snowy column from its shade
 Caught whiteness : yet his countenance
 Raised upward, burned with radiance
 Of spirit-piercing joy, whose light,
 Like the moon struggling through the night
 Of whirlwind-rifted clouds, did break
 With beams that might not be confined.

I paused, but soon his gestures kindled
 New power, as by the moving wind
 The waves are lifted, and my song
 To low soft notes now changed and dwindled,
 And from the twinkling wires among,
 My languid fingers drew and flung
 Circles of life-dissolving sound,
 Yet faint : in aëry rings they bound
 My Lionel, who, as every strain
 Grew fainter but more sweet, his mien
 Sunk with the sound relaxedly ;
 And slowly now he turned to me,
 As slowly faded from his face
 That awful joy : with looks sereno
 He was soon drawn to my embrace,
 And my wild song then died away
 In murmurs : words, I dare not say,
 We mixed, and on his lips mine fed
 Till they methought felt still and cold :
 "What is it with thee, love?" I said ;
 No word, no look, no motion ! yes,
 There was a change, but spare to guess,
 Nor let that moment's hope be told.
 I looked, and knew that he was dead,
 And fell, as the eagle on the plain

Falls when life deserts her brain,
 And the mortal lightning is veiled again.
 O that I were now dead ! but such,
 Did they not, love, demand too much,
 Those dying murmurs ? He forbad.
 O that I once again were mad !
 And yet, dear Rosalind, not so,
 For I would live to share thy woo.
 Sweet boy ! did I forget thee too ?
 Alas, we know not what we do
 When we speak words.

No memory more
 Is in my mind of that sea-shore.
 Madness came on me, and a troop
 Of misty shapes did seem to sit
 Beside me, on a vessel's poop,
 And the clear north-wind was driving it.
 Then I heard strange tongues, and saw strange flowers
 And the stars methought grew unlike ours,
 And the azure sky and the stormless sea
 Made me believe that I had died,
 And waked in a world which was to me
 Dear hell, though heaven to all beside.
 Then a dead sleep fell on my mind,
 Whilst animal life many long years
 Had rescued from a chasm of tears ;
 And when I woke, I wept to find
 That the same lady, bright and wise,
 With silver locks and quick brown eyes,
 The mother of my Lionel,
 Had tended me in my distress,
 And died some months before. Nor less
 Wonder, but far more peace and joy,
 Brought in that hour my lovely boy ;
 For through that trance my soul had well
 The impress of thy being kept ;
 And if I waked, or if I slept,
 No doubt, though memory faithless be,
 Thy image ever dwelt on me ;
 And thus, O Lionel ! like thee
 Is our sweet child. 'Tis sure most strange
 I knew not of so great a change,
 As that which gave him birth, who now
 Is all the solace of my woe.

That Lionel great wealth had left
 By will to me, and that of all
 The ready lies of law bereft,
 My child and me might well befall.
 But let me think not of the scorn,

Which from the meanest I have borne,
 When, for my child's beloved sake,
 I mixed with slaves, to vindicate
 The very laws themselves do make :
 Let me not say scorn is my fate,
 Lest I be proud, suffering the same
 With those who live in deathless fame.

She ceased.—“Lo, where red morning thro' the woods
 Is burning o'er the dew !” said Rosalind.
 And with these words they rose, and towards the flood
 Of the blue lake, beneath the leaves now wind
 With equal steps and fingers intertwined :
 Thence to a lonely dwelling, where the shore
 Is shadowed with rocks, and cypresses
 Cleave with their dark green cones the silent skies,
 And with their shadows the clear depths below,
 And where a little terrace from its bowers,
 Of blooming myrtle and faint lemon-flowers,
 Scatters its sense-dissolving fragrance o'er
 The liquid marble of the windless lake ;
 And where the aged forest's limbs look hoar,
 Under the leaves which their green garments make,
 They come : 'tis Helen's home, and clean and white,
 Like one which tyrants spare on our own land
 In some such solitude, its casements bright
 Shone through their vine-leaves in the morning sun,
 And even within 'twas scarce like Italy.
 And when she saw how all things there were planned,
 As in an English home, dim memory
 Disturbed poor Rosalind : she stood as one
 Whose mind is where his body cannot be,
 Till Helen led her where her child yet slept,
 And said, “Observe, that brow was Lionel's,
 Those lips were his, and so he ever kept
 One arm in sleep, pillowing his head with it.
 You cannot see his eyes, they are two wells
 Of liquid love : let us not wake him yet.”
 But Rosalind could bear no more, and wept
 A shower of burning tears, which fell upon
 His face, and so his opening lashes shone
 With tears unlike his own, as he did leap
 In sudden wonder from his innocent sleep.

So Rosalind and Helen lived together
 Thenceforth, changed in all else, yet friends again,
 Such as they were, when o'er the mountain heather
 They wandered in their youth, through sun and rain.
 And after many years, for human things
 Change even like the ocean and the wind,

Her daughter was restored to Rosalind,
And in their circle thence some visitings
Of joy 'mid their new calm would intervene :
A lovely child she was, of looks serene,
And motions which o'er things indifferent shed
The grace and gentleness from whence they came.
And Helen's boy grew with her, and they fed
From the same flowers of thought, until each mind
Like springs which mingle in one flood became,
And in their union soon their parents saw
The shadow of the peace denied to them.
And Rosalind,—for when the living stem
Is cankered in its heart, the tree must fall,—
Died ere her time ; and with deep grief and awe
The pale survivors followed her remains
Beyond the region of dissolving rains,
Up the cold mountain she was wont to call
Her tomb ; and on Chiavenna's precipice
They raised a pyramid of lasting ice,
Whose polished sides, ere day had yet begun,
Caught the first glow of the unrisen sun,
The last, when it had sunk ; and through the night
The charioteers of Arctos wheeled round
Its glittering point, as seen from Helen's home,
Whose sad inhabitants each year would come,
With willing steps climbing that rugged height,
And hang long locks of hair, and garlands bound
With amaranth flowers, which, in the clime's despite,
Filled the frore air with unaccustomed light :
Such flowers, as in the wintry memory bloom
Of one friend left, adorned that frozen tomb.

Helen, whose spirit was of softer mould,
Whose sufferings too were less, death slowlier led
Into the peace of his dominion cold :
She died among her kindred, being old ;
And know, that if love die not in the dead
As in the living, none of mortal kind
Are blest, as now Helen and Rosalind.

LINES WRITTEN AMONG THE EUGANEAN HILLS.

---

MANY a green isle needs must be
In the deep wide sea of misery,
Or the mariner, worn and wan,
Never thus could voyage on
Day and night, and night and day,
Drifting on his dreary way,
With the solid darkness black
Closing round his vessel's track ;
Whilst above, the sunless sky,
Big with clouds, hangs heavily,
And behind the tempest fleet
Hurries on with lightning feet,
Riving sail, and cord, and plank,
Till the ship has almost drank
Death from the o'er-brimming deep ;
And sinks down, down, like that sleep
When the dreamer seems to be
Weltering through eternity ;
And the dim low line before
Of a dark and distant shore
Still recedes, as ever still
Lounging with divided will ;
But no power to seek or shun,
He is ever drifted on
O'er the unreposing wave
To the haven of the grave.
What, if there no friends will greet ;
What, if there no heart will meet
His with love's impatient beat ;
Wander wheresoe'er he may,
Can he dream before that day
To find refuge from distress
In friendship's smile, in love's caress ?
Then 'twill wreak him little woe
Whether such there be or no :
Senseless is the breast, and cold,
Which relenting love would fold ;
Bloodless are the veins and chill
Which the pulse of pain did fill :
Every little living nerve
That from bitter words did swerve

Round the tortured lips and brow,
Are like sapless leaflets now
Frozen upon December's bough.

On the beach of a northern sea
Which tempests shake eternally,
As once the wretch there lay to sleep,
Lies a solitary heap,
One white skull and seven dry bones,
On the margin of the stones,
Where a few grey rushes stand,
Boundaries of the sea and land :
Nor is heard one voice of wail
But the sea-mews, as they sail
O'er the billows of the gale ;
Or the whirlwind up and down
Howling like a slaughtered town,
When a king in glory rides
Through the pump of fratricides :
Those unburied bones around
There is many a mournful sound ;
There is no lament for him,
Like a sunless vapour, diin,
Who once clothed with life and thought
What now moves nor murmurs not.

Ay, many flowering islands lie
In the waters of wide Agony :
To such a one this morn was led
My bark, by soft winds piloted.
'Mid the mountains Euganean,
I stood listening to the pean
With which the legioned rooks did hail
The sun's uprise majestic ;
Gathering round with wings all hoar,
Through the dewy mist they soar
Like grey shades, till the eastern heaven
Bursts, and then, as clouds of even,
Flecked with fire and azure, lie
In the unfathomable sky,
So their plumes of purple grain,
Starred with drops of golden rain,
Gleam above the sunlight woods,
As in silent multitudes
On the morning's fitful gale
Through the broken mist they sail ;
And the vapours cloven and gleaming
Follow down the dark steep streaming,
Till all is bright, and clear, and still,
Round the solitary hill.

Beneath is spread like a green sea
 The waveless plain of Lombardy,
 Bounded by the vaporous air,
 Islanded by cities fair ;
 Underneath day's azuro eyes,
 Ocean's nursling, Venice lies,—
 A peopled labyrinth of walls,
 Amphitrite's destined halls,
 Which her hoary sire now paves
 With his blue and beaming waves.
 Lo ! the sun upsprings behind,
 Broad, red, radiant, half-reclined
 On the level quivering line
 Of the waters crystalline ;
 And before that chasm of light,
 As within a furnace bright,
 Column, tower, and dome, and spire,
 Shine like obelisks of fire,
 Pointing with inconstant motion
 From the altar of dark ocean
 To the sapphiro-tinted skies ;
 As the flames of sacrifice
 From the marbled shrines did rise
 As to pierce the dome of gold
 Where Apollo spoke of old.

Sun-girt City ! thou hast been
 Ocean's child, and then his queen ;
 Now is come a darker day,
 And thou soon must be his prey,
 If the power that raised thee here
 Hallow so thy watery bier.
 A less drear ruin then than now,
 With thy conquest branded brow
 Stooping to the slave of slaves
 From thy throne among the waves,
 Wilt thou be, when the sea-mew
 Flies, as once before it flew,
 O'er thine isles depopulate,
 And all is in its ancient state,
 Save where many a palace-gate
 With green sea-flowers overgrown
 Like a rock of ocean's own,
 Toppleth o'er the abandon'd sea
 As the tides change sullenly.
 The fisher on his watery way,
 Wandering at the close of day,
 Will spread his sail and seize his oar,
 Till he pass the gloomy shore,
 Lest thy dead should, from their sleep

Bursting o'er the starlight deep,
Lead a rapid masque of death
O'er the waters of his path.

Those who alone thy towers behold
Quivering through aerial gold,
As I now behold them here,
Would imagine not they were
Sepulchres, where human forms,
Like pollution-nourish'd worms,
To the corpse of greatness cling,
Murdered and now mouldering :
But if Freedom should awake
In her omnipotence, and shake
From the Celtic Anarch's hold
All the keys of dungeons cold,
Where a hundred cities lie
Chained like thee, ingloriously,
Thou and all thy sister band
Might adorn this sunny land,
Twining memories of old time
With new virtues more sublime ;
If not, perish thou and they ;
Clouds which stain truth's rising day
By her sun consumed away,
Earth can spare ye ; while like flowers,
In the waste of years and hours,
From your dust new nations spring
With more kindly blossoming.

Perish ! let there only be
Floating o'er thy hearthless sea,
As the garment of thy sky
Clothes the world immortally,
One remembrance, more sublime
Than the tattered pall of Time,
Which scarce hides thy visage wan :
That a tempest-cleaving swan
Of the songs of Albion,
Driven from his ancestral streams,
By the might of evil dreams,
Found a nest in theo ; and Ocean
Welcomed him with such emotion
That its joy grew his, and sprung
From his lips like music flung
O'er a mighty thunder-fit,
Chastening terror : what though yet
Poesy's unfailing river,
Which through Albion winds for ever,
Lashing with melodious wave

Many a sacred poet's grave,
 Mourn its latest nursling fled !
 What though thou with all thy dead
 Scarce can for this fame repay
 Aught thine own,—oh, rather say,
 Though thy sins and slaveries foul
 Overcloud a sunlike soul !
 As the ghost of Homer clings
 Round Scamander's wasting springs ;
 As divinest Shakspeare's might
 Fills Avon and the world with light,
 Like omniscient power, which he
 Imaged 'mid mortality ;
 As the love from Petrarch's urn,
 Yet amid you hills doth burn,
 A quenchless lamp, by which the heart
 Sees things unearthly ; so thou art,
 Mighty spirit : so shall be
 The city that did refuge thee.

Lo, the sun floats up the sky,
 Like thought-winged Liberty,
 Till the universal light
 Seems to level plain and height ;
 From the sea a mist has spread,
 And the beams of morn lie dead
 On the towers of Venice now,
 Like its glory long ago.
 By the skirts of that grey cloud
 Many-domed Padua proud
 Stands, a peopled solitude,
 'Mid the harvest-shining plain,
 Where the peasant heaps his grain
 In the garner of his foe,
 And the milk-white oxen slow
 With the purple vintage strain,
 Heaped upon the creaking wain,
 That the brutal Celt may swill
 Drunken sleep with savage will ;
 And the sickle to the sword
 Lies unchanged, though many a lord
 Like a weed whose shade is poison,
 Overgrows this regiou's foison,
 Sheaves of whom are ripe to come
 To destruction's harvest-home :
 Men must reap the things they sow,
 Force from force must ever flow,
 Or worse ; but 'tis a bitter woo
 That love or reason cannot change
 The despot's rage, the slave's revenge.

Padua, thou within whose walls
 Those mute guests at festivals,
 Son and Mother, Death and Sin,
 Played at dice for Ezzelin,
 Till Death cried, "I win, I win!"
 And Sin cursed to lose the wager,
 But Death promised, to assuage her,
 That he would petition for
 Her to be made Vice-Emperor,
 When the destined years were o'er,
 Over all between the Po
 And the eastern Alpine snow,
 Under the mighty Austrian.
 Sin smiled so as Sin only can,
 And since that time, ay, long before,
 Both have ruled from shore to shore.
 That incestuous pair, who follow
 Tyrants as the sun the swallow,
 As Repentance follows Crime,
 And as changes follow Time.

In thine halls the lamp of learning,
 Padua, now no more is burning;
 Like a meteor, whose wild way
 Is lost over the grave of day,
 It gleams betrayed and to betray:
 Once remotest nations came
 To adore that sacred flame,
 When it lit not many a hearth
 On this cold and gloomy earth;
 Now new fires from Antique light
 Spring beneath the wide world's might:
 But their spark lies dead in thee,
 Trampled out by tyranny.
 As the Norway woodman quells,
 In the depth of piny dells,
 One light flame among the brakes,
 While the boundless forest shakes,
 And its mighty trunks are torn
 By the fire thus lowly born;
 The spark beneath his feet is dead,
 He starts to see the flames it fed
 Howling through the darkened sky
 With myriad tongues victoriously,
 And sinks down in fear: so thou,
 O tyranny! beholdest now
 Light around thee, and thou hearest
 The loud flames ascend, and fearest:
 Grovel on the earth; ay, hide
 In the dust thy purple pride!

Noon descends around me now :
 'Tis the noon of autumn's glow,
 When a soft and purple mist
 Like a vaporous amethyst,
 Or an air-dissolved star
 Mingling light and fragrance, far
 From the curved horizon's bound
 To the point of heaven's profound,
 Fills the overflowing sky ;
 And the plains that silent lie
 Underneath ; the leaves unsoden
 Where the infant frost has trodden
 With his morning-winged feet,
 Whoso bright print is gleaming yet ;
 And the red and golden vines,
 Piercing with their trellised lines
 The rough, dark-skirted wilderness.
 The dum and bladed grass no less,
 Pointing from this hoary tower
 In the windless air ; the flower
 Glimmering at my feet ; the line
 Of the olive-sandalled Apennine
 In the south dimly islanded ;
 And the Alps, whose snows are spread
 High between the clouds and sun ;
 And of living things each one ;
 And my spirit, which so long
 Darkened this swift stream of song,
 Interpenetrated lie
 By the glory of the sky ;
 Be it love, light, harmony,
 Odour, or the soul of all
 Which from heaven like dew doth fall,
 Or the mind which feeds this verse
 Peopling the lone universe.
 Noon descends, and after noon
 Autumn's evening meets me soon,
 Leading the infantine moon,
 And that one star, which to her
 Almost seems to minister
 Half the crimson light she brings
 From the sunset's radiant springs :
 And the soft dreams of the morn
 (Which like winged winds had borne
 To that silent isle, which lies
 'Mid remembered agonies,
 The frail bark of this lone being),
 Pass, to other sufferers fleeing,
 And its ancient pilot, Pain,
 Sits beside the helm again.

Other flowering isles must be
In the sea of life and agony :
Other spirits float and flee
O'er that gulf: even now, perhaps,
On some rock the wild wave wraps,
With folding wings they waiting sit
For my bark, to pilot it
To some calm and blooming cove,
Where for me, and those I love,
May a windless bower be built,
Far from passion, pain, and guilt,
In a dell 'mid lawny hills,
Which the wild sea-murmur fills,
And soft sunshine, and the sound
Of old forests echoing round,
And the light and smell divine
Of all flowers that breathe and shine.
We may live so happy there,
That the spirits of the air,
Envying us, may even entice
To our healing paradise
The polluting multitude ;
But their rage would be subdued
By that clime divine and calm,
And the winds whose wings rain balm
On the uplifted soul, and leaves
Under which the bright sea heaves ;
While each breathless interval
In their whisperings musical
The inspired soul supplies
With its own deep melodies ;
And the love which heals all strife
Circling, like the breath of life,
All things in that sweet abode
With its own mild brotherhood.
They, not it, would change ; and soon
Every sprite beneath the moon
Would repent its envy vain,
And the earth grow young again.

JULIAN AND MADDALO.

A CONVERSATION.

COUNT MADDALO is a Venetian nobleman of ancient family and of great fortune, who, without mixing much in the society of his countrymen, resides chiefly at his magnificent palace in that city. He is a person of the most consummate genius; and capable, if he would direct his energies to such an end, of becoming the redeemer of his degraded country. But it is his weakness to be proud: he derives, from a comparison of his own extraordinary mind with the dwarfish intellects that surround him, an intense apprehension of the nothingness of human life. His passions and his powers are incomparably greater than those of other men, and, instead of the latter having been employed in curbing the former, they have mutually lent each other strength. His ambition preys upon itself, for want of objects which it can consider worthy of exertion. I say that Maddalo is proud, because I can find no other word to express the concentrated and impatient feelings which consume him, but it is on his own hopes and affections only that he seems to trample, for in social life no human being can be more gentle, patient, and unassuming than Maddalo. He is cheerful, frank, and witty. His more serious conversation is a sort of intoxication; men are held by it as by a spell. He has travelled much; and there is an inexpressible charm in his relation of his adventures in different countries.

Julian is an Englishman of good family, passionately attached to those philosophical notions which assert the power of man over his own mind, and the immense improvements of which, by the extinction of certain moral superstitions, human society may yet be susceptible. Without concealing the evil in the world, he is for ever speculating how good may be made superior. He is a complete infidel, and a scoffer at all things reputed holy; and Maddalo takes a wicked pleasure in drawing out his taunts against religion. What Maddalo thinks on these matters is not exactly known. Julian, in spite of his heterodox opinions, is conjectured by his friends to possess some good qualities. How far this is possible the pious reader will determine. Julian is rather serious.

Of the Maniac I can give no information. He seems by his own account to have been disappointed in love. He was evidently a very cultivated and amiable person when in his right senses.

His story, told at length, might be, like many other stories of the same kind : the unconnected exclamations of his agony will perhaps be found a sufficient comment for the text of every heart.

The meadows with fresh streams, the bees with thyme,
The goats with the green leaves of budding spring,
Are saturated not—nor Love with tears.

VIRGIL'S GALLUS.

I RODE one evening with Count Maddalo
Upon the bank of land which breaks the flow
Of Adria towards Venice: a bare strand
Of hillocks, heaped from ever-shifting sand,
Matted with thistles and amphibious weeds,
Such as from earth's embrace the salt ooze breeds,
Is this, an uninhabited sea-side,
Which the lone fisher, when his nets are dried,
Abandons; and no other object breaks
The waste, but one dwarf tree and some few stakes
Broken and unrepaired, and the tide makes
A narrow space of level sand thereon,
Where 'twas our wont to ride while day went down.
This ride was my delight. I love all waste
And solitary places; where we taste
The pleasure of believing what we see
Is boundless, as we wish our souls to be:
And such was this wide ocean, and this shore
More barren than its billows: and yet more
Than all, with a remembered friend I love
To ride as then I rode;—for the winds drove
The living spray along the sunny air
Into our faces; the blue heavens were bare,
Stripped to their depths by the awakening north;
And, from the waves, sound like delight broke forth
Harmonising with solitude, and sent
Into our hearts aerial merriment.

So, as we rode, we talked; and the swift thought,
Winging itself with laughter, lingered not,
But flew from brain to brain; such glee was ours,
Charged with light memories of remembered hours,
None slow enough for sadness, till we came
Homeward, which always makes the spirit tame.
This day had been cheerful but cold, and now
The sun was sinking, and the wind also.
Our talk grew somewhat serious, as may be
Talk interrupted with such raillery
As mocks itself, because it cannot scorn

The thoughts it would extinguish :—'twas forlorn,
 Yet pleasing ; such as once, so poets tell,
 The devils held within the dales of hell,
 Concerning God, freewill, and destiny.
 Of all that Earth has been, or yet may be ;
 All that vain men imagine or believe,
 Or hope can paint, or suffering can achieve,
 We descanted ; and I (for ever still
 Is it not wise to make the best of ill ?)
 Argued against despondency ; but pride
 Made my companion take the darker side.
 The sense that he was greater than his kind
 Had struck, methinks, his eagle spirit blind
 By gazing on its own exceeding light.
 Meanwhile the sun paused ere it should alight
 Over the horizon of the mountains—Oh !
 How beautiful is sunset, when the glow
 Of heaven descends upon a land like thee,
 Thou paradise of exiles, Italy !
 Thy mountains, seas, and vineyards, and the towers,
 Of cities they encircle ! —It was ours
 To stand on thee, beholding it : and then,
 Just where we had dismounted, the Count's men
 Were waiting for us with the gondola.
 As those who pause on some delightful way,
 Though bent on pleasant pilgrimage, we stood
 Looking upon the evening, and the flood
 Which lay between the city and the shore,
 Paved with the image of the sky : the hoar
 And airy Alps, towards the north, appeared,
 Thro' mist a heaven-sustaining bulwark, reared
 Between the east and west ; and half the sky
 Was roofed with clouds of rich emblazonry,
 Dark purple at the zenith, which still grew
 Down the steep west into a wondrous hue
 Brighter than burning gold, even to the rent
 Where the swift sun yet paused in his descent
 Among the many-folded hills—they were
 Those famous Euganean hills, which bear,
 As seen from Lido through the harbour piles,
 The likeness of a clump of peaked isles—
 And then, as if the earth and sea had been Dissolved into one lake of fire, were seen
 Those mountains towering, as from waves of flame,
 Around the vaporous sun, from which there came
 The inmost purple spirit of light, and made
 Their very peaks transparent. “ Ere it fade,”
 Said my companion, “ I will show you soon
 A better station.” So, o'er the lagune
 We glided ; and from that funereal bark

I leaned, and saw the city, and could mark
 How from their many isles, in evening's gleam,
 Its temples and its palaces did seem
 Like fabrics of enchantment piled to heaven.
 I was about to speak, when—"We are even Now at the point I meant," said Maddalo,
 And bade the gondolieri cease to row.
 "Look, Julian, on the west, and listen well
 If you hear not a deep and heavy bell."
 I looked, and saw between us and the sun
 A building on an island, such a one
 As age to age might add, for uscs vile,—
 A windowless, deformed, and dreary pile;
 And on the top an open tower, where hung
 A bell, which in the radiance swayed and swung,
 We could just hear its coarse and iron tongue:
 The broad sun sank behind it, and it tolled
 In strong and black relief—"What we behold
 Shall be the madhouse and its belfry tower,"—
 Said Maddalo; "and even at this hour,
 Those who may cross the water hear that bell,
 Which calls the maniacs, each one from his cell,
 To vespers."—"As much skill as need to pray,
 In thanks or hope for their dark lot have they,
 To their stern maker," I replied.—"O, ho!
 You talk as in years past," said Maddalo.
 "'Tis strange men change not. You were ever still Among Christ's flock a perilous infidel,
 A wolf for the meek lambs: if you can't swim,
 Beware of providence." I looked on him,
 But the gay smile had faded from his eye.
 "And such," he cried, "is our mortality;
 And this must be the emblem and the sign
 Of what should be eternal and divine;
 And like that black and dreary bell, the soul,
 Hung in a heaven-illumined tower, must toll
 Our thoughts and our desires to meet below
 Round the rent heart, and pray—as madmen do;
 For what? they know not, till the night of death,
 As sunset that strange vision, severeth
 Our memory from itself, and us from all
 We sought, and yet were baffled." I recall
 The sense of what he said, although I mar
 The force of his expressions. The broad star
 Of day meanwhile had sunk behind the hill;
 And the black bell became invisible;
 And the red tower looked grey; and all between,
 The churches, ships, and palaces, were seen
 Huddled in gloom; into the purple sea
 The orange hues of heaven sunk silently.

We hardly spoke, and soon the gondola
Conveyed me to my lodging by the way.

The following morn was rainy, cold, and dim :
Ere Maddalo arose I called on him,
And whilst I waited with his child I played ;
A lovelier toy sweet nature never made ;
A serious, subtle, wild, yet gentle being ;
Graceful without design, and unforeseeing ;
With eyes—Oh ! speak not of her eyes ! which seem
Twin mirrors of Italian Heaven, yet gleam
With such deep meaning as we never see
But in the human countenance. With me
She was a special favourite : I had nursed
Her fine and feeble limbs, when she came first
To this bleak world ; and yet she seemed to know
On second sight her ancient playfellow,
Less changed than she was by six mouths or so.
For, after her first shyness was worn out,
We sate there, rolling billiard balls about,
When the Count entered. Salutations passed :
“The words you spoke last night might well have cast
A darkness on my spirit :—if man be
The passive thing you say, I should not see
Much harm in the religious and old saws,
(Tho' I may never own such leaden laws)
Which break a teachless nature to the yoke :
Mine is another faith.”—Thus much I spoke,
And, noting he replied not, added —“See
This lovely child ; blithe, innocent, and free ;
She spends a happy time, with little care :
While we to such sick thoughts subjected are,
As came on you last night. It is our will
Which thus enchains us to permitted ill.
We might be otherwise ; we might be all
We dream of, happy, high, majestical.
Where is the beauty, love, and truth, we seek,
But in our minds ? And, if we were not weak,
Should we be less in deed than in desire ?”—
—“Ay, if we were not weak,—and we aspire,
How vainly ! to be strong,” said Maddalo :
“ You talk Utopian”—

“ It remains to know,”
I then rejoined, “and those who try, may find
How strong the chains are which our spirit bind :
Brittle perchance as straw. We are assured
Much may be conquered, much may be endured,
Of what degrades and crushes us. We know
That we have power over ourselves to do
And suffer—wh't, we know not till we try ;

But something nobler than to live and die :
 So taught the kings of old philosophy,
 Who reigned before religion made men blind ;
 And those who suffer with their suffering kind,
 Yet feel this faith, religion."

" My dear friend,"
 Said Maddalo, " my judgment will not bend
 To your opinion, though I think you might Make such a system refutation-tight,
 As far as words go. I knew one like you,
 Who to this city came some months ago,
 With whom I argued in this sort,—and he
 Is now gone mad—and so he answered me,
 Poor fellow !—But if you would like to go,
 We'll visit him, and his wild talk will show
 How vain are such aspiring theories."—

" I hope to prove the induction otherwise,
 And that a want of that true theory still,
 Which seeks a soul of goodness in things ill,
 Or in himself or others, has thus bowed
 His being :—there are some by nature proud,
 Who, patient in all else, demand but this—
 To love and be beloved with gentleness :—
 And being scorned, what wonder if they die
 Some living death ? This is not destiny,
 But man's own wilful ill."

As thus I spoke,
 Servants announced the gondola, and we
 Through the fast-falling rain and high-wrought sea
 Sailed to the island where the madhouse stands.
 We disembarked. The clap of tortured hands,
 Fierce yells and howlings, and lamentings keen,
 And laughter where complaint had merrier been,
 Accosted us. We climbed the oozy stairs
 Into an old court-yard. I heard on high,
 Then, fragments of most touching melody,
 But looking up saw not the singer there.—
 Thro' the black bars in the tempestuous air
 I saw, like weeds on a wrecked palace growing,
 Long tangled locks flung wildly forth and flowing,
 Of those on a sudden who were beguiled
 Into strange silence, and looked forth and smiled,
 Hearing sweet sounds. Then I :

" Methinks there were
 A cure of these with patience and kind care,
 If music can thus move. But what is he,
 Whom we seek here ?"

" Of his sad history
 I know but this," said Maddalo : " he came

To Venice a dejected man, and fame
 Said he was wealthy, or he had been so.
 Some thought the loss of fortune wrought him woe :
 But he was ever talking in such sort
 As you do,—but more sadly ;—he seemed hurt,
 Even as a man with his peculiar wrong,
 To hear but of the oppression of the strong,
 Or those absurd deceits (I think with you
 In some respects, you know) which carry through
 The excellent impostors of this earth
 When they outface detection. He had worth,
 Poor fellow ! but a humourist in his way.”

—“Alas, what drove him mad ?”

“ I cannot say :

A lady came with him from France, and when
 She left him and returned, he wandered then
 About yon lonely isles of desert sand,
 Till he grew wild. He had no cash nor land
 Remaining :—the police had brought him here—
 Some fancy took him, and he would not bear
 Removal, so I fitted up for him
 Those rooms beside the sea, to please his whim ;
 And sent him busts, and books, and urns for flowers,
 Which had adorned his life in happier hours,
 And instruments of music. You may guess
 A stranger could do little more or less
 For one so gentle and unfortunate —
 And those are his sweet strains which charm the weight
 From madmen’s chains, and make this hell appear
 A heaven of sacred silence, hushed to hear.”

“ Nay, this was kind of you,—he had no claim,
 As the world says.”

“ None but the very same
 Which I on all mankind, were I, as he,
 Fallen to such deep reverse. His melody
 Is interrupted now : we hear the din
 Of madmen, shriek on shriek, again begin :
 Let us now visit him : after this strain,
 He ever communes with himself again,
 And sees and hears not any.”

Having said

These words, we called the keeper, and he led
 To an apartment opening on the sea.—
 There the poor wretch was sitting mournfully
 Near a piano, his pale fingers twined
 One with the other ; and the ooze and wind
 Rushed through an open casement, and did sway
 His hair, and stirred it with the brackish spray :

His head was leaning on a music-book,
 And he was muttering ; and his lean limbs shook.
 His lips were pressed against a folded leaf,
 In hue too beautiful for health, and grief
 Smiled in their motions as they lay apart,
 As one who wrought from his own fervid heart
 The eloquence of passion : soon he raised
 His sad meek face, and eyes lustrous and glazed,
 And spoke,—sometimes as one who wrote, and thought
 His words might move some heart that heeded not,
 If sent to distant lands :—and then as one
 Reproaching deeds never to be undone,
 With wondering self-compassion ;—then his speech
 Was lost in grief, and then his words came each
 Unmodulated and expressionless,—
 But that from one jarred accent you might guess
 It was despair made them so uniform :
 And all the while the loud and gusty storm
 Hissed through the window, and we stood behind,
 Stealing his accents from the envious wind,
 Unseen. I yet remember what he said
 Distinctly, such impression his words made.

“ Month after month,” he cried, “ to bear this load,
 And, as a jade urged by the whip and goad,
 To drag life on—which like a heavy chain
 Lengthens behind with many a link of pain,
 And not to speak my grief—O, not to dare
 To give a human voice to my despair ;
 But live, and move, and, wretched thing ! smile on,
 As if I never went aside to groan,
 And wear this mask of falsehood even to those
 Who are most dear--not for my own repose.
 Alas ! no scorn, nor pain, nor hate, could be
 So heavy as that falsehood is to me --
 But that I cannot bear more altered faces
 Than needs must be, more changed and cold embraces,
 More misery, disappointment, and mistrust,
 To own me for their father. Would the dust
 Were covered in upon my body now !
 That the life ceased to toil within my brow !
 And then these thoughts would at the last be fled :
 Let us not fear such pain can vex the dead.

“ What Power delights to torture us ? I know
 That to myself I do not wholly owe
 What now I suffer, though in part I may.
 Alas ! none strewed fresh flowers upon the way
 Where, wandering heedlessly, I met pale Pain,
 My shadow, which will leave me not again.

If I have erred, there was no joy in error,
 But pain, and insult, and unrest, and terror ;
 I have not, as some do, bought penitence
 With pleasure, and a dark yet sweet offence ;
 For then if love, and tenderness, and truth,
 Had overlived Hope's momentary youth,
 My creed should have redeemed me from repenting ;
 But loathed scorn and outrage unrelenting
 Met love excited by far other seeming
 Until the end was gained :—as one from dreaming
 Of sweetest peace, I woke, and found my state
 Such as it is—

“ O thou, my spirit's mate !
 Who, for thou art compassionate and wise,
 Wouldst pity me from thy most gentle eyes
 If this sad writing thou shouldst ever see ;
 My secret groans must be unheard by thee ;
 Thou wouldst weep tears, bitter as blood, to know
 Thy lost friend's incomminable woe.
 Ye few by whom my nature has been weighed
 In friendship, let me not that name degrade,
 By placing on your hearts the secret load
 Which crushes mine to dust. There is one road
 To peace, and that is truth, which follow ye !
 Love sometimes leads astray to misery.
 Yet think not, though subdued (and I may well
 Say that I am subdued)—that the full hell
 Within me would infect the untainted breast
 Of sacred nature with its own unrest ;
 As some perverted beings think to find
 In scorn or hate a medicine for the mind
 Which scorn or hate hath wounded.—O, how vain !
 The dagger heals not, but may rend again.
 Believe that I am ever still the same
 In creed as in resolve ; and what may tame
 My heart, must leave the understanding free,
 Or all would sink under this agony.—
 Nor dream that I will join the vulgar lie,
 Or with my silence sanction tyranny,
 Or seek a moment's shelter from my pain
 In any madness which the world calls gain ;
 Ambition, or revenge, or thoughts as stern
 As those which make me what I am, or turn
 To avarice, or misanthropy, or lust :
 Heap on me soon, O grave, thy welcome dust !
 Till then the dungeon may demand its prey ;
 And Poverty and Shame may meet and say,
 Halting beside me in the public way,—
 ‘ That love-devoted youth is ours : let's sit
 Beside him : he may live some six months yet.’—

Or the red scaffold, as our country bends,
 May ask some willing victim ; or ye, friends,
 May fall under some sorrow, which this heart
 Or hand may share, or vanquish, or avert ;
 I am prepared, in truth, with no proud joy,
 To do or suffer aught, as when a boy
 I did devote to justico, and to love,
 My nature, worthless now.

“I must remove

A veil from my pent mind. ‘Tis torn aside !
 O ! pallid as death’s dedicated bride,
 Thou mockery which art sitting by my side,
 Am I not wan like thee ? At the grave’s call
 I haste, invited to thy wedding-ball,
 To meet the ghastly paramour, for whom
 Thou hast deserted me,—and made the tomb
 Thy bridal bed. But I beside thy feet
 Will lie, and watch ye from my winding-sheet
 Thus—wide awake though dead—Yet stay, O, stay !
 Go not so soon—I know not what I say—
 Hear but my reasons—I am mad, I fear,
 My fancy is o’erwrought —thou art not here,
 Pale art thou ‘tis most true—but thou art gone—
 Thy work is finished ; I am left alone.

* * * * *

“ Nay was it I who woo’d thee to this breast,
 Which like a serpent thou envenomest
 As in repayment of the warmth it lent ?
 Didst thou not seek me for thine own content ?
 Did not thy love awaken mine ? I thought
 That thou wert she who said ‘ You kiss me not Ever ; I fear you do not love me now.’
 In truth I loved even to my overthrow
 Her who would fain forget these words, but they
 Cling to her mind, and cannot pass away.

* * * * *

“ You say that I am proud ; that when I speak,
 My lip is tortured with the wrongs, which break
 The spirit it expresses.—Never one
 Humbled himself before, as I have done ;
 Even the instinctive worm on which we tread
 Turns, though it wound not—then, with prostrate head,
 Sinks in the dust, and writhes like me—and dies :
 —No :—wears a living death of agonies ;
 As the slow shadows of the pointed grass
 Mark the eternal periods, its pangs pass,
 Slow, ever-moving, making moments be
 As mine seem,—each an immortality !

* * * * *

"That you had never seen me ! never heard
 My voice ! and more than all had ne'er endured
 The deep pollution of my loathed embrace ;
 That your eyes ne'er had lied love in my face !
 That, like some maniac monk, I had torn out
 The nerves of manhood by their bleeding root
 With mine own quivering fingers ! so that ne'er
 Our hearts had for a moment mingled there,
 To disunite in horror ! These were not
 With thee like some suppressed and hideous thought,
 Which flits athwart our musings, but can find
 No rest within a pure and gentle mind—
 Thou sealedst them with many a bare broad word,
 And scar'dst my memory o'er them,—for I heard
 And can forget not—they were ministered,
 One after one, those curses. Mix them up
 Like self-destroying poisons in one cup ;
 And they will make one blessing, which thou ne'er
 Didst impigate for on me—death !

" It were

A cruel punishment for one most cruel,
 If such can love, to make that love the fuel
 Of the mind's hell—hate, scorn, remorse, despair :
 But me, whose heart a stranger's tear might wear
 As water-drops the sandy fountain stone ;
 Who loved and pitied all things, and could moan
 For woes which others hear not, and could see
 The absent with a glass of phantasy,
 And near the poor and trampled sit and weep,
 Following the captive to his dungeon deep ;
M., who am as a nerve o'er which do creep
 The else-unfelt oppressions of this earth,
 And was to thee the flame upon thy hearth,
 When all beside was cold :—that thou on me
 Should rain these plagues of blistering agony—
 Such curses are from lips once eloquent
 With love's too partial praise ! Let none relent
 Who intend deeds too dreadful for a name
 Henceforth, if an example for the same
 They seek :—for thou on me lookedst so and so,
 And didst speak thus and thus. I live to show
 How much men bear, and die not.

* * * * *

"Thou wilt tell,

With the grimace of hate, how horrible
 It was to meet my love when thine grew less ;
 Thou wilt admire how I could e'er address
 Such fears to love's work .... This taunt, though true,
 (For indeed Nature nor in form nor hue Bestowed on me her choicest workmanship)

Shall not be thy defence : for since thy lip
 Met mine first, years long past,—since thine eye kindled
 With soft fire under mine,—I have not dwindled,
 Nor changed in mind, or body, or in aught
 But as love changes what it loveth not
 After long years and many trials.

*       *       *       *       *

“How vain

Are words ; I thought never to speak again,
 Not even in secret, not to my own heart—
 But from my lips the unwilling accents start,
 And from my pen the words flow as I write,
 Dazzling my eyes with scalding tears—my sight
 Is dim to see that (charactered in vain
 On this unfeeling leaf) which burns the brain
 And eats into it, blotting all things fair,
 And wise and good, which time had written there.
 Those who inflict must suffer, for they see
 The work of their own hearts, and that must be
 Our chastisement or recompense.—O child !
 I would that thine were like to be more mild
 For both our wretched sakes,—for thine the most,
 Who feel'st already all that thou hast lost,
 Without the power to wish it thine again.
 And, as slow years pass, a funeral train,
 Each with the ghost of some lost hope or friend
 Following it like its shadow, wilt thou bend
 No thought on my dead memory ?

*       *       *       *       *

“Alas, love !

Fear me not : against thee I'd not move
 A finger in despite. Do I not live
 That thou mayst have less bitter cause to grieve ?
 I give thee tears for scorn, and love for hate ;
 And, that thy lot may be less desolate
 Than his on whom thou tramplest, I refrain
 From that sweet sleep which medicines all pain.
 Then—when thou speakest of me—never say,
 ‘He could forgive not.’—Here I cast away
 All human passions, all revenge, all pride ;
 I think, speak, act no ill ; I do but hide
 Under these words, like embers, every spark
 Of that which has consumed me. Quick and dark
 The grave is yawning :—as its roof shall cover
 My limbs with dust and worms, under and over,
 So let oblivion hide this grief.—The air
 Closes upon my accents as despair
 Upon my heart—let death upon my care !”

He ceased, and overcome, leant back awhile ;
 Then rising, with a melancholy smile,
 Went to a sofa, and lay down, and slept
 A heavy sleep, and in his dreams he wept,
 And muttered some familiar name, and we
 Wept without shame in his society.

I think I never was impressed so much !
 The man, who was not, must have lacked a touch
 Of human nature.—Then we lingered not,
 Although our argument was quite forgot ;
 But, calling the attendants, went to dine
 At Maddalo's ; yet neither cheer nor wine
 Could give us spirits, for we talked of him,
 And nothing else, till daylight made stars dim.
 And we agreed it was some dreadful ill
 Wrought on him boldly, yet unspeakable,
 By a dear friend ; some deadly change in love
 Of one vowed deeply which he dreamed not of ;
 For whose sake he, it seemed, had fixed a blot
 Of falsehood in his mind, which flourished not
 But in the light of all-beholding truth ;
 And having stamped this canker on his youth,
 She had abandoned him :—and how much more
 Might be his woe, we guessed not :—he had store
 Of friends and fortune once, as we could guess
 From his nice habits and his gentleness :
 These now were lost - it were a grief indeed
 If he had changed one unsustaining reel
 For all that such a man might else adorn.
 The colours of his mind seemed yet unworn :
 For the wild language of his grief was high--
 Such as in measure were called poetry.
 And I remember one remark, which then
 Maddalo made : he said—" Most wretched men
 Are crawled into poetry by wrong :
 They learn in suffering what they teach in song."

If I had been an unconnected man,
 I, from the moment, should have formed some plan
 Never to leave sweet Venice : for to me
 It was delight to ride by the lone sea:
 And then the town is silent—one may write
 Or read in gondolas, by day or night,
 Having the little brazen lamp alight,
 Unseen, uninterrupted :—books are there,
 Pictures, and casts from all those statues fair
 Which were twin-born with poetry !—and all
 We seek in towns, with little to recall
 Regret for the green country :—I might sit
 In Maddalo's great palace, and his wit

And subtle talk would cheer the winter night,
 And make me know myself :—and the fire light
 Would flash upon our faces, till the day
 Might dawn, and make me wonder at my stay.
 But I had friends in London too. The chief
 Attraction here was that I sought relief
 From the deep tenderness that maniac wrought
 Within me—twas perhaps an idle thought,
 But I imagined that if, day by day,
 I watched him, and seldom went away,
 And studied all the beatings of his heart
 With zeal, as men study some stubborn art
 For their own good, and could by patience find
 An entrance to the caverns of his mind,
 I might reclaim him from his dark estate.
 In friendships I had been most fortunate,
 Yet never saw I one whom I would call
 More willingly my friend :—and this was all
 Accomplished not ;—such dreams of baseless good
 Oft come and go, in crowds or solitude,
 And leave no trace !—but what I now designed
 Mule, for long years, impression on my mind.
 The following morning, urged by my affairs,
 I left bright Venice.

After many years,
 And many changes, I returned : the name
 Of Venice, and its aspect, was the same ;
 But Maddalo was travelling, far away,
 Among the mountains of Armenia.
 His dog was dead : his child had now become
 A woman, such as it has been my doom
 To meet with few; a wonder of this earth,
 Where there is little of transcendent worth.—
 Like one of Shakspeare's women. Kindly she,
 And with a manner beyond courtesy,
 Received her father's friend ; and, when I asked,
 Of the lorn maniac, she her memory tasked,
 And told, as she had heard, the mournful tale :
 "That the poor sufferer's health began to fail
 Two years from my departuro: but that then
 The lady, who had left him, came again ;
 Her mien had been imperious, but she now
 Looked meek ; perhaps remorse had brought her low.
 Her coming made him better ; and they stayed
 Together at my father's,—for I played,
 As I remember, with the lady's shawl ;
 I might be six years old :—But, after all,
 She left him."—

"Why, her heart must have been tough;
 How did it end ?"

"And was not this enough?
They met, they parted."
    "Child, is there no more?"

"Something within that interval which bore
The stamp of why they parted, how they met;—
Yet, if thine aged eyes disdain to wet
Those wrinkled cheeks with youth's remembered tears,
Ask me no more; but let the silent years
Be closed and cored over their memory,
As yon mute marble where their corpses lie."
I urged and questioned still: she told me how
All happened—but the cold world shall not know.

THE WOODMAN AND THE NIGHTINGALE.

A woodman whose rough heart was out of tune
(I think such hearts yet never came to good),
Hated to hear, under the stars or moon,

One nightingale in an interfluous wood
Satiate the hungry dark with melody;—
And, as a vale is watered by a flood,

Or as the moonlight fills the open sky
Struggling with darkness—as a tuberose
Peoples some Indian dell with scents which lie

Like clouds above the flower from which they rose,
The singing of that happy nightingale
In this sweet forest, from the golden close

Of evening till the star of dawn may fail,
Was interfused upon the silentness;
Tho folded roses and the violets pale

Heard her within their slumbers, the abyss
Of heaven with all its planets; the dull ear
Of the night-cradled earth; the loneliness

Of the circumfluous waters,—every sphere
And every flower and beam and cloud and wave,
And every wind of the mute atmosphere,

And every beast stretched in its rugged cave,
And every bird lulled on its mossy bough.
And every silver moth, fresh from the grave.

Which is its cradle—ever from below
 Aspiring like one who loves too fair, too far,
 To be consumed within the purest glow

Of one serene and unapproached star,
 As if it were a lamp of earthly light,
 Unconscious as some human lovers are,

Itself how low, how high, beyond all height
 The heaven where it would perish!—and every form
 That worshipped in the temple of the night

Was awed into delight, and by the charm
 Girt as with an interminable zone,
 Whilst that sweet bird, whose music was a storm

Of sound, shook forth the dull oblivion
 Out of their dreams; harmony became love
 In every soul but one. . . .

And so this man returned with axe and saw
 At evening close from killing the tall tree,
 The soul of whom by nature's gentle law

Was each a wood-nymph, and kept ever green
 The pavement and the roof of the wild copse,
 Chequering the sunlight of the blue serene

With jagged leaves,—and from the forest tops
 Singing the winds to sleep—or weeping oft
 Fast showers of aerial water drops

Into their mother's bosom, sweet and soft,
 Nature's pure tears which have no bitterness;—
 Around the cradles of the birds aloft

They spread themselves into the loveliness
 Of fan-like leaves, and over pallid flowers
 Hang like moist clouds: or, where high branches kiss,

Make a green space among the silent bowers,
 Like a vast fane in a metropolis,
 Surrounded by the columns and the towers

All overwrought with branch-like traceries
 In which there is religion—and the mute
 Persuasion of unkindled melodies,

Odours and gleams and murmurs, which the lute
 Of the blind pilot-spirit of the blast
 Stirs as it sails, now grave and now acute,

Wakening the leaves and waves ere it has past
 To such brief unison as on the brain
 One tone, which never can recur, has cast,

One accent never to return again.

MISERY.—A FRAGMENT.

COME, be happy!—sit near me,
 Shadow-vested Misery:
 Coy, unwilling, silent bride,
 Mourning in thy robe of pride,
 Desolation—deified!

Come, be happy!—sit near me:
 Sad as I may seem to thee,
 I am happier far than thou,
 Lady, whose imperial brow
 Is endiadem'd with woe.

Misery! we have known each other,
 Like a sister and a brother
 Living in the same lone home,
 Many years—we must live some
 Hours or ages yet to come.

'Tis an evil lot, and yet
 Let us make the best of it;
 If love can live when pleasure dies,
 We two will love, till in our eyes
 This heart's Hell seem Paradise.

Come, be happy!—lie thee down
 On the fresh grass newly mown,
 Where the grasshopper doth sing
 Merrily—one joyous thing
 In a world of sorrowing!

There our tent shall be the willow,
 And mine arm shall be thy pillow;
 Sounds and odours, sorrowful
 Because they once were sweet, shall lull
 Us to slumber deep and dull.

Ha! thy frozen pulses flutter
 With a love thou dar'st not utter.
 Thou art murmuring—thou art weeping—
 Is thine icy bosom leaping
 While my burning heart lies sleeping?

Kiss me ;—oh ! thy lips are cold ;
 Round my neck thine arms enfold—
 They are soft, but chill and dead ;
 And thy tears upon my head
 Burn like points of frozen lead.

Hasten to the bridal bed—
 Underneath the grave 'tis spread :
 In darkness may our love be hid,
 Oblivion be our coverlid—
 We may rest, and none forbid.

Clasp me, till our hearts be grown
 Like two shadows into one ;
 Till this dreadful transport may
 Like a vapour fade away
 In the sleep that lasts alway.

We may dream in that long sleep,
 That we are not those who weep ;
 Even as Pleasure dreams of thee,
 Life-deserting Misery,
 Thou mayst dream of her with me.

Let us laugh, and make our mirth,
 At the shadows of the earth,
 As dogs bay the moonlight clouds,
 Which, like spectres wrapt in shrouds,
 Pass o'er night in multitudes.

All the wide world, beside us
 Show like multitudinous
 Puppets passing from a scene ;
 What but mockery can they mean,
 Where I am—where thou hast been ?

---

O MARY dear, that you were here
 With your brown eyes bright and clear,
 And your sweet voice, like a bird
 Singing love to its lone mate
 In the ivy bower disconsolate ;
 Voice the sweetest ever heard !
 And your brow more * * *
 Than the * * * sky
 Of this azure Italy.

Mary dear, come to me soon,
 I am not well whilst thou art far ;
 As sunset to the sphered moon,
 As twilight to the western star,
 Thou, beloved, art to me.

O Mary dear, that you were here !
 The Castle echo whispers "Here!"

PASSAGE OF THE APENNINES.

LISTEN, listen, Mary mine,
 To the whisper of the Apennine,
 It bursts on the roof like the thunder's roar,
 Or like the sea on a northern shore,
 Heard in its raging ebb and flow
 By the captives pent in the cave below.
 The Apennine in the light of day
 Is a mighty mountain dim and grey,
 Which between the earth and sky doth lay ;
 But when night comes, a chaos dread,
 On the dim starlight then is spread,
 And the Apennine walks abroad with the storm.

ON A FADED VIOLET.

THE colour from the flower is gone,
 Which like thy sweet eyes smiled on me ;
 The odour from the flower is flown,
 Which breathed of thee and only thee !

A withered, lifeless, vacant form,
 It lies on my abandoned breast,
 And mocks the heart which yet is warm
 With cold and silent rest.

I weep—my tears revive it not.
 I sigh—it breathes no more on me ;
 Its mute and uncomplaining lot
 Is such as mine should be.

STANZAS,

WRITTEN IN DEJECTION, NEAR NAPLES.

THE sun is warm, the sky is clear,
 The waves are dancing fast and bright,
 Blue isles and snowy mountains wear
 The purple noon's transparent light :
 The breath of the moist air is light,
 Around its unexpanded buds ;
 Like many a voice of one delight,
 The winds, the birds, the ocean floods,
 The City's voice itself is soft like Solitude's.

I see the Deep's untrampled floor
 With green and purple sea-weeds strown ;
 I see the waves upon the shore,
 Like light dissolved in star-showers, thrown :
 I sit upon the sands alone,
 The lightning of the noon-tide ocean
 Is flashing round me, and a tone
 Arises from its measured motion,
 How sweet ! did any heart now share in my emotion.

Alas ! I have nor hope nor health,
 Nor peace within nor calm around,
 Nor that content surpassing wealth
 The sage in meditation found,
 And walked with inward glory crowned—
 Nor fame, nor power, nor love, nor leisure.
 Others I see whom these surround—
 Smiling they live, and call life pleasure ;—
 To me that cup has been dealt in another measure.

Yet now despair itself is mild,
 Even as the winds and waters are ;
 I could lie down like a tired child,
 And weep away the life of care
 Which I have borne, and yet must bear,
 Till death like sleep might steal on me,
 And I might feel in the warm air
 My cheek grow cold, and hear the sea
 Breath o'er my dying brain its last monotony.

Some might lament that I were cold,
 As I when this sweet day is gone,
 Which my lost heart, too soon grown old,
 Insults with this untimely moan ;

They might lament—for I am one
 Whom men love not,—and yet regret,
 Unlike this day, which, when the sun
 Shall on its stainless glory set,
 Will linger, though enjoyed, like joy in memory yet.

SONG FOR TASSO.

I loved—alas ! our life is love ;
 But when we cease to breathe and move,
 I do suppose love ceases too.
I thought, but not as now I do,
 Keen thoughts and bright of linked lore,
 Of all that men had thought before,
 And all that Nature shows, and more.

And still I love, and still I think,
 But strangely, for my heart can drink
 The dregs of such despair, and live,
 And love ;
 And if I think, my thoughts come fast ;
 I mix the present with the past,
 And each seems uglier than the last.

Sometimes I see before me flee
 A silver spirit's form, like thee,
 O Leonora, and I sit [ ] still watching it.
 Till by the grated casement's ledge
 It fades, with such a sigh, as sedge
 Breathes o'er the breezy streamlet's edge.

THE PAST.

WILT thou forget the happy hours
 Which we buried in Love's sweet bowers,
 Heaping over their corpses cold
 Blossoms and leaves instead of mould ?
 Blossoms which were the joys that fell,
 And leaves, the hopes that yet remain.

Forget the dead, the past ? O yet
 There are ghosts that may take revenge for it ;
 Memories that make the heart a tomb,
 Regrets which glide through the spirit's gloom,
 And with ghastly whispers tell
 That joy, once lost, is pain.

MAZENGHI.*

O ! FOSTER-NURSE of man's abandoned glory
 Since Athens, its great mother, sunk in splendour,
 Thou shadowest forth that mighty shape in story,
 As ocean its wrecked fanes, severe yet tender :
 The light inverted angel Poesy
 Was drawn from the dim world to welcome thee.

And thou in painting didst transcribe all taught
 By loftiest meditations ; marble knew
 The sculptor's fearless soul—and, as he wrought,
 The grace of his own power and freedom grew.
 And more than all, heroic, just, sublime,
 Thou wert among the false—was this thy crime ?

Yes ; and on Pisa's marble walls the twine
 Of direst weeds hangs garlanded—the snake
 Inhabits its wrecked palaces ;—in thine
 A beast of subtler venom now doth make
 Its lair, and sits amid their glories overthrown,
 And thus thy victim's fate is as thine own.

The sweetest flowers are ever frail and rare,
 And love and freedom blossom but to wither ;
 And good and ill like vines entangled are,
 So that their grapes may oft be plucked together ;
 Divide the vintage ere thou drink, then make
 Thy heart rejoice for dead Mazenghi's sake.

No record of his crime remains in story,
 But if the morning bright as evening shone,
 It was some high and holy deed, by glory
 Pursued into forgetfulness, which won
 From the blind crowd he made secure and free
 The Patriot's meed, toil, death, and infamy.

For when by sound of trumpet was declared
 A price upon his life, and there was set
 A penalty of blood on all who shared
 So much of water with him as might wet
 His lips, which speech divided not—he went
 Alone, as you may guess, to banishment.

* This fragment refers to an event, told in Sismoudi's Histoire des Républiques Italiennes, which occurred during the war when Florence finally subdued Pisa, and reduced it to a province. The opening stanzas are addressed to the conquering city.—M.S.

Amid the mountains, like a hunted beast,
He hid himself, and hunger, toil, and cold,
Month after month endured ; it was a feast
Whence'er he found those globes of deep red gold
Which in the woods the strawberry-tree doth bear,
Suspended in their emerald atmosphere.

And in the roofless huts of vast morasses,
Deserted by the fever-stricken serf,
All overgrown with reeds and long rank grasses,
And hillocks heaped of moss-inwoven turf,
And where the huge and speckled aloe made,
Rooted in stones, a broad and pointed shade,

He housed himself. There is a point of strand
Near Vada's tower and town ; and on one side
The treacherous marsh divides it from the land,
Shadowed by pine and ilex forests wide ;
And on the other creeps eternally,
Through muddy weeds, the shallow sullen sea.

SONNET.

LIFT not the painted veil which those who live
Call Life ; though unreal shapes be pictured there,
And it but mimic all we would believe
With colours idly spread,—behind, lurk Fear
And Hope, twin Destinies ; who ever weave
Their shadows, o'er the chasm, sightless and drear.

I knew one who had lifted it—he sought,
For his lost heart was tender, things to love,
But found them not, alas ! nor was there aught
The world contains, the which he could approve.
Through the unheeding many he did move,
A splendour among shadows, a bright blot
Upon this gloomy scene, a Spirit that strove
For truth, and like the Preacher found it not.

POEMS WRITTEN IN 1819.

THE MASQUE OF ANARCHY.

<sup>L.</sup>
As I lay asleep in Italy,
There came a voice from over the sea,
And with great power it forth led me
To walk in the visions of Poesy.

<sup>II.</sup>
I met Murder on the way—
He had a mask like Castlereagh—
Very smooth he looked, yet grim ;
Seven bloodhounds followed him :

<sup>III.</sup>
All were fat ; and well they might
Be in admirable plight,
For one by one, and two by two,
He tossed them human hearts to chew,
Which from his white cloak he drew.

<sup>IV.</sup>
Next came Fraud, and he had on,
Like Lord E——, an ermine gown ;
His big tears, for he wept well,
Turned to mill-stones as they fell ;

<sup>V.</sup>
And the little children, who
Round his feet played to and fro,
Thinking every tear a gem,
Had their brains knocked out by them.

<sup>VI.</sup>
Clothed with the bible as with light,
And the shadow of the night,
Like S*** next, Hypocrisy,
On a crocodile came by.

<sup>VII.</sup>
And many more Destructions played
In this ghastly masquerade,
All disguised, even to the eyes,
Like bishops, lawyers, peers, or spies.

viii.

Last came Anarchy ; he rode
On a white horse splashed with blood ;
He was pale even to the lips,
Like death in the Apocalypse.

ix.

And he wore a kingly crown ;
In his hand a sceptre shone ;
On his brow this mark I saw—
“ I am God, and King, and Law ! ”

x.

With a pace stately and fast,
Over English land he past,
Trampling to a mire of blood
The adoring multitude.

xi.

And a mighty troop around, ●
With their trampling shook the ground,
Waving each a bloody sword,
For the service of their Lord.

xii.

And, with glorious triumph, they
Rode through England, proud and gay,
Drunk as with intoxication
Of the wine of desolation.

xiii.

O'er fields and towns, from sea to sea,
Passed the pageant swift and free,
Tearing up, and trampling down,
Till they came to London town.

xiv.

And each dweller, panic-stricken,
Felt his heart with terror sicken,
Hearing the tremendous cry
Of the triumph of Anarchy.

xv.

For with pomp to meet him came,
Clothed in arms like blood and flame,
The hired murderers who did sing,
“ Thou art God, and Law, and King.

xvi.

We have waited, weak and lone,
For thy coming, Mighty One !
Our purses are empty, our swords are cold,
Give us glory, and blood, and gold.”

xvii.

Lawyers and priests, a motley crowd,
To the earth their pale brows bowed,
Like a bad prayer not over loud,
Whispering—“ Thou art Law and God ! ”

xviii.

Then all cried with one accord,
 "Thou art King, and Law, and Lord ;
 Anarchy, to thee we bow,
 Be thy name made holy now!"

xix.

And Anarchy, the skeleton,
 Bowed and grinned to every one,
 As well as if his education
 Had cost ten millions to the nation.

xx.

For he knew the palaces
 Of our kings were nightly his ;
 His the sceptre, crown, and globe,
 And the gold-inwoven robe.

xxi.

So he sent his slaves before
 To seize upon the Bank and Tower,
 And was proceeding with intent
 To meet his pensioned parliament,

xxii.

When one fled past, a maniac maid,
 And her name was Hope, she said :
 But she looked more like Despair ;
 And she cried out in the air :

xxiii.

"My father, Time is weak and grey
 With waiting for a better day ;
 See how idiot-like he stands,
 Trembling with his palsied hands !

xxiv.

"He has had child after child,
 And the dust of death is piled
 Over every one but me—Misery ! oh, Misery !"

xxv.

Then she lay down in the street,
 Right before the horses' feet,
 Expecting, with a patient eye,
 Murder, Fraud, and Anarchy.

xxvi.

When between her and her foes
 A mist, a light, an image rose,
 Small at first, and weak and frail
 Like the vapour of the vale :

xxvii.

Till as clouds grow on the blast,
 Like tower-crowned giants striding fast,
 And glare with lightnings as they fly,
 And speak in thunder to the sky,

XXXVIII.

It grew—a shape arrayed in mail
 Brighter than the viper's scale,
 And upborne on wings whose grain
 Was like the light of sunny rain.

XXXIX.

On its helm, seen far away,
 A planet, like the morning's, lay ;
 And those plumes it light rained through,
 Like a shower of crimson dew.

XXX.

With step as soft as wind it passed
 O'er the heads of men—so fast
 That they knew the presence there,
 And looked—and all was empty air.

XXXI.

As flowers beneath May's footsteps waken,
 As stars from night's loose hair are shaken,
 As waves arise when loud winds call,
 Thoughts sprung where'er that step did fall.

XXXII.

And the prostrate multitude
 Looked—and ankle-deep in blood,
 Hope, that maiden most serene,
 Was walking with a quiet mien :

XXXIII.

And Anarchy, the ghastly birth,
 Lay dead earth upon the earth :
 The Horse of Death, tameless as wind,
 Fled, and with his hoofs did grind
 To dust the murderers thronged behind.

XXXIV.

A rushing light of clouds and splendour,
 A sense, awakening and yet tender,
 Was heard and felt—and at its close
 These words of joy and fear arose ;

XXXV.

As if their own indignant earth,
 Which gave the sons of England birth,
 Had felt their blood upon her brow,
 And shuddering with a mother's throe,

XXXVI.

Had turned every drop of blood,
 By which her face had been bedewed,
 To an accent unwithstood,
 As if her heart had cried aloud

XXXVII.

" Men of England, Heirs of Glory,
 Heroes of unwritten story,
 Nurslings of one mighty mother,
 Hopes of her, and one another !

XXXVIII.

"Rise, like lions after slumber,
In unvanquishable number,
Shake your chains to earth like dew,
Which in sleep had fall'n on you.
Ye are many, they are few.

XXXIX.

"What is freedom? Ye can tell
That which Slavery is too well,
For its very name has grown
To an echo of your own.

XL.

"'Tis to work, and have such pay
As just keeps life from day to day
In your limbs as in a cell
For the tyrants' use to dwell:

XLI.

"So that ye for them are made,
Loom, and plough, and sword, and spade;
With or without your own will, bent
To their defence and nourishment.

XLII.

"'Tis to see your children weak
With their mothers pine and peak,
When the winter winds are bleak :—
They are dying whilst I speak.

XLIII.

"'Tis to hunger for such diet,
As the rich man in his riot
Casts to the fat dogs that lie
Surfeiting beneath his eye.

XLIV.

"'Tis to let the Ghost of Gold
Take from toil a thousand-fold
More than e'er his substance could
In the tyrannies of old :

XLV.

"Paper coin---that forgery
Of the title deeds, which ye
Hold to something of the worth:
Of the inheritance of Earth.

XLVI.

"'Tis to be a slave in soul,
And to hold no strong controul
Over your own wills, but be
All that others make of ye.

XLVII.

"And at length when ye complain,
With a murmur weak and vain,

'Tis to see the tyrant's crew
Ride over your wives and you :—
Blood is on the grass like dew !

XLVIII.

" Then it is to feel revenge,
Fiercely thirsting to exchange
Blood for blood—and wrong for wrong :
Do not thus when ye are strong !

XLIX.

" Birds find rest in narrow nest,
When weary of their winged quest;
Beasts find fare in woody lair,
When storm and snow are in the air.

L.

" Horses, oxen, have a home,
When from daily toil they come ;
Household dogs, when the wind roars,
Find a home within warm doors.

LI.

" Asses, swine, have litter spread,
And with fitting food are fed ;
All things have a home but one :
Thou, O Englishman, hast none !

LII.

" This is slavery—savage men,
Or wild beasts within a den,
Would endure not as ye do :
But such ills they never knew.

LIII.

" What art thou, Freedom ? Oh ! could slaves
Answer from their living graves
This demand, tyrants would flee
Like a dream's dim imagery.

LIV.

" Thou art not, as impostors say,
A shadow soon to pass away,
A superstition, and a name
Echoing from the cave of Fame.

LV.

" For the labourer thou art bread
And a comely table spread,
From his daily labour come,
In a neat and happy home.

LVI.

" Thou art clothes, and fire, and food
For the trampled multitude :
No—in countries that are free
Such starvation cannot be,
As in England now we see.

“To the rich thou art a check ;
 When his foot is on the neck
 Of his victim, thou dost make
 That he treads upon a snake.

LXXXVII.

“Thou art Justice—ne’er for gold
 May thy righteous laws be sold,
 As laws are in England :—thou
 Shieldest alike the high and low.

LXXXVIII.

“Thou art Wisdom—freemen never Dream that God will doom for ever
 All who think those things untrue,
 Of which priests make such ado.

LXXXIX.

“Thou art Peace—never by thee
 Would blood and treasure wasted be,
 As tyrants wasted them, when all
 Leagued to quench thy flame in Gaul.

LXXX.

“What if English toil and blood
 Was poured forth, even as a flood ?
 It availed, ‘ O Liberty ! ’
 To dim—but not extinguish thee.

LXXXI.

“Thou art Love—the rich have kist
 Thy feet; and like him following Christ,
 Given their substance to the free,
 And through the rough world followed thee.

LXXXII.

“Oh turn their wealth to arms, and make
 War for thy beloved sake,
 On wealth and war and fraud ; whence they Draw the power which is their prey.

LXXXIII.

“Science, and Poetry, and Thought,
 Are thy Lamps ; they make the lot
 Of the dwellers in a cot
 Such, they curse their maker not.

LXXXIV.

“Spirit, Patience, Gentleness,
 All that can adorn and bless,
 Art thou : let deeds, not words, express
 Thine exceeding loveliness.

LXXXV.

“Let a great assembly be
 Of the fearless and the free,
 On some spot of English ground,
 Where the plains stretch wide around.

LXVII.

" Let the blue sky overhead,
 The green earth on which ye tread,
 All that must eternal be,
 Witness the solemnity.

LXVIII.

" From the corners uttermost
 Of the bounds of English coast ;
 From every hut, village, and town,
 Where those who live and suffer, moan
 For others' misery, or their own :

LXIX.

" From the workhouse and the prison,
 Where pale as corpses newly risen,
 Women, children, young, and old,
 Groan for pain, and weep for cold ;

LXX.

" From the haunts of daily life,
 Where is waged the daily strife
 With common wants and common cares,
 Which sow the human heart with tares.

LXXI.

" Lastly, from the palaces,
 Where the murmur of distress
 Echoes, like the distant sound
 Of a wind, alive around ;

LXXII.

" Those prison-halls of wealth and fashion,
 Where some few feel such compassion
 For those who groan, and toil, and wail,
 As must make their brethren pale ;

LXXIII.

" Ye who suffer woes untold,
 Or to feel, or to behold
 Your lost country bought and sold
 With a price of blood and gold.

LXXIV.

" Let a vast assembly be,
 And with great solemnity
 Declare with ne'er said words, that ye
 Are, as God has made ye, free.

LXXV.

" Be your strong and simple words
 Keen to wound as sharpened swords,
 And wide as targes let them be,
 With their shade to cover ye.

LXXVI.

" Let the tyrants pour around
 With a quick and startling sound,
 Like the loosening of a sea,
 Troops of armed emblazonry.

LXXVII.

“ Let the charged artillery drive,
Till the dead air seems alive
With the clash of clang ing wheels,
And the tramp of horses’ heels.

LXXVIII.

“ Let the fixed bayonet
Gleam with sharp desire to wet
Its bright point in English blood,
Looking keen as one for food.

LXXIX.

“ Let the horsemen’s scimitars
Wheel and flash, like sphereless stars,
Thirsting to eclipse their burning
In a sea of death and mourning.

LXXX.

“ Stand ye calm and resolute,
Like a forest close and mute,
With folded arms, and looks which are
Weapons of an unvanquished war.

LXXXI.

“ And let Panic, who outspeeds
The career of armed steeds,
Pass, a disregarded shade,
Through your phalanx undismayed.

LXXXII.

“ Let the laws of your own land,
Good or ill, between ye stand,
Hand to hand, and foot to foot,
Arbiters of the dispute.

LXXXIII.

“ The old laws of England --they
Whose reverend heads with age are grey,
Children of a wiser day;
And whose solemn voice must be Thine own echo --Liberty!

LXXXIV.

“ On those who first should violate
Such sacred heralds in their state,
Rest the blood that must ensue;
And it will not rest on you.

LXXXV.

“ And if then the tyrants dare,
Let them ride among you there;
Slash, and stab, and maim, and hew;
What they like, that let them do.

LXXXVI.

“ With folded arms and steady eyes,
And little fear, and less surprise,
Look upon them as they slay,
Till their rage has died away:

LXXXVII.

"Then they will return with shame,
To the place from which they came,
And the blood thus shed will speak
In hot blushes on their cheek :

LXXXVIII.

"Every woman in the land
Will point at them as they stand —
They will hardly dare to greet
Their acquaintance in the street :

LXXXIX.

"And the bold true warriors,
Who have hugged danger in the wars,
Will turn to those who would be free,
Ashamed of such base company :

xc.

"And that slaughter to the nation
Shall steam up like inspiration,
Eloquent, oracular,
A volcano heard afar :

xci.

"And these words shall then become
Like Oppression's thundered doom,
Ringing through each heart and brain,
Heard again—again—again !

xcii.

"Rise, like lions after slumber
In unvanquishable number !
Shake your chains to earth, like dew
Which in sleep had fallen on you :
Ye are many—they are few!"

PETER BELL THE THIRD.

BY

MICHING MALLECHO, Esq.

Is it a party in a parlour,
 Crammed just as they on earth were crammed,
 Some sipping punch—some sipping tea,
 But, as you by their faces see,
 All silent, and all—damned!

Peter Bell, by W. WORDSWORTH.

OPHELIA.—What means this, my lord?

HAMLET.—Marry, this is Miching Mallecho; it means mischief.

SHAKSPEARE.

Dedication.

TO THOMAS BROWN, ESQ., THE YOUNGER, H.F.

DEAR TOM,—Allow me to request you to introduce Mr. Peter Bell to the respectable family of the Fudges; although he may fall short of those very considerable personages in the more active properties which characterise the Rat and the Apostate, I suspect that even you, their historian, will confess that he surpasses them in the more peculiarly legitimate qualification of intolerable dulness.

You know Mr. Examiner Hunt; well—it was he who presented me to two of the Mr. Bells. My intimacy with the younger Mr. Bell naturally sprung from this introduction to his brothers. And in presenting him to you, I have the satisfaction of being able to assure you that he is considerably the dullest of the three.

There is this particular advantage in an acquaintance with any one of the Peter Bells, that if you know one Peter Bell, you know three Peter Bells; they are not one, but three; not three, but one. An awful mystery, which, after having caused torrents of blood, and having been hymned by groans enough to deafen the music of the spheres, is at length illustrated to the satisfaction of all parties in the theological world, by the nature of Mr. Peter Bell.

Peter is a polyhedric Peter, or a Peter with many sides. He changes colours like a chameleon, and his coat like a snake. He is a Proteus of a Peter. He was at first sublime, pathetic, impressive, profound ; then dull ; then prosy and dull ; and now dull—O, so very dull ! it is an ultra-legitimate dulness.

You will perceive that it is not necessary to consider Hell and the Devil as supernatural machinery. The whole scene of my epic is in “this world which is”—so Peter informed us before his conversion to White Obi—

— The world of all of us, and where
We find our happiness, or not at all.

Let me observe that I have spent six or seven days in composing this sublime piece ; the orb of my moonlight genius has made the fourth part of its revolution round the dull earth which you inhabit, driving you mad, while it has retained its calmness and its splendour, and I have been fitting this its last phase “to occupy a permanent station in the literature of my country.”

Your works, indeed, dear Tom, sell better ; but mine are far superior. The public is no judge ; posterity sets all to rights.

Allow me to observe that so much has been written of Peter Bell, that the present history can be considered only, like the Iliad, as a continuation of that series of cyclic poems, which have already been candidates for bestowing immortality upon, at the same time that they receive it from, his character and adventures. In this point of view, I have violated no rule of Syntax in beginning my composition with a conjunction ; the full stop which closes the poem continued by me, being, like the full stops at the end of the Iliad and Odyssey, a full stop of a very qualified import.

Hoping that the immortality which you have given to the Fudges, you will receive from them ; and in the firm expectation, that when London shall be an habitation of bitterns, when St. Paul’s and Westminster Abbey shall stand, shapeless and nameless ruins, in the midst of an unpeopled marsh ; when the piers of Waterloo-Bridge shall become the nuclei of islets of reeds and osiers, and cast the jagged shadows of their broken arches on the solitary stream, some transatlantic commentator will be weighing in the scales of some new and now unimagined system of criticism, the respective merits of the Bells and the Fudges, and their historians,

I remain, dear Tom,

Yours sincerely,

MICING MALLECHO.

P.S.—Pray excuse the date of place : so soon as the profits of the publication come in, I mean to hire lodgings in a more respectable street.

PROLOGUE.

PETER BELLS, one, two and three,
 O'er the wide world wandering be.—
 First, the antenatal Peter,
 Wrapt in weeds of the same metre,
 The so long predestined raiment
 Clothed, in which to walk his way meant
 The second Peter; whose ambition
 Is to link the proposition,
 As the mean of two extremes--
 (This was learnt from Aldric's themes)
 Shielding from the guilt of schism
 The orthodoxal syllogism;
 The First Peter—he who was
 Like the shadow in the glass
 Of the second, yet unripe,
 His substantial antitype--
 Then came Peter Bell the Second,
 Who henceforward must be reckoned
 The body of a double soul,
 And that portion of the whole
 Without which the rest would seem
 Ends of a disjointed dream.—
 And the Third is he who has
 O'er the grave been forced to pass
 To the other side, which is,—
 Go and try else,—just like this.

Peter Bell the First was Peter
 Smugger, milder, softer, neater,
 Like the soul before it is
 Born from that world into this.
 The next Peter Bell was he,
 Predevote, like you and me,
 To good or evil as may come;
 His was the severer doom,—
 For he was an evil Cotter,
 And a polygynic Potter.*

* The oldest scholiasts read—

A dod... gamie Potter.

This is at once more descriptive and more megalophonous,—but the alliteration of the text had captivated the vulgar ear of the herd of later commentators.

And the last is Peter Bell,
 Damned since our first parents fell,
 Damned eternally to Hell—
 Surely he deserves it well !

DEATH.

AND Peter Bell, when he had been
 With fresh-imported hell-fire warmed,
 Grew serious—from his dress and mien
 'Twas very plaiuly to be seen
 Peter was quite reformed.

His eyes turned up, his mouth turned down :
 His accent caught a nasal twang ;
 He oiled his hair,<sup>1</sup> there might be heard
 The grace of God in every word
 Which Peter said or sang.

But Peter now grew old, and had
 An ill no doctor could unravel ;
 His torments almost drove him mad ;—
 Some said it was a fever bad—
 Some swore it was the gravel.

His holy friends then came about,
 And with long preaching and persuasion,
 Convinced the patient that, without
 The smallest shadow of a doubt,
 He was predestined to damnation.

They said—"Thy name is Peter Bell ;
 Thy skin is of a brimstone hue ;
 Alive or dead—ayœ, sick or well—
 The one God made to rhyme with hell ;
 The other, I think, rhymes with you."

<sup>1</sup> To those who have not duly appreciated the distinction between White and Rosin oil, this attribute might rather seem to belong to the Dandy than the Evangelic. The effect, when to the windward, is indeed so similar, that it requires a subtle naturalist to discriminate the animals. They belong, however, to distinct genera.

Then Peter set up such a yell !—

The nurse, who with some water gruel
Was climbing up the stairs, as well
As her old legs could climb them—fell
And broke them both—the fall was cruel.

The Parson from the casement leapt

Into the lake of Windermere—
And many an eel—though no adept
In God's right reason for it—kept
Gnawing his kidneys half a year.

And all the rest rushed through the door,

And tumbled over one another,
And broke their skulls. Upon the floor
Meanwhile sat Peter Bell, and swore,
And cursed his father and his mother;

And raved of God, and sin, and death,

Blaspheming like an infidel;
And said, that with his clenched teeth,
He'd seize the earth from underneath,
And drag it with him down to hell.

As he was speaking came a spasm,

And wrench'd his gnashing teeth asunder;
Like one who sees a strange phantasm
He lay,—there was a silent clasm
Betwixt his upper jaw and under.

And yellow death lay on his face:

And a fixed smile that was not human
Told, as I understand the case,
That he was gone to the wrong place:—
I heard all this from the old woman.

Then there came down from Langdale Pike

A cloud, with lightning, wind and hail;
It swept over the mountains like
An ocean,—and I heard it strike
The woods and crags of Grasmere vale.

And I saw the black storm come

Nearer, minute after minute;
Its thunder made the cataracts dumb;
With hiss, and clash, and hollow hum,
It neared as if the Devil was in it.

The Devil was in it :—he had bought
 Peter for half-a-crown ; and when
 The storm which bore him vanished, nought
 That in the house that storm had caught
 Was ever seen again.

The gaping neighbours came next day—
 They found all vanished from the shore :
 The Bible, whence he used to pray,
 Half-scoured under a hen-coop lay ;
 Smashed glass—and nothing more !

THE DEVIL

THE DEVIL, I safely can aver,
 Has neither hoof, nor tail, nor sting ;
 Nor is he, as some sages swear,
 A spirit, neither here nor there,
 In nothing—yet in everything.

He is—what we are : for sometimes
 The Devil is a gentleman ;
 At others a bard bartering rhymes
 For sack ; a statesman spinning crimes ;
 A swindler, living as he can ;

A thief, who cometh in the night,
 With whole boots and net pantaloons,
 Like some one whom it were not right
 To mention :— or the luckless wight,
 From whom he steals nine silver spoons.

But in this case he did appear
 Like a slop-in-rentant from Wapping,
 And with snug face, and eye severe,
 On every side did perk and peer
 Till he saw Peter dead or napping.

He had on an upper Benjamin
 (For he was of the driving schism)
 In the which he wrapt his skin
 From the storm he travelled in,
 For fear of rheumatism.

He called the ghost out of the corse ;—
 It was exceedingly like Peter,—
 Only its voice was hollow and hoarse—
 It had a queerish look of course—
 Its dress too was a little neater.

The Devil knew not his name and lot,
 Peter knew not that he was Bell :
 Each had an upper stream of thought,
 Which made all seem as it was not ;
 Fitting itself to all things well.

Peter thought he had parents dear,
 Brothers, sisters, cousins, cronies,
 In the fens of Lincolnshire ;
 He perhaps had found them there
 Had he gone and boldly shown his

Solemn phiz in his own village ;
 Where he thought oft when a boy
 He'd climb the orchard walls to pilage
 The produce of his neighbour's tillage,
 With marvellous pride and joy.

And the Devil thought he had,
 'Mid the misery and confusion
 Of an unjust war, just made
 A fortune by the gainful trade
 Of giving soldiers rations bad—
 The world is full of strange delusion.

That he had a mansion planned
 In a square like Grosvenor-square,
 That he was aping fashion, and
 That he now came to Westmoreland
 To see what was romantic there.

And all this, though quite ideal,—
 Ready at a breath to vanish,—
 Was a state not more unreal
 Than the peace he could not feel,
 Or the care he could not banish.

After a little conversation,
 The Devil told Peter, if he chose,
 He'd bring him to the world of fashion
 By giving him a situation
 In his own service—and new clothes.

And Peter bowed, quite pleased and proud,
 And after waiting some few days
 For a new livery, dirty yellow
 Turned up with black—the wretched fellow
 Was bowled to Hell in the Devil's chaise.

PART THE THIRD.

HELL.

HELL is a city much like London—
 A populous and a smoky city ;
 There are all sorts of people undone,
 And there is little or no fun done;
 Small justice shown, and still less pity.

There is a Castles, and a Canning,
 A Cobbett and a Castlereagh ;
 All sorts of caitiff corpses plunning,
 All sorts of cozening for trepanning
 Corpses less corrupt than they.

There is a * * *, who has lost
 His wits, or sold them, none knows which ;
 He walks about a double ghost,
 And though as thin as Fraud almost—
 Ever grows more grim and rich.

There is a Chancery Court ; a King ;
 A manufacturing mob ; a set
 Of thieves who by themselves are sent
 Similar thieves to represent ;
 An army ; and a public debt.

Which last is a scheme of paper money,
 And means—being interpreted—
 “Bees, keep your wax—give us the honey,
 And we will plant, while skies are sunny,
 Flowers, which in winter serve instead.”

There is great talk of revolution—
 And a great chance of despotism—
 German soldiers—camps—confusion—
 Tumults—lotteries—rage—delusion—
 Gin—suicide—and methodism.

Taxes too, on wine and bread,
 And meat, and beer, and tea, and cheese,
 From which those patriots pure are fed,
 Who gorge before they reel to bed
 The tenfold essence of all these.

There are mincing women, mewing,
 (Like cats, who amant miserè,*)
 Of their own virtue, and pursuing
 Their gentler sisters to that ruin,
 Without which—what were chastity.†

Lawyers—judges—old hobnobbers
 Are there bailiffs—chancellors --.
 Bishops—great and little robbers
 Rhymesters—pamphleteers —stock-jobbers—
 Men of glory in the wars, .

Things whose trade is, over ladies
 To lean, and flirt, and stare, and simper,
 Till all that is divine in woman
 Grows cruel, courteous, smooth, inhuman,
 Crucified 'twixt a smile and whimper.

Thrusting, toiling, wailing, moiling,
 Frowning, preaching—such a riot !
 Each with never-ceasing labour,
 Whilst he thinks he cheats his neighbour,
 Cheating his own heart of quiet.

And all these meet at levées :—
 Dinners convivial and political ;—
 Suppers of epic poets ;—teas,
 Where small-talk dies in agonies ;—
 Breakfasts professional and critical ;

Lunches and snacks so aldermanic
 That one would furnish forth ten dinners,
 Where reigns a Cretan-tongued panic,
 Lest news Russ, Dutch, or Alemannic
 Should make some losers, and some winners

* One of the attributis in Linnaeus's description of the Cat. To a similar cause the caterwauling of more than one species of this genus is to be referred ;— except, indeed, that the poor quadruped is compelled to quarrel with its own pleasures, whilst the biped is supposed only to quarrel with those of others.

† What would this husk and excuse for a virtue be without its kernel prostitution, or the kernel prostitution without this husk of a virtue? I wonder the women of the town do not form an association, like the Society for the Suppression of Vice, for the support of what may be called the " King, Church, and Constitution " of their order. But this subject is almost too horrible for a joke.

At conversazioni—balls—
 Conventicles—and drawing-rooms—
 Courts of law—committees—calls
 Of a morning—clubs—book-stalls—
 Churches—masquerades—and tombs.

And this is Hell—and in this smother
 All are damnable and damned;
 Each one damning, damns the other;
 They are damned by one another.
 By none other are they damned.

"Tis a lie to say, "God damns!"*
 Where was Heaven's Attorney General
 When they first gave out such flams?
 Let there be an end of shams,
 They are mines of poisonous mineral.

Statesmen damn themselves to be .
 Cursed; and lawyers damn their souls
 To the auction of a fee;
 Churchmen damn themselves to see
 God's sweet love in burning coals.

The rich are damned beyond all cure,
 To taunt, and starve, and trample on
 The weak and wretched; and the poor
 Damn their broken hearts to endure
 Stripe on stripe, with groan on groan.

Sometimes the poor are damned indeed
 To take,—not means for being blest,—
 But Cobbett's snuff, revenge; that weed
 From which the worms that it doth feed
 Squeeze less than they before possessed.

And some few, like we know who,
 Damned—but God alone knows why—
 To believe their minds are given
 To make this ugly Hell a Heaven;
 In which faith they live and die.

Thus, as in a town, plague-stricken.
 Each man be he sound or no
 Must indifferently sicken;
 As when day begins to thicken,
 None knows a pigeon from a crow,—

* This libel on our national oath, and this accusation of all our countrymen of being in the daily practice of solemnly ascertaining the most enormous falsehood, I fear deserves the notice of a more active Attorney General than that here alluded to.

So good and bad, sane and mad,
 The oppressor and the oppressed ;
 Those who weep to see what others
 Smile to inflict upon their brothers ;
 Lovers, haters, worst and best ;

All are damned—they breathe an air,
 Thick, infected, joy-dispelling ;
 Each pursues what seems most fair,
 Mining like moles, through mind, and there
 Scoop palace-caverns vast, where Care
 In throned state is ever dwelling.

---

PART THE FOURTH.

SIN.

Lo, Peter in Hell's Grosvenor-square,
 A footman in the Devil's service !
 And the misjudging world would swear
 That every man in service thereto
 To virtue would prefer vice.

But Peter, though now damned, was not
 What Peter was before damnation.
 Men oftentimes prepare a lot
 Which ere it finds them, is not what
 Suits with their genuine station.

All things that Peter saw and felt
 Had a peculiar aspect to him ;
 And when they came within the belt
 Of his own nature, seemed to melt,
 Like cloud to cloud, into him.

And so the outward world uniting
 To that within him, he became Considerably uninviting
 To those, who meditation slighting,
 Were moulded in a different frame.

And he scorned them, and they scorned him ;
 And he scorned all they did ; and they Did all that men of their own trim
 Are wont to do to please their whim,
 Drinking, lying, swearing, play.

Such were his fellow-servants ; thus
 His virtue, like our own, was built
 Too much on that indignant fuss
 Hypocrite Pride stirs up in us
 To bully out another's guilt.

He had a mind which was somehow
 At once circumference and centre
 Of all he might or feel or know ;
 Nothing went ever out, although
 Something did ever enter.

He had as much imagination
 As a pint-pot ;—he never could
 Fancy another situation,
 From which to dart his contemplation,
 Than that wherein he stood.

Yet his was individual mind,
 And new created all he saw
 In a new manner, and refined
 Those new creations, and combined
 Them, by a master-spirit's law.

Thus—though unimaginative—
 An apprehension clear, intense,
 Of his mind's work, had made alive
 The things it wrought on ; I believe
 Wakening a sort of thought in sense.

But from the first 'twas Peter's drift
 To be a kind of moral eunuch,
 He touched the hem of nature's shift,
 Felt faint—and never dared uplift
 The closest, all-concealing tunic.

She laughed the while, with an arch smile,
 And kissed him with a sister's kiss,
 And said—“ My best Diogenes,
 I love you well—but, if you please,
 Tempt not again my deepest bliss.

“ Tis you are cold—for I, not coy,
 Yield love for love, frank, warm and true ;
 And Burns, a Scottish peasant boy—
 His errors prove it—knew my joy
 More, learned friend, than you.

*“Bocca baciata non perde ventura
Anzi rinnova come fa la luna :—*

So thought Boccaccio, whose sweet words might cure :
Male prude, like you, from what you now endure, a
Low-tide in soul, like a stagnant laguna.”

Then Peter rubbed his eyes severe,
And smoothed his spacious forehead down,
With his broad palm ;—twixt love and fear,
He looked, as he no doubt felt, queer,
And in his dream sato down.

The Devil was no uncommon creature ;
A leaden-witted thief—just huddled
Out of the dross and scum of nature ;
A toad-like lump of limb and feature,
With mind, and heart, and fancy muddled.

He was that heavy, dull, cold thing,
The spirit of evil well may be :
A drone too base to have a sting ;
Who gluts, and grimes his lazy wing,
And calls lust, luxury.

Now he was quite the kind of wight
Round whom collect, at a fixed æra,
Venison, turtle, hock, and claret, --
Good cheer—and those who come to share it—
And best East Indian madeira !

It was his fancy to invite
Men of science, wit, and learning,
Who came to lend each other light :
He proudly thought that his gold's might
Had set those spirits burning.

And men of learning, science, wit,
Considered him as you and I
Think of some rotten tree, and sit
Lounging and dining under it,
Exposed to the wide sky.

And all the while, with loose fat smile,
The willing wretch sat winking there,
Believing 'twas his power that made
That jovial scene—and that all paid
Homage to his unnoticed chair.

Though to be sure this place was Hell ;
 He was the Devil—and all they—
 What though the claret circled well,
 And wit, like ocean, rose and fell ?—
 Were damned eternally.

PART THE FIFTH.

GRACE.

AMONG the guests who often staid
 Till the Devil's petits-soupers,
 A man there came, fair as a maid,
 And Peter noted what he said,
 Standing behind his master's chair.

He was a mighty poet—and
 A subtle-souled psychologist ;
 All things he seemed to understand,
 Of old or new—of sea or land—
 But his own mind—which was a mist.

This was a man who might have turned
 Hell into Heaven—and so in gladness
 A Heaven unto himself have earned :
 But he in shadows undiscerned
 Trusted,—and damned himself to madness.

He spoke of poetry, and how “Divine it was—a light—a love—
 A spirit which like wind doth blow
 As it listeth, to and fro ;
 A dew rained down from God above.

“A power which comes and goes like dream,
 And which none can ever trace—
 Heaven’s light on earth—Truth’s brightest beam.’
 And when he ceased there lay the gleam
 Of those words upon his face.

Now Peter, when he heard such talk,
 Would, heedless of a broken pate,
 Stand like a man asleep, or baulk
 Some wishing guest of knife or fork,
 Or drop and break his master’s plate.

At night he oft would start and wake
 Like a lover, and began
 In a wild measure songs to make
 On moor, and glen, and rocky lake,
 And on the heart of man.

And on the universal sky—
 And the wide earth's bosom green,—
 And the sweet, strange mystery
 Of what beyond these things may lie,
 And yet remain unseen.

For in his thought he visited
 The spots in which, ere dead and damned,
 He his wayward life had led ;
 Yet knew not whence the thoughts were fed,
 Which thus his fancy crammed.

And these obscure remembrances
 Stirred such harmony in Peter,
 That whensoever he should please,
 He could speak of rocks and trees
 In poetic metre.

For though it was without a sense
 Of memory, yet he remembered well
 Many a ditch and quick-set fence ;
 Of lakes he had intelligence,
 He knew something of heath, and fell.

He had also dim recollections
 Of pedlars tramping on their rounds ;
 Milk-pans and pails ; and odd collections
 Of saws, and proverbs ; and reflections
 Old parsons make in burying-grounds.

But Peter's verse was clear, and came
 Announcing from the frozen hearth
 Of a cold age, that none might tame
 The soul of that diviner flame
 It augured to the Earth.

Like gentle rains, on the dry plains,
 Making that green which late was grey,
 Or like the sudden moon, that stains
 Some gloomy chamber's window panes
 With a broad light like day.

For language was in Peter's hand,
 Like clay, while he was yet a potter ;
 And he made songs for all the land,
 Sweet both to feel and understand,
 As pipkins late to mountain Cotter.

And Mr. ——, the bookseller,
 Gave twenty pounds for some ;—then scorning
 A footman's yellow coat to wear,
 Peter, too proud of heart, I fear,
 Instantly gave the Devil warning.

Whereat the Devil took offence,
 And swore in his soul a great oath then,
 " That for his damned impertinence,
 He'd bring him to a proper sense
 Of what was due to gentlemen !"—

---

PART THE SIXTH.

DAMNATION.

" O THAT mine enemy had written
 A book !"—cried Job :— a fearful curse ;
 If to the Arab, as the Briton,
 'Twas galling to be critic-bitten : —
 The Devil to Peter wished no worse.

When Peter's next new book found vent,
 The Devil to all the first Reviews
 A copy of it slyly sent,
 With five-pound note as compliment,
 And this short notice—" Pray abuse."

Then seriatim, month and quarter,
 Appeared such mad tirades.—One said—
 " Peter seduced Mrs. Foy's daughter,
 Then drowned the mother in Ullswater,
 The last thing as he went to bed."

Another—" Let him shave his head !
 Where's Dr. Willis !—Or is he joking ?
 What does the rascal mean or hope,
 No longer imitating Pope,
 In that barbarian Shakspeare poking ?"

One more, “ Is incest not enough ?
 And must there be adultery too ?
 Grace after meat ? Miscreant and Liar !
 Thief ! Blackguard ! Scoundrel ! Fool ! Hell fire
 Is twenty times too good for you.

“ By that last book of yours we think
 You've double damned yourself to scorn ;
 We warned you whilst yet on the brink
 You stood. From your black name will shrink
 The babe that is unborn.”

All these Reviews the Devil made
 Up in a parcel, which he had
 Safely to Peter's house conveyed.
 For carriage, ten-pence Peter paid—
 Untied them—read them—went half mad.

“ What ! ” cried he, “ this is my reward
 For nights of thought, and days of toil ?
 Do poets, but to be abhorred
 By men of whom they never heard,
 Consume their spirits' oil ?

“ What have I done to them ?— and who
 Is Mrs. Foy ? ’Tis very cruel
 To speak of me and Emma so !
 Adultery ! God defend me ! Oh !
 I've half a mind to fight a duel.

“ Or,” cried he, a grave look collecting,
 “ Is it my genius, like the moon,
 Sets those who stand her face inspecting,
 That face within their brain reflecting,
 Like a crazed bell-chime, out of tune ? ”

For Peter did not know the town,
 But thought, as country readers do,
 For half a guinea or a crown,
 He bought oblivion or renown
 From God's own voice* in a review.

All Peter did on this occasion
 Was, writing some sad stuff in prose.
 It is a dangerous invasion
 When poets criticise ; their station
 Is to delight, not pose.

* Vox populi vox Dei. As Mr. Godwin truly observes of a more famous saying, of some merit as a popular maxim, but totally destitute of philosophical accuracy.

The Devil then sent to Leipsic fair,
 For Born's translation of Kant's book ;
 A world of words, tail foremost, where
 Right—wrong—false—true—and foul—and fair,
 As in a lottery-wheel are shook.

Five thousand crammed octavo pages
 Of German psychologies,—he
 Who his furor verborum assuages
 Thereon, deserves just seven months' wages
 More than will e'er be due to me.

I looked on them nine several days,
 And then I saw that they were bad ;
 A friend, too, spoke in their dispraise, --
 He never read them ;— with amaze
 I found Sir William Drummond had.

When the book came, the Devil sent
 It to P. Verbovale,* Esquire,
 With a brief note of compliment,
 By that night's Carlisle mail. It went,
 And set his soul on fire.

Fire, which ex luce prahens fumum,
 Made him beyond the bottom see
 Of truth's clear well—when I and you, Ma'am,
 Go, as we shall do, subter humum,
 We may know more than he.

Now Peter ran to seed in soul
 Into a walking paradox ;
 For he was neither part nor whole,
 Nor good, nor bad—nor knave nor fool,
 —Among the woods and rocks.

Furious he rode, where late he ran,
 Lashing and spurring his tame hobby ;
 Turned to a formal puritan,
 A solemn and unsexual man,—
 He half believed White Obi.

* Quasi, Qui raleat verba :—i. e. all the words which have been, are, or may be exploded by, for, against, with, or on him. A sufficient proof of the utility of this history. Peter's progenitor who elected this name seems to have possessed a pure anticipated cognition of the nature and modesty of this ornament of his posterity.

This steed in vision he would ride,
 High trotting over nine-inch bridges,
 With Flibbertigibbet, imp of pride,
 Mocking and mowing by his side—
 A mad-brained goblin for a guide—
 Over corn-fields, gates, and hedges.

After these ghastly rides, he came Home to his heart, and found from thence
 Much stolen of its accustomed flame;
 His thoughts grew weak, drowsy, and lame
 Of their intelligence.

To Peter's view, all seemed one hue ;
 He was no whig, he was no tory ;
 No Deist and no Christian he ;—
 He got so subtle, that to be
 Nothing, was all his glory.

One single point in his belief
 From his organisation sprung,
 The heart-enrooted faith, the chief
 Ear in his doctrines' blighted sheaf,
 That "happiness is wrong ;"

So thought Calvin and Dominic ;
 So think their fierce successors, who
 Even now would neither stint nor stick
 Our flesh from off our bones to pick,
 If they might "do their do."

His morals thus were undermined :—
 The old Peter—the hard, old Potter
 Was born anew within his mind ;
 He grew dull, harsh, sly, unrefined,
 As when he tramped beside the Otter.*

In the death hues of agony
 Languently flashing from a fish,
 Now Peter felt amused to see
 Shades like a rainbow's rise and flee,
 Mixed with a certain hungry wish.†

* A famous river in the new Atlantis of the Dynastophyllic Pantocratists.

† See the description of the beautiful colours produced during the

So in his Country's dying face
 He looked—and lovely as she lay,
 Seeking in vain his last embrace,
 Wailing her own abandoned cause,
 With hardened sneer he turned away:

And coolly to his own soul said ;—
 “ Do you not think that we might make
 A poem on her when she’s dead :—
 Or, no—a thought is in my head---
 Her shroud for a new sheet I’ll take.

“ My wife wants one.—Let who will bury
 This mangled corpse ! And I and you,
 My dearest soul, will then make merry,
 As the Prince Regent did with Sherry,—
 Ay—and at last desert me too.”

And so his Soul would not be gay,
 But moaned within him; like a fawn
 Moaning within a cave, it lay
 Wounded and wasting, day by day,
 Till all its life of life was gone.

As troubled skies stain waters clear,
 The storm in Peter’s heart and mind
 Now made his verses dark and queer :
 They were the ghosts of what they were,
 Shaking dim grave-clothes in the wind.

For he now raved enormous folly,
 Of Baptisms, Sunday-schools, and Graves,
 ’Twould make George Colman melancholy,
 To have heard him, like a male Molly,
 Chaunting those stupid staves.

agonising death of a number of trout, in the fourth part of a long poem in blank verse, published within a few years. That poem contains curious evidence of the gradual hardening of a strong but circumscribed sensibility, of the perversion of a penetrating but panic-stricken understanding. The author might have derived a lesson which he had probably forgotten from these sweet and sublime verses.

This lesson, Shepherd, let us two divide,
 Taught both by what she<sup>1</sup> shows and what conceals,
 Never to blend our pleasure or our pride
 With sorrow of the meanest thing that feels.

Yet the Reviews, who heaped abuse
 On Peter while he wrote for freedom,
 So soon as in his song they spy
 The folly which soothes tyranny,
 Praise him, for those who feed 'em.

" He was a man, too great to scan ;—
 A planet lost in truth's keen rays :—
 His virtue, awful and prodigious ;—
 He was the most sublime, religious,
 Pure-minded Poet of these days."

As soon as he read that, cried Peter,
 " Eureka! I have found the way
 To make a better thing of metre
 Than e'er was made by living creature
 Up to this blessed day."

Then Peter wrote odes to the Devil ;—
 In one of which he mockingly said :
 " May Carnage and Slaughter,
 Thy niece and thy daughter,
 May Rapine and Famine,
 Thy gorge ever cramming,
 Glut thee with living and dead !

" May death and damnation,
 And consternation,
 Flit up from hell with pure intent !
 Slash them at Manchester,
 Glasgow, Leeds, and Chester ;
 Drench all with blood from Avon to Trent.

" Let thy body-guard yeomen
 Hew down babes and women,
 And laugh with bold triumph till Heaven be rent,
 When Moloch in Jewry,
 Munched children with fury,
 It was thou, Devil, dining with pure intent." *

* It is curious to observe how often extremes meet. Cobbett and Peter use the same language for a different purpose : Peter is indeed a sort of metrical Cobbett. Cobbett is, however, more mischievous than Peter, because he pollutes a holy and now unconquerable cause with the principles of legitimate murder ; whilst the other only makes a bad one ridiculous and odious.

If either Peter or Cob · tt should see this note, each will feel more indignation at being compared to the other than at any censure implied in the moral perversion laid to their charge.

PART THE SEVENTH.

DOUBLE DAMNATION.

THE Devil now knew his proper cue.—

Soon as he read the ode, he drove
To his friend Lord Mac Murderhouse's,
A man of interest in both houses,
And said :—“For money or for love,

“ Pray find some cure or sinecure;
To feed from the superfluous taxes,
A friend of ours—a poet—fewer
Have fluttered tamer to the lure Than he.” His lordship stands and racks his

Stupid brains, while one might count
As many beads as he had boroughs.—
At length replies; from his mean front,
Like one who rubs out an account,
Smoothing away the unmeaning furrows:

“ It happens fortunately, dear Sir,
I can. I hope I need require
No pledge from you, that he will stir
In our affairs;—like Oliver,
That he'll be worthy of his hire.”

These words exchanged, the news sent off
To Peter, home the Devil hied,—
Took to his bed; he had no cough,
No doctor,—meat and drink enough,—
Yet that same night he died.

The Devil's corpse was leaded down;
His decent heirs enjoyed his pelf,
Mourning-coaches, many a one,
Followed his hearse along the town:—
Where was the Devil himself?

When Peter heard of his promotion,
His eyes grew like two stars for bliss:
There was a bow of sleek devotion,
Engendering in his back; each motion
Seemed a Lord's shoe to kiss.

He hired a house, bought plate, and made
 A genteel drive up to his door,
 With sifted gravel neatly laid,—
 As if defying all who said,
 Peter was ever poor.

But a disease soon struck into
 The very life and soul of Peter—
 He walked about—slept—had the hue
 Of health upon his cheeks—and few
 Dug better—none a heartier eater.

And yet a strange and horrid curse
 Clung upon Peter, night and day,
 Month after month the thing grew worse,
 And deadlier than in this my verse,
 I can find strength to say.

Peter was dull—he was at first
 Dull—O, so dull—so very dull!
 Whether he talked, wrote, or rehearsed—
 Still with this dulness was he cursed—
 Dull—beyond all conception—dull.

No one could read his books—no mortal,
 But a few natural friends, would hear him;
 The parson came not near his portal;
 His state was like that of the immortal
 Described by Swift—no man could bear him.

His sister, wife, and children yawned,
 With a long, slow, and drear ennui,
 All human patience far beyond;
 Their hopes of Heaven each would have pawned,
 Anywhere else to be.

But in his verse, and in his prose,
 The essence of his dulness was Concentred and compressed so close,
 'Twould have made Guatimozin doze
 On his red gridiron of brass.

A printer's boy, folding those pages,
 Fell slumbrously upon one side;
 Like those famed seven who slept three ages,
 To wakeful frenzy's vigil rages,
 As opiates, were the same applied.

Even the Reviewers who were hired
 To do the work of his reviewing,
 With adamantine nerves, grew tired ;—
 Gaping and torpid they retired,
 To dream of what they should be doing.

And worse and worse, the drowsy curse
 Yawned in him till it grew a pest—
 A wide contagious atmosphere,
 Creeping like cold through all things near;
 A power to infect and to infest.

His servant-maids and dogs grew dull ;
 His kitten, late a sportive elf ;
 The woods and lakes, so beautiful,
 Of dim stupidity were full,
 All grew dull as Peter's self.

The earth under his feet—the springs,
 Which lived within it a quick life,
 The air, the winds of many wings,
 That fan it with new murmurings,
 Were dead to their harmonious strife.

The birds and beasts within the wood,
 The insects, and each creeping thing,
 Were now a silent multitude ;
 Love's work was left unwrought—no brood
 Near Peter's house took wing.

And every neighbouring cottager
 Stupidly yawned upon the other :
 No jack-ass brayed ; no little cur
 Cocked up his ears ;—no man would stir
 To save a dying mother.

Yet all from that charmed district went
 But some half-idiot and half-knave,
 Who rather than pay any rent,
 Would live with marvellous content,
 Over his father's grave.

No bailiff dared within that space,
 For fear of the dull charm, to enter ;
 A man would bear upon his face,
 For fifteen months, in any case,
 The yawn of such a venture.

Seven miles above—below—around—
 This pest of dulness holds its sway ;
 A ghastly life without a sound;
 To Peter's soul the spell is bound—
 How should it ever pass away ?

LINES,

WRITTEN DURING THE CASTLEFORTH ADMINISTRATION.

Corpses are cold in the tomb,
 Stones on the pavement are dumb,
 Abortions are dead in the womb,
 And their mothers look pale—like the white shore
 Of Albion, free no more.

Her sons are as stones in the way—
 They are masses of self-eless clay—
 They are trodden and move not away,—
 The abortion, with which she travaileth,
 Is Liberty—smitten to death.

Then trample and dance, thou Oppressor,
 For thy Victim is no redressor,
 Thou art sole lord and possessor
 Of her corpses, and cloths, and abortions—they pave
 Thy path to the grave.

Hearest thou the festival din,
 Of death, and destruction, and sin,
 And wealth, crying Havoc ! within—
 'Tis the Bacchanal triumph, which makes truth dumb,
 Thine Epithalamium.

Ay, marry thy ghastly wife !
 Let fear, and disquiet, and strife
 Spread thy couch in the chamber of life,
 Marry Ruin, thou tyrant ! and God be thy guide
 To the bed of the bride.

SONG

TO THE MEN OF ENGLAND.

MEN of England, wherefore plough
 For the lords who lay ye low?
 Wherefore weave with toil and care,
 The rich robes your tyrants wear?

Wherefore feed, and clothe, and save,
 From the cradle to the grave,
 Those ungrateful drones who would
 Drain your sweat—nay, drink your blood!

Wherefore, Bees of England, forge
 Many a weapon, chain, and scourge,
 That these stingless drones may spoil
 The forced produce of your toil?

Have ye leisure, comfort, calm,
 Shelter, food, love's gentle balm?
 Or what is it ye buy so dear
 With your pain and with your fear?

The seed ye sow another reaps;
 The wealth ye find, another keeps;
 The robes ye weave, another wears;
 The arms ye forge, another bears.

Sow seed,—but let no tyrant reap;
 Find wealth, —let no impostor heap;
 Weave robes, —let not the idle wear;
 Forge arms,—in your defence to bear.

Shrink to your cellars, holes, and cells:
 In halls ye deck, another dwells.
 Why shake the chains ye wrought? Ye see
 The steel ye tempered glance on ye.

With plough and spade, and hoe and loom,
 Trace your grave, and build your tomb,
 And weave your winding-sheet, till fair
 England be your sepulchre.

ENGLAND IN 1819.

An old, mad, blind, despised, and dying king,—
 Princes, the dregs of their dull race, who flow
 Through public scorn—mud from a muddy spring,—
 Rulers, who neither see, nor feel, nor know,
 But leech-like to their fainting country cling,
 Till they drop, blind in blood, without a blow,—
 A people starved and stabbed in the un-tilled field,—
 An army, which liberticide and prey
 Makes as a two-edged sword to all who wield,
 Golden and sanguine laws which tempt and slay,—
 Religion Christless, Godless—a book sealed;
 A Senate—Time's worst statute unrepealed,—
 Are graves, from which a glorious Phantom may Burst, to illumine our tempestuous day.

SIMILES.

FOR TWO POLITICAL CHARACTERS OF 1819.

As from an ancestral oak
 Two empty ravens sound their clarion,
 Yell by yell, and croak by croak,
 When they scent the noonday smoke
 Of fresh human carrion :—

As two gibbering night-birds flit,
 From their bowers of deadly hue,
 Through the night to frighten it,
 When the morn is in a fit,
 And the stars are none or few :—

As a shark and dog-fish wait
 Under an Atlantic isle,
 For the negro-ship whose freight
 Is the theme of their debate,
 Wrinkling their red gills the while—

Are ye, two vultures sick for battle,
 Two scorpions under one wet stone,
 Two bloodless wolves whose dry throats rattle,
 Two crows perched on the murrained cattle,
 Two vipers tangled into one.

AN ODE.

TO THE ASSERTORS OF LIBERTY.

ARISE, arise, arise !
 There is blood on the earth that denies ye bread ;
     Be your wounds like eyes
     To weep for the dead, the dead, the dead.
 What other grief were it just to pay ?
 Your sons, your wives, your brethren, were they ;
 Who said they were slain on the battle day ?

Awaken, awaken, awaken !
 The slave and the tyrant are twin-born foes ;
     Be the cold chains shaken
     To the dust, where your kindred repose, repose :
 Their bones in the grave will start and move,
 When they hear the voices of those they love,
 Most loud in the holy combat above.

Wave, wave high the banner !
 When Freedom is riding to conquest by .
     Though the slaves that fan her
     Be famine and toil, giving sigh for sigh.
 And ye who attend her imperial ear,
 Lift not your hands in the banded war,
 But in her defence whose children ye are.

Glory, glory, glory,
 To those who have greatly suffered and done !
     Never name in story
     Was greater than that which ye shall have won.
 Conquerors have conquered their foes alone,
 Whose revenge, pride, and power, they have overthrown :
 Ride ye, more victorious, over your own.

Bind, bind every brow
 With crowns of violet, ivy and pine :
     Hide the blood-stains now
     With hues which sweet nature has made divine,
 Green strength, azure hope, and eternity.
 But let not the pensy among them be ;
 Ye were injured, and that means memory.

ODE TO HEAVEN.

CHORUS OF SPIRITS.

FIRST SPIRIT.

PALACE-ROOF of cloudless nights !
 Paradise of golden lights !
 Deep, immeasurable, vast,
 Which art now, and which wert then !
 Of the present and the past,
 Of the eternal where and when,
 Presence-chamber, temple, home,
 Ever canopying dome,
 Of acts and ages yet to come !

Glorious shapes have life in thee,
 Earth, and all earth's company ;
 Living globes which ever throng
 Thy deep chasms and wildernesses ;
 And green worlds that glide along ;
 And swift stars with flashing tresses ;
 And icy moons most cold and bright,
 And mighty suns beyond the night,
 Atoms of intensest light.

Even thy name is as a god,
 Heaven ! for thou art the abode
 Of that power which is the glass
 Wherein man his nature sees.
 Generations as they pass
 Worship thee with bended knees.
 Their unremaining gods and they
 Like a river roll away ;
 Thou remainest such alway.

SECOND SPIRIT.

Thou art but the mind's first chamber,
 Round which its young fancies clamber,
 Like weak insects in a cave,
 Lighted up by stalactites ;
 But the portal of the grave,
 Where a world of new delights
 Will make thy best glories seem
 But a dim and noonday gleam
 From the shadow of a dream !

THIRD STANZA.

Peace ! the abyss is wreathed with scorn
 At your presumption, atom-born !
 What is heaven ? and what are ye
 Who its brief expanse inherit ?
 What are suns and spheres which flee
 With the instinct of that spirit
 Of which ye are but a part ?
 Drops which Nature's mighty heart
 Drives through thinnest veins. Depart !

What is heaven ? a globe of dew,
 Filling in the morning new
 Some eyed flower, whose young leaves waken
 On an unimagined world :
 Constellated suns unshaken,
 Orbits measureless, are furled
 In that frail and fading sphere,
 With ten millions gathered there,
 To tremble, gleam, and disappear.

ODE TO THE WEST WIND.*

I.

O WILD West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being,
 Thou, from whose unseen presence the leaves dead
 Are driven, like ghosts from an enchanter fleeing,

Yellow, and black, and pale, and hectic red,
 Pestilence-stricken multitudes : O thou,
 Who chariotest to their dark wintry bed

The winged seeds, where they lie cold and low,
 Each like a corpse within its grave, until
 Thine azure sister of the spring shall blow

Her clarion o'er the dreaving earth, and fill
 (Driving sweet buds like flocks to feed in air)
 With living hues and odours plain and hill :

* This poem was conceived and chiefly written in a wood that skirts the Arno, near Florence, and on a day when that tempestuous wind, whose temperature is at once mild and animating, was collecting the vapours which pour down the autumnal rains. They began, as I foresaw, at sunset, with a violent tempest of hail and rain, attended by that magnificent thunder and lightning peculiar to the Cisalpine regions.

The phenomena alluded to at the conclusion of the third stanza is well known to naturalists. The vegetation at the bottom of the sea, of rivers, and of lakes, sympathises with that of the land in the change of seasons, and is consequently influenced by the winds which announce it.

Wild Spirit, which art moving everywhere ;
Destroyer and preserver ; hear, oh hear !

II.

Thou on whose stream, 'mid the steep sky's commotion,
Loose clouds like earth's decaying leaves are shed,
Shook from the tangled boughs of Heaven and Ocean,

Angels of rain and lightning : there are spread
On the blue surface of thine airy surge,
 Like the bright hair uplifted from the head

Of some fiercee Mænad, even from the dim verge
Of the horizon to the zenith's height,
The locks of the approaching storm. Thou dirge

Of the dying year, to which this closing night
Will be the doom of a vast sepulchre,
Vaulted with all thy congregated might

Of vapours, from whose solid atmosphere
Black rain, and fire, and hail, will burst : Oh hear !

III.

Thou who didst waken from his summer dreams
The blue Mediterranean, where he lay
Lulled by the coil of his crystalline streams,

 Beside a pumice isle in Baie's bay,
And saw in sleep old palaces and towers
 Quivering within the wave's intenser day,

All overgrown with azure moss and flowers
So sweet, the sense faints picturing them ! Thou
For whose path the Atlantic's level powers

Cleave themselves into chasms, while far below
The sea-blooms and the oozy woods which wear
The sapless foliage of the ocean, know

Thy voice, and suddenly grow grey with fear,
And tremble and despoil themselves : Oh hear !

IV.

If I were a dead leaf thou mightest bear ;
If I were a swift cloud to fly with thee ;
A wave to pant beneath thy power, and share

The impulse of thy strength, only less free
Than thou, O uncontrollable ! If even
I were as in my boyhood, and could be

The comrade of thy wanderings over heaven,
As then, when to outstrip the skiey speed
Scarce seemed a vision, I would ne'er have striven

As thus with thee in prayer in my sore need.
Oh ! lift me as a wave, a leaf, a cloud !
I fall upon the thorns of life ! I bleed !

A heavy weight of hours has chained and bowed
One too like thee : tameless, and swift, and proud.

v.

Make me thy lyre, even as the forest is :
What if my leaves are falling like its own !
The tumult of thy mighty harmonies

Will take from both a deep autumnal tone,
Sweet though in sadness. Be thou, spirit fierce
My spirit ! Be thou me, impetuous one !

Drive my dead thoughts over the universe
Like withered leaves to quicken a new birth ;
And, by the incantation of this verse,

Scatter, as from an unextinguished hearth
Ashes and sparks, my words among mankind !
Be through my lips to unawakened earth

The trumpet of a prophecy ! O wind,
If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind ?

AN EXHORTATION.

CAMELEONS feed on light and air :
Poets' food is love and fame :
If in this wide world of care
Poets could but find the same
With as little toil as they,
Would they ever change their hue
As the light cameleons do,
Suiting it to every ray
Twenty times a-day ?

Poets are on this cold earth,
As cameleons might be,
Hidden from their early birth
In a cavo beneath the sea ;

Where light is, cameleons change !
 Where love is not, poets do :
 Fame is love disguised : if few
 Find either, never think it strange
 That poets range.

Yet dare not stain with wealth or power
 A poet's free and heavenly mind :
 If bright cameleons should devour
 Any food but beams and wind,
 They would grow as earthly soon
 As their brother lizards are.
 Children of a sunnier star,
 Spirits from beyond the moon,
 Oh, refuse the boon !

ON

THE MEDUSA OF LEONARDO DA VINCI, IN THE FLORENTINE GALLERY.

It lieth, gazing on the midnight sky,
 Upon the cloudy mountain peak supine ;
 Below, far lands are seen tremblingly ;
 Its horror and its beauty are divine.
 Upon its lips and eyelids seems to lie
 Loveliness like a shadow, from which shine,
 Fiery and lurid, struggling underneath,
 The agonies of anguish and of death.

Yet it is less the horror than the grace
 Which turns the gazer's spirit into stone
 Whereon the lineaments of that dead face
 Are graven, till the characters be grown
 Into itself, and thought no more can trace ;
 'Tis the melodious hues of beauty thrown
 Athwart the darkness and the glare of pain,
 Which humanised and harmonise the strain.

And from its head as from one body grow,
 As [ ] grows out of a watery rock,
 Hairs which are vipers, and they curl and flow,
 And their long tangles in each other lock,
 And with unending involutions show
 Their mailed ruffiance, as it were to mock
 The torture and the death within, and saw
 The solid air with many a ragged jaw.

And from a stone beside, a poisonous eft
 Peeps idly into these Gorgouian eyes ;
 Whilst in the air a ghastly bat, bereft
 Of sense, has flitted with a mad surprise
 Out of the cave this hideous light hath cleft,
 And he comes hastening like a moth that hies
 After a taper ; and the midnight sky
 Flares, a light more dread than obscurity.

'Tis the tempestuous loveliness of terror ;
 For from the serpents gleams a brazen glarō
 Kindled by that inextricable error,
 Which makes a thrilling vapour of the air
 Become a [ ] and ever-shifting mirror
 Of all the beauty and the terror there—
 A woman's countenance, with serpent locks,
 Gazing in death on heaven from those wet rocks.

FLORENCE, 1819.

TO WILLIAM SHELLEY.

(With what truth I may say--
 Roma ! Roma ! Roma !
 Non è più come era prima !)

My lost William, thou in whom
 Some bright spirit lived, and did
 That decaying robe consume
 Which its lustre faintly hid,
 Here its ashes find a tomb,
 But beneath this pyramid
 Thou art not—if a thing divine
 Like thee can die, thy funeral shrine
 Is thy mother's grief and mine.

Where art thou, my gentle child ?
 Let me think thy spirit feeds,
 With its life intense and mild,
 The leye of living leaves and weeds,
 Among these tombs and ruins wild ;—
 Let me think that through low seeds
 Of the sweet flowers and sunny grass,
 Into their hues and scents may pass,
 A portion —————

POEMS WRITTEN IN 1820.

THE SENSITIVE PLANT.

PART I.

A SENSITIVE Plant in a garden grew,
And the young winds fed it with silver dew,
And it opened its fan-like leaves to the light,
And closed them beneath the kisses of night.

And the spring arose on the garden fair,
And the Spirit of Love fell everywhere ;
And each flower and herb on Earth's dark breast
Rose from the dreams of its wintry rest.

But none ever trembled and panted with bliss
In the garden, the field, or the wilderness,
Like a doe in the noon-tide with love's sweet want,
As the companionless Sensitive Plant.

The snowdrop, and then the violet,
Arose from the ground with warm rain wet,
And their breath was mixed with fresh odour, sent
From the turf, like the voice and the instrument.

Then the pied wind-flowers and the tulip tall,
And narcissi, the fairest among them all,
Who gaze on their eyes in the stream's recess,
Till they die of their own dear loveliness.

And the Naiad-like lily of the vale,
Whom youth makes so fair and passion so pale,
That the light of its tremulous bells is seen
Through their pavilions of tender green ;

And the hyacinth purple, and white, and blue,
Which flung from its bells a sweet peal anew
Of music so delicate, soft, and intense,
It was felt like an odour within the sense ;

And the rose like a nymph to the bath addrest,
Which unveiled the depth of her glowing breast,
Till, fold after fold, to the fainting air
The soul of her beauty and love lay bare ;

And the wand-like lily, which lifted up,
As a Mænad, its moonlight-coloured cup,
Till the fiery star, which is its eye,
Gazed through the clear dew on the tender sky ;

And the jessamine faint, and the sweet tuberose,
The sweetest flower for scent that blows ;
And all rare blossoms from every clime
Grew in that garden in perfect prime.

And on the stream whose inconstant bosom
Was prankt, under boughs of embowering blossom,
With golden and green light, slanting through
Their heaven of many a tangled hue,

Broad water-lilies lay tremulously,
And starry river-buds glimmered by,
And around them the soft stream did glide and dance
With a motion of sweet sound and radiance.

And the sinuous paths of lawn and of moss,
Which led through the garden a long and across,
Some open at once to the sun and the breeze,
Some lost among bowers of blossoming trees,

Were all paved with daisies and delicate bells,
As fair as the fabulous asphodels,
And flowerets which drooping as day drooped too,
Fell into pavilions, white, purple, and blue,
To roof the glow-worm from the evening dew.

And from this undefiled Paradise
The flowers (as an infant's awakening eyes
Smile on its mother, whose singing sweet
Can first lull, and at last must awaken it),

When Heaven's blithe winds had unfolded them,
As mine-lamps enkindle a hidden gem,
Shone smiling to heaven, and every one
Shared joy in the light of the gentle sun ;

For each one was interpenetrated
With the light and the odour its neighbour shed,
Like young lovers whom youth and love make dear,
Wrapped and filled by their mutual atmosphere.

But the Sensitive Plant, which could give small fruit
 Of the love which it felt from the leaf to the root,
 Received more than all, it loved more than ever,
 Where none wanted but it, could belong to the giver—

For the Sensitive Plant has no bright flower ;
 Radiance and odour are not its dower ;
 It loves, even like Love, its deep heart is full,
 It desires what it has not, the beautiful !

The light winds, which from unsustaining wings
 Shed the music of many murmurings ;
 The beams which dart from many a star
 Of the flowers whose hues they bear afar ;

The plumed insects swift and free,
 Like golden boats on a sunny sea,
 Laden with light and odour, which pass
 Over the gleam of the living grass ;

The unseen clouds of the dew, which lie
 Like fire in the flowers till the sun rides high,
 Then wander like spirits among the spheres,
 Each cloud faint with the fragrance it bears ;

The quivering vapours of dim noon tide,
 Which, like a sea, o'er the warm earth glide,
 In which every sound, and odour, and beam,
 Move, as reeds in a single stream ;

Each and all like ministering angels were
 For the Sensitive Plant sweet joy to bear,
 Whilst the lagging hours of the day went by
 Like windless clouds o'er a tender sky.

And when evening descended from heaven above,
 And the earth was all rest, and the air was all love,
 And delight, though less bright, was far more deep,
 And the day's veil fell from the world of sleep,

And the beasts, and the birds, and the insects were drown'd
 In an ocean of dreams without a sound ;
 Whose waves never mark, though they ever impress
 The light sand which paves it, consciousness ;

(Only overhead the sweet nightingale
 Ever sang more sweet as the day might fail,
 And snatches of its Elysian chant
 Were mixed with the dreams of the Sensitive Plant.)

The Sensitive Plant was the earliest
Up-gathered into the bosom of rest;
A sweet child weary of its delight,
The feeblest and yet the favourite,
Cradled within the embrace of night.

PART II.

THERE was a power in this sweet place,
An Eve in this Eden ; a ruling grace
Which to the flowers, did they waken or dream,
Was as God is to the starry scheme.

A Lady, the wonder of her kind,
Whose form was upborne by a lovely mind,
Which, dilating, had moulded her mien and motion
Like a sea-flower unfolded beneath the ocean,

Tended the garden from morn to even :
And the meteors of that sublunar heaven,
Like the lamps of the air when night walks forth,
Laughed round her footsteps up from the Earth !

She had no companion of mortal race,
But her tremulous breath and her flushing face
Told whilst the morn kissed the sleep from her eyes,
That her dreams were less slumber than Paradise :

As if some bright Spirit for her sweet sake
Had deserted heaven while the stars were awake,
As if yet around her he lingering were,
Though the veil of daylight concealed him from her.

Her step seemed to pity the grass it prest :
You might hear, by the heaving of her breast,
That the coming and the going of the wind
Brought pleasure there and left passion behind.

And wherever her airy footstep trod,
Her trailing hair from the grassy sod
Eras'd its light vestige, with shadowy sweep,
Like a sunny storm o'er the dark green deep.

I doubt not the flowers of that garden sweet
Rejoiced in the sound of her gentle feet :
I doubt not they felt the spirit that came
From her glowing fingers through all their frame.

She sprinkled bright water from the stream
 On those that were faint with the sunny beam ;
 And out of the cups of the heavy flowers
 She emptied the rain of the thunder showers.

She lifted their heads with her tender hands,
 And sustained them with rods and osier bands ;
 If the flowers had been her own infants, she Could never have nursed them more tenderly.

And all killing insects and gnawing worms,
 And things of obscene and unlovely forms,
 She bore in a basket of Indian woof,
 Into the rough woods far aloof,

In a basket, of grasses and wild flowers full,
 The freshest her gentle hands could pull
 For the poor banished insects, whose intent,
 Although they did ill, was innocent.

But the bee and the beamlike ephemeris,
 Whose path is the lightning's, and soft moths that kiss
 The sweet lips of the flowers, and harm not, did she
 Make her attendant angels be.

And many an autenatal tomb,
 Where butterflies dream of the life to come,
 She left clinging round the smooth and dark
 Edge of the odorous cedar bark.

This fairest creature from earliest spring
 Thus moved through the garden ministering
 All the sweet season of summer tide,
 And ere the first leaf looked brown—she died !

PART III.

THREE days the flowers of the garden fair,
 Like stars when the moon is awakened, were,
 Or the waves of the Baie, ere luminous
 She floats up through the smoke of Vesuvius.

And on the fourth, the Sensitive Plant
 Felt the sound of the funeral chant,
 And the steps of the bearers, heavy and slow,
 And the sobs of the mourners, deep and low ;

The weary sound and the heavy breath,
And the silent motions of passing death,
And the smell, cold, oppressive, and dank,
Sent through the pores of the coffin plank;

The dark grass, and the flowers among the grass,
Were bright with tears as the crowd did pass;
From their sighs the wind caught a mournful tone,
And sate in the pines and gave groan for groan.

The garden, once fair, became cold and foul,
Like the corpse of her who had been its soul:
Which at first was lovely as if in sleep,
Then slowly changed, till it grew a heap
To make men tremble who never weep.

Swift summer into the autumn flowed,
And frost in the mist of the morning rode,
Though the noon-day sun looked clear and bright,
Mocking the spoil of the secret night.

The rose-leaves, like flakes of crimson snow,
Paved the turf and the moss below.
The lilies were drooping, and white, and wan,
Like the head and the skin of a dying man,

And Indian plants, of scent and hue
The sweetest that ever were fed on dew,
Leaf after leaf, day by day,
Were massed into the common clay.

And the leaves, brown, yellow, and grey, and red,
And white with the whiteness of what is dead,
Like troops of ghosts on the dry wind past;
Their whistling noise made the birds aghast.

And the gusty winds waked the winged seeds
Out of their birth-place of ugly weeds,
Till they clung round many a sweet flower's stem,
Which rotted into the earth with them.

The water-blooms under the rivulet
Fell from the stalks on which they were set;
And the eddies drove them here and there,
As the winds did those of the upper air.

Then the rain came down, and the broken stalks
Were bent and tangled across the walks;
And the leafless net-work of parasite bowers
Massed into ruin, and all sweet flowers.

Between the time of the wind and the snow,
All loathliest weeds began to grow,
Whose coarse leaves were splashed with many a speck,
Like the water-snake's belly and the toad's back.

And thistles, and nettles, and darnels rank,
And the dock, and henbane, and hemlock dank,
Stretch'd out its long and hollow shank,
And stifled the air till the dead wind stank.

And plants, at whose names the verse feels loath,
Filled the place with a monstrous undergrowth,
Prickly, and pulpous, and blistering, and blue,
Livid, and starred with a lurid dew.

And agarics and fungi, with mildew and mould,
Started like mist from the wet ground cold ;
Pale, fleshy, as if the decaying dead
With a spirit of growth had been animated !

Spawn, weeds, and filth, a lemons scum,
Made the running rivulet thick and dumb,
And at its outlet, flags huge as stakes
Dammed it up with roots knotted like water-snakes.

And hour by hour, when the air was still,
The vapours arose which have strength to kill :
At morn they were seen, at noon they were felt,
At night they were darkness no star could melt.

And unctuous meteors from spray to spray
Crept and flitted in broad noon-day
Unseen ; every branch on which they alit
By a venomous blight was burned and bit.

The Sensitive Plant, like one forbid,
Wept, and the tears within each lid
Of its folded leaves which together grew,
Were changed to a blight of frozen glue.

For the leaves soon fell, and the branches soon
By the heavy axe of the blast were hewn ;
The sap shrunk to the root through every pore,
As blood to a heart that will beat no more.

For Winter came : the wind was his whip ;
One choppy finger was on his lip :
He had torn the cataracts from the hills,
And they clanked at his girdle like manacles ;

His breath was a chain which without a sound
 The earth, and the air, and the water bound ;
 He came, fiercely driven in his chariot-throne
 By the tenfold blasts of the arctic zone.

Then the weeds which were forms of living death,
 Fleed from the frost to the earth beneath :
 Their decay and sudden flight from frost
 Was but like the vanishing of a ghost !

And under the roots of the Sensitive Plant
 The moles and the dormice died for want :
 The birds dropped stiff from the frozen air,
 And were caught in the branches naked and bare.

First there came down a thawing rain,
 And its dull drops froze on the boughs again,
 Then there steamed up a freezing dew
 Which to the drops of the thaw-rain grew ;

And a northern whirlwind, wandering about
 Like a wolf that had smelt a dead child out,
 Shook the boughs thus laden, and heavy and stiff,
 And snapped them off with his rigid griff.

When winter had gone and spring came back,
 The Sensitive Plant was a leafless wreck ;
 But the mandrakes, and toadstools, and docks, and darnels,
 Rose like the dead from their ruined charnels.

CONCLUSION.

WHETHER the Sensitive Plant, or that
 Which within its boughs like a spirit sat,
 Ere its outward form had known decay,
 Now felt this change, I cannot say.

Whether that lady's gentle mind,
 No longer with the form combined
 Which scattered love, as stars do light,
 Found sadness, where it left delight,

I dare not guess ; but in this life
 Of error, ignorance and strife,
 Where n<sup>t</sup>hing is, but all things seem,
 And we the shadows of the dream,

It is a modest creed, and yet
Pleasant, if one considers it,
To own that death itself must be,
Like all the rest, a mockery.

That garden sweet, that lady fair,
And all sweet shapes and odours there,
In truth have never passed away :
"Tis we, 'tis ours, are changed ! not they.

For love, and beauty, and delight,
There is no death nor change ; their might
Exceeds our organs, which endure
No light, being themselves obscure.

A VISION OF THE SEA.

"Tis the terror of tempest. The rags of the sail
Are flickering in ribbons within the fierce gale :
From the stark night of vapours the dim rain is driven,
And when lightning is loosed like a deluge from heaven,
She sees the black trunks of the water-spouts spin,
And bend, as if heaven was ruining in,
Which they seemed to sustain with their terrible mass
As if ocean had sunk from beneath them : they pass
To their graves in the deep with an earthquake of sound.
And the waves and the thunders, male silent around,
Leave the wind to its echo. The vessel, now tossed
Through the low trailing rack of the tempest, is lost
In the skirts of the thunder cloud : now down the sweep
Of the wind-cloven wave to the chasm of the deep
It sinks, and the walls of the watery vale
Whose depths of dread calm are unmoved by the gale.
Dim mirrors of ruin, hang gleaming about ;
While the surf, like a chaos of stars, like a rout
Of death flames, like whirlpools of fire flowing iron,
With splendour and terror the black ship environ ;
Or like sulphur-flakes hurled from a mine of pale fire,
In fountains spout o'er it. In many a spire
The pyramid-billows, with white points of brine,
In the cope of the lightning inconstantly shine,
As piercing the sky from the floor of the sea.

The great ship seems splitting ! it cracks as a tree,
While an earthquake is splintering its root, ere the blast
Of the whirlwind that stript it of branches has past.

The intense thunder-balls which are raining from heaven
 Have shattered its mast, and it stands black and riven.
 The chinks suck destruction. The heavy dead hulk
 On the living sea rolls an inanimate bulk,
 Like a corpse on the clay which is hung'ring to fold
 Its corruption around it. Meanwhile, from the hold,
 One deck is burst up from the waters below,
 And it splits like the ice when the thaw-breezes blow
 O'er the lakes of the desert! Who sit on the other?
 Is that all the crew that lie burying each other,
 Like the dead in a breach, round the foremast? Are those
 Twin tigers, who burst, when the waters arose,
 In the agony of terror, their chains in the hold
 (What now makes them tame, is what then made them bold)
 Who crouch, side by side, and have driven, like a crank,
 The deep grip of their claws through the vibrating plank?
 Are these all?

Nine weeks the tall vessel had lain
 On the windless expanse of the watery plain,
 Where the death-darting sun cast no shadow at noon,
 And there seemed to be fire in the beams of the moon,
 Till a lead-coloured fog gathered up from the deep,
 Whose breath was quick pestilence; then, the cold sleep
 Crept, like blight through the ears of a thick field of corn,
 O'er the populous vessel. And even and morn,
 With their hammocks for coffins the seamen aghast
 Like dead men the dead limbs of their comrades cast
 Down the deep, which closed on them above and around,
 And the sharks and the dog-fish their grave-clothes unbound,
 And were glutted like Jews with this manna rained down
 From God on their wilderness. One after one
 The mariners died; on the eve of this day,
 When the tempest was gathering in cloudy array,
 But seven remained. Six the thunder had smitten,
 And they lie black as mummies on which Time has written
 His scorn of the embalmer; the seventh, from the deck
 An oak splinter pierced through his breast and his back,
 And hung out to the tempest, a wreck on the wreck.

No more? At the helm sits a woman more fair
 Than heaven, when, unbinding its star-braided hair,
 It sinks with the sun on the earth and the sea.
 She clasps a bright child on her up-gathered knee,
 It laughs at the lightning, it mocks the mixed thunder
 Of the air and the sea, with desire and with wonder
 It is beckoning the tigers to rise and come near,
 It would play with those eyes where the radiance of fear
 Is outshining the meteors; its bosom beats high,
 The heart-fire of pleasure has kindled its eye;
 Whilst its mother's is lustreless. "Smile not, my child,

But sleep deeply and sweetly, and so be beguiled
 Of the pang that awaits us, whatever that be,
 So dreadful since thou must divide it with me !
 Dream, sleep ! This pale bosom, thy cradle and bed,
 Will it rock thee not, infant ? 'Tis beating with dread !
 Alas ! what is life, what is death, what are we,
 That when the ship sinks we no longer may be ?
 What ! to see thee no more, and to feel thee no more ?
 To be after life what we have been before ?
 Not to touch those sweet hands, not to look on those eyes,
 Those lips, and that hair, all that smiling disguise
 Thou yet weardest, sweet spirit, which I, day by day,
 Have so long called my child, but which now fades away
 Like a rainbow, and I the fallen shower !"

Lo ! the ship

Is settling, it topples, the leeward ports dip ;
 The ti... leap up when they feel the slow brine
 Crawling inch by inch on them ; hair, ears, limbs, and eyne,
 Stand rigid with horror ; a loud, long, hoarse ery
 Burst at once from their vitals tremendously,
 And 'tis borne down the mountainous vale of the wave,
 Rebounding, like thunder, from crag to cove,
 Mixed with the clash of the lashing rain,
 Hurried on by the might of the hurricane :
 The hurricane came from the west, and past on
 By the pat... of the gate of the eastern 'm,
 Transversely dividing the stream of the storm ;
 As an arrowy serpent, pursuing the form
 Of an elephant, bursts through the brakes of the waste.
 Black as a cormorant the screaming blast,
 Between ocean and heaven, like an ocean, past,
 Till it came to the clouds on the verge of the world
 Which, based on the sea and to heaven upcurled,
 Like columns and walls did surround and sustain
 The dome of the tempest ; it rent them in twain,
 As a flood rends its barriers of mountainous crag ;
 And the dense clouds in many a roar and rag,
 Like the stones of a temple ere earthquake has past,
 Like the dust of its fall, on the whirlwind are cast ;
 They are scattered like foam on the torrent ; and where
 The wind has burst out through the chasm, from the air
 Of clear morning, the beams of the sunrise flow in,
 Unimpeded, keen, golden, and crystalline,
 Banded armies of light and of air ; at one gate
 They encounter, but interpen... rate.
 And that breach in the tempest is widening away,
 And the caverns of cloud are torn up by the day,
 And the fierce winds are sighing with weary wings,
 Lulled by the motion and murmurings,
 And the long glassy heave of the rocking sea,

And over head glorious, but dreadful to see,
 The wrecks of the tempest, like vapours of gold,
 Are consuming in sunrise. The heaped waves behold,
 The deep calm of blue heaven dilating above,
 And, like passions made still by the presence of Love,
 Beneath the clear surface reflecting it slide
 Tremulous with soft influence; extending its tide
 From the Andes to Atlas, round mountain and isle,
 Round sea-birds and wrecks, paved with heaven's azure smile,
 The wide world of waters is vibrating.

Where

Is the ship? On the verge of the wave where it lay
 One tiger is mingled in ghastly affray
 With a sea-snake. The foam and the smoke of the battle
 Stain the clear air with sunbows; the jar, and the rattle
 Of solid bones crushed by the infinite stress
 Of the snake's adamantine voluminousness;
 And the hum of the hot blood that spouts and rains
 Where the gripe of the tiger has wounded the veins,
 Swollen with rage, strength, and effort; the whirl and the splash
 As of some hideous engine whose brazen teeth smash
 The thin winds and soft waves into thunder! the screams
 And hissing crawl fast o'er the smooth ocean-streams,
 Each sound like a centipede. Near this commotion,
 A blue shark is hanging within the blue ocean,
 The fin-winged tomb of the victor. The other
 Is winning his way from the fate of his brother,
 To his own with the speed of despair. Lo! a boat
 Advances; twelve rowers with the impulse of thought
 Urge on the keen keel, the brine foams. At the stern
 Three marksmen stand levelling. Hot bullets burn
 In the breast of the tiger, which yet bears him on
 To his refuge and ruin. One fragment alone,
 'Tis dwindling and sinking, 'tis now almost gone,
 Of the wreck of the vessel peers out of the sea.
 With her left hand she grasps it impetuously,
 With her right she sustains her fair infant. Death, Fear,
 Love, Beauty, are mixed in the atmosphere,
 Which trembles and burns with the fervour of dread
 Around her wild eyes, her bright hand, and her head,
 Like a meteor of light o'er the waters! her child
 Is yet smiling, and playing, and murmuring: so smiled
 The false deep ere the storm. Like a sister and brother
 The child and the ocean still smile on each other,
 Whilst——

THE CLOUD.

I BRING fresh showers for the thirsting flowers,
 From the seas and the streams ;
 I bear light shades for the leaves when laid
 In their noon-day dreams.
 From my wings are shaken the dews that waken
 The sweet buds every one, earth
 When rocked to rest on their mother's breast,
 As she dances about the sun.
 I wield the flail of the lashing hail,
 And whiten the green plains under,
 And then again I dissolve it in rain,
 And laugh as I pass in thunder.

meow II.
 I sift the snow on the mountains below,
 And their great pines groan aghast ;
 And all the night 'tis my pillow white,
 While I sleep in the arms of the blast.
 Sublime on the towers of my skiey bowers,
 Lightning my pilot sits,
 In a cavern under is fettered the thunder,
 It struggles and howls at fits ;
 Over earth and ocean with gele motion,
 This pilot is guiding me,
 Lured by the love of the genii that move
 In the depths of the purple sea ;
 Over the rills, and the crags, and the hills,
 Over the lakes and the plains,
 Wherever he dream, under mountain or stream,
 The Spirit he loves remains ;
 And I all the while bask in heaven's blue smile,
 Whilst he is dissolving in rains.

III.
 The sanguine sunrise, with his meteor eyes,
 And his burning plumes out-spread,
 Leaps on the back of my sailing rack,
 When the morning star shines dead.
 As on the jag of a mount in crag,
 Which an earthquake rocks and swings,
 An eagle alit one moment in y sit
 In the light of its golden wings.
 And when sunset may breathe, from the lit sea beneath,
 Its ardours of rest and of love,
 And the crimson pall of eve may fall
 From the depth of heaven above,
 With wings folded I rest, on mine airy nest,
 As still as a brooding dove.

iv.

That orbed maiden, with white fire laden,
 Whom mortals call the moon,
 Glides glimmering o'er my fleece-like floor,
 By the midnight breezes strewn ;
 And wherever the beat of her unseen feet,
 Which only the angels hear,
 May have broken the woof of my tent's thin roof,
 The stars peep behind her and peer ;
 And I laugh to see them whirl and flee,
 Like a swarm of golden bees,
 When I widen the rent in my wind-built tent,
 Till the calm rivers, lakes, and seas,
 Like strips of the sky fallen through me on high,
 Are each paved with the moon and these.

v.

I bind the sun's throne with the burning zone,
 And the moon's with a girdle of pearl ;
 The volcanoes are dim, and the stars reel and swim,
 When the whirlwinds my banner unfurl.
 From cape to cape, with a bridge-like shape,
 Over a torrent sea,
 Sunbeam proof, I hang like a roof,
 The mountains its columns be.
 The triumphal arch through which I march,
 With hurricane, fire, and snow,
 When the powers of the air are chained to my chair,
 Is the million-coloured bow ;
 The sphere-fire above its soft colours wove,
 While the moist earth was laughing below.

vi.

I am the daughter of earth and water,
 And the nursling of the sky :
 I pass through the pores of the ocean and shores ;
 I change, but I cannot die.
 For after the rain, when with never a stain,
 The pavilion of heaven is bare,
 And the winds and sunbeams with their convex gleams,
 Build up the blue dome of air,
 I silently laugh at my own cenotaph,
 And out of the caverns of rain,
 Like a child from the womb, like a ghost from the tomb,
 I arise and unbuild it again.

TO A SKYLARK.

I.

HAIL to thee, blithe spirit !

Bird thou never wert,

That from heaven, or near it,

Pour'est thy full heart

In profuse strains of unpremeditated art.

II.

Higher still and higher,

From the earth thou springest

Like a cloud of fire ;

The blue deep thou wingest,

And singing still dost soar, and soaring ever singest.

III.

In the golden lightning

Of the sunken sun,

O'er which clouds are brightening,

Thou dost float and run ;

Like an unbodied joy whose race is just begun.

IV.

The pale purple even

Melts around thy flight ;

Like a star of heaven,

In the broad day-light

Thou art unseen, but yet I hear thy shrill delight.

V.

Keen as are the arrows

Of that silver sphere,

Whose intense lamp narrows

In the white dawn clear,

Until we hardly see, we feel that it is there.

VI.

All the earth and air

With thy voice is loud,

As, when night is bare,

From one lonely cloud

The moon rains out her beams, and heaven is overflowed.

VII.

What thou art we know not ;

What is most like thee ?

From rainbow clouds there flow not

Drops so bright to see,

As from thy presence showers a rain of melody.

viii.

Like a poet hidden
 In the light of thought,
 Singing hymns unbidden,
 Till the world is wrought

To sympathy with hopes and fears it heeded not :

ix.

Like a high-born maiden
 In a palace tower,
 Soothing her love-laden
 Soul in secret hour

With music sweet as love, which overflows her bower :

x.

Like a glow worm golden
 In a dell of dew,
 Scattering unhehelden
 Its aerial hue

Among the flowers and grass, which screen it from the view :

xi.

Like a rose embowered
 In its own green leaves,
 By warm winds deflowered,
 Till the scent it gives

Makes faint with too much sweet these heavy-winged thieves.

xii.

Sound of vernal showers
 On the twinkling grass,
 Rain-awakened flowers,
 All that ever was

Joyous and clear, and fresh, thy music doth surpass.

xiii.

Teach us, sprite or bird,
 What sweet thoughts are thine :
 I have never heard
 Praise of love or wine

That painted forth a flood of rapture so divine.

xiv.

Chorus hymeneal,
 Or triumphal chaunt,
 Matched with thine would be all
 But an empty vaunt—

A thing wherein we feel there is some hidden want.

xv.

What objects are the fountains
 Of thy happy strain ?
 What fields, or waves, or mountains ?
 What shapes of sky or plain ?

What love of thine own kind ! what ignorance of pain ?

xvi.

With thy clear keen joyance
 Langnor cannot be :
 Shadow of annoyace
 Never came near thee :
 Thou lovest ; but ne'er knew love's sad satiety.

xvii.

Waking or asleep,
 Thou of death must deem
 Things more true and deep
 Than we mortals dream,
 Or how could thy notes flow in such a crystal stream ?

xviii.

We look before and after,
 And pine for what is not :
 Our sincerest laughter
 With some pain is fraught :
 Our sweetest songs are those that tell of saddest thought.

xix.

Yet if we could scorn
 Hate, and pride, and fear ;
 If we were things born
 Not to shed a tear,
 I know not how thy joy we ever should come near.

xx.

Better than all measures
 Of delightful sound,
 Better than all treasures
 That in books are found,
 Thy skill to poet were, thou scorner of the ground !

xxi.

Teach me half the gladness
 That thy brain must know,
 Such harmonious madness
 From my lips would flow,
 The world should listen then, as I am listening now.

TO —— .

I FEAR thy kisses, gentle maiden,
 Thou needest not fear mine ;
 My spirit is too deeply laden
 Ever to burthen thine.

I fear thy mien, thy tones, thy motion,
 Thou needest not fear mine ;
 Innocent is the heart's devotion
 With which I worship thine.

LOVE'S PHILOSOPHY.

THE fountains mingle with the river,
 And the rivers with the ocean,
 The winds of heaven mix for ever
 With a sweet emotion ;
 Nothing in the world is single ;
 All things by a law divine
 In one another's being mingle—
 Why not I with thine ?

See the mountains kiss high heaven,
 And the waves clasp one another ;
 No sister flower would be forgiven
 If it disdained its brother :
 And the sunlight clasps the earth,
 And the moonbeams kiss the sea ; -
 What are all these kissings worth,
 If thou kiss not me ?

ODE TO LIBERTY.

Yet freedom, yet, thy banner torn but flying,
 Streams like a thunder storm against the wind.—BYRON.

A glorious people vibrated again
 The lightning of the nations : Liberty,
 From heart to heart, from tower to tower, o'er Spain,
 Scattering contagious fire into the sky,
 Gleamed. My soul spurned the chains of its dismay,
 And, in the rapid plumes of song,
 Clothed itself sublime and strong ;
 As a young eagle soars the morning clouds among,
 Hovering in verse o'er its accustomed prey ;
 Till from its station in the heaven of fame
 The Spirit's whirlwind rapt it, and the ray
 Of the remotest sphere of living flame
 Which paves the void, was from behind it flung,
 As foam from a ship's swiftness, when there came
 A voice out of the deep ; I will record the same.

II.

The Sun and the serenest Moon sprang forth ;
 The burning stars of the abyss were hurl'd
 Into the depths of heaven. The daedal earth,
 That island in the ocean of the world,
 Hung in its cloud of all-sustaining air :
 But this divinest universe
 Was yet a chaos and a curse,
 For thou wert not : but power from worst producing worse,
 The spirit of the beasts was kindled there,
 And of the birds, and of the watery forms,
 And there was war among them and despair
 Within them, raging without truce or terms :
 The bosom of their violated nurse
 Groaned, for beasts warred on beasts, and worms on worms,
 And men on men ; each heart was as a hell of storms.

III.

Man, the imperial shape, then multiplied
 His generations under the pavilion
 Of the Sun's throne : palace and pyramid,
 Temple and prison, to many a swarming million,
 Were, as to mountain-wolves their ragged caves.
 This human living multitude
 Was savage, cunning, blind, and rude,
 For thou wert not ; but o'er the populous solitude,
 Like one fierce cloud over a waste of waves,
 Hung tyranny ; beneath, sate deified
 The sister-pest, congregator of slaves :
 Into the shadow of her pinions wide,
 Anarchs and priests who feed on gold and blood,
 Till with the stain their inmost souls are dyed,
 Drove the astonished herds of men from every side.

The nodding promontories, and blue isles,
 And cloud-like mountains, and dividuous waves
 Of Greece, basked glorious in the open smiles
 Of favouring heaven : from their creaked caves
 Prophetic echoes flung dim melody
 On the unapprehensive wild.
 The vine, the corn, the olive mild,
 Grew, savage yet, to human use unreconciled ;
 And like unfolded flower beneath the sea,
 Like the man's thought dark in the infant's brain,
 Like aught that is which wraps what is to be,
 Art's deathless dreams lay veiled by many a vein
 Of Parian stone ; and yet a speechless child,
 Verse murmured, and Philosophy did strain
 Her lidless eyes for thee ; when o'er the Aegean main

v.

Athens arose : a city such as vision
Builds from the purple crags and silver towers
Of battlemented cloud, as in derision
    Of kingliest masonry : the ocean floors
Pave it ; the evening sky pavilions it ;
    Its portals are inhabited
        By thunder-zoned winds, each head
Within its cloudy wings with sun-fire garlanded,
    A divine work ! Athens diviner yet
        Gleamed with its crest of columns, on the will
    Of man, as on a mount of diamond, set ;
        For thou wert, and thine all-creative skill
Peopled, with forms that mock the eternal dead
    In marble immortality, that hill
        Which was thine earliest throne and latest oracle.

vi.

Within the surface of Time's fleeting river
    Its wrinkled image lies, as then it lay
Inmoveable unquiet, and for ever
    It trembles, but it cannot pass away !
The voices of thy bards and sages thunder
    With an earth-awakening blast
        Through the caverns of the past ;
Religion veil'd her eyes : Oppression shrinks aghast :
    A winged sound of joy, and love, and wonder,
        Which sours where Expectation never flew,
    Rending the veil of space and time asunder !
        One ocean feeds the clouds, and streams, and dew :
One sun illuminates heaven ; one spirit vast
    With life and love makes chaos ever new,
        As Athens doth the world with thy delight renew.

vii.

Then Rome was, and from thy deep bosom fairest,
    Like a wolf-cub from a Cadmean Menad,*
She drew the milk of greatness, though thy dearest
    From that Elysian food was yet unweaned ;
And many a deed of terrible uprightness
    By thy sweet love was sanctified :
        And in thy smile, and by thy side,
Saintly Camillus lived, and firm Atilius died.
    But when tears stained thy robe of vestal whiteness,
        And gold profaned thy capitolian throne,
Thou didst desert, with spirit-winged lightness,
    The senate of the tyrants : they sunk prone
Slaves of one tyrant. Palatinus sighed
    Faint echoes of Ionian song ; that tone
        Thou didst delay to hear, lamenting to disown.

* See the Bacchae of Euripides.

VIII.

From what Hyrcanian glen or frozen hill,
 Or piny promontory of the Arctic main,
 Or utmost islet inaccessible,
 Didst thou lament the ruin of thy reign,
 Teaching the woods and waves, and desert rocks,
 And every Naiad's ice-cold urn,
 To talk in echoes sad and stern,
 Of that sublimest lore which man had dared unlearn
 For neither didst thou watch the wizard flocks
 Of the Seald's dreams, nor haunt the Druid's sleep.
 What if the tears rained through thy shattered locks,
 Were quickly dried? for thou didst groan, not weep,
 When from its sea of death to kill and burn,
 The Galilean serpent forth did creep,
 And made thy world an undistinguishable heap.

IX.

A thousand years the Earth cried, Where art thou?
 And then the shadow of thy coming fell
 On Saxon Alfred's olive-cinctured brow:
 And many a warrior-peopled citadel,
 Like rocks, which fire lifts out of the flat deep,
 Arose in sacred Italy,
 Frowning o'er the tempestuous sea
 Of kings, and priests, and slaves, in tower-crowned majesty:
 That multitudinous anarchy did sweep,
 And burst around their walls, like idle foam,
 Whilst from the human spirit's deepest deep,
 Strange melody with love and awe struck dumb
 Dissonant arms; and Art which cannot die,
 With divine want traced on our earthly home
 Fit imagery to pave heaven's everlasting dome.

X.

Thou huntress swifter than the Moon! thou terror
 Of the world's wolves! thou bearer of the quiver,
 Whose sun-like shafts pierce tempest-winged Error,
 As light may pierce the clouds when they dissever
 In the calm regions of the orient day!
 Luther caught thy wakening glance:
 Like lightning from his leaden lair
 Reflected, it dissolved the visions of the trance
 In which, as in a tomb, the nations lay;
 And England's prophets hailed thee as their queen,
 In songs whose music cannot pass away,
 Though it must flow for ever: not unseen
 Before the spirit-sighted countenance
 Of Milton didst thou pass, from the sad scene
 Beyond whose night he saw, with a dejected mien.

xi.

The eager hours and unreluctant years
 As on a dawn-illumined mountain stood,
 Trampling to silence their loud hopes and fears,
 Darkening each other with their multitude,
 And cried aloud, Liberty ! Indignation
 Answered Pity from her cave ;
 Death grew pale within the grave,
 And desolation howled to the destroyer, Save !
 When, like heaven's sun, girt by the exhalation
 Of its own glorious light, thou didst arise,
 Chasing thy foes from nation unto nation
 Like shadows : as if day had cloven the skies
 At dreaming midnight o'er the western wave,
 Men started, staggering with a glad surprise,
 Under the lightnings of thine unfamiliar eyes.

xii.

Thou heaven of earth ! what spells could pall thee then,
 In ominous eclipse ! A thousand years,
 Bred from the slime of deep oppression's den,
 Dyed all thy liquid light with blood and tears,
 Till thy sweet stars could weep the stain away ;
 How like Bacchanals of blood
 Round France, the ghastly vintage, stood
 Destruction's sceptred slaves, and Folly's mitred brood !
 When one, like them, but mightier far than they,
 The Anarch of thine own bewildered powers,
 Rose : armies mingled in obscure array,
 Like clouds with clouds, darkening the sacred bowers
 Of serene heaven. He, by the past pursued,
 Rests with those dead but unforgotten hours,
 Whose ghosts scare victor kings in their ancestral towers.

xiii.

England yet sleeps : was she not called of old ?
 Spain calls her now, as with its thrilling thunder
 Vesuvius wakens Etna, and the cold
 Snow-erags by its reply are cloven in sunder :
 O'er the lit waves every Eolian isle
 From Pithecius to Pelorus
 Howls, and leaps, and glares in chorus :
 They cry, Be dim, ye lumps of heaven suspended o'er us,
 Her chains are threads of gold, she need but smile
 And they dissolve ; but Spain's were links of steel,
 Till bit to dust by virtue's keenest file.
 Twins of a single destiny ! appeal
 To the eternal years enthroned before us,
 In the dim West; impress us from a seal,
 All ye have thought and done ! Time cannot dare conceal.

xiv.

Tomb of Arminius ! render up thy dead
 Till, like a standard from a watch-tower's staff,
 His soul may stream over the tyrant's head !

Thy victory shall be his epitaph,
 Wild Bacchana of truth's mysterious wine,
 King-deluded Germany,
 His dead spirit lives in thee.

Why do we fear or hope ? thou art already free !

And thou, lost Paradise of this divine

And glorious world ! thou flowery wilderness !

Thou island of eternity ! thou shrine

Where desolation, clothed with loveliness,
 Worships the thing thou wert ! O Italy,
 Gather thy blood into thy heart ; repress
 The beasts who make their dens thy sacred palaces.

O that the free would stamp the impious name

Of * * * * into the dust ; or write it there,

So that this blot upon the page of fame

Were as the serpent's path, which the light air
 Erases, and the flat sands close behind !

Ye the oracle have heard :

Lift the victory-flashing sword,

And cut the snaky knots of this foul gordian word,

Which, weak itself as stubble, yet can bind

Into a mass, irrefragably firm,

The axes and the rods which awe mankind ;

The sound has poison in it, 'tis the sperm
 Of what makes life foul, cancerous, and abhorred ;

Disdain not thou, at thine appointed term,

To set thine armed heel on this reluctant worm.

xvi.

O that the wise from their bright minds would kindle
 Such lamps within the dome of this dim world,

That the pale name of PRIEST might shrink and dwindle
 Into the hell from which it first was hurled,

A scoff of impious pride from fiends impure,

Till human thoughts might kneel alone,

Each before the judgment throne

Of its own aweless soul, or of the power unknown !

O that the words which make the thoughts obscure

From which they spring, as clouds of glimmering dew

From a white lake blot heaven's blue portraiture,

Were stript of their thin masks and various hue,

And frowns and smiles and splendours not their own,

Till in the nakedness of false and true

They stand before their Lord, each to receive its due.

XVII.

He who taught man to vanquish whatsoever
 Can be between the cradle and the grave,
 Crowned him the King of Life. O vain endeavour !
 If on his own high will a willing slave,
 He has enthroned the oppression and the oppressor.
 What if earth can clothe and feed
 Amplest millions at their need,
 And power in thought be as the tree within the seed ?
 Or what if art, an ardent intercessor,
 Diving on fiery wings to Nature's throne,
 Checks the great mother stooping to caress her,
 And cries, give me, thy child, dominion
 Over all height and depth ? if Life can breed
 New wants, and wealth from those who toil and groan,
 Rend of thy gifts and hers a thousandfold for one.

XVIII.

Come thou, but lead out of the inmost cave
 Of man's deep spirit, as the morning-star
 Beckons the Sun from the Eoan wave,
 Wisdom. I hear the pennons of her ear
 Self-moving like cloud chariotèd by flame ;
 Comes she not, and come ye not,
 Rulers of eternal thought,
 To judge with solemn truth life's ill-apportioned lot ?
 Blind Love, and equal Justice, and the Fame
 Of what has been, the Hope of what will be ?
 O, Liberty ! if such could be thy name
 Wert thou disjoined from these, or they from thee ?
 If thine or theirs were treasures to be bought
 By blood or tears, have not the wise and free
 Wept tears, and blood like tears ! The solemn harmony

XIX.

Paused, and the spirit of that mighty singing
 To its abyss was suddenly withdrawn ;
 Then as a wild swan, when sublimely winging
 Its path athwart the thunder-smoke of dawn,
 Sinks headlong through the aerial golden light
 On the heavy sounding plain,
 When the bolt has pierced its brain ;
 As summer clouds dissolve unburthened of their rain :
 As a far taper fades with fading night ;
 As a brief insect dies with dying day,
 My song, its pinions disarrayed of might,
 Dropped : o'er it closed the echoes far away
 Of the great voice which did its flight sustain,
 As waves which lately paved his watery way
 Hiss round a drownèr's head in their tempestuous play.

ARETHUSA.

ARETHUSA arose
From her couch of snows—
In the Acroceranian mountains,—
From cloud and from crag
With many a jag,
Shepherding her bright fountains.
She leapt down the rocks
With her rainbow locks
Streaming among the streams;—
Her steps paved with green
The downward ravine
Which slopes to the western gleams:
And gliding and springing,
She went, ever singing,
In murmurs as soft as sleep;
The Earth seemed to love her,
And Heaven smiled above her,
As she lingered towards the deep.

Then Alpheus bold,
On his glacier cold,
With his trident the mountains strook;
And opened a chasm
In the rocks:—with the spasm
All Erymanthus shook.
And the black south wind
It concealed behind
The urns of the silent snow,
And earthquake and thunder
Did rend in sunder
The bars of the springs below:
The beard and the hair
Of the river God were Seen through the torrent's sweep,
As he followed the light
Of the fleet nymph's flight
To the brink of the Dorian deep.

“Oh, save me! Oh, guide me!
And bid the deep hide me!
For he grasps me now by the hair!”
The loud Ocean heard,
To its blue depth stirred,
And divided at her prayer;
And under the water
The Earth's white daughter

Fled like a sunny beam ;
 Behind her descended
 Her billows, unblended
 With the brackish Dorian stream :
 Like a gloomy stain
 On the emerald main
 Alpheus rushed behind,—
 As an eagle pursuing
 A dove to its ruin
 Down the streams of the cloudy wind.

Under the bowers
 Where the Ocean Powers
 Sit on their pearly thrones :
 Through the coral woods
 Of the weltering floods,
 Over heaps of unvalued stones ;
 Through the dim beams
 Which amid the streams
 Weave a net-work of coloured light ;
 And under the eaves,
 Where the shadowy waves
 Are as green as the forest's night :—
 Outspeeding the shark,
 At all the sword-fish dark,
 Under the ocean foam,
 And up through the rifts
 Of the mountain cliffs
 They passed to their Dorian home.

And now from their fountains
 In Emma's mountains,
 Down one vale where the morning basks,
 Like friends once parted
 Grown single-hearted,
 They ply their watery tasks.
 At sunrise they leap
 From their cradles steep
 In the cave of the shelving hill ;
 At noon-tide they flow
 Through the woods below
 And the meadows of Asphodel ;
 And at night they sleep
 In the rocking deep
 Beneath the Ortygian shore ;—
 Like spirits that lie
 In the azure sky
 When they love but live no more.

HYMN OF APOLLO.

THE sleepless Hours who watch me as I lie,
 Curtained with star enwoven tapestries
 From the broad moonlight of the sky,
 Fanning the busy dreams from my dim eyes,—
 Waken me when their Mother, the grey Dawn,
 Tells them that dreams and that the moon is gone.

Then I arise, and climbing Heaven's blue dome,
 I walk over the mountains and the waves,
 Leaving my robe upon the ocean foam ;
 My footsteps pave the clouds with fire : the caves
 Are filled with my bright presence, and the air
 Leaves the green earth to my embraces bare.

The sunbeams are my shafts, with which I kill
 Deceit, that loves the night and fears the day ;
 All men who do or even imagine ill
 Fly me, and from the glory of my ray
 Good minds and open actions take new might,
 Until diminished by the reign of night.

I feed the clouds, the rainbows, and the flowers,
 With their ethereal colours ; the Moon's globe
 And the pure stars in their eternal bowers
 Are tinctured with my power as with a robe ;
 Whatever lamps on Earth or Heaven may shine
 Are portions of one power, which is mine.

I stand at noon upon the peak of Heaven,
 Then with unwilling steps I wander down
 Into the clouds of the Atlantic even ;
 For grief that I depart they weep and frown :
 What look is more delightful than the smile
 With which I soothe them from the western isle ?

I am the eye with which the Universe
 Beholds itself and knows itself divine ;
 All harmony of instrument or verse,
 All prophecy, all medicine are mine,
 All light of art or nature ;—to my song
 Victory and praise in their own right belong.

HYMN OF PAN.

FROM the forests and highlands
 We come, we come ;
 From the river-girt islands,
 Where loud waves are dumb
 Listening to my sweet pipings.
 The wind in the reeds and the rushes,
 The bees on the bells of thyme,
 The birds on the myrtle bushes,
 The cicale above in the lime,
 And the lizards below in the grass,
 Were as silent as ever old Tmolus * was,
 Listening to my sweet pipings.

Liquid Peneus was flowing,
 And all dark Tempe lay
 In Pelion's shadow, outgrowing
 The light of the dying day,
 Speeded with my sweet pipings.
 The Sileni, and Syivans, and Fauns,
 And the Nymphs of the woods and waves,
 To the edge of the moist river-lawns,
 And the brink of the dewy caves,
 And all that did then atten'd and follow,
 Were silent with love, as you now, Apollo,
 With envy of my sweet pipings.

I sang of the dancing stars,
 I sang of the daedal Earth,
 And of Heaven--and the giant wars,
 And Love, and Death, and Birth,—
 And then I changed my pipings,—
 Singing how down the vale of Menalus
 I pursued a maiden and clasped a reed :
 Gods and men, we are all deluded thus !
 It breaks in our bosom and then we bleed :
 All wept, as I think both ye now would,
 If envy or age had not frozen your blood,
 At the sorrow of my sweet pipings.

* This and the former poem were written at the request of a friend, to be inserted in a drama on the subject of Midas. Apollo and Pan contended before Tmolus for the prize in music.

THE QUESTION.

I DREAMED that, as I wandered by the way,
 Bare winter suddenly was changed to spring,
 And gentle odours led my steps astray,
 Mixed with a sound of waters murmuring
 Along a shelving bank of turf, which lay
 Under a copse, and hardly dared to fling
 Its green arms round the bosom of the stream,
 But kiss'd it and then fled, as thou mightest in dream.

There grew pied wind-flowers and violets,
 Daisies, those pearl'd Arcturi of the earth,
 The constellated flower that never sets ;
 Faint oxlips ; tender bluebells, at whose birth
 The sod scarce heaved ; and that tall flower that wets
 Its mother's face with heaven-collected tears,
 When the low wind, its playmate's voice, it hears.

And in the warm hedge grew lush eglantine,
 Green cow-bind and the moonlight-coloured May,
 And cherry-blossoms, and white cups, whose wine
 Was the bright dew yet drained not by the day ;
 And wild roses, and ivy serpentine,
 With its dark buds and leaves, wandering astray ;
 And flowers azure, black, and streaked with gold,
 Fairer than any wakened eyes behold.

And nearer to the river's trembling edge
 There grew broad flag-flowers, purple prankt with white,
 And starry river-buds among the sedge,
 And floating water-lilies, broad and bright,
 Which lit the oak that overhung the hedge
 With moonlight beams of their own watery light ;
 And bulrushes, and reeds of such deep green
 As soothed the dazzled eye with sober sheen.

Methought that of these visionary flowers
 I made a nosegay, bound in such a way
 That the same hues, which in their natural bowers
 Were mingled or opposed, the like array
 Kept these imprisoned children of the Hours
 Within my hand, — and then, elate and gay,
 I hastened to the spot whence I had come,
 That I might there present it ! — Oh ! to whom ?

THE TWO SPIRITS.

AN ALLEGORY.

FIRST SPIRIT.

O THOU, who plumed with strong desire
 Wouldst float above the earth, beware !
 A shadow tracks thy flight of fire—
 Night is coming !
 Bright are the regions of the air,
 And among the winds and beams
 It were delight to wander there—
 Night is coming !

SECOND SPIRIT.

The deathless stars are bright above :
 If I would cross the shade at night,
 Within my heart is the lamp of love,
 And that is day !
 And the moon will smile with gentle light
 On my golden plumes where'er they move ;
 The meteors will linger round my flight,
 And make night day.

FIRST SPIRIT.

But if the whirlwinds of darkness waken
 Hail, and lightning, and stormy rain ;
 See the bounds of the air are shaken—
 Night is coming !
 The red swift clouds of the hurricane
 You declining sun have o'er taken,
 The clash of the hail sweeps over the plain—
 Night is coming !

SECOND SPIRIT.

I see the light, and I hear the sound ;
 I'll sail on the flood of the tempest dark,
 With the calm within and the light around
 Which makes night day :
 And thou, when the gloom is deep and stark,
 Look from thy dull earth, slumber-bound,
 My moonlight flight thou then may'st mark
 On high, far away.

Some say there is a precipice
 Where one vast pine is frozen to ruin
 O'er piles of snow and chasms of ice
 'Mid Alpine mountains ;
 And that the languid storm, pursuing
 That winged shape, for ever flies
 Round those hoar branches, aye renewing
 Its airy fountains.

Some say when nights are dry and clear,
 And the death-dews sleep on the morass,
 Sweet whispers are heard by the traveller,
 Which make night day :
 And a silver shape like his early love doth pass
 Upborne by her wild and glittering hair,
 And when he awakes on the fragrant grass,
 He finds night day.

---

THE WANING MOON.

And like a dying lady, lean and pale,
 Who totters forth, wrapt in a gauzy veil,
 Out of her chamber, led by the insane
 And feeble wanderings of her fading brain,
 The moon arose upon the murky earth,
 A white and shapeless mass.

SONG OF PROSERPINE,

WHILST GATHERING FLOWERS ON THE PLAIN OF ENNA

SACRED Goddess, Mother Earth,
 Thou from whose immortal bosom,
 Gods, and men, and beasts have birth.
 Leaf and blade, and bud and blossom,
 Breathe thine influence most divine
 On thine own child, Proserpine.

If with mists of evening dew
 Thou dost nourish these young flowers
 Till they grow, in scent and hue,
 Fairest children of the Hours,
 Breathe thine influence most divine
 On thine own child, Proserpine.

LETTER TO MARIA GISBORNE.

LEGHORN, July 1, 1820.

THE spider spreads her webs, whether she be
 In poet's tower, cellar, or barn, or tree ;
 The silkworm in the dark-green mulberry leaves
 His winding-sheet and cradle ever weaves !
 So I, a thing whom moralists call worm,
 Sit spinning still round this decaying form,
 From the fine threads of rare and subtle thought—
 No net of words in garish colours wrought,
 To catch the idle buzzers of the day—
 But a soft cell, where, when that fades away,
 Memory may clothe in wings my living name
 And feed it with the asphodels of fame,
 Which in those hearts which most remember me
 Grow, making love an immortality.

Whoever should behold me now, I wist,
 Would think I were a mighty mechanist,
 Bent with sublime Archimedean art
 To breathe a soul into the iron heart
 Of some machine portentous, or strange gin,
 Which by the force of figured spells might win
 Its way over the sea, and sport therein ;
 For round the walls are hung dread engines, such
 As Vulcan never wrought for Jove to clutch
 Ixion or the Titan :—or the quick
 Wit of that man of God, St. Dominic,
 To convince Atheist, Turk, or Heretic ;
 Or those in philosophic councils met,
 Who thought to pay some interest for the debt
 They owed to Jesus Christ for their salvation,
 By giving a faint foretaste of damnation
 To Shakspeare, Sidney, Spenser, and the rest
 Who made our land an island of the blest.
 When lamp-like Spain, who now relumes her fire
 On Freedom's hearth, grew dim with empire :—
 With thumb-screws, wheels, with tooth and spike and jag,
 With fishes found under the utmost crag
 Of Cornwall, and the storm-encompassed isles,
 Where to the sky the rude sea seldom smiles
 Unless in treacherous wrath, as on the morn
 When the exulting elements in scorn
 Satiated with destroyed destruction, lay
 Sleeping in beauty on their mangled prey,

As panthers sleep : and other strange and dread
 Magical forms the brick-floor overspread—
 Proteus transformed to metal did not make
 More figures, or more strange ; nor did he take
 Such shapes of unintelligible brass,
 Or heap himself in such a horrid mass
 Of tin and iron not to be understood,
 And forms of unimaginable wood,
 To puzzle Tubal Cain and all his brood :
 Great screw-, and cones, and wheels, and grooved blocks,
 The elements of what will stand the shocks
 Of wave and wind and time.—Upon the table
 More knacks and quips there be than I am able
 To catalogne in this verse of mine :
 A pretty bowl of wood---not full of wine,
 But quicksilver ; that dew which the gnomes drink
 When at their subterranean toil they swink,
 Pledging the demons of the earthquake, who
 Reply to them in lava-cry, halloo !
 And call out to the cities o'er their head, —
 Roofs, towns, and shrines, --the dying and the dead
 Crash through the chinks of earth and then all quaff ,
 Another rouse, and hold their sides and laugh.
 This quicksilver no gnome has drunk—within
 The walnut-bowl it lies, veined and thin,
 In colour like the wake of light that stains
 The Tuscan deep, when from the moist moon rains
 The innost shower of its white fire —the breeze
 Is still --blue heiven smiles over the pale seas.
 And in this bowl of quicksilver —for I
 Yield to the impulse of an infancy
 Outlasting manhood—I have made to float
 A rude idealism of a paper boat—
 A hollow screw with cogs—Henry will know
 The thing I mean, and laugh at me,- if so
 He fears not I should do more mischief.— Next
 Lie bills and calculations much perplext,
 With steam-boats, frigates, and machinery quaint
 Traced over them in blue and yellow paint.
 Then comes a range of mathematical
 Instruments, for plans nautical and statical,
 A heap of rosin, a green broken glass
 With ink in it ;—a china cup that was
 What it will never be again, I think,
 A thing from which sweet lips were wont to drink
 The liquor doctors rail at--and which I
 Will quaff in spite of them--and when we die
 We'll toss up who died first of drinking tea,
 And cry out,—heads or tails ? where'er we be.
 Near that a dusty paint-box, some old hooks,

A half-burnt match, an ivory block, three books,
 Where conic sections, spherics, logarithms,
 To great Laplace, from Saunderson and Sims,
 Lie heaped in their harmonious disarray
 Of figures,—disentangle them who may.
 Baron de Tott's Memoirs beside them lie,
 And some odd volumes of old chemistry.
 Near them a most inexplicable thing,
 With least in the middle—I'm conjecturing
 How to make Henry understand ;—but—no,
 I'll leave, as Spenser says, with many mo,
 This secret in the pregnant womb of time,
 Too vast a matter for so weak a rhyme.

And here like some weird Archimage sit I,
 Plotting dark spells, and devilish enginery,
 The self-impelling steam-wheels of the mind
 Which pump up oaths from clergymen, and grind
 The gentle spirit of our meek reviews
 Into a powdery foam of salt abuse,
 Ruffling the ocean of their self content :—
 I sit—and smile or sigh as is my bent,
 But not for them .-Libeccio rushes round
 With an inconstant and an idle sound,
 I heed him more than them—the thunder-smoke
 Is gathering on the mountains, like a cloak
 Folded athwart their shoulders broad and bare ;
 The ripe corn under the undulating air
 Undulates like an ocean ;—and the vines
 Are trembling wide in all their trellised lines ;
 The murmur of the awakening sea doth fill
 The empty pauses of the blast ;—the hill
 Looks hoary through the white electric rain,
 And from the glens beyond, in sullen strain
 The interrupted thunder howls ; above
 One chasm of heaven smiles, like the eye of love
 On the unquiet world ; while such things are,
 How could one worth your friendship heed the war
 Of worms ? The shriek of the world's carrion jays,
 Their censure, or their wonder, or their praise ?
 You are not here ! The quaint witch Memory sees
 In vacant chairs your absent images,
 And points where once you sat, and now should be,
 But are not.—I demand if ever we Shall meet as then we met ;—and she replies,
 Veiling in awe her second-sighted eyes,
 “I know the past alone —but summon home
 My sister Hope, she speaks of all to come.”
 Put I, an old diviner, who know well
 Every false verse of that sweet oracle,

Turned to the sad enchantress once again,
And sought a respite from my gentle pain,
In acting every passage o'er and o'er
Of our communion.—How on the sea shore
We watched the ocean and the sky together,
Under the roof of blue Italian weather ;
How I ran home through last year's thunder-storm,
And felt the transverse lightning linger warm
Upon my cheek : and how we often made
Treats for each other, where good will outweighed
The frugal luxury of our country cheer,
As it well might, were it less firm and clear
Than ours must ever be ;—and how we spun
A shroud of talk to hide us from the sun
Of this familiar life, which seems to be
But is not, —or is but quaint mockery
Of all we would believe ; or sadly blame
The jarring and inexplicable frame
Of this wrong world :— and then anatomize
The purposes and thoughts of men whose eyes
Were closed in distant years ;—or widely guess
The issue of the earth's great business,
When we shall be as we no longer are ;
Like babbling gossips safe, who hear the war
Of winds, and sigh, but tremble not ; or how
You listened to some interrupted flow
Of visionary rhyme :—in joy and pain
Struck from the innermost fountains of my brain,
With little skill perhaps :— or how we sought
Those deepest wells of passion or of thought
Wrought by wise poets in the waste of years,
Staining the sacred waters with our tears ;
Quenching a thirst ever to be renewed !
Or how I, wisest lady ! then induced
The language of a land which now is free,
And winged with thoughts of truth and majesty,
Flits round the tyrant's sceptre like a cloud,
And bursts the peopled prisons, and cries aloud,
" My name is Legion ! "—that majestic tongue
Which Calderon over the desert flung
Of ages and of nations : and which found
An echo in our hearts, and with the sound
Startled oblivion ;—thou wert then to me
As is a nurse —when inarticulately
A child would talk as its grown parents do.
If living winds the rapid clouds pursue,
If hawks chase doves through the aerial way,
Huntsmen the innocent deer, and beasts their prey,
Why should not we rouse with the spirit's blast
Out of the forest of the pathless past
These recollected pleasures ?

You are now
In London, that great sea, whose ebb and flow
At once is deaf and loud, and on the shore
Vomits its wrecks, and still howls on for more.
Yet in its depth what treasures ! You will see
Your old friend Godwin, greater none than he ;
Though fallen on evil times, yet will he stand,
Among the spirits of our age and land,
Before the dread tribunal of To-come
The foremost, whilst rebuke stands pale and dumb.
You will see Coleridge ; he who sits obscure
In the exceeding lustre and the pure
Intense irradiation of a mind,
Which, with its own internal lustre blind,
Flags wearily through darkness and despair—
A cloud-encircled meteor of the air,
A hooded eagle among blinking owls.
You will see Hunt ; one of those happy souls
Which are the salt of the earth, and without whom
This world would smell like what it is— a tomb ;
Who is, what others seem : - his room no doubt
Is still adorned by many a cast from Shout,
With graceful flowers, tastefully placed about ;
And coronals of bay from ribbons hung,
And brighter wreaths in neat disorder flung,
The gifts of the most learned among some dozens
Of female friends, sisters-in-law, and cousins.
And there is he with his eternal puns,
Which beat the dullest brain for smiles, like duns
Thundering for money at a poet's door;
Alas ! it is no use to say, " I'm poor !"
Or oft in graver mood, when he will look
Things wiser than were ever said in book,
Except in Shakspeare's wisest tenderness.
You will see H —, and I cannot express
His virtues, though I know that they are great,
Because he locks, then barricades, the gate
Within which they inhabit ;—of his wit,
And wisdom, you'll cry out when you are bit.
He is a pearl within an oyster shell,
One of the richest of the deep. And there
Is English P— with his mountain Fair
Turned into a Flamingo,— that shy bird
That gleams i' the Indian air. Have you not heard
When a man marries, dies, or turns Hindoo,
His best friends hear no more of him ? but you
Will see him, and will like him too, I hope,
With the milk-white Snowdonian Antelope
Matched with his camelopard ; his fine wit
Makes such a wound, the knife is lost in it ;

A strain too learned for a shallow age,
 Too wise for selfish bigots;—let his page,
 Which charms the chosen spirits of the age,
 Fold itself up for a serener clime
 Of years to come, and find its recompense
 In that just expectation. Wit and sense,
 Virtue and human knowledge—all that might
 Make this dull world a business of delight,
 Are all combined in Horace Smith.—And these,
 With some exceptions, which I need not tease
 Your patience by descanting on, are all
 You and I know in London.

I recall

My thoughts, and bid you look upon the night:
 As water does a sponge, so the moonlight
 Fills the void, hollow, universal air.
 What see you?—Unpavilioned heaven is fair,
 Whether the moon, into her chamber gone,
 Leaves midnight to the golden stars, or wan
 Climbs with diminished beams the azure steep;
 Or whether clouds sail o'er the inverse deep,
 Piloted by the many-wandering blast,
 And the rare stars rush through them, dim and fast.
 All this is beautiful in every land.
 But what see you beside? A shabby stand
 Of hackney-coaches—a brick house or wall
 Fencing some lonely court, white with the scrawl
 Of our unhappy politics;—or worse—
 A wretched woman reeling by, whose curse
 Mixed with the watchman's, partner of her trade,
 You must accept in place of serenade—
 Or yellow-haired Pollonia murmuring
 To Henry, some unutterable thing.

I see a chaos of green leaves and fruit
 Built round dark caverns, even to the root
 Of the living stems who feed them; in whose bowers
 There sleep in their dark dew the folded flowers:
 Beyond, the surface of the unsickled corn
 Trembles not in the slumbering air, and borne
 In circles quaint, and ever-changing dance,
 Like winged stars the fire-flies flash and glance
 Pale in the open moonshine; but each one
 Under the dark trees seems a little sun,
 A meteor tamed; a fixed star gone astray
 From the silver regions of the Milky-way.
 Afar the Contadino's song is heard,
 Rude, but made sweet by distance;—and a bird
 Which cannot be a nightingale, and yet
 I know none else that sings so sweet as it

At this late hour ;—and thou all is still :—
Now Italy or London, which you will !

Next winter you must pass with me ; I'll have
My house by that time turned into a grave
Of dead despondence and low-thoughted care,
And all the dreams which our tormentors are.
O that Hunt and ————— were there,
With everything belonging to them fair !—
We will have books ; Spanish, Italian, Greek,
And ask one week to make another week
As like his father, as I'm unlike mine.
Though we eat little flesh and drink no wine,
Yet let's be merry ; we'll have tea and toast ;
Custards for supper, and an endless host
Of syllabubs and jellies, and mince-pies,
And other such lady-like luxuries,—
Feasting on which we will philosophise.
And we'll have fires out of the Grand Duke's wood,
To thaw the six weeks' winter in our blood.
And then we'll talk ;—what shall we talk about ?
Oh ! there are themes enough for many a bout
Of thought-entangled descent ; as to nerves—
With cones and parallelograms and curves
I've sworn to strangle them if once they dare
To bother me, --when you are with me there.
And they shall never more sip laudanum
From Helicon or Himeros ;* well, come,
And in spite of * * * and of the devil,
We'll make our friendly philosophic revel
Outlast the leafless time ;—till buds and flowers
Warn the obscure inevitable hours
Sweet meeting by sad parting to renew :—
“ To-morrow to fresh woods and pastures new.”

TO MARY.

(ON HER OBJECTING TO THE FOLLOWING POEM, UPON THE SCORE OF ITS CONTAINING NO HUMAN INTEREST.)

I.

How, my dear Mary, are you critic-bitten,
(For vipers kill, though dead,) by some review,
That you condemn these verses I have written,
Because they tell no story, false or true !

* Himērēs, from which the river Himerus was named, is, with some slight shade of difference, a synonyme of Love.

What, though no mice are caught by a young kitten,
 May it not leap and play as grown cats do,
 Till its claws come ? Prithee, for this one time,
 Content thee with a visionary rhyme.

II.

What hand would crush the silken-winged fly,
 The youngest of inconstant April's minions,
 Because it cannot climb the purest sky,
 Where the swan sings, amid the sun's dominions ?
 Not thine. Thou knowest 'tis its doom to die,
 When day shall hide within her twilight pinions,
 The lucent eyes, and the eternal smile,
 Serene as thine, which lent it life awhile.

III.

To thy fair feet a winged Vision came,
 Whose date should have been longer than a day,
 And o'er thy head did beat its wings for fame,
 And in thy sight its fading plumes display ;
 The watery bow burned in the evening flame,
 But the shower fell, the swift Sun went his way—
 And that is dead.—O, let me not believe
 That any thing of mine is fit to live !

IV.

Wordsworth informs us he was nineteen years
 Considering and re-touching Peter Bell ;
 Watering his laurels with the killing tears
 Of slow, dull care, so that their roots to hell
 Might pierce, and their wide branches blot their spheres
 Of heaven, with dewy leaves and flowers ; this well
 May be, for Heaven and Earth conspire to foil
 The over-busy gardener's blundering toil.

My Witch indeed is not so sweet a creature
 As Ruth or Lucy, whom his graceful praise
 Clothes for our grandsons—but she matches Peter,
 Though he took nineteen years, and she three days
 In dressing. Light the vest of flowing metre
 She wears : he, proud as dandy with his stays,
 Has hung upon his wiry limbs a dress
 Like King Lear's "looped and windowed raggedness."

V.

If you strip Peter, you will see a fellow,
 Scorched by Hell's hyperequatorial climate
 Into a kind of a sulphureous yellow :
 A lean mark, hardly fit to fling a rhyme at ;
 In shape a Scaramouch, in hue Othello,
 If you unveil my Witch, no priest nor primate
 Can shrive you of that sin,—if sin there be
 In love, when it becomes idolatry.

THE WITCH OF ATLAS.

BEFORE those cruel twins, whom at one birth
Incestuous Change bore to her father Time,
Error and Truth, had hunted from the earth
All those bright natures which adorned its prime,
And left us nothing to believe in, worth
The pains of putting into learned rhyme,
A lady-witch there lived on Atlas' mountain
Within a cavern by a secret fountain.

<sup>II.</sup>
Her mother was one of the Atlantides :
The all-beholding Sun had ne'er beheld
In his wide voyage o'er continents and seas
So fair a creature, as she lay enfolden
In the warm shadow of her loveliness ;
He kissed her with his beams, and made all golden
The chamber of grey rock in which she lay—
She, in that dream of joy, dissolved away.

<sup>III.</sup>
'Tis said, she was first changed into a vapour,
And then into a cloud, such clouds as flit,
Like splendour-winged moths about a taper,
Round the red west when the sun dies in it :
And then into a meteor, such as caper
On hill-tops when the moon is in a fit ;
Then, into one of those mysterious stars
Which hide themselves between the Earth and Mars.

<sup>IV.</sup>
Ten times the Mother of the Months had bent
Her bow beside the folding-star, and bidden
With that bright sign the billows to indent
The sea-deserted sand : like children chidden,
At her command they ever came and went :—
Since in that cave a dewy splendour hidden,
Took shape and motion : with the living form
Of this embodied Power, the cave grew warm.

<sup>V.</sup>
A lovely lady garmented in light
From her own beauty—deep her eyes, as are
Two openings of unfathomable night
Seen through a tempest's cloven roof ;—her hair
Dark—the dim brain whirls dizzy with delight,
Picturing her form ;—her soft smiles shone afar,
And her low voice was heard like love, and drew
All living things towards this wonder now.

VI.

And first the spotted camcopard came,
 And then the wise and fearless elephant ;
 Then the sly serpent, in the golden flame
 Of his own volumes interwolved ;—all gaunt
 And sanguine beasts her gentle looks made tame.
 They drank before her at her sacred fount ;
 And every beast of beating heart grew bold,
 Such gentleness and power even to behold.

VII.

The brinded lioness led forth her young,
 That she might teach them how they should forego
 Their inborn thirst of death ; the pard unstrung
 His sinews at her feet, and sought to know,
 With looks whose motions spoke without a tongue,
 How he might be as gentle as the doe.
 The magic circle of her voice and eyes
 All savage natures did imparadise.

VIII.

And old Silenus, shaking a green stick
 Of lilies, and the wood-gods in a crew
 Came, blithe, as in the olive copses thick
 Cicade are, drunk with the noonday dew :
 And Driope and Faunus followed quick,
 Teasing the God to sing them something new,
 Till in this cave they found the lady lone,
 Sitting upon a seat of emerald stone.

IX.

And universal Pan, 'tis said, was there,
 And though none saw him,—through the adamant
 Of the deep mountains, through the trackless air,
 And through those living spirits, like a want,
 He passed out of his everlasting lair
 Where the quick heart of the great world doth pant,
 And felt that wondrous lady all alone,—
 And she felt him upon her emerald throne.

X.

And every nymph of stream and spreading tree,
 And every shepherdess of Ocean's flocks,
 Who drives her white waves over the green sea ;
 And Ocean, with the brine on his grey locks,
 And quaint Priapus with his company,
 All came, much wondering how the enwombed rocks
 Could have brought forth so beautiful a birth ;—
 Her love subdued their wonder and their mirth.

XI.

The herdsmen and the mountain maidens came,
 And the rude kings of pastoral Garamant—
 Their spirits shook within them, as a flame
 Stirred by the air under a cavern gaunt :

Pigmies, and Polyphemes, by many a name,
 Centaurs and Satyrs, and such shapes as haunt
 Wet clefts,—and lumps neither alive nor dead,
 Dog-headed, bosom-eyed, and bird-footed.

xii.

For she was beautiful : her beauty made
 The bright world dim, and everything beside
 Seemed like the fleeting image of a shade :
 No thought of living spirit could abide
 (Which to her looks had ever been betrayed)
 On any object in the world so wide,
 On any hope within the circling skies,
 But on her form, and in her inmost eyes.

xiii.

Which when the lady knew, she took her spindle
 And twined three threads of fleecy mist, and three
 Long lines of light, such as the dawn may kindle
 The clouds and waves and mountains with, and she
 As many star-beams, ere their lamps could dwindle
 In the belated moon, wound skilfully ;
 And with these threads a subtle veil she wove—
 A shadow for the splendour of her love.

xiv.

The deep recesses of her odorous dwelling
 Were stored with magic treasures—sounds of air,
 Which had the power all spirits of compelling,
 Folded in cells of crystal silence there ;
 Such as we hear in youth, and think the feeling
 Will never die—yet ere we are aware,
 The feeling and the sound are fled and gone,
 And the regret they leave remains alone.

xv.

And there lay visions swift, and sweet, and quaint,
 Each in its thin sheath like a chrysalis ;
 Some eager to burst forth, some weak and faint
 With the soft burthen of intensest bliss
 It is its work to bear to many a saint
 Whose heart adores the shrine which holiest is,
 Even Love's—and others white, green, grey, and black,
 And of all shapes—and each was at her beck.

xvi.

And odours in a kind of aviary
 Of ever-blooming Eden-trees she kept,
 Clipt in a floating net, a love-sick Fairy
 Had woven from dew-beams while the moon yet slept ;
 As bats at the wired window of a dairy,
 They beat their vans ; and each was an adept,
 When loosed and missioned, making wings of winds,
 To stir sweet thoughts or sad, in destined minds.

xvii.

And liquors clear and sweet, whose healthful might
 Could medicine the sick soul to happy sleep,
 And change eternal death into a night
 Of glorious dreams—or if eyes needs must weep
 Could make their tears all wonder and delight,
 She in her crystal vials did closely keep :
 If men could drink of those clear vials, 'tis said
 The living were not envied of the dead.

xviii.

Her cave was stored with scrolls of strange device,
 The works of some Saturnian Archimage,
 Which taught the expiations at whose price
 Men from the Gods might win that happy age
 Too lightly lost, redeeming native vice ;
 And which might quench the earth-consuming rage
 Of gold and blood—till men should live and move
 Harmonious as the sacred stars above.

xix.

And how all things that seem untameable,
 Not to be checked and not to be confined,
 Obey the spells of wisdom's wizard skill ;
 Time, Earth and Fire—the Ocean and the Wind,
 And all their shapes—and man's imperial will ;
 And other scrolls whose writings did unbind
 The innost lore of Love—let the profane
 Tremble to ask what secrets they contain.

xx.

And wondrous works of substances unknown,
 To which the enchantment of her father's power
 Had changed those ragged blocks of savage stone,
 Were heaped in the recesses of her bower ;
 Carved lamps and chalices, and phials which shone
 In their own golden beams—each like a flower,
 Out of whose depth a fire-fly shakes his light
 Under a cypress in a starless night.

xxi.

At first she lived alone in this wild home,
 And her thoughts were each a minister,
 Clothing themselves or with the ocean foam,
 Or with the wind, or with the speed of fire,
 To work whatever purposes might come
 Into her mind : such power her mighty Sire
 Had girt them with, whether to fly or run,
 Through all the regions which he shines upon.

xxii.

The Ocean-nymphs and Hamadryades,
 Orcads and Naiads with long weedy locks,
 Offered to do her bidding through the seas,
 Under the earth, and in the hollow rocks,

And far beneath the matted roots of trees,
And in the gnarled heart of stubborn oaks,
So they might live for ever in the light
Of her sweet presence—each a satellite.

xxiii.

"This may not be," the wizard maid replied ;
"The fountains where the Naiades bedew
Their shining hair, at length are drained and dried ;
The solid oaks forget their strength, and strew
Their latest leaf upon the mountains wide ;
The boundless ocean, like a drop of dew
Will be consumed —the stubborn centre must
Be scattered, like a cloud of summer dust.

xxiv.

"And ye with them will perish one by one :
If I must sigh to think that this shall be,
If I must weep when the surviving Sun
Shall smile on your decay—Oh, ask not me
To love you till your little race is run ;
I cannot die as ye must—over me
Your leaves shall glance —the streams in which ye dwell
Shall be my paths henceforth, and so farewell ! "

xxv.

She spoke and wept : the dark and azure well
Sparkled beneath the shower of her bright tears,
And every little circlet where they fell,
Flung to the cavern-roof inconstant spheres
And intertangled lines of light :—a knell
Of sobbing voices came upon her ears
From those departing Forms, o'er the serene
Of the white streams and of the forest green.

xxvi.

All day the wizard lady sat aloof,
Spelling out scrolls of dread antiquity,
Under the cavern's fountain-lighted roof ;
Or broidering the pictured poesy
Of some high tale upon her growing woof,
Which the sweet splendour of her smiles could dye
In hues outshining heaven—and ever she Added some grace to the wrought poesy.

xxvii.

While on her hearth lay blazing many a piece
Of sandal-wood, rare gums, and cinnamon ;
Men scarcely know how beautiful fire is ;
Each flame of it is as a precious stone
Dissolved in ever-moving light, and this
Belongs to each and all who gaze upon.
The Witch beheld it not, for in her hand
She held a woof that dimmed the burning brand.

xxviii.

This lady never slept, but lay in trance
 All night within the fountain—as in sleep.
 Its emerald crags glowed in her beauty's glance :
 Through the green splendour of the water deep
 She saw the constellations reel and dance
 Like fire-flies—and withal did ever keep
 The tenour of her contemplations calm,
 With open eyes, closed feet, and folded palm.

xxix.

And when the whirlwinds and the clouds descended
 From the white pinnacles of that cold hill,
 She passed at dewfall to a space extended,
 Where, in a lawn of flowering asphodel
 Amid a wood of pines and cedars blended,
 There yawned an inextinguishable well
 Of crimson fire, full even to the brim,
 And overflowing all the margin trim.

xxx.

Within the which she lay when the fierce war
 Of wintry winds shook that innocuous liquor
 In many a mimic moon and bearded star,
 O'er woods and lawns—the serpent heard it sicker
 In sleep, and dreaming still, he crept afar—
 And when the windless snow descended thicker
 Than autumn leaves, she watched it as it came Melt on the surface of the level flame.

xxxi.

She had a Boat which some say Vulcan wrought
 For Venus, as the chariot of her star;
 But it was found too feeble to be fraught
 With all the ardours in that sphere which are,
 And so she sold it, and Apollo bought
 And gave it to this daughter : from a ear
 Changed to the fairest and the lightest boat
 Which ever upon mortal stream did float.

xxxii.

And others say, that, when but three hours old,
 The first-born Love out of his cradle leapt,
 And clove dun Chaos with his wings of gold,
 And like a horticultural adept,
 Stole a strange seed, and wrapt it up in mould,
 And sewed it in his mother's star, and kept
 Watering it all the summer with sweet dew,
 And with his wings fanning it as it grew.

xxxiii.

The plant grew strong and green—the snowy flower
 Fell, and the long and gourd-like fruit began
 To turn the light and dew by inward power
 To its own substance : woven tracery ran

Of light firm texture, ribbed and branching, o'er

The solid rind, like a leaf's veined fan,
Of which Love scooped this boat, and with soft motion
Piloted it round the circumfluous ocean.

xxxiv.

This boat she moored upon her fount, and lit

A living spirit within all its frame,
Breathing the soul of swiftness into it.

Couched on the fountain like a panther tame,
One of the twain at Evan's feet that sit;

Or as on Vesta's sceptre a swift flame,
Or on blind Homer's heart a winged thought,—
In joyous expectation lay the boat.

xxxv.

Then by strange art she kneaded fire and snow

Together, tempering the repugnant mass
With liquid love—all things together grow
Through which the harmony of love can pass ;
And a fair Shape out of her hands did flow

A living image, which did far surpass
In beauty that bright shape of vital stone
Which drew the heart out of Pygmalion.

xxxvi.

A sexless thing it was, and in its growth

It seemed to have developed no defect
Of either sex, yet all the grace of both.—

In gentleness and strength its limbs were decked ;
The bosom lightly swelled with its full youth,

The countenance was such as might select
Some artist that his skill should never die,
Imaging forth such perfect purity.

xxxvii.

From its smooth shoulders hung two rapid wings,

Fit to have borne it to the seventh sphere,
Tipt with the speed of liquid lightnings,

Dyed in the ardours of the atmosphere :
She led her creature to the boiling springs

Where the light boat was moored, and said —“Sit here !”
And pointed to the prow, and took her seat
Beside the rudder with opposing feet.

xxxviii.

And down the streams which clove those mountains vast

Around their inland islets, and amid

The panther-peopled forests, whose shade cast
Darkness and odours, and a pleasure hid

In melancholy gloom, the pinnace passed ;

By many a star-surrounded pyramid
O' icy crag cleaving the purple sky,
And caverns yawning round unfathomably.

XXXIX.

The silver moon into that winding dell,
 With slanted gleam athwart the forest tops,
 Tempered like golden evening, feebly fell ;
 A green and glowing light, like that which drops
 From folded lilies in which glow-worms dwell,
 When earth over her face night's mantle wraps ;
 Between the severed mountains lay on high
 Over the stream, a narrow rift of sky.

XL.

And ever as she went, the Image lay
 With folded wings and unawakened eyes ;
 And o'er its gentle countenance did play
 The busy dreams, as thick as summer flies,
 Chasing the rapid smiles that would not stay,
 And drinking the warm tears, and the sweet sighs
 Inhaling, which, with busy murmur vain,
 They had aroused from that full heart and brain.

XLI.

And ever down the prone vale, like a cloud
 Upon a stream of wind, the pinnace went :
 Now lingering on the pools, in which abode
 The calm and darkness of the deep, content
 In which they paused ; now o'er the shallow road
 Of white and dancing waters, all besprent
 With sand and polished pebbles :—mortal boat
 In such a shallow rapid could not float.

XLII.

And down the earthquaking cataracts, which shiver
 Their snow-like waters into golden air,
 Or under chasms unfathomable ever
 Sepulchre them, till in their rage they tear
 A subterranean portal for the river,
 It fled—the circling sunbows did upbear
 Its fall down the hoar precipice of spray,
 Lighting it far upon its lampless way.

XLIII.

And when the wizard lady would ascend
 The labyrinths of some many-winding vale,
 Which to the inmost mountain upward tend—
 She called “Hermaphroditus !” and the pale
 And heavy hue which slumber could extend
 Over its lips and eyes, as on the gale
 A rapid shadow from a slope of grass,
 Into the darkness of the stream did pass.

XLIV.

And it unfurled its heaven-coloured pinions ;
 With stars of fire spotting the stream below
 And from above into the Sun's dominions
 Flinging a glory, like the golden glow

In which spring clothes her emerald-winged minions,
 All interwoven with fine feathery snow
 And moonlight splendour of intensest rime,
 With which frost paints the pines in winter time.

XLV.

And then it winnowed the Elysian air
 Which ever hung about that lady bright,
 With its ethereal vaws—and speeding there,
 Like a star up the torrent of the night,
 Or a swift eagle in the morning glare
 Breasting the whirlwind with impetuous flight,
 The pinnace, oared by those enchanted wings,
 Clove the fierce streams towards their upper springs.

XLVI.

The water flashed like sunlight by the prow
 Of a noon-wandering meteor flung to Heaven ;
 The still air seemed as if its waves did flow
 In tempest down the mountains,—loosely driven
 The lady's radiant hair stream'd to and fro ;
 Beneath, the billows having vainly striven
 Indignant and impetuous, roared to feel
 The swift and steady motion of the keel.

XLVII.

Or, when the weary moon was in the wane,
 Or in the noon of interlunar night,
 The lady-witch in visions could not chain
 Her spirit : but sailed forth under the light
 Of shooting stars, and bade extend a main
 His storm out-speeding wings, th' Hermaphrodite ;
 She to the Austral waters took her way,
 Beyond the fab'lous Thamondocona.

XLVIII.

Where, like a meadow which no scythe has shaven,
 Which rain could never bend, or whirl-blast shakeo,
 With the Antarctic constellations paven,
 Canopus and his crew, lay th' Austral lake—
 There she would build herself a windless haven
 Out of the clouds whose moving turrets make
 The bastions of the storm, when through the sky
 The spirits of the tempest thundered by.

XLIX.

A haven, beneath whose translucent floor
 The tremulous stars sparkled unfathomably,
 And around which the solid vapours hoar,
 Based on the level waters, to the sky
 Lifted their dreadful crags; and like a shore
 Of wintry mountains, inaccessible
 Heav'd in with rifts and precipices gray
 And hanging crags, many a cove and bay.

And whilst the outer lake <sup>L.</sup> beneath the lash
Of the wind's scourge, foamed like a wounded thing;
And the incessant hail with stony clash
Ploughed up the waters, and the flagging wing
Of the roused cormorant in the lightning flash
Looked like the wreck of some wind-wandering
Fragment of inky thunder-smoke—this haven
Was as a gem to copy Heaven engraven.

<sup>LI.</sup>
On which that lady played her many pranks,
Circling the image of a shooting star,
Even as a tiger on Hydaspes' banks
Outspeeds the Antelopes which speediest are,
In her light boat; and many quips and cranks
She played upon the water; till the car
Of the late moon, like a sick matron wan,
To journey from the misty east began.

<sup>LII.</sup>
And then she called out of the hollow turrets
Of those high clouds, white, golden, and vermillion,
The armies of her ministering spirits—
In mighty legions million after million
They came, each troop emblazoning its merits
On meteor flags; and many a proud pavilion,
Of the intertexture of the atmosphere,
They pitched upon the plain of the calm mere.

<sup>LIII.</sup>
They framed the imperial tent of their great queen
Of woven exhalations, underlaid
With lambent lightning-fire, as may be seen
A dome of thin and open ivory inlaid
With crimson silk—cressets from the sereno
Hung there, and on the water for her tread,
A tapestry of fleece-like mist was strewn,
Dyed in the beams of the ascending moon.

<sup>LIV.</sup>
And on a throne o'erlaid with starlight, caught
Upon those wandering isles of acry dew,
Which highest shoals of mountain shipwreck not,
She sate, and heard all that had happened new Between the earth and moon since they had brought
The last intelligence—and now she grew
Pale as that moon, lost in the watery night—
And now she wept, and now she laughed outright.

<sup>LV.</sup>
These were tame pleasures.—She would often climb
The steepest ladder of the cruddled rack
Up to some beaked cape of cloud sublime,
And like Arion on the dolphin's back

Ride singing through the shoreless air. Oft time

Following the serpent lightning's winding track,
She ran upon the platforms of the wind,
And laughed to hear the fire-balls roar behind.

LVI.

And sometimes to those streams of upper air,

Which whirl the earth in its diurnal round,
She would ascend, and win the spirits there

To let her join their chorus. Mortals found
That on those days the sky was calm and fair,

And mystic snatches of harmonious sound
Wandered upon the earth where'er she passed,
And happy thoughts of hope, too sweet to last.

LVII.

But her choice sport was, in the hours of sleep,

To glide adown old Nilus, when he threads
Egypt and Ethiopia, from the steep

Of utmost Axumé, until he spreads,
Like a calm flock of silver-fleeced sheep,

His waters on the plain : and crested heads
Of cities and proud temples gleam amid,
And many a vapour-belted pyramid.

LVIII.

By Mœris and the Mareotid lakes.

Strewn with faint blooms like bridal-chamber floors ;
Where naked boys bridling tame water-snakes,

Or charioeering ghastly alligators,
Had left on the sweet waters mighty wakes

Of those huge forms :—within the brazen doors
Of the great Labyrinth slept both boy and beast,
Tired with the pomp of their Osirian feast.

LIX.

And where within the surface of the river

The shadows of the massy temples lie,
And never are erased—but tremble ever

Like things which every cloud can doom to die,
Through lotus-pav'n canals, and wheresoever

The works of man pierced that serenest sky
With tombs, and towers, and fane, 'twas her delight
To wander in the shadow of the night.

LX.

With motion like the spirit of that wind

Whose soft step deepens slumber, her light feet
Past through the peopled haunts of human kind,

Scattering sweet visions from her presence sweet,
Through fane and palace-court and labyrinth min'd

With many a dark and subterranean street
Under the Nile ; through chambers high and deep
She past, observing mortals in their sleep.

LXI.

A pleasure sweet doubtless it was to see
 Mortals subdued in all the shapes of sleep.
 Here lay two sister-twins in infancy ;
 There a lone youth who in his dreams did weep ;
 Within, two lovers linked innocently
 In their loose locks which over both did creep
 Like ivy from one stem ;—and there lay calm,
 Old age with snow-bright hair and folded palm.

LXII.

But other troubled forms of sleep she saw,
 Not to be mirrored in a holy song,
 Distortions foul of supernatural awe,
 And pale imaginings of visioned wrong,
 And all the code of custom's lawless law
 Written upon the brows of old and young :
 "This," said the wizard maiden, "is the strife
 Which stirs the liquid surface of man's life."

LXIII.

And little did the sight disturb her soul—
 We, the weak mariners of that wide lake,
 Where'er its shores extend or billows roll,
 Our course unpiloted and starless make
 O'er its wide surface to an unknown goal,—
 But she in the calm depths her way could take,
 Where in bright bowers immortal forms abide,
 Beneath the weltering of the restless tide.

LXIV.

And she saw princes couched under the glow
 Of sunlike gems; and round each temple-court
 In dormitories ranged, row after row,
 She saw the priests asleep,—all of one sort,
 For all were educated to be so.
 The peasants in their huts, and in the port
 The sailors she saw cradled on the waves,
 And the dead lulled within their dreamless graves.

LXV.

And all the forms in which those spirits lay,
 Were to her sight like the diaphanous
 Veils, in which those sweet ladies oft array
 Their delicate limbs, who would conceal from us
 Only their scorn of all concealment : they Move in the light of their own beauty thus.
 But these and all now lay with sleep upon them,
 And little thought a Witch was looking on them.

LXVI.

She all those human figures breathing there
 Beheld as living spirits—to her eyes
 The naked beauty of the soul lay bare,
 And often through a rude and worn disguise

She saw the inner form most bright and fair—

And then,—she had a charm of strange device,
Which, murmured on mute lips with tender tone,
Could make that spirit mingle with her own.

LXVII.

Alas, Aurora ! what wouldest thou have given
For such a charm, when Tithon became grey ?

Or how much, Venus, of thy silver heaven

Wouldest thou have yielded, ere Proserpina
Had half (oh ! why not all ?) the debt forgiven

Which dear Adonis had been doomed to pay,
To any witch who would have taught you it ?
The Heliad doth not know its value yet.

LXVIII.

'Tis said in after times her spirit free
Knew what love was, and felt itself alone—

But holy Dian could not chaster be

Before she stooped to kiss Endymion,
Than now this lady -like a sexless bee

Tasting all blossoms, and confined to none—
Among those mortal forms, the wizard-maiden
Past with an eye serene and heart unladen.

LXIX.

To those she saw most beautiful, she gave
Strange panacea in a crystal bowl.

They drank in their deep sleep of that sweet wave,

And lived thenceforth as if some control,

Mightier than life, were in them ; and the grave

Of such, when death oppressed the weary soul,
Was a green and over-arching bower
Lit by the gems of many a starry flower.

LXX.

For on the night that they were buried, she

Restored the embalmers' ruining, and shook
The light out of the funeral lamps, to be

A mimie day within that deathy nook ;

And she unwound the woven imagery

Of second childhood's swaddling bands, and took
The coffin, its last cradle, from its niche,
And threw it with contempt into a ditch.

LXVI.

And there the body lay, age after age,

Mute, breathing, beating, warm, and undecaying,
Like one asleep in a green hermitage,

With gentle sleep about its eyelids playing,

And living in its dreams beyond the rage

Of death or life ; while they were still arraying
In liveries ever new the rapid, blind,
And fleeting generations of mankind.

LXXXII.

And she would write strange dreams upon the brain
 Of those who were less beautiful, and make
 All harsh and crooked purposes more vain
 Than in the desert is the serpent's wake
 Which the sand covers,—all his evil gain
 The miser in such dreams would rise and shake
 Into a beggar's lap ;—the lying scribe
 Would his own lies betray without a bribe.

LXXXIII.

The priests would write an explanation full,
 Translating hieroglyphics into Greek,
 How the god Apis really was a bull,
 And nothing more ; and bid the herald stick
 The same against the temple doors, and pull
 The old cant down ; they licensed all to speak
 Whate'er they thought of hawks, and cats, and geese,
 By pastoral letters to each diocese.

LXXXIV.

The king would dress an ape up in his crown
 And robes, and seat him on his glorious seat,
 And on the right hand of the sunlike throne
 Would place a gaudy mock-bird to repeat
 The chatterings of the monkey.—Every one
 Of the prone courtiers crawled to kiss the feet
 Of their great Emperor when the morning came ;
 And kissed—alas, how many kiss the same !

LXXXV.

The soldiers dreamed that they were blacksmiths, and Walked out of quarters in somnambulism,
 Round the red anvils you might see them stand
 Like Cyclopes in Vulcan's sooty abyssm,
 Beating their swords to ploughshares ;— in a band
 The gaolers sent those of the liberal schism
 Free through the streets of Memphis ; much, I wis,
 To the annoyance of king Amasis.

LXXXVI.

And timid lovers who had been so coy,
 They hardly knew whether they loved or not,
 Would rise out of their rest, and take sweet joy,
 To the fulfilment of their inmost thought ;
 And when next day the maiden and the boy
 Met one another, both, like sinners caught,
 Blushed at the thing which each believed was done
 Only in fancy—till the tenth moon shone ;

LXXXVII.

And then the Witch would let them take no ill :
 Of many thousand schemes which lovers find
 The Witch found one,—and so they took their fill
 Of happiness in marriage warm and kind.

Friends who, by practice of some envious skill,
Were torn apart, a wide wound, mind from mind !
She did unite again with visions clear
Of deep affection and of truth sincere.

LXXXVIII.

These were the pranks she played among the cities
Of mortal men, and what she did to sprites
And Gods, entangling them in her sweet ditties,
To do her will, and show their subtle slights,
I will declare another time ; for it is
A tale more fit for the weird winter nights—
Than for these garish summer days, when we Scarcely believe much more than we can see.

---

DEATH.

DEATH is here, and death is there
Death is busy everywhere,
All around, within, beneath,
Above is death—and we are death.

Death has set his mark and seal
On all we are and all we feel,
On all we know and all we fear,

* * * *

First our pleasures die—and then
Our hopes, and then our fears,—and when
These are dead, the debt is due,
Dust claims dust—and we die too.

All things that we love and cherish,
Like ourselves, must fade and perish ;
Such is our rude mortal lot—
Love itself would, did they not.

---

TO THE MOON.

Art thou pale for weariness
Of climbing heaven, and gazing on the earth,
Wandering companionless
Among the stars that have a different birth,—
And ever-changing, like a joyless eye
That finds no object worth its constancy ?

ODE TO NAPLES.*

EPODE I. a.

I stood within the city disinterred † ;
 And heard the autumnal leaves like light footfalls
 Of spirits passing through the streets ; and heard
 The Mountain's slumberous voice at intervals
 Thrill through those roofless halls ;
 The oracular thunder penetrating shook
 The listening soul in my suspended blood ;
 I felt that Earth out of her deep heart spoke—
 I felt, but heard not :—through white columns glowed
 The isle-sustaining Ocean flood,
 A plane of light between two heavens of azure :
 Around me gleamed many a bright sepulchre
 Of whose pure beauty, Time, as if his pleasure
 Were to spare Death, had never made erasure ;
 But every living lineament was clear
 As in the sculptor's thought ; and there
 The wreaths of stony myrtle, ivy and pine,
 Like winter leaves o'ergrown by moulded snow,
 Seemed only not to move and grow
 Because the crystal silence of the air
 Weighed on their life ; even as the Power divine,
 Which then lulled all things, brooded upon mine.

EPODE II. a.

Then gentle winds arose,
 With many a mingled close
 Of wild Aeolian sound and mountain odour keen ;
 And where the Baian ocean
 Welters with air-like motion,
 Within, above, around its bowers of starry green,
 Moving the sea-flowers in those purple eaves,
 Even as the ever stormless atmosphere
 Floats o'er the Elysian realm,
 It bore me : (like an Angel, o'er the waves
 Of sunlight, whose swift pinnace of dewy air
 No storm can overwhelm ;)

* The Author has connected many recollections of his visit to Pompeii and Baiae with the enthusiasm excited by the intelligence of the proclamation of a Constitutional Government at Naples. This has given a tinge of picturesque and descriptive imagery to the introductory Epodes, which depicture the scenes and some of the majestic feelings permanently connected with the scene of this animating event.—Author's note.

† Pompeii.

I sailed where ever flows
 Under the calm Serene
 A spirit of deep emotion,
 From the unknown graves
 Of the dead kings of Melody.*
 Shadowy Aornos darkened o'er the helm
 The horizontal aether; heaven stript bare
 Its depths over Elysium, where the prow
 Made the invisible water white as snow;
 From that Typhæan mount, Inarimé,
 There stream'd a sunlit vapour, like the standard
 Of some ethereal host;
 Whilst from all the coast,
 Louder and louder, gathering round, there wandered
 Over the oracular woods and divine sea
 Prophesyings which grew articulate—
 They seize me—I must speak them;—be they fate !

STROPHE  $\alpha$ . 1.

NAPLES ! thou Heart of men, which ever pantest
 Naked, beneath the lidless eye of heaven !
 Elysian City, which to calm enchantest
 The mutinous air and sea ! they round thee, even
 As sleep round Love, are driv'n !
 Metropolis of a ruined Paradise
 Long lost, late won, and yet but half regained !
 Bright Altar of the bloodless sacrifice,
 Which armed Victory offers up unstained
 To Love, the flower-enchain'd !
 Thou which wert once, and then didst cease to be,
 Now art, and henceforth ever shall be, free,
 If Hope, and Truth, and Justice can avail.
 Hail, hail, all hail !

STROPHE  $\beta$ . 2.

Thou youngest giant birth,
 Which from the groaning earth
 Leap'st, clothed in armour of impenetrable scale !
 Last of the Intercessors
 Who 'gainst the Crowned Transgressors
 Pleadest before God's love ! Arrayed in Wisdom's mail,
 Wave thy lightning lance in mirth ;
 Nor let thy high heart fail,
 Though from their hundred gates the leagued Oppressors,
 With hurried legions move ! Hail, hail, all hail !

ANTISTROPHE  $\alpha$ .

What though Cimmerian Anarchs dare blaspheme
 Freedom and thee ! thy shield is as a mirror
 To make their blind slaves see, and with fierce gleam

To turn his hungry sword upon the wearer ;

A new Acteon's error

Shall theirs have been—devoured by their own hounds !

Be thou like the imperial Basilisk,

Killing thy foe with unapparent wounds !

Gaze on oppression, till, at that dread risk

Aghast, she pass from the Earth's disk ;

Fear not, but gaze—for freemen mightier grow,

And slaves more feeble, gazing on their foe.

If Hope, and Truth, and Justice may avail,

Thou shalt be great.—All hail !

ANTISTROPHE  $\beta$ . 2.

From Freedom's form divine,

From Nature's innost shrine,

Strip every impious gawd, rend error veil by veil :

O'er ruin desolate,

O'er Falshood's fallen state,

Sit thou sublime, unawed ; be the Destroyer pale !

And equal laws be thine,

And winged words let sail,

Freighted with truth even from the throne of God:

That wealth, surviving fate, be thine.—All hail !

ANTISTROPHE  $\alpha$ . 2.

Didst thou not start to hear Spain's thrilling psalm

From land to land re-echoed solemnly,

Till silence became music ? From the Aeæan *

To the cold Alps, eternal Italy

Starts to hear thine ! The Sea

Which paves the desert streets of Venice, laughs

In light and music ; widowed Genoa wan,

By moonlight spells ancestral epitaphs,

Murmuring, where is Doria ? fair Milan,

Within whose veins long ran

The viper's † palsyng venom, lifts her heel

To bruise his head. The signal and the seal

(If Hope, and Truth, and Justice can avail)

Art thou of all these hopes. —O hail !

ANTISTROPHE  $\beta$ . 2.

Florence ! beneath the sun,

Of cities fairest one,

Blushes within her bower for Freedom's expectation :

From eyes of quenchless hope

Rome tears the priestly cope,

As ruling once by power, so now by admiration,—

An athlete stript to run

From a remoter station

* Aeæa, the Island of Circe.

† The viper was the armorial device of the Visconti, tyrants of Milan.

For the high prize lost on Philippi's shore :—
 As then Hope, Truth, and Justice did avail,
 So now may Fraud and Wrong ! O hail !

EPISODE I. B.

Hear ye the march as of the Earth-born Forms
 Arrayed against the ever-living Gods ?
 The crash and darkness of a thousand storms
 Bursting their inaccessible abodes
 Of crags and thunder-clouds ?
 See ye the banners blazoned to the day,
 Inwrought with emblems of barbaric pride ?
 Dissomant threats kill Silence far away,
 The Serene Heaven which wraps our Eden wide
 With iron light is dyed,
 The Anarchs of the North lead forth their legions
 Like Chaos o'er creation, uncreating ;
 An hundred tribes nourished on strange religious
 And lawless slaveries,—down the aerial regions
 Of the white Alps, desolating,
 Faundered wolves that bide no waiting,
 Blotting the glowing footsteps of old glory,
 Trampling our columned cities into dust,
 Their dull and savage lust
 On Beauty's cors to sickness satiating.—
*They come ! The fields they tread look black and hoary
 With fire—from their red feet the streams run gory !*

Great Spirit, deepest Love !
 Which rulest and dost move
 All things which live and are, within the Italian shore ;
 Who spreadest heaven around it,
 Whose woods, rocks, waves, surround it ;
 Who sittest in thy star, o'er Ocean's western floor,
 Spirit of beauty ! at whose soft command
 The sunbeams and the showers distil its foison !
 From the Earth's bosom chill ;
 O bid those beams be each a blinding brand
 Of lightning ! bid those showers be dews of poison !
 Bid the Earth's plenty kill !
 Bid thy bright Heaven above
 Whilst light and darkness bound it,
 Be their tomb who planned
 To make it ours and thine !
 Or, with thine harmonising ardours fill
 And raise thy sons, as o'er the prone horizon
 Thy lamp feeds every twilight wave with fire—
 Be man's high hope and unextinct desire
 The instrument to work thy will divine !
 Then clouds from sunbeams, antelopes from leopards,

And frowns and fears from Thee,
Would not more swiftly flee,
Than Celtic wolves from the Ansonian shepherds.—
Whatever, Spirit, from thy starry shrine
Thou yieldest or withholdest, oh let be
This City of thy worship, ever free !

SUMMER AND WINTER.

IT was a bright and cheerful afternoon,
Towards the end of the sunny month of June,
When the north wind congregates in crowds
The floating mountains of the silver clouds
From the horizon - and the stainless sky
Opens beyond them like eternity.
All things rejoiced beneath the sun, the weeds,
The river, and the corn-fields, and the reeds ;
The willow leaves that glanced in the light breeze,
And the firm foliage of the larger trees.

IT was a winter such as when birds die
In the deep forests ; and the fishes lie
Stiffened in the translucent ice, which makes
Even the mud and slime of the warm lakes
A wrinkled clod, as hard as brick ; and when,
Among their children, comfortable men
Gather about great fires, and yet feel cold :
Alas ! then for the homeless beggar old !

LINES TO A REVIEWER.

ALAS ! good friend, what profit can you see
In hating such a hateless thing as me ?
There is no sport in hate where all the rage
Is on one side. In vain would you assuage
Your frowns upon an unresisting smile,
In which not even contempt lurks, to beguile
Your heart, by some faint sympathy of hate.
Oh conquer what you cannot satiate !
For to your passion I am far more coy
Than ever yet was coldest maid or boy
In winter noon. Of your antipathy
If I am the Narcissus you are free
To pine into a sound with hating me.

AUTUMN :

A DIRGE.

THE warm sun is failing, the bleak wind is wailing,
 The bare boughs are sighing, the pale flowers are dying,

And the year

On the earth her death-bed, in a shroud of leaves dead,
 Is lying;

Come, months, come away,

From November to May,

In your saddest array;

Follow the bier

Of the dead cold year,

And like dim shadows watch by her sepulchre.

The chill rain is falling, the nipt worm is crawling,
 The rivers are swelling, the thunder is knelling

For the year;

The blithe swallows are flown, and the lizards each gone
 To his dwelling;

Come, months, come away;

Put on white, black, and grey,

Let your light sisters play—

Ye, follow the bier

Of the dead cold year,

And make her grave green with tear on tear.

THE WORLD'S WANDERERS.

TELL me, thou star, whose wings of light
 Speed thee in thy fiery flight,
 In what cavern of the night
 Will thy pinions close now?

Tell me, moon, thou pale and grey
 Pilgrim of heaven's homeless way,
 In what depth of night or day
 Seest thou repose now?

Weary wind, who wanderest
 Like the world's rejected guest,
 Hast thou still some secret nest
 On the tree or bellow?

LIBERTY.

THE fiery mountains answer each other ;
 Their thunderings are echoed from zone to zone ;
 The tempestuous oceans awake one another,
 And the ice-rocks are shaken round winter's throne,
 When the clarion of the Typhoon is blown.

From a single cloud the lightning flashes,
 Whilst a thousand isles are illuminated around ;
 Earthquake is trampling one city to ashes,
 A hundred are shuddering and tottering ; the sound
 Is bellowing underground.

But keener thy gaze than the lightning's glare,
 And swifter thy step than the earthquake's tramp ;
 Thou deafenest the rage of the ocean : thy stare
 Makes blind the volcanoes : the sun's bright lamp
 To thine is a fen-fire damp.

From billow and mountain and exhalation
 The sunlight is darted through vapour and blast ;
 From spirit to spirit, from nation to nation,
 From city to hamlet, thy dawning is east,—
 And tyrants and slaves are like shadows of night
 In the van of the morning light.

AN ALLEGORY.

A PORTAL as of shadowy adamant
 Stands yawning on the highway of the life
 Which we all tread, a cavern huge and gaunt ;
 Around it rages an unceasing strife
 Of shadows, like the restless clouds that haunt
 The gap of some chafed mountain, lifted high
 Into the whirlwinds of the upper sky.

And many passed it by with careless tread,
 Not knowing that a shadowy [ ]
 Tracks every traveller even to where the dead
 Wait peacefully for their companion now ;
 But others, by more curious humour led,
 Pause to examine,—these are very few,
 And they learn little there, except to know
 That shadows follow them where'er they go.

THE TOWER OF FAMINE.*

AMID the desolation of a city,
 Which was the cradle, and is now the grave,
 Of an extinguished people ; so that pity
 Weeps o'er the shipwrecks of oblivion's wave,
 There stands the Tower of Famine. It is built
 Upon some prison-homes, whose dwellers rave
 For bread, and gold, and blood : pain, linked to guilt,
 Agitates the light flame of their hours,
 Until its vital oil is spent or spilt :
 There stands the pile, a tower amid the towers
 And sacred domes ; each marble-ribbed roof,
 The brazen-gated temples, and the bowers
 Of solitary wealth ! the tempest proof
 Pavilions of the dark Italian air
 Are by its presence dimmed—they stand aloof,
 And are withdrawn—so that the world is bare,
 As if a spectre, wrapt in shapeless terror,
 Amid a company of ladies fair
 Should glide and glow, till it became a mirror
 Of all their beauty, and their hair and hue,
 The life of their sweet eyes, with all its error,
 Should be absorbed, till they to marble grew.

SONNET.

YE hasten to the dead ! What seek ye there,
 Ye restless thoughts and busy purposes
 Of the idle brain, which the world's livery wear ?
 O thou quick Heart, which pantest to possess
 All that anticipation feigneth fair !
 Thou vainly curious Mind which wouldest guess
 Whence thou didst come, and whither thou mayest go,
 And that which never yet was known wouldest know --
 Oh, whither hasten ye, that thus ye press
 With such swift feet life's green and pleasant path,
 Seeking alike from happiness and woe
 A refuge in the cavern of grey death ?
 O heart, and mind, and thoughts ! What thing do you
 Hope to inherit in the grave below ?

* At Pisa there still exists the prison of Ugolino, which goes by the name of "La Torre della Fame :" in the adjoining building the galley-slaves are confined. It is situated near the Ponte al Mare on the Arno.

EPIPSYCHIDION :

VERSES ADDRESSED TO THE NOBLE AND UNFORTUNATE

LADY EMILIA V——,

NOW IMPRISONED IN THE CONVENT OF ——.

“L'anima amante si slancia furio del creato, e si crea nel infinito un Mondo tutto per essa, diverso assai da questo oscuro e pauroso baratro.”—
Her own words.

My Song, I fear that thou wilt find but few
Who fitly shall conceive thy reasoning,
Of such hard matter dost thou entertain;
Whence, if by misadventure, chance should bring
Thee to base company (as chance may do),
Quite unaware of what thou dost contain,
I prithee comfort thy sweet self again,
My last delight! tell them that they are dull,
And bid them own that thou art beautiful.

THE writer of the following lines died at Florence, as he was preparing for a voyage to one of the wildest of the Sporades, which he had bought, and where it was his hope to have realised a scheme of life, suited perhaps to that happier and better world of which he is now an inhabitant, but hardly practicable in this. His life was singular; less on account of the romantic vicissitudes which diversified it, than the ideal tinge which it received from his own character and feelings. The present Poem, like the Vita Nuova of Dante, is sufficiently intelligible to a certain class of readers without a matter-of-fact history of the circumstances to which it relates; and to a certain other class it must ever remain incomprehensible, from a defect of a common organ of perception for the ideas of which it treats. Not but that, gran vergogna sarebbe a colui, che rimasse cosa sotto teste di figura, o di colore rettorico : e domandato non sapesse denudare le sue parole da tal veste, in guisa che avessero verace intendimento.

The present poem appears to have been intended by the writer as the dedication to some longer one. The stanza on the preceding page is almost a literal translation from Dante's famous canzone

Voi ch' intendendo, il terzo ciel moete, &c.

The presumptuous application of the concluding lines to his own composition will raise a smile at the expense of my unfortunate friend : be it a smile not of contempt, but pity.

EPIPSYCHIDION.

SWEET Spirit ! Sister of that orphan one,
Whose empire is the name thou weepest on,
In my heart's temple I suspend to thee
These votive wreaths of withered memory.

Poor captive bird ! who, from thy narrow cage,
Pourest such music, that it might assuage
The rugged hearts of those who prisoned thee,
Were they not deaf to all sweet melody :
This song shall be thy rose : its petals pale
Are dead, indeed, my adored Nightingale !
But soft and fragrant is the faded blossom,
And it has no thorn left to wound thy bosom.

High, spirit-winged Heart ! who dost for ever
Beat thine unfeeling bars with vain endeavour,
Till those bright plumes of thought, in which arrayed
It over-soared this low and worldly shade,
Lie shattered ; and thy panting wounded breast
Stains with dear blood its unmortal nest !
I weep vain tears : Blood would less bitter be,
Yet poured forth gladdier, could it profit thee.

Seraph of Heaven ! too gentle to be human,
Veiling beneath that radiant form of Woman
All that is insupportable in thee
Of light, and love, and immortality !
Sweet Benevolence in the eternal Curse !
Veil'd Glory of this lampless Universe !
Thou Moon beyond the clouds ! Thou living Form
Among the Dead ! thou Star above the Storm !

Thou Wonder, and thou Beauty, and thou Terror !
 Thou Harmony of Nature's art ! Thou Mirror
 In whom, as in the splendour of the Sun,
 All shapes look glorious which thou gazest on !
 Ay, even the dim words which obscure thee now
 Flash, lightning-like, with unaccustomed glow ;
 I pray thee that thou blot from this sad song
 All of its much mortality and wrong,
 With those clear drops, which start like sacred dew
 From the twin lights thy sweet soul darkens through,
 Weeping, till sorrow becomes ecstacy :
 Then smile on it, so that it may not die.

I never thought before my death to see
 Youth's vision thus made perfect : Emily,
 I love thee ; though the world by no thin name
 Will hide that love from its unvalued shame.
 Would we two had been twins of the same mother !
 Or, that the name my heart lent to another
 Could be a sister's bond for her and thee,
 Blending two beams of one eternity !
 Yet were one lawful and the other true,
 These names, though dear, could paint not, as is due,
 How beyond refuge I am thine. Ah me !
 I am not thine : I am a part of thee.

Sweet Lamp ! my moth-like Muse has burnt its wings,
 Or, like a dying swan who soars and sings,
 Young Love should teach Time, in his own grey style,
 All that thou art. Art thou not void of guile,
 A lovely soul formed to be blest and bless ?
 A well of sealed and secret happiness,
 Whose waters like blithe light and music are,
 Vanquishing dissonance and gloom ? A Star
 Which moves not in the moving Heavens, alone ?
 A smile amid dark frowns ? a gentle tone
 Amid rude voices ? a beloved light ?
 A Solitude, a Refuge, a Delight ?
 A lute, which those whom love has taught to play
 Make music on, to soothe the roughest day
 And lull fond grief asleep ? a buried treasure ?
 A cradle of young thoughts of wingless pleasure ?
 A violet-shrouded grave of Woe ?—I measure
 The world of fancies, seeking one like thee,
 And find—alas ! mine own infirmity.

She met me, Stranger, upon life's rough way,
 And lured me towards sweet Death : as Night by Day,
 Winter by Spring, or Sorrow by swift Hope,
 Led into light, life, peace. An antelope,

In the suspended impulse of its lightness,
 Were less etheroally light : the brightness
 Of her divinest presence trembles through
 Her limbs, as underneath a cloud of dew
 Embodied in the windless heaven of June,
 Amid the splendour-winged stars, the Moon
 Burns inextinguishably beautiful :
 And from her lips, as from a hyacinth full
 Of honey-dew, a liquid murmur drops,
 Killing the sense with passion : sweet as stops
 Of planetary music heard in trance.
 In her mild lights the starry spirits dance,
 The sunbeams of those wells which ever leap
 Under the lightnings of the soul – too deep
 For the brief fathom-line of thought or sense.
 The glory of her being, issuing thence,
 Stains the dead, blank, cold air with a warm shade
 Of unentangled intermixture, made
 By Love, of light and motion ; one intense
 Diffusion, one serene Omnipresence,
 Whose flowing outlines mingle in their flowing
 Around her cheeks and utmost fingers glowing
 With the uninterrupted blood, which there
 Quivers, (as in a fleece of snow-like air
 The crimson pulse of living morning quiver,)
 Continuously prolonged, and ending never,
 Till they are lost, and in that Beauty furled
 Which penetrates and clasps and fills the world ;
 Scarce visible from extreme loveliness.
 Warm fragrance seems to fall from her light dress,
 And her loose hair ; and where some heavy tress
 The air of her own speed has disentwined,
 The sweetness seems to satiate the faint wind ;
 And in the soul a wild odour is felt,
 Beyond the sense, like fiery dews that melt
 Into the bosom of a frozen bud.
 See where she stands ! a mortal shape induced
 With love and life and light and deity,
 And motion which may change but cannot die ;
 An image of some bright Eternity ;
 A shadow of some golden dream ; a Splendour
 Leaving the third sphere pilotless ; a tender
 Reflection on the eternal Moon of Love,
 Under whose motions life's dull billows move ;
 A Metaphor of Spring and Youth and Morning ;
 A vision like incarnate April, warning,
 With smiles and tears, Frost the Anatomy
 Into his summer grave.

Ah ! woe is me !
 What have I dared ? where am I lifted ? how

Shall I descend, and perish not? I know
 That Love makes all things equal : I have heard
 By mine own heart this joyous truth averred :
 The spirit of the worm beneath the sod,
 In love and worship, blends itself with God.

Spouse! Sister! Angel! Pilot of the Fate
 Whose course has been so starless! O too late
 Beloved! O too soon adored, by me!
 For in the fields of immortality
 My spirit should at first have worshipped thine,
 A divine presence in a place divine;
 Or should have moved beside it on this earth,
 A shadow of that substance, from its birth;
 But not as now:—I love thee; yes, I feel
 That on the fountain of my heart a seal
 Is set, to keep its waters pure and bright
 For thee, since in those tears thou hast delight.
 We—are we not formed, as notes of music are,
 For one another, though dissimilar;
 Such difference without discord, as can make
 Those sweetest sounds, in which all spirits shake,
 As trembling leaves in a continuous air?

Thy wisdom speaks in me, and bids me dare
 Beacon the rocks on which high hearts are wreckt.
 I never was attached to that great sect,
 Whose doctrine is, that each one should select
 Out of the crowd a mistress or a friend,
 And all the rest, though fair and wise, commend
 To cold oblivion, though it is in the code
 Of modern morals, and the beaten road
 Which those poor slaves with weary footsteps tread,
 Who travel to their home among the dead
 By the broad highway of the world, and so
 With one chained friend, perhaps a jealous foe,
 The dreariest and the longest journey go.

True Love in this differs from gold and clay,
 That to divide is not to take away.
 Love is like understanding, that grows bright,
 Gazing on many truths; 'tis like thy light,
 Imagination! which, from earth and sky,
 And from the depths of human phantasy,
 As from a thousand prisms and mirrors, fills
 The Universe with glorious beams, and kills
 Error, the worm, with many a sun-like arrow
 Of its reverberated lightning. Narrow
 The heart that loves, the brain that contemplates,
 The life that wears, the spirit that creates

One object, and one form, and builds thereby
A sepulchre for its eternity.

Mind from its object differs most in this :
Evil from good ; misery from happiness ;
The baser from the nobler ; the impure
And frail, from what is clear and must endure.
If you divide suffering and dross, you may
Diminish till it is consumed away ;
If you divide pleasure and love and thought,
Each part exceeds the whole ; and we know not
How much, while any yet remains unshared,
Of pleasure may be gained, of sorrow spared :
This truth is that deep well, whence sages draw
The unenvied light of hope ; the eternal law
By which those live, to whom this world of life
Is as a garden ravaged, and whose strife
Tills for the promise of a later birth
The wilderness of this Elysian earth.

There was a Being whom my spirit oft
Met on its visioned wanderings, far aloft,
In the clear golden prime of my youth's dawn,
Upon the fairy isles of sunny lawn,
Amid the enchanted mountains, and the caves
Of divine sleep, and on the air-like waves
Of wonder-level dream, whose tremulous floor
Paved her light steps ;—on an imagined shore,
Under the grey beak of some promontory
She met me, robed in such exceeding glory,
That I beheld her not. In solitudes
Her voice came to me through the whispering woods,
And from the fountains, and the odours deep
Of flowers, which, like lips murmuring in their sleep
Of the sweet kisses which had lulled them there,
Breathed but of her to the enamoured air ;
And from the breezes whether low or loud,
And from the rain of every passing cloud,
And from the singing of the summer-birds,
And from all sounds, all silence. In the words
Of antique verse and high romance,—in form,
Sound, colour— in whatever checks that Storm
Which with the shattered present chokes the past ;
And in that best philosophy, whose taste
Makes this cold common hell, our life, a doom
As glorious as a fiery martyrdom ;
Her Spirit was the harmony of truth.—

T'en, from the caverns of my dreamy youth
I sprang, as one sandalled with plumes of fire,
And towards the loadstar of my one desire,

I flitted, like a dizzy moth, whose flight
 Is as a dead leaf's in the owl-light,
 When it would seek in Hesper's setting sphere
 A radiant death, a fiery sepulchre,
 As if it were a lamp of earthly flame.—
 But She, whom prayers or tears then could not tame,
 Past, like a God throned on a winged planet,
 Whose burning plumes to tenfold swiftness fan it,
 Into the dreary cone of our life's shade;
 And as a man with mighty loss dismayed,
 I would have followed, though the grave between Yawned like a gulf whose spectres are unseen :
 When a voice said :—" O Thou of hearts the weakest,
 The phantom is beside thee whom thou seekest."
 Then I— " Where?" the world's echo answered " where!"
 And in that silence, and in my despair,
 I questioned every tongueless wind that flew
 Over my tower of mourning, if it knew
 Whither 'twas fled, this soul out of my soul ;
 And innumured names and spells which have control
 Over the sightless tyrants of our fate ;
 But neither prayer nor verse could dissipate
 The night which closed on her ; nor uncreate
 That world within this Chaos, mine and me,
 Of which she was the veiled Divinity,
 The world I say of thoughts that worshipped her :
 And therefore I went forth, with hope and fear,
 And every gentle passion sick to death,
 Feeding my course with expectation's breath,
 Into the wintry forest of our life ;
 And struggling through its error with vain strife,
 And stumbling in my weakness and my haste,
 And half bewildered by new forms, I past
 Seeking among those untought foresters
 If I could find one form resembling hers,
 In which she might have masked herself from me.
 There,—One, whose voice was venom'd melody
 Sate by a well, under blue night-shade bowers ;
 The breath of her false mouth was like faint flowers,
 Her touch was as electric poison,—flame
 Out of her looks into my vitals came,
 And from her living cheeks and bosom flew
 A killing air, which pierc'd like honey-dew
 Into the core of my green heart, and lay
 Upon its leaves ; until, as hair grown grey
 O'er a young brow, they hid its unblown prime
 With ruins of unseasonable time.

In many mortal forms I rashly sought
 The shadow of that idol of my thought.

And some were fair—but beauty dies away :
 Others were wise—but honeyed words betray :
 And One was true—oh ! why not true to me ?
 Then, as a hunted deer, that could not flee,
 I turned upon my thoughts, and stood at bay,
 Wounded, and weak, and panting; the cold day
 Trembled, for pity of my strife and pain,
 When, like a noon-day dawn, there shone again
 Deliverance. One stood on my path who seemed
 As like the glorious shape which I had dreamed,
 As is the Moon, whose changes ever run
 Into themselves, to the eternal Sun ;
 The cold chaste Moon, the Queen of Heaven's bright isles
 Who makes all beautiful on which she smiles.
 That wandering shrine of soft yet icy flame
 Which ever is transformed, yet still the same,
 And warms not but illuminates. Young and fair
 As the descended Spirit of that sphere,
 She hid me, as the Moon may hide the night
 From its own darkness, until all was bright
 Between the Heaven and Earth of my calm mind,
 And, as a cloud chariotred by the wind,
 She led me to a cave in that wild place,
 And sat beside me, with her downward face
 Illumining my slumbers, like the Moon
 Waxing and waning o'er Endymion.
 And I was laid asleep, spirit and limb,
 And all my being became bright or dim
 As the Moon's image in a summer sea,
 According as she smiled or frowned on me ;
 And there I lay, within a chaste cold bed :—
 Alas, I then was nor alive nor dead :—
 For at her silver voice came Death and Life,
 Unmindful each of their accustomed strife,
 Masked like twin babes, a sister and a brother,
 The wandering hopes of one abandoned mother,
 And through the cavern without wings they flew,
 And cried, “ Away ! he is not of our crew.”
 I wept, and, though it be a dream, I weep.

What storms then shook the ocean of my sleep.
 Blotting that Moon, whose pale and waning lips
 Then shrank as in the sickness of eclipse ;—
 And how my soul was as a lampless sea,
 And who was then its Tempest ; and when She,
 The Planet of that hour, was quenched, what frost
 Crept o'er these waters, till from coast to coast
 The moving billows of my being fell
 Into a death of ice, immovable ;—
 And then—what earthquakes made it gape and split,

The white Moon smiling all the while on it,
These words conceal :—If not, each word would be
The key of staunchless tears. Weep not for me !

At length, into the obscure forest came
The vision I had sought through grief and shame.
Athwart that wintry wilderness of thorns
Flashed from her motion splendour like the Morn's,
And from her presence life was radiated
Through the grey earth and branches bare and dead ;
So that her way was paved, and roofed above
With flowers as soft as thoughts of budding love ;
And music from her respiration spread
Like light,—all other sounds were penetrated
By the small, still, sweet spirit of that sound,
So that the savage winds hung mute around ;
And odours warm and fresh fell from her hair
Dissolving the dull cold in the froze air :
Soft as an Incarnation of the Sun,
When light is changed to love, this glorious One
Floated into the cavern where I lay,
And called my Spirit, and the dreamning clay
Was lifted by the thing that dreamed below
As smoke by fire, and in her beauty's glow
I stood, and felt the dawn of my long night
Was penetrating me with living light :
I knew it was the Vision veiled from me
So many years—that it was Emily.

Thin Spheres of light who rule this passive Earth,
This world of love, this me ; and into birth
Awaken all its fruits and flowers, and dart
Magnetic might into its central heart ;
And lift its billows and its mists, and guide
By everlasting laws each wind and tide
To its fit cloud, and its appointed cave ;
And lull its storms, each in the craggy grave
Which was its cradle, luring to faint bowers
The armies of the rainbow-winged showers ;
And, as those married lights, which from the towers
Of Heaven look forth and fold the wandering globe
In liquid sleep and splendour, as a robe ;
And all their many-mingled influence blend,
If equal, yet unlike, to one sweet end ;—
So ye, bright regents, with alternate sway,
Govern my sphere of being, night and day !
Thou, not disdaining even a borrowed might ;
Thou, not eclipsing a remoter light ;
And, through the shadow of the seasons three,
From Spring to Autumn's sere maturity,

Light it into the Winter of the tomb,
 Where it may ripen to a brighter bloom.
 Thou too, O Comet, beautiful and fierce,
 Who drew the heart of this frail Universe
 Towards thine own ; till, wreckt in that convulsion,
 Alternating attraction and repulsion,
 Thine went astray, and that was rent in twain ;
 Oh, float into our azure heaven again !
 Be there love's folding-star at thy return ;
 The living Sun will feed thee from its urn
 Of golden fire ; the Moon will veil her horn
 In thy last smiles ; adoring Even and Morn
 Will worship thee with incense of calm breath
 And lights and shadows ; as the star of Death
 And Birth is worshipped by those sisters wild .
 Called Hope and Fear—upon the heart are piled
 Their offerings,—of this sacrifice divine
 A World shall be the altar.

Lady mine,

Scorn not these flowers of thought, the fading birth
 Which from its heart of hearts that plant puts forth,
 Whose fruit, made perfect by thy sunny eyes,
 Will be as of the trees of Paradise.

'The day is come, and thou wilt fly with me.
 To whatsoe'er of dull mortality
 Is mine, remain a vestal sister still ;
 To the intense, the deep, the imperishable,
 Not mine, but me, henceforth be thou united
 Even as a bride, delighting and delighted.
 The hour is come —the destined Star has risen
 Which shall descend upon a vacant prison.
 The walls are high, the gates are strong, thick set
 The sentinels— but true love never yet
 Was thus constrained : it overleaps all fence :
 Like lightning, with invisible violence
 Piercing its continents ; like Heaven's free breath,
 Which he who grasps can hold not ; like Death,
 Who rides upon a thought, and makes his way
 Through temple, tower, and palace, and the array
 Of arms : more strength has Love than he or they ;
 For he can burst his charnel, and make free
 The limbs in chains, the heart in agony,
 The soul in dust and chaos.

Emily,

A ship is floating in the harbour now,
 A wind is hovering o'er the mountain's brow ;
 There is a path on the sea's azure floor,
 No keel has ever ploughed that path before :
 The halegons brood around the foamless isles ;

The treacherous Ocean has forsaken its wiles ;
 The merry mariners are bold and free :
 Say, my heart's sister, wilt thou sail with me ?
 Our bark is as an albatross, whose nest
 Is a far Eden of the purple East ;
 And we between her wings will sit, while Night,
 And Day, and Storm, and Calm, pursue their flight,
 Our ministers, along the boundless Sea,
 Treading each other's heels, unheededly.
 It is an isle under Ionian skies,
 Beautiful as a wreck of Paradise,
 And, for the harbours are not safe and good,
 This land would have remained a solitude
 But for some pastoral people native there,
 Who from the Elysian, clear, and golden air
 Draw the last spirit of the age of gold,
 Simple and spirited ; innocent and bold.
 The blue Egean girds this chosen home,
 With ever-changing sound and light and foam,
 Kissing the sifted sands, and caverns hoar ;
 And all the winds wandering along the shore
 Undulate with the undulating tide :
 There are thick woods where sylvan forms abide ;
 And many a fountain, rivulet, and pond,
 As clear as elemental diamond,
 Or serene morning air ; and far beyond,
 The mossy tracks made by the goats and deer
 (Which the rough shepherd treads but once a year,) .
 Pierce into glades, caverns, and bowers, and halls
 Built round with ivy, which the waterfalls
 Illumining, with sound that never fails,
 Accompany the noonday nightingales ;
 And all the place is peopled with sweet airs ;
 The light clear element which the isle wears
 Is heavy with the scent of lemon-flowers,
 Which floats like mist laden with unseen showers,
 And falls upon the eye-lids like faint sleep ;
 And from the moss violets and jonquils peep,
 And dart their arrowy odour through the brain
 Till you might faint with that delicious pain.
 And every motion, odour, beam, and tone,
 With that deep music is in unison :
 Which is a soul within the soul - they seem
 Like echoes of an antenatal dream.—
 It is an isle 'twixt Heaven, Air, Earth, and Sea,
 Cradled, and hung in clear tranquillity ;
 Bright as that wandering Eden Lucifer,
 Washed by the soft blue Oceans of young air.
 It is a favoured place. Famine or Blight,
 Pestilence, War, and Earthquake, never light

Upon its mountain-peaks ; blind vultures, they Sail onward far upon their fatal way :
 The winged storms, chaunting their thunder-psalm
 To other lands, leave azure chasms of calm
 Over this isle, or weep themselves in dew,
 From which its fields and woods ever renew
 Their green and golden immortality.
 And from the sea there rise, and from the sky
 There fall clear exhalations, soft and bright,
 Veil after veil, each hiding some delight.
 Which Sun or Moon or zephyr draw aside,
 Till the isle's beauty, like a naked bride
 Glowing at once with love and loveliness,
 Blushes and trembles at its own excess :
 Yet, like a buried lamp, a Soul no less
 Burns in the heart of this delicious isle,
 An atom of the Eternal, whose own smile
 Unfolds itself, and may be felt not seen
 O'er the grey rocks, blue waves, and forests green,
 Filling their bare and void interstices.—
 But the chief marvel of the wilderness
 Is a lone dwelling, built by whom or how
 None of the rustic island-people know :
 'Tis not a tower of strength, though with its height
 It overtops the woods ; but, for delight,
 Some wise and tender Ocean-King, ere crime
 Had been invented, in the world's young prime,
 Reared it, a wonder of that simple time,
 And envy of the isles, a pleasure-house
 Made sacred to his sister and his spouse.
 It scarce seems now a wreck of human art,
 But, as it were, Titanic ; in the heart
 Of Earth having assumed its form, then grown
 Out of the mountains, from the living stone,
 Lifting itself in caverns light and high :
 For all the antique and learned imagery
 Has been erased, and in the place of it
 The ivy and the wild vine interknit
 The volumes of their many-twining stems ;
 Parasite flowers illumé with dewy gems
 The lampless halls, and when they fade, the sky
 Peeps through their winter-woof of tracery
 With moonlight patches, or star atoms keen,
 Or fragments of the day's intense serene ;
 Working mosaic on their Parian floors.
 And, day and night, aloof, from the high towers
 And terraces, the Earth and Ocean seem
 To sleep in one another's arms, and dream
 Of waves, flowers, clouds, woods, rocks, and all that we Read in their smiles, and call reality.

This isle and house are mine, and I have vowed
 Thee to be lady of the solitude.
 And I have fitted up some chambers there
 Looking towards the golden Eastern air,
 And level with the living winds, which flow
 Like waves above the living waves below.
 I have sent books and music there, and all
 Those instruments with which high spirits call
 The future from its cradle, and the past
 Out of its grave, and make the present last
 In thoughts and joys which sleep, but cannot die,
 Folded within their own eternity.
 Our simple life wants little, and true taste
 Hires not the pale drudge Luxury to waste
 The scene it would adorn, and therefore still,
 Nature, with all her children, haunts the hill.
 The ring-dove, in the embowering ivy, yet
 Keeps up her love-lament, and the owls flit
 Round the evening tower, and the young stars glance
 Between the quick bats in their twilight dance ;
 The spotted deer bask in the fresh moonlight
 Before our gate, and the slow silent night
 Is measured by the pants of their calm sleep.
 Be this our home in life, and when years heap
 Their withered hours, like leaves, on our decay,
 Let us become the overhanging day,
 The living soul of this Elysian isle,
 Conscious, inseparable, one. Meanwhile
 We two will rise, and sit, and walk together,
 Under the roof of blue Ionian weather,
 And wander in the meadows, or ascend
 The mossy mountains, where the blue heavens bend
 With lightest winds, to touch their paramour ;
 Or linger, where the pebble-paven shore,
 Under the quick faint kisses of the sea
 Trembles and sparkles as with ecstacy,—
 Possessing and posset by all that is Within that calm circumference of bliss,
 And by each other, till to love and live
 Be one : - or, at the noon tide hour, arrive
 Where some old cavern hoar seems yet to keep
 The moonlight of the expired night asleep,
 Through which the awakened day can never peep ;
 A veil for our seclusion, close as Night's,
 Where secure sleep may kill thine innocent lights ;
 Sleep, the fresh dew of languid love, the rain
 Whose drops quench kisses till they burn again.
 And we will talk, until thought's melody
 Become too sweet for utterance, and it die
 In words, to live again in looks, which dart

With thrilling tone into the voiceless heart,
 Harmonising silence without a sound.
 Our breath shall intermix, our bosoms bound,
 And our veins beat together ; and our lips,
 With other eloquence than words, eclipse
 The soul that burns between them ; and the wells
 Which boil under our being's inmost cells,
 The fountains of our deepest life, shall be
 Confused in passion's golden purity,
 As mountain-springs under the morning Sun.
 We shall become the same, we shall be one
 Spirit within two frames, oh ! wherefore two ?
 One passion in twin-hearts, which grows and grew
 Till like two meteors of expanding flame,
 Those spheres instinct with it become the same,
 Touch, mingle, are transfigured ; ever still Burning, yet ever unconsumable :
 In one another's substance finding food,
 Like flames too pure and light and unimbued
 To nourish their bright lives with baser prey,
 Which point to Heaven and cannot pass away :
 One hope within two wills, one will bencat !
 Two overshadowing minds, one life, one death,
 One Heaven, one Hell, one immortality,
 And one annihilation. Woe is me !
 The winged words on which my soul would pierce
 Into the height of love's rare Universe,
 Are chains of lead around its flight of fire.—
 I pant, I sink, I tremble, I expire !

---

Weak verses, go, kneel at your Sovereign's feet,
 And say :—“ We are the masters of thy slave ;
 What wouldest thou with us and ours and thine ? ”
 Then call your sisters from Oblivion's cave,
 All singing loud : “ Love's very pain is sweet,
 But its reward is in the world divine,
 Which, if not here, it builds beyond the grave.”
 So shall ye live when I am there. Then haste
 Over the hearts of men, until ye meet
 Marina, Vanna, Primus, and the rest,
 And bid them love each other, and be blest :
 And leave the troop which errs, and which reproves,
 And come and be my guest,—for I am Love's.

ADONAI;

AN ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF JOHN KEATS,

AUTHOR OF ENODYMIOS, HYPERION, ETC.

Ἄστρος τρίν μὲν ἐλαύτες ἵνε ζώσου ἔησος.
Νῦν δὲ οὐαὶν, λάμπτος ἴστρος ἐν φύκεύοις.

PLATO.

PREFACE.

Φύγουσαν οὐλής, Βίων, τοῖς σὸν στόμα, φύγουσαν εἶδες·
Ηδὲ τοὺς χειλῆσι τοτέδησε, κοῖν εὐλυκαθή;
Τίς δὲ βροτὸς τασσοῦσιν ἀναυτος, οὐ κιγάσσει τοι;
ΠΙ δοῦναι λαλέοντι τῷ τάγμασαν: ἔχειν γὰρ φέδαν·

MOSCHUS, EPITAPHI. BION.

It is my intention to subjoin to the London edition of this poem, a criticism upon the claims of its lamented object to be classed among the writers of the highest genius who have adorned our age. My known repugnance to the narrow principles of taste on which several of his earlier compositions were modelled, prove at least that I am an impartial judge. I consider the fragment of "Hyperion," as second to nothing that was ever produced by a writer of the same years.

John Keats died at Rome, of a consumption, in his twenty-fourth year, on the 27th of December, 1820, and was buried in the romantic and lonely cemetery of the protestants in that city, under the pyramid which is the tomb of Cestius, and the massy walls and towers, now mouldering and desolate, which formed the circuit of ancient Rome. The cemetery is an open space among the ruins, covered in winter with violets and daisies. It might make one in love with death, to think that one should be buried in so sweet a place.

The genius of the lamented person to whose memory I have dedicated these unworthy verses, was not less delicate and fragile than it was beautiful; and where canker-worms abound, what wonder, if its young flower was blighted in the bud? The savage criticism on his "Endymion," which appeared in the Quarterly Review, produced the most violent effect on his susceptible mind; the agitation thus originated ended in the rupture of a blood-vessel in the lungs; a rapid consumption ensued; and the succeeding acknowledgments from more candid critics, of the true greatness of his powers, were ineffectual to heal the wound thus wantonly inflicted.

It may be well said, that these wretched men know not what they do. They scatter their insults and their slanders without heed as to whether the poisoned shaft lights on a heart made callous by many blows, or one, like Keats's, composed of more penetrable stuff. One of their associates is, to my knowledge, a most base and unprincipled calumniator. As to "Endymion," was it a poem, whatever might be its defects, to be treated contemptuously by those who had celebrated with various degrees of complacency and panegyrie, "Paris," and "Woman," and a "Syrian Tale," and Mrs. LeFanu, and Mr. Barret, and Mr. Howard Payne, and a long list of the illustrious obscure? Are these the men, who in their venal good-nature, presumed to draw a parallel between the Rev. Mr. Milman and Lord Byron? What gnats did they strain at here, after having swallowed all those camels? Against what woman taken in adultery dares the foremost of these literary prostitutes to cast his opprobrious stone? Miserable man! you, one of the meanest, have wantonly defaced one of the noblest specimens of the workmanship of God. Nor shall it be your excuse, that, murderer as you are, you have spoken daggers, but used none.

The circumstances of the closing scene of poor Keats's life were not made known to me until the Elegy was ready for the press. I am given to understand that the wound which his sensitive spirit had received from the criticism of "Endymion" was exasperated at the bitter sense of unrequited benefits; the poor fellow seems to have been hooted from the stage of life, no less by those on whom he had wasted the promise of his genius, than those on whom he had lavished his fortune and his care. He was accompanied to Rome, and attended in his last illness by Mr. Severn, a young artist of the highest promise, who, I have been informed, "almost risked his own life, and sacrificed every prospect, to unremitting attendance upon his dying friend." Had I known these circumstances before the completion of my poem, I should have been tempted to add my feeble tribute of applause to the more solid recompence which the virtuous man finds in the recollection of his own motives. Mr. Severn can dispense with a reward from "such stuff as dreams are made of." His conduct is a golden augury of the success of his future career—may the unextinguished Spirit of his illustrious friend animate the creations of his pencil, and plead against Oblivion for his name!

ADONAIS.

I.

I WEEP for ADONAIS—he is dead !
 Oh, weep for Adonais ! though our tears
 Thaw not the frost which binds so dear a head !
 And thou, sad Hour, selected from all years
 To mourn our loss, rouse thy obscure compeers,
 And teach them thine own sorrow ; say : with mo-
 Died Adonais ; till the Future dares
 Forget the Past, his fate and fame shall be
 An echo and a light unto eternity !

II.

Where wert thou, mighty Mother, when he lay,
 When thy son lay, pierced by the shaft which flies
 In darkness ? where was born Urania
 When Adonais died ? With veiled eyes,
 'Mid listening Echoes, in her Paradise
 She sate, while one, with soft enamoured breath,
 Rekindled all the fading melodies,
 With which, like flowers that mock the corse beneath,
 He had adorned and hid the coming bulk of death.

III.

Oh, weep for Adonais—he is dead !
 Wake, melancholy Mother, wake and weep !
 Yet wherefore ? Quench within their burning bed
 Thy fiery tears, and let thy loud heart keep,
 Like his, a mute and uncomplaining sleep ;
 For he is gone, where all things wise and fair
 Descend : -oh, dream not that the amorous Deep
 Will yet restore him to the vital air ;
 Death feeds on his mute voice, and laughs at our despair.

IV.

Most musical of mourners, weep again !
 Lament anew, Urania !—He died,
 Who was the Sire of an immortal strain,
 Blind, old, and lonely, when his country's pride
 The priest, the slave, and the liberticide,
 Trampled and mocked with many a loathed rite
 Of lust and blood ; he went, unterrified,
 Into the gulf of death ; but his clear Sprite
 Yet reigns o'er earth ; the third among the sons of light.

v.

Most musical of mourners, weep anew !
 Not all to that bright station dared to climb :
 And happier they their happiness who knew,
 Whose tapers yet burn through that night of time
 In which suns perished ; others more sublime,
 Struck by the envious wrath of man or God,
 Have sunk, extinct in their resplendent prime ;
 And some yet live, treading the thorny road,
 Which leads, through toil and hate, to Fane's serene abode.

vi.

But now, thy youngest, dearest one, has perished,
 The nursling of thy widowhood, who grew,
 Like a pale flower by some sad maiden cherished,
 And fed with true love tears instead of dew ;
 Most musical of mourners, weep anew !
 Thy extreme hope, the loveliest and the last,
 The bloom, whose petals nipt before they blew
 Died on the promise of the fruit, is waste ;
 The broken lily lies—the storm is overpast.

vii.

To that high Capital, where kingly Death
 Keeps his pale court in beauty and decay,
 He came ; and bought, with price of purest breath,
 A grave among the eternal.—Come away !
 Haste, while the vault of blue Italian day
 Is yet his sitting charnel-roof ! while still
 He lies, as if in dewy sleep he lay ;
 Awake him not ! surely he takes his fill
 Of deep and liquid rest, forgetful of all ill.

viii.

He will awake no more, oh, never more !
 Within the twilight chamber spreads apace
 The shadow of white Death, and at the door
 Invisible Corruption waits to trace
 His extreme way to her dim dwelling-place ;
 The eternal Hunger sits, but pity and awe
 Sooths her pale rage, nor dares she to deface
 So fair a prey, till darkness and the law
 Of change, shall o'er his sleep the mortal curtain draw.

ix.

Oh, weep for Adonais !—The quick Dreams,
 The passion-winged Ministers of thought,
 Who were his flocks, whom near the living streams
 Of his young spirit he fed, and whom he taught
 The love which was its music, wander not,— Wander no more, from kindling brain to brain,
 But droop there, whence they sprung ; and mourn their lot
 Round the cold heart, where, after their sweet pain,
 They ne'er will gather strength, nor find a home again.

x.

And one with trembling hand clasps his cold head,
 And fans him with her moonlight wings, and cries,
 "Our love, our hope, our sorrow, is not dead ;
 See, on the silken fringe of his faint eyes,
 Like dew upon a sleeping flower, there lies
 A tear some Dream has loosened from his brain."
 Lost Angel of a ruined Paradise !
 She knew not 'twas her own ; as with no stain
 She faded, like a cloud which had outwept its rain.

xi.

One from a lucid urn of starry dew
 Washed his light limbs, as if embalming them ;
 Another clipp'd her profuse locks, and threw
 The wreath upon him, like an amadem,
 Which frozen tears instead of pearls begem ;
 Another in her wilful grief would break
 Her bow and winged reeds, as if to stem
 A greater loss with one which was more weak ;
 And dull the barbed fire against his frozen cheek.

xii.

Another Splendour on his mouth alit,
 That mouth whence it was wont to draw the breath
 Which gave it strength to pierce the guarded wit,
 And pass into the panting heart beneath
 With lightning and with music : the damp death
 Quenched its caress upon its icy lips ;
 And, as a dying meteor stains a wreath
 Of moonlight vapour, which the cold night clips,
 It flushed through his pale limbs, and passed to its eclipse.

xiii.

And others came, - Desires and Adorations,
 Winged Persuasions, and veiled Destinies,
 Splendours, and Gloom, and glimmering Incarnations
 Of hopes and fears, and twilight Phantasies ;
 And Sorrow, with her family of Sighs,
 And Pleasure, blind with tears, led by the gleam
 Of her own dying smile instead of eyes,
 Came in slow pomp ; the moving pomp might seem Like pageantry of mist on an autumnal stream.

xiv.

All he had loved, and moulded into thought
 From shape, and hue, and odour, and sweet sound,
 Lamented Adonais. Morning sought
 Her eastern watch-tower, and her hair unbound,
 Wet with the tears which should adorn the ground,
 Dimmed the aerial eyes that kindle day ;
 Afar the melancholy thunder moaned,
 Pale Ocean in unquiet slumber lay,
 And the wild winds flew around, sobbing in their dismay.

xv.

Lost Echo sits amid the voiceless mountains,
And feeds her grief with his remembered lay,
And will no more reply to winds or fountains,
Or amorous birds perched on the young green spray,
Or herdsman's horn, or bell at closing day ;
Since she can mimic not his lips, more dear
Than those for whose disdain they pined away
Into a shadow of all sounds :—a drear
Murmur, between their songs, is all the woodmen hear.

xvi.

Grief made the young Spring wild, and she threw down
Her kindling buds, as if she Autumn were,
Or they dead leaves ; since her delight is flown,
For whom should she have waked the sullen year ?
To Phœbus was not Hyacinth so dear,
Nor to himself Narcissus, as to both
Thou Adonais ; wan they stand and sore
Amid the faint companions of their youth,
With dew all turned to tears ; odour, to sighing ruth.

xvii.

Thy spirit's sister, the lorn nightingale,
Mourns not her mate with such melodious pain ;
Not so the eagle, who like thee could scale
Heaven, and could nourish in the sun's domain
Her mighty youth, with morning doth complain,
Soaring and screaming round her empty nest,
As Albion wails for thee : the curse of Cain
Light on his head who pierced thy innocent breast,
And scared the angel soul that was its earthly guest !

xviii.

Ah woe is me ! Winter is come and gone,
But grief returns with the revolving year ;
The airs and streams renew their joyous tone ;
The ants, the bees, the swallows, re-appear ;
Fresh leaves and flowers deck the dead Seasons' bier ;
The amorous birds now pair in every brake,
And build their mossy homes in field and brere ;
And the green lizard, and the golden snake,
Like unimprisoned flames, out of their trance awake.

xix.

Through wood and stream and field and hill and Ocean,
A quickening life from the Earth's heart has burst,
As it has ever done, with change and motion,
From the great morning of the world when first
God dawned on Chaos ; in its stream immersed,
The lamps of Heaven flash with a softer light ;
All baser things pant with life's sacred thirst ;
Diffuse themselves ; and spend in love's delight,
The beauty and the joy of their renewed might.

xx.

The leprous corpse touched by this spirit tender,
 Exhales itself in flowers of gentle breath ;
 Like incarnations of the stars, when splendour
 Is changed to fragrance, they illumine death,
 And mock the merry worm that wakes beneath ;
 Nought we know dies. Shall that alone which knows
 Be as a sword consumed before the sheath
 By sightless lightning ? th' intense atom glows
 A moment, then is quenched in a most cold repose.

xxi.

Alas ! that all we loved of him should be,
 But for our grief, as if it had not been,
 And grief itself be mortal ! Woe is me !
 Whence are we, and why are we ? of what scene
 The actors or spectators ! Great and mean
 Meet massed in death, who lends what life must borrow.
 As long as skies are blue, and fields are green,
 Evening must usher night, night urge the morrow,
 Month follow month with woe, and year wake year to sorrow.

xxii.

He will awake no more, oh, never more !
 "Wake thou," cried Misery, "childless Mother, rise
 Out of thy sleep, and slake, in thy heart's core,
 A wound more fierce than his tears and sighs."
 And all the Dreams that watched Urania's eyes,
 And all the echoes whom their sister's song
 Had held in holy silence, cried, "Arise !"
 Swift as a Thought by the snake Memory stung,
 From her ambrosial rest the fading Splendour sprung.

xxiii.

She rose like an autumnal Night, that springs
 Out of the East, and follows wild and drear
 The golden Day, which, on eternal wings,
 Even as a ghost abandoning a bier,
 Has left the Earth a corpse. Sorrow and fear
 So struck, so roused, so rapt, Urania,
 So saddened round her like an atmosphere
 Of stormy mist ; so swept her on her way,
 Even to the mournful place where Adonais lay.

xxiv.

Out of her secret Paradise she sped,
 Through camps and cities rough with stone, and steel,
 And human hearts, which to her acry tread
 Yielding not, wounded the invisible
 Palms of her tender feet where'er they fell ;
 And barbed tongues, and thoughts more sharp than they Rent the soft Form they never could repel,
 Whose sacred blood, like the young tears of May,
 Paved with eternal flowers that undeserving way.

xxv.

In the death-chamber for a moment Death,
 Shamed by the presence of that living Might,
 Blushed to annihilation, and the breath
 Revisited those lips, and life's pale light
 Flashed through those limbs, so late her dear delight.
 "Leave me not wild and drear and comfortless,
 As silent lightning leaves the starless night !
 Leave me not !" cried Urania : her distress
 Roused Death : Death rose and smiled, and met her vain caress.

xxvi.

"Stay yet awhile ! speak to me once again ;
 Kiss me, so long but as a kiss may live ;
 And in my heartless breast and burning brain
 That word, that kiss shall all thoughts else survive,
 With food of saddest memory kept alive,
 Now thou art dead, as if it were a part
 Of thee, my Adonais ! I would give
 All that I am to be as thou now art,
 But I am chained to Time, and cannot thence depart !

xxvii.

"O gentle child, beautiful as thou wert,
 Why didst thou leave the trodden paths of men
 Too soon, and with weak hands though mighty heart
 Dare the unpastured dragon in his den ?
 Defenceless as thou wert, oh ! where was then
 Wisdom the mirror'd shield, or scorn the spear ?
 Or hadst thou waited the full cycle, when
 Thy spirit should have filled its crescent sphere,
 The monsters of life's waste had fled from thee like deer.

xxviii.

"The heralded wolves, bold only to pursue ;
 The obscene ravens, clamorous o'er the dead ;
 The vultures, to the conqueror's banner true,
 Who feed where Desolation first has fed,
 And whose wings rain contagion ; -how they fled,
 When, like Apollo, from his golden bow,
 The Pythian of the age one arrow sped
 And maled !—The spoilers tempt no second blow,
 They fawn on the proud feet that spurn them lying low.

xxix.

"The sun comes forth, and many reptiles spawn ;
 He sets, and each ephemeral insect then
 Is gathered into death without a dawn,
 And the immortal stars awake again ;
 So it is in the world of living men :
 A godlike mind sours forth, in its delight
 Making earth bare and veiling heaven, and when
 It sinks, the swarms that dimmed or shared its light
 Leave to its kindred lamps the spirit's awful night."

Thus ceased she : and the mountain shepherds came,
 Their garlands sere, their magic mantles rent ;
 The Pilgrim of Eternity, whose fame
 Over his living head like Heaven is bent,
 An early but enduring monument,
 Came, veiling all the lightnings of his song
 In sorrow : from her wilds Ierne sent
 The sweetest lyrist of her saddest wrong,
 And love taught grief to fall like music from his tongue.

xxxI.

'Midst others of less note, came one frail Form,
 A phantom among men, companionless
 As the last cloud of an expiring storm,
 Whose thunder is its knell ; he, as I guess,
 Had gazed on Nature's naked loveliness,
 Acteon-like, and now he fled astray
 With feeble steps o'er the world's wilderness,
 And his own thoughts, along that rugged way,
 Pursued, like raging hounds, their father and their prey.

xxxII.

A pard-like Spirit beautiful and swift—
 A love in desolation masked ;—a Power
 Girt round with weakness ;—it can scarce uplift
 The weight of the superincumbent hour ;
 It is a dying lamp, a falling shower,
 A breaking billow ;—even whilst we speak
 Is it not broken ? On the withering flower
 The killing sun smiles brightly : on a cheek
 The life can burn in blood, even while the heart may break.

xxxIII.

His head was bound with pansies over-blown,
 And faded violets, white, and pied, and blue ;
 And a light spear topped with a cypress cone,
 Round whose rude shaft dark ivy-tresses grew
 Yet dripping with the forest's noon-day dew,
 Vibrated, as the ever-beating heart
 Shook the weak hand that grasped it ; of that crew
 He came the last, neglected and apart ;
 A herd-abandoned deer, struck by the hunter's dart.

xxxIV.

All stood aloof, and at his partial moan
 Smiled through their tears ; well knew that gentle band
 Who in another's fate now wept his own ;
 As in the accents of an unknown land
 He sang new sorrow ; sad Urania scanned
 The Stranger's mien, and murmured : "Who art thou?"
 He answered not, but with a sudden hand
 Made bare his branded and ensanguined brow,
 Which was like Cain's or Christ's. Oh ! that it should be so ! .

xxxv.

What softer voice is hushed over the dead ?
 Athwart what brow is that dark mantle thrown ?
 What form leans sadly o'er the white death-bed,
 In mockery of monumental stone,
 The heavy heart heaving without a moan ?
 If it be he, who, gentlest of the wise,
 Taught, soothed, loved, honoured the departed one ;
 Let me not vex, with inharmonious sighs,
 The silence of that heart's accepted sacrifice.

xxxvi.

Our Adonais has drunk poison—oh !
 What deaf and viperous murderer could crown
 Life's early cup with such a draught of woe ?
 The nameless worm would now itself disown :
 It felt, yet could escape the magic tone
 Whose prelude held all envy, hate and wrong,
 But what was howling in one breast alone,
 Silent with expectation of the song,
 Whose master's hand is cold, whose silver lyre unstrung.

xxxvii.

Live thou, whose infamy is not thy fame !
 Live ! fear no heavier chastisement from me,
 Thou noteless blot on a remembered name !
 But be thyself, and know thyself to be !
 And ever at thy season be thou free
 To spill the venom when thy fangs o'erflow :
 Remorse and Self-contempt shall cling to thee ;
 Hot Shame shall burn upon thy secret brow,
 And like a beaten hound tremble thou shalt—as now.

xxxviii.

Nor let us weep, that our delight is fled
 Far from these carrion-kites that scream below ;
 He wakes or sleeps with the enduring dead ;
 Thou canst not soar where he is sitting now.
 Dust to the dust ! but the pure spirit shall flow
 Back to the burning fountain whence it came,
 A portion of the Eternal, which must glow
 Through time and change, unquenchably the same,
 Whilst thy cold embers choke the sordid hearth of shame.

xxxix.

Peace, peace ! he is not dead, he doth not sleep—
 He hath awakened from the dream of life—
 'Tis we, who, lost in stormy visions, keep
 With phantoms an unprofitable strife,
 And in mad trance strike with our spirit's knife
 Invulnerable nothings—We decay
 Like corpses in a charnel ; fear and grief
 Consume us and consume us day by day,
 And cold hopes swarm like worms within our living clay.

He has outsoared the shadow of our night;
 Envy and calumny, and hate and pain,
 And that unrest which men miscall delight,
 Can touch him not and torture not again ;
 From the contagion of the world's slow stain
 He is secure, and now can never mourn
 A heart grown cold, a head grown grey in vain ;
 Nor, when the spirit's self has ceased to burn,
 With sparkless ashes load an unlamented urn.

XLII.

He lives, he wakes—'tis Death is dead, not he ;
 Mourn not for Adonais.—Thou young Dawn,
 Turn all thy dew to splendour, for from thee
 The spirit thou lamentest is not gone ;
 Ye caverns and ye forests, cease to moan !
 Cease ye faint flowers and fountains, and thou Air,
 Which like a morning veil thy scarf hadst thrown
 O'er the abandoned Earth, now leave it bare
 Even to the joyous stars which smile on its despair !

XLIII.

He is made one with Nature : there is heard
 His voice in all her music, from the moan
 Of thunder, to the song of night's sweet bird ;
 He is a presence to be felt and known
 In darkness and in light, from herb and stone,
 Spreading itself where'er that Power may move
 Which has withdrawn his being to its own ;
 Which yields the world with never wearied love,
 Sustains it from beneath, and kindles it above.

XLIV.

He is a portion of the loveliness
 Which once he made more lovely : he doth bear
 His part, while the one Spirit's plastic stress
 Sweeps through the dull dense world, compelling there
 All new successions to the forms they wear,
 Torturing th' unwilling dross that checks its flight
 To its own likeness, as each mass may bear ;
 And bursting in its beauty and its might
 From trees and beasts and men into the Heavens' light.

XLV.

The splendours of the firmament of time
 May be eclipsed, but are extinguished not ;
 Like stars to their appointed height they climb,
 And death is a low mist which cannot blot
 The brightness it may veil. When lofty thought
 Lifts a young heart above its mortal lair,
 And love and life contend in it, for what Shall be its earthly doom, the dead live there,
 And move like winds of light on dark and stormy air.

The inheritors of unfulfilled renown
 Rose from their thrones, built beyond mortal thought,
 Far in the unapparent. Chatterton
 Rose pale, his solemn agony had not
 Yet faded from him; Sidney, as he fought
 And as he fell and as he lived and loved,
 Sublimely mild, a Spirit without spot,
 Arose; and Lucan, by his death approved;
 Oblivion as they rose shrank like a thing reproved.

XLVI.

And many more, whose names on Earth are dark,
 But whose transmitted effluence cannot die
 So long as fire outlives the parent spark,
 Rose, robed in dazzling immortality.
 "Thou art become as one of us," they cry;
 "It was for thee yon kingless sphere has long
 Swung blind in unascended majesty,
 Silent alone amid a Heaven of song.
 Assume thy winged throne, thou Vesper of our throng!"

XLVII.

Who mourns for Adonais! oh come forth,
 Fond wretch! and know thyself and him aright.
 Clasp with thy panting soul the pendulous Earth;
 As from a centre, dart thy spirit's light
 Beyond all worlds, until its spacious might
 Satiate the void circumference: then shrink
 Even to a point within our day and night;
 And keep thy heart light, lest it make thee sink
 When hope has kindled hope, and lured thee to the brink.

XLVIII.

Or go to Rome, which is the sepulchre,
 Oh, not of him, but of our joy: 'tis nought
 That ages, empires, and religions, there
 Lie buried in the ravage they have wrought;
 For such as he can lend,—they borrow not
 Glory from those who made the world their prey;
 And he is gathered to the kings of thought
 Who waged contention with their times' decay,
 And of the past are all that cannot pass away.

XLIX.

Go thou to Rome,—at once the Paradise,
 The grave, the city, and the wilderness;
 And where its wrecks like shattered mountains rise,
 And flowering weeds, and fragrant copses dress
 The bones of Desolation's nakedness
 Pass, till the Spirit of the spot shall lead
 Thy footsteps to a slope of green access,
 Where, like an infant's smile, over the dead
 A light of laughing flowers along the grass is spread,

And grey walls moulder round, on which dull Time
 Feeds, like slow fire upon a hoary brand ;
 And one keen pyramid with wedge sublime,
 Pavilioning the dust of him who planned
 This refuge for his memory, doth stand
 Like flame transformed to marble ; and beneath
 A field is spread, on which a newer band
 Have pitched in Heaven's smile their camp of death,
 Welcoming him we lose with scarce extinguished breath.

L.I.

Here pause : these graves are all too young as yet
 To have outgrown the sorrow which consigned
 Its charge to each ; and if the seal is set,
 Here, on one fountain of a mourning mind,
 Break it not thou ! too surely shalt thou find
 Thine own well full, if thou returnest home,
 Of tears and gall. From the world's bitter wind
 Seek shelter in the shadow of the tomb.
 What Adonais is, why fear we to become ?

L.II.

The One remains, the many change and pass ;
 Heaven's light for ever shines, Earth's shadows fly,
 Life, like a dome of many-coloured glass,
 Stains the white radiance of Eternity,
 Until Death tramples it to fragments.—Dio,
 If thou wouldst be with that which thou dost seek !
 Follow where all is fled !—Rome's azure sky,
 Flowers, ruins, statues, music, words are weak
 The glory they transfuse with fitting truth to speak.

L.III.

Why linger, why turn back, why shrink, my Heart ?
 Thy hopes are gone before : from all things here
 They have departed ; thou shouldst now depart !
 A light is past from the revolving year,
 And man, and woman ; and what still is dear
 Attracts to crush, repels to make thee wither.
 The soft sky smiles,—the low wind whispers near :
 'Tis Adonais calls ! oh, hasten thither,
 'o more let Life divide what Death can join together.

L.IV.

That light whose smile kindles the Universe,
 That Beauty in which all things work and move,
 That Benediction which the eclipsing Curse
 Of birth can quench not, that sustaining Love
 Which through the web of being blindly wove
 By man and beast and earth and air and sea,
 Burns bright or dim, as each are mirrors of
 The fire for which all thirst, now beams on me,
 Consuming the last clouds of cold mortality.

LV.

The breath whose might I have invoked in song
 Descends on me ; my spirit's bark is driven
 Far from the shore, far from the trembling throng
 Whose sails were never to the tempest given ;
 The massy earth and spher'd skies are riven !
 I am borne darkly, fearfully afar ;
 Whilst burning through the inmost veil of Heaven,
 The soul of Adonais, like a star,
 Beacons from the abode where the Eternal are.

TO F*** V***.

MADONNA, wherefore hast thou sent to me
 Sweet-basil and mignonette ?
 Embleming love and health, which never yet
 In the same wreath might be.
 Alas, and they are wet !
 Is it with thy kisses or thy tears ?
 For never rain or dew
 Such fragrance drew
 From plant or flower -the very doubt endears
 My sadness ever new,
 The sighs I breathe, the tears I shed for thee.

FROM THE ARABIC,

AN IMITATION.

My faint spirit was sitting in the light
 Of thy looks, my love ;
 It panted for thee like the hind at noon
 For the brooks, my love.
 Thy barb, whose hoofs outspeed the tempest's flight,
 Bore thee far from me ; .
 My heart, for my weak feet were weary soon,
 Did companion thee.

Ah ! fleeter far than fleetest storm or steed,
 Or the death they bear,
 The heart which tender thought clothes like a dove
 With the wings of care ;
 In the battle, in the darkness, in the need,
 Shall mine cling to thee,
 Nor claim one smile for all the comfort, love,
 It may bring to thee.

TIME.

UNFATHOMABLE Sea ! whose waves are years,
 Ocean of Time, whose waters of deep woe
 Are brackish with the salt of human tears !
 Thou shoreless flood, which in thy ebb and flow
 Claspest the limits of mortality !
 And sick of prey, yet howling on for more,
 Vomitest thy wrecks on its inhospitable shore ;
 Treacherous in calm, and terrible in storm,
 Who shall put forth on thee,
 Unfathomable Sea ?

---

TO NIGHT.

SWIFTLY walk over the western wave,
 Spirit of Night !
 Out of the misty eastern cave,
 Where all the long and lone daylight,
 Thou wovest dreams of joy and fear,
 Which make thee terrible and dear,—
 Swift be thy flight !

Wrap thy form in a mantle grey,
 Star-inwrought !
 Blind with thine hair the eyes of day,
 Kiss her until she be wearied out,
 Then wander o'er city, and sea, and land,
 Touching all with thine opiate wand—
 Come, long-sought !

When I arose and saw the dawn,
 I sighed for thee ;
 When light rode high, and the dew was gone,
 And noon lay heavy on flower and tree,
 And the weary Day turned to his rest,
 Lingering like an unloved guest,
 I sighed for thee.

Thy brother Death came, and cried,
 Wouldst thou me ?
 Thy sweet child Sleep, the filmy-eyed,
 Murmured like a noon-tide bee,
 Shall I nestle near thy side ?
 Wouldst thou me ?—And I replied,
 No, not thee !

Death will come when thou art dead,
 Soon, too soon—
 Sleep will come when thou art fled ;
 Of neither would I ask the boon
 I ask of thee, beloved Night—
 Swift be thine approaching flight,
 Come soon, soon !

---

A FRAGMENT.

As a violet's gentle eye
 Gazes on the azure sky,
 Until its hue grows like what it beholds ;
 As a grey and empty mist
 Lies like solid Amethyst,
 Over the western mountain it enfolds,
 When the sunset sleeps
 Upon its snow.

As a strain of sweetest sound
 Wraps itself the wind around,
 Until the voiceless wind be music too ;
 As aught dark, vain and dull,
 Basking in what is beautiful,
 Is full of light and love.

---

LINES.

FAR, far away, O ye
 Haleyons of Memory !
 Seek some far calmer nest
 Than this abandoned breast ;—
 No news of your false spring
 To my heart's winter bring ;
 Once having gone, in vain
 Ye come again.

Vultures, who build your bowers
 High in the Future's towers !
 Withered hopes on hopes are spread ;
 Dying joys, choked by the dead,
 Will serve your beaks for prey
 Many a day.

THE FUGITIVES.

I.

THE waters are flashing,
 The white hail is dashing,
 The lightnings are glancing,
 The hoar-spray is dancing—
 Away !

The whirlwind is rolling,
 The thunder is tolling,
 The forest is swinging,
 The minster bells ringing—
 Come away !

The Earth is like Ocean,
 Wreck-strewn and in motion :
 Bird, beast, man, and worm,
 Have crept out of the storm---
 Come away !

II.

“ Our boat has one sail,
 And the helmsman is pale ;—
 A bold pilot I trow,
 Who should follow us now,”—
 Shouted He—

And she cried : “ Ply the oar ;
 Put off gaily from shore !”—
 As she spoke, bolts of death
 Mixed with hail, speckled their path
 O'er the sea.

And from isle, tower, and rock,
 The blue beacon-cloud broke,
 Though dumb in the blast,
 The red cannon flashed fast
 From the lee.

III.

“ And fear'st thou, and fear'st thou ?
 And see'st thou, and hear'st thou ?
 And drive we not free
 O'er the terrible sea,
 I and thou ?”

One boat-cloak did cover
 The loved and the lover—
 Their blood beats one measure,
 They murmur proud pleasure
 Soft and low ;—

While around the lashed Ocean,
 Like mountains in motion,
 Is withdrawn and uplifted,
 Sunk, shattered, and shifted,
 To and fro.

IV.

In the court of the fortress
 Beside the pale portress,
 Like a blood-hound well beaten
 The bridegroom stands, eaten
 By shame ;

On the topmost watch-turret,
 As a death-boding spirit,
 Stands the grey tyrant father,
 To his voice the mad weather
 Seems tame ;

And with curses as wild
 As e'er cling to child,
 He devotes to the blast
 The best, loveliest, and last
 Of his name !

MUSIC, when soft voices die,
 Vibrates in the memory—
 Odours, when sweet violets sicken,
 Live within the sense they quicken.

Rose leaves, when the rose is dead,
 Are heaped for the beloved's bed ;
 And so thy thoughts, when thou art gone,
 Love itself shall slumber on.

TO ——

MINE eyes were dim with tears unshed ;
 Yes, I was firm —thus wert not thou ;—
 My baffled looks did fear yet dread
 To meet thy looks—I could not know
 How anxiously they sought to shine
 With soothing pity upon mine.

To sit and curb the soul's mute rage
 Which preys upon itself alone ;
 To curse the life which is the cage
 Of fettered grief that dares not groan,
 Hiding from many a careless eye
 The scorned load of agony.

Whilst thou alone, then not regarded,
 The [ ] thou alone should be,
 To spend years thus, and be rewarded,
 As thou, sweet love, requited me
 When none were near—Oh ! I did wake
 From torture for that moment's sake.

Upon my heart thy accents sweet
 Of peace and pity fell like dew
 On flowers half dead ;—thy lips did meet
 Mine tremblingly ; thy dark eyes threw
 Their soft persuasion on my brain,
 Charming away its dream of pain.

We are not happy, sweet ! our slate
 Is strange and full of doubt and fear :
 More need of words that ills abate ; -
 Reserve or censure come not near
 Our sacred friendship, lest there be
 No solace left for thou and me.

Gentle and good and mild thou art,
 Nor can I live if thou appear
 Aught but thyself, or turn thine heart
 Away from me, or stoop to wear
 The mask of scorn, although it be
 To hide the love thou feel'st for me.

SONG.

RARELY, rarely, comest thou,
 Spirit of Delight !
 Wherefore hast thou left me now
 Many a day and night ?
 Many a weary night and day
 'Tis since thou art fled away.

How shall ever one like me
 Win thee back again ?
 With the joyous and the free
 Thou wilt scoff at pain.
 Spirit false ! thou hast forgot
 All but those who need thee not.

As a lizard with the shade
 Of a trembling leaf,
 Thou with sorrow art dismayed ;
 Even the sighs of grief
 Reproach thee, that thou art not near,
 And reproach thou wilt not hear.

Let me set my mournful ditty
 To a merry measure ;—
 Thou wilt never come for pity,
 Thou wilt come for pleasure ;—
 Pity then will cut away
 Those cruel wings, and thou wilt stay.

I love all that thou lovest,
 Spirit of Delight !
 The fresh Earth in new leaves drest,
 And the starry night ;
 Autumn evening, and the morn
 When the golden mists are born.

I love snow, and all the forms
 Of the radiant forest ;
 I love waves, and winds, and storms,
 Every thing almost
 Which is Nature's, and may be
 Untainted by man's misery.

I love tranquil solitude,
 And such society
 As is quiet, wise, and good ;
 Between thee and me
 What difference ? but thou dost possess
 The things I seek, not love them less.

I love Love—though he has wings,
 And like light can flee,
 But, above all other things,
 Spirit, I love thee—
 Thou art love and life ! O come,
 Make once more my heart thy home.

EVENING.

PONTE A MARE, PISA.

THE sun is set ; the swallows are asleep ;
 The bats are flitting fast in the grey air ;
 The slow soft toads out of damp corners creep ;
 And evening's breath, wandering here and there
 Over the quivering surface of the stream,
 Wakes not one ripple from its summer dream.

There is no dew on the dry grass to-night,
 Nor damp within the shadow of the trees ;
 The wind is intermitting, dry, and light ;
 And in the inconstant motion of the breeze
 The dust and straws are driven up and down,
 And whirled about the pavement of the town.

Within the surface of the fleeting river
 The wrinkled image of the city lay,
 Immovably unquiet, and for ever
 It trembles, but it never fades away ;
 Go to the [ ]
 You, being changed, will find it then as now.

The chasm in which the sun has sunk, is shut
 By darkest barriers of enormous cloud,
 Like mountain over mountain huddled—but
 Growing and moving upwards in a crowd,
 And over it a space of watery blue,
 Which the keen evening star is shining through.

WRITTEN ON HEARING THE NEWS OF THE DEATH OF NAPOLEON.

WHAT ! alive and so bold, O Earth ?
 Art thou not over-bold ?
 What ! leapest thou forth as of old
     In the light of thy morning mirth,
 The last of the flock of the starry fold ?
 Ha ! leapest thou forth as of old ?
 Are not the limbs still when the ghost is fled,
 And canst thou more, Napoleon being dead ?

How ! is not thy quick heart cold ?
 What spark is alive on thy hearth ?
 How ! is not his death-knell knolled ?
     And livest thou still, Mother Earth ?
 Thou wert warming thy fingers old
 O'er the embers covered and cold
 Of that most fiery spirit, when it fled—
 What, Mother, do you laugh now he is dead ?

"Who has known me of old," replied Earth,
     "Or who has my story told ?
 It is thou who art over bold."
     And the lightning of scorn laughed forth
 As she sung, "To my bosom I fold
 All my sons when their knell is knolled,
 And so with living motion all are fed,
 And the quick spring like weeds out of the dead.

"Still alive and still bold," shouted Earth,
     "I grow bolder, and still more bold.
 The dead fill me ten thousand fold
     Fuller of speed, and splendour, and mirth ;
 I was cloudy, and sullen, and cold,
 Like a frozen chaos uprolled,
 Till by the spirit of the mighty dead
 My heart grew warm. I feed on whom I fed.

"Ay, alive and still bold," muttered Earth,
     "Napoleon's fierce spirit rolled,
 In terror, and blood, and gold,
     A torrent of ruin to death from his birth.
 Leave the millions who follow to mould
 The metal before it be cold,
 And weave into his shame, which like the dead
 Shrouds me, the hopes that from his glory fled."

MUTABILITY.

THE flower that smiles to-day
     To-morrow dies ;
 All that we wish to stay,
     Tempts and then flies ;
 What is this world's delight ?
 Lightning that mocks the night,
 Brief even as bright.

Virtue, how frail it is !
     Friendship too rare !
 Love, how it sells poor bliss
     For proud despair !
 But we, though soon they fall,
 Survive their joy and all
 Which ours we call.

Whilst skies are blue and bright,
     Whilst flowers are gay,
 Whilst eyes that change ere night
     Make glad the day ;
 Whilst yet the calm hours creep,
 Dream thou—and from thy sleep
 Then wake to weep.

SONNET.

POLITICAL GREATNESS.

Nor happiness, nor majesty, nor fame,
 Nor peace, nor strength, nor skill in arms or arts,
 Shepherd those herds whom tyranny makes tame ;
 Verse echoes not one beating of their hearts ;
 History is but the shadow of their shame ;
 Art veils her glass, or from the pageant starts
 As to oblivion their blind millions fleet,
 Staining that Heaven with obscene imagery
 Of their own likeness. What are numbers, knit
 By force or custom ? Man who man would be,
 Must rule the empire of himself ! in it
 Must be supreme, establishing his throne
 On vanquished will, quelling the anarchy
 Of hopes and fears, being himself alone.

GINEVRA.*

WILD, pale, and wonder-stricken, even as one
 Who staggers forth into the air and sun
 From the dark chamber of a mortal fever,
 Bewildered, and incapable, and ever
 Fancying strange comments in her dizzy brain
 Of usual shapes, till the familiar train
 Of objects and of persons passed like things
 Strange as a dreamer's mad imaginings,
 Ginevra from the nuptial altar went;
 The vows to which her lips had sworn assent
 Rung in her brain still with a jarring din,
 Deafening the lost intelligence within.

And so she moved under the bridal veil,
 Which made the paleness of her cheek more pale,
 And deepened the faint crimson of her mouth,
 And darkened her dark locks, as moonlight doth,--
 And of the gold and jewels glittering there
 She scarce felt conscious, but the weary glare
 Lay like a chaos of unweleome light,
 Vexing the sense with gorgeous undelight.
 A moonbeam in the shadow of a cloud
 Was less heavenly fair—her face was bowed,
 And as she passed, the diamonds in her hair
 Were mirrored in the polished marble stair
 Which led from the cathedral to the street;
 And even as she went her light fair feet
 Erased these im uges.

The bride-maidens who round her thronging came
 Some with a sense of self-rebuke and shame,
 Envyng the unenviable; and others
 Making the joy which should have been another's
 Their own by gentle sympathy; and some
 Sighing to think of an unhappy home;
 Some few admiring what can ever lure
 Maidens to leave the heaven serene and pure
 Of parents' smiles for life's great cheat; a thing
 Bitter to taste, sweet in imagining.

But they are all dispersed—and lo! she stands
 Looking in idle grief on her white hands,

* This fragment is part of a poem which Shelley intended to write, founded on a story to be found in the first volume of a book entitled "L'Osservatore Fiorentino."

Alone within the garden now her own ;
 And through the sunny air with jangling tone,
 The music of the merry marriage-bells,
 Killing the azure silence, sinks and swells ;—
 Absorbed like one within a dream who dreams
 That he is dreaming, until slumber seems
 A mockery of itself—when suddenly
 Antonio stood before her, pale as she.
 With agony, with sorrow, and with pride,
 He lifted his wan eyes upon the bride,
 And said—“ Is this thy faith ? ” and then as one
 Whose sleeping face is stricken by the sun
 With light like a harsh voice, which bids him rise
 And look upon his day of life with eyes
 Which weep in vain that they can dream no more,
 Ginevra saw her lover, and forbore
 To shriek or faint, and checked the stifling blood
 Rushing upon her heart, and unsubdued
 Said—“ Friend, if earthly violence or ill,
 Suspicion, doubt, or the tyrannic will
 Of parents, chance, or custom, time, or change,
 Or circumstance, or terror, or revenge,
 Or wildered looks, or words, or evil speech,
 With all their stings and venom, can impeach
 Our love, —we love not : —if the grave, which hides
 The victim from the tyrant, and divides
 The cheek that whitens from the eyes that dart
 Imperious inquisition to the heart
 That is another’s, could dissever ours,
 We love not.” —“ What ! do not the silent hours
 Beckon thee to Gherardi’s bridal bed ?
 Is not that ring” —a pledge, he would have said
 Of broken vows, but she with patient look
 The golden circle from her finger took
 And said—“ Accept this token of my faith,
 The pledge of vows to be absolved by death ;
 And I am dead or shall be soon —my knell
 Will mix its music with that merry bell ;
 Does it not sound as if they sweetly said,
 ‘ We toll a corpse out of the marriage bed ? ’
 The flowers upon my bridal chamber strewn
 Will serve unfaded for my bier —so soon
 That even the dying violet will not die
 Before Ginevra.” The strong fantasy
 Had made her accents weaker and more weak,
 And quenched the crimson life upon her cheek,
 And glazed her eyes, and spread an atmosphere
 Round her, which chilled the burning noon with fear,
 Making her but an image of the thought,
 Which, like a prophet or a shadow, brought

News of the terrors of the coming time.
 Like an accuser branded with the crime
 He would have cast on a beloved friend,
 Whose dying eyes reproach not to the end
 The pale betrayer—he then with vain repentance
 Would share, he cannot now avert, the sentence—
 Antonio stood and would have spoken, when
 The compound voice of women and of men
 Was heard approaching; he retired, while she
 Was led amid the admiring company
 Back to the palace,—and her maidens soon
 Changed her attire for the afternoon,
 And left her at her own request to keep
 An hour of quiet and rest: like one asleep
 With open eyes and folded hands she lay,
 Pale in the light of the declining day.

Meanwhile the day sinks fast, the sun is set,
 And in the lighted hall the guests are met;
 The beautiful looked lovelier in the light
 Of love, and admiration, and delight,
 Reflected from a thousand hearts and eyes
 Kindling a momentary Paradise.
 This crowd is sifer than the silent wood,
 Where love's own doubts disturb the solitude,
 On frozen hearts the fiery rain of wine
 Falls, and the dew of music more divine
 Tempts the deep emotions of the time
 To spirits cradled in a sunny clime:—
 How many meet, who never yet have met,
 To part too soon, but never to forget?
 How many saw the beauty, power, and wit
 Of looks and words which ne'er enchanted yet!
 But life's familiar veil was now withdrawn,
 As the world leaps before an earthquake's dawn,
 And unprophetic of the coming hours,
 The matin winds from the expanded flowers
 Scatter their hoarded incense, and awaken
 The earth, until the dewy sleep is shaken
 From every living heart which it possesses,
 Through seas and winds, cities and wildernesses,
 As if the future and the past were all
 Treasured i' the instant:—so Gherardi's hall
 Laughed in the mirth of its lord's festival,
 Till some one asked:—"Where is the Bride?" And then
 A bride's-maid went, and ere she came again
 A silence fell upon the guests: a pause
 Of expectation, as when beauty awes
 All hearts with its approach, though unbeknown;
 Then wonder, and then fear that wonder quelled:—

For whispers passed from mouth to ear which drew
 The colour from the hearer's cheeks, and flew
 Louder and swifter round the company ;
 And then Gherardi entered with an eye
 Of ostentatious trouble, and a crowd
 Surrounded him, and some were weeping loud.

They found Ginevra dead ! if it be death,
 To lie without motion, or pulse, or breath,
 With waxen cheeks, and limbs cold, stiff, and white,
 And open eyes, whose fixed and glassy light
 Mocked at the speculation they had owned.
 If it be death, when there is felt around
 A smell of c'ay, a pale and icy glare,
 And silence, and a sense that lifts the hair
 From the scalp to the ankles, as it were
 Corruption from the spirit passing forth,
 And giving all it shrouded to the earth,
 And leaving as swift lightning in its flight
 Ashes, and smoke, and darkness : in our night
 Of thought we know thus much of death,—no more
 Than the unborn dream of our life before
 Their barks are wrecked on its inhospitable shore.
 The marriage feast and its solemnity
 Was turned to funeral pomp — the company,
 With heavy hearts and looks, broke up ; nor they
 Who loved the dead went weeping on their way
 Alone, but sorrow mixed with sad surprise
 Loosened the springs of pity in all eyes,
 On which that form, whose fate they weep in vain,
 Will never, thought they, kindle smiles again.
 The lamps which, half extinguished in their haste,
 Gleamed few and faint o'er the abandoned feast,
 Showed as it were within the vaulted room
 A cloud of sorrow hanging, as if gloom
 Had passed out of men's minds into the air.
 Some few yet stood around Gherardi there,
 Friends and relations of the dead,—and he,
 A loveless man, accepted torpidly
 The consolation that he wanted not.
 Awe in the place of grief within him wrought.
 Their whispers made the solemn silence seem
 More still—some wept, [ ]
 Some melted into tears without a sob,
 And some with hearts that might be heard to throb
 Leant on the table, and at intervals
 Shuddered to hear through the deserted halls
 And corridors the thrilling shrieks which came Upon the breeze of night, that shook the flame
 Of every torch and taper as it swept

From out the chamber where the women kept ;—
 Their tears fell on the dear companion cold
 Of pleasures now departed ; then was knolled
 The bell of death, and soon the priests arrived,
 And finding death their penitent had shrived,
 Returned like ravens from a corpse whereon
 A vulture has just feasted to the bone.
 And then the mourning women came.—

THE DIRGE.

OLD winter was gone
 In his weakness back to the mountains hoar,
                   And the spring came down
 From the planet that hovers upon the shore
 Where the sea of sunlight encroaches
 On the limits of wintry night ;
 If the land, and the air, and the sea,
 Rejoice not when spring approaches,
 We did not rejoice in thee,
                   Ginevra !

She is still, she is cold
                   On the bridal couch,
 One step to the white death-bed,
                   And one to the bier,
 And one to the charnel—and one, Oh where !
                   The dark arrow fied
                   In the noon.

Ere the sun through heaven once more has rolled,
 The rats in her heart
 Will have made their nest,
 And the worms be alive in her golden hair ;
 While the spirit that guides the sun
 Sits enthroned in his flaming chair,
                   She shall sleep.

TO-MORROW.

WHERE art thou, beloved To-morrow ?
 When young and old, and strong and weak,
 Rich and poor, through joy and sorrow,
                   Thy sweet smiles we ever seek,—
 In thy place—ah ! well-a-day !
 We find the thing we fled—To-day.

THE BOAT,

ON THE SERCHIO.

OUR boat is asleep on Serchio's stream,
 Its sails are folded like thoughts in a dream,
 The helm sways idly, hither and thither ;
 Dominic, the boat-man, has brought the mast,
 And the oars, and the sails ; but 'tis sleeping fast,
 Like a beast, unconscious of its tether.

The stars burnt out in the pale blue air,
 And the thin white moon lay withering there,
 To tower, and cavern, and rift, and tree,
 The owl and the bat fled drowsily.
 Day had kindled the dewy woods
 And the rocks above and the stream below,
 And the vapours in their multitudes,
 And the Apennines' shroud of summer snow,
 And clothed with light of airy gold
 The mists in their eastern caves uprolled.

Day had awakened all things that be,
 The lark and the thrush and the swallow free ;
 And the milkmaid's song and the mower's scythe,
 And the matin-bell and the mountain bee :
 Fire-flies were quenched on the dewy corn,
 Glow-worms went out on the river's brim,
 Like lamps which a student forgets to trim :
 The beetle forgot to wind his horn,
 The crickets were still in the meadow and hill :
 Like a flock of rooks at a farmer's gun,
 Night's dreams and terrors, every one,
 Fled from the brains which are their prey,
 From the lamp's death to the morning ray.

All rose to do the task He set to each,
 Who shaped us to his ends and not our own ;
 The million rose to learn, and one to teach
 What none yet ever knew or can be known.

And many rose

Whose woe was such that fear became desire ;—
 Melchior and Lionel were not among those ;
 They from the throng of men had stepped aside,
 And made their home under the green hill side.
 It was that hill, whose intervening brow

Screens Lucca from the Pisan's envious eye,
 Which the circumfluous plain waving below,
 Like a wide lake of green fertility,
 With streams and fields and marshes bare,
 Divides from the far Apennines—which lie
 Islanded in the immeasurable air.

"What think you, as she lies in her green cove,
 Our little sleeping boat is dreaming of?
 If morning dreams are true, why I should guess
 That she was dreaming of our idleness,
 And of the miles of watery way
 We should have led her by this time of day."—

— "Never mind," said Lionel,
 "Give care to the winds, they can bear it well
 About you poplar tops ; and see !
 The white clouds are driving merrily,
 And the stars we miss this morn will light
 More willingly our return to-night.—
 List, my dear fellow, the breeze blows fair;
 How it scatters Dominic's long black hair !
 Singing of us, and our lazy motions,
 If I can guess a boat's emotions." —

The chain is loosed, the sails are spread,
 The living breath is fresh behind,
 As, with dews and sunrise fed,
 Comes the laughing morning wind ;—
 The sails are full, the boat makes head
 Against the Serchio's torrent fierce,
 Then flags with intermitting course,
 And hangs upon the wave,
 Which fervid from its mountain source
 Shallow, smooth, and strong, doth come,—
 Swift as fire, tempestuously
 It sweeps into the affrighted sea ;
 In morning's smile its eddies coil,
 Its billows sparkle, toss, and boil,
 Torturing all its quiet light
 Into columns fierce and bright.

The Serchio, twisting forth
 Between the marble barriers which it clove
 At Ripafratta, leads through the dread chasm
 The wave that died the death which lovers love,
 Living in what it sought ; as if this spasm
 Had not yet past, the toppling mountains cling,
 But the clear stream in full enthusiasm
 Pours itself on the plain, until wandering,

Down one clear path of effluence crystalline
 Sends its clear waves, that they may fling
 At Arno's feet tribute of corn and wine :
 Then, through the pestilential deserts wild
 Of tangled marsh and woods of stunted fir,
 It rushes to the Ocean.

THE AZIOLA.

" Do you not hear the Aziola cry ?
 Methinks she must be nigh,"
 Said Mary, as we sate
 In dusk, ere the stars were lit, or candles brought ;
 And I, who thought
 This Aziola was some tedious woman,
 Asked, " Who is Aziola ? " How elate
 I felt to know that it was nothing human,
 No mockery of myself to fear and hate !
 And Mary saw my soul,
 And laughed and said, " Disquiet yourself not,
 'Tis nothing but a little downy owl."
 Sad Aziola ! many an eventide
 Thy music I had heard
 By wood and stream, meadow and mountain side,
 And fields and marshes wide,—
 Such as nor voice, nor lute, nor wind, nor bird,
 The soul ever stirred ;
 Unlike and far sweeter than they all :
 Sad Aziola ! from that moment I
 Loved thee and thy sad cry.

A LAMENT.

O WORLD ! O life ! O time !
 On whose last steps I climb,
 Trembling at that where I had stood before ;
 When will return the glory of your prime ?
 No more—Oh, never more !
 Out of the day and night
 A joy has taken flight :
 Fresh spring, and summer, and winter hoar,
 Move my faint heart with grief, but with delight
 No more—Oh, never more !

TO ——.

I.

THE serpent is shut out from paradise.
 The wounded deer must seek the herd no more
     In which its heart-cure lies :
 The widowed dove must cease to haunt a bower,
 Like that from which its mate with feigned sighs
     Fled in the April hour.
 I too, must seldom seek again
 Near happy friends a mitigated pain.

II.

Of hatred I am proud,—with scorn content ;
 Indifference, that once hurt me, now is grown
     Itself indifferent.
 But, not to speak of love, pity alone
 Can break a spirit already more than bent.
     The miserable one
 Turns the mind's poison into food.—
 Its medicine is tears,—its evil good.

III.

Therefore if now I see you seldomer,
 Dear friends, dear friend ! know that I only fly
     Your looks because they stir
 Griefs that should sleep, and hopes that cannot die :
 The very comfort that they minister
     I scarce can bear; yet I,
 So deeply is the arrow gone,
 Should quickly perish if it were withdrawn.

IV.

When I return to my cold home, you ask
 Why I am not as I have ever been ?
     You spoil me for the task
 Of acting a forced part on life's dull scene,—
 Of wearing on my brow the idle mask
     Of author, great or mean,
 In the world's Carnival. I sought
 Peace thus, and but in you I found it not.

V.

Full half an hour, to-day, I tried my lot
 With various flowers, and every one still said,
     “ She loves me,—loves me not.”
 And if this meant a vision long since fled—
 If it meant fortune, fame, or peace of thought—
     If it meant—but I dread
 To speak what you may know too well :
 Still there was truth in the sad oracle.

* See Faust.

VI.

The crane o'er seas and forests seeks her home ;
 No bird so wild, but has its quiet nest,
 When it no more would roam ;
 The sleepless billows on the ocean's breast
 Break like a bursting heart, and die in foam,
 And thus, at length, find rest :
 Doubtless there is a place of peace
 Where my weak heart and all its throbs will cease.

VII.

I asked her, yesterday, if she believed
 That I had resolution. One who had
 Would ne'er have thus relieved
 His heart with words,—but what his judgment bade
 Would do, and leave the scorner unreproved.
 These verses are too sad
 To send to you, but that I know,
 Happy yourself, you feel another's woe.

A LAMENT.

SWIFTER far than summer's flight,
 Swifter far than youth's delight,
 Swifter far than happy night,
 Art thou come and gone :
 As the earth when leaves are dead,
 As the night when sleep is sped,
 As the heart when joy is fled,
 I am left lone, alone.

The swallow Summer comes again,
 The owlet Night resumes her reign,
 But the wild swan Youth is fain
 To fly with thee. false as thou.
 My heart each day desires the morrow,
 Sleep itself is turned to sorrow,
 Vainly would my winter borrow
 Sunny leaves from any bough.

Lilies for a bridal bed,
 Roses for a matron's head,
 Violets for a maiden dead,
 Pansies let my flowers be :
 On the living grave I bear,
 Scatter them without a tear,
 Let no friend, however dear,
 Waste one hope, one fear for me.

LINES TO AN INDIAN AIR.

I ARISE from dreams of thee
 In the first sweet sleep of night,
 When the winds are breathing low,
 And the stars are shining bright.
 I arise from dreams of thee,
 And a spirit in my feet
 Has led me—who knows how?
 To thy chamber window, sweet!

The wandering airs they faint
 On the dark, the silent stream—
 The champak odours fail
 Like sweet thoughts in a dream;
 The nightingale's complaint,
 It dies upon her heart,
 As I must die on thine,
 O beloved as thou art!

O lift me from the grass!
 I die, I faint, I fail!
 Let thy love in kisses rain
 On my lips and eyelids pale.
 My cheek is cold and white, alas!
 My heart beats loud and fast,
 Oh! press it close to thine again,
 Where it will break at last.

TO ——.

ONE word is too often profaned
 For me to profane it,
 One feeling too falsely disdained
 For thee to disdain it.
 One hope is too like despair
 For prudence to smother,
 And Pity from thee more dear
 Than that from another.

I can give not what men call love,
 But wilt thou accept not
 The worship the heart lifts above
 And the Heavens reject not:
 The desire of the moth for the star,
 Of the night for the morrow,
 The devotion to something afar
 From the sphere of our sorrow?

MUSIC.

I PANT for the music which is divine,
 My heart in its thirst is a dying flower ;
 Pour forth the sound like enchanted wine,
 Loosen the notes in a silver shower ;
 Like a herbless plain for the gentle rain,
 I gasp, I faint, till they wake again.

Let me drink of the spirit of that sweet sound,
 More, O more ! I am thirsting yet,
 It loosens the serpent which care has bound
 Upon my heart, to stifle it ;
 The dissolving strain, through every vein,
 Passes into my heart and brain.

As the scent of a violet withered up,
 Which grew by the brink of a silver lake,
 When the hot noon has drained its dewy cup.
 And mist there was none its thirst to slake—
 And the violet lay dead while the odour flew
 On the wings of the wind o'er the waters blue—

As one who drinks from a charmed cup
 Of foaming, and sparkling, and murmuring wine,
 Whom, a mighty Enchantress filling up,
 Invites to love with her kiss divine.

TO ——.

WHEN passion's trance is overpast,
 If tenderness and truth could last
 Or live, whilst all wild feelings keep
 Some mortal slumber, dark and deep,
 I should not weep, I should not weep !

It were enough to feel, to see
 Thy soft eyes gazing tenderly,
 And dream the rest—and burn and be
 The secret food of firs unseen,
 Couldst thou but be as thou hast been.

After the slumber of the year
 The woodland violets re-appear ;
 All things revive in field or grove,
 And sky and sea ; but two, which move,
 And for all others, life and love.

A BRIDAL SONG.

THE golden gates of sleep unbar
Where strength and beauty, met together,
Kindle their image like a star
In a sea of glassy weather !
Night, with all thy stars look down,—
Darkness, weep thy holiest dew,—
Never smiled the incoustant moon
On a pair so true.
Let eyes not see their own delight ;—
Haste, swift Hour, and thy flight
Oft renew.

Fairies, sprites, and angels, keep her !
Holy powers, permit no wrong !
And return to wake the sleeper,
Dawn, ere it be long.
O joy ! O fear ! what will be done
In the absence of the sun !
Come along !

A FRAGMENT.

THEY were two cousins, almost like two twins,
Except that from the catalogue of sins
Nature had razed their love—which could not be
But by dissevering their nativity.
And so they grew together, like two flowers
Upon one stem, which the same beams and showers
Lull or awaken in their purple prime,
Which the same hand will gather—the same clime
Shake with decay. This fair day smiles to see
All those who love,—and who e'er loved like thee,
Fiordispina ? Scarcely Cosimo,
Within whose bosom and whose brain now glow
The ardours of a vision which obscure
The very idol of its portraiture ;
He faints, dissolved into a sense of love ;
But thou art as a planet sphered above,
But thou art Love itself—ruling the motion
Of his subjected spirit :—such emotion
Must end in sin or sorrow, if sweet May
Had not brought forth this morn—your wedding-day.

GOOD-NIGHT.

GooN-NIGHT? ah! no; the hour is ill
 Which severs those it should unite;
 Let us remain together still,
 Then it will be good night.

How can I call the lone night good,
 Though thy sweet wishes wing its flight?
 Be it not said, thought, understood,
 That it will be good night.

To hearts which near each other move
 From evening close to morning light,
 The night is good; because, my love,
 They never say good-night.

DIRGE FOR THE YEAR.

ORPHAN hours, the year is dead,
 Come and sigh, come and weep!
 Merry hours, smile instead,
 For the year is but asleep:
 See, it smiles as it is sleeping,
 Mocking your untimely weeping.

As an earthquake rocks a corse
 In its coffin in the clay,
 So White Winter, that rough nurse,
 Rocks the dead-cold year to-day;
 Solemn hours! wail aloud
 For your mother in her shroud.

As the wild air stirs and sways
 The tree-swung cradle of a child,
 So the breath of these rude days
 Rocks the year:—be calm and mild,
 Trembling hours; she will arise
 With new love within her eyes.

January grey is here,
 Like a sexton by her grave;
 February bears the bier,
 March with grief doth howl and rave,
 And April weeps—but, O ye hours!
 Follow with May's fairest flowers.

POEMS WRITTEN IN 1822.

THE ZUCCA.*

SUMMER was dead and Autumn was expiring,
 And infant Winter laughed upon the land
 All cloudlessly and cold ;—when I, desiring
 More in this world than any understand,
 Wept o'er the beauty, which, like sea retiring,
 Had left the earth bare as the wave-worn sand
 Of my poor heart, and o'er the grass and flowers
 Pale for the falsehood of the flattering hours.

Summer was dead, but I yet lived to weep
 The instability of all but weeping ;
 And on the earth lulled in her winter sleep
 I woke, and envied her as she was sleeping.
 Too happy Earth ! over thy face shall creep
 The wakening vernal airs, until thou, leaping
 From unremembered dreams shalt [ ] see
 No death divide thy immortality.

I loved—O no, I mean not one of ye,
 Or any earthly one, though ye are dear
 As human heart to human heart may be ;—
 I loved, I know not what—but this low sphere,
 And all that it contains, contains not thee,
 Thou, whom, seen nowhere, I feel everywhere,
 Dim object of my soul's idolatry.

* * * * *

By Heaven and Earth, from all whose shapes thou flowest,
 Neither to be contained, delayed, or hidden,
 Making divine the loftiest and the lowest,
 When for a moment thou art not forbidden
 To live within the life which thou bestowest,
 And leaving noblest things, vacant and chidden,
 Cold as a corpse after the spirit's flight,
 Blank as the sun after the birth of night.

In winds, and trees, and streams, and all things common,
 In music, and the sweet unconscious tone
 Of animals, and voices which are human,
 Meant to express some feelings of their own ;
 In the soft motions and rare smile of woman,
 In flowers and leaves, and in the fresh grass shown,
 Or dying in the autumn, I the most
 Adore thee present, or lament thee lost.

And thus I went lamenting, when I saw
 A plant upon the river's margin lie,
 Like one who loved beyond his Nature's law,
 And in despair had cast him down to die ;
 Its leaves which had outlived the frost, the thaw
 Had blighted as a heart which hatred's eye
 Can blast not, but which pity kills ; the dew
 Lay on its spotted leaves like tears too true.

The Heavens had wept upon it, but the Earth
 Had crushed it on her unmatural breast

*      *      *      *      *

I bore it to my chamber, and I planted
 It in a vase full of the lightest mould ;
 The winter beams which out of Heaven slanted
 Fell through the window panes, disrobed of cold,
 Upon its leaves and flowers ; the star which painted
 In evening for the Day, whose car has rolled
 Over the horizon's wave, with looks of light
 Smiled on it from the threshold of the night.

The mitigated influences of air
 And light revived the plant, and from it grew
 Strong leaves and tendrils, and its flowers fair,
 Full as a cup with the vine's burning dew,
 O'erflowed with golden colours ; an atmosphere
 Of vital warmth, infolded it anew,
 And every impulse sent to every part
 The unheld pulsations of its heart.

Well might the plant grow beautiful and strong,
 Even if the sun and air had smiled not on it ;
 For one wept o'er it all the winter long
 Tears pure as Heaven's rain, which fell upon it
 Hour after hour ; for sounds of softest song
 Mixed with the stringed melodies that won it
 To leave the gentle lips on which it slept,
 Had loosed the heart of him who sat and wept ;

Had loosed his heart, and shook the leaves and flowers
 On which he wept, the while the savage storm
 Waked by the darkest of December's hours
 Was raving round the chamber hushed and warm ;
 The birds were shivering in their leafless bowers,
 The fish were frozen in the pools, the form
 Of every summer plant was dead [ ]
 Whilst this * * *

THE MAGNETIC LADY TO HER PATIENT.

“SLEEP, sleep on ! forget thy pain ;
 My hand is on thy brow,
 My spirit on thy brain ;
 My pity on thy heart, poor friend ;
 And from my fingers flow
 The powers of life, and like a sign,
 Seal thee from thine hour of woe ;
 And brood on thee, but may not blend
 With thine.

“Sleep, sleep on ! I love thee not ;
 But when I think that he
 Who made and makes my lot
 As full of flowers, as thine of weeds,
 Might have been lost like thee ;
 And that a hand which was not mine
 Might then have chased his agony
 As I another's—my heart bleeds
 For thine.

“Sleep, sleep, and with the slumber of
 The dead and the unborn
 Forget thy life and love ;
 Forget that thou must wake for ever ;
 Forget the world's dull scorn ;
 Forget lost health, and the divine
 Feelings which died in youth's brief morn ;
 And forget me, for I can never
 Be thine.

“Like a cloud big with a May shower,
 My soul weeps healing rain
 On thee, thou withered flower ;
 It breathes mute music on thy sleep ;
 Its odour calms thy brain !
 Its light within thy gloomy breast
 Spreads like a second youth again.
 By mine thy being is to its deep
 Possess.

"The spell is done. How feel you now?"
 "Better—Quite well," replied
 The sleeper,—"What would do
 You good when suffering and awake?
 What cure your head and side?"—
 "'Twould kill me what would cure my pain;
 And as I must on earth abide Awhile, yet tempt me not to break
 My chain."

LINES.

When the lamp is shattered,
 The light in the dust lies dead—
 When the cloud is scattered,
 The rainbow's glory is shed.
 When the lute is broken,
 Sweet tones are remembered not;
 When the lips have spoken,
 Loved accents are soon forgot.

As music and splendour
 Survive not the lamp and the lute,
 The heart's echoes render
 No song when the spirit is mute:—
 No song but sad dirges,
 Like the wind through a ruined cell,
 Or the mournful surges
 That ring the dead seaman's knell.

When hearts have once mingled,
 Love first leaves the well-built nest;
 The weak one is singled
 To endure what it once possest.
 O, Love! who bewaillest
 The frailty of all things here,
 Why choose you the frailest
 For your cradle, your home, and your bier?

Its passions will rock thee,
 As the storms rock the ravens on high:
 Bright reason will mock thee,
 Like the sun from a wintry sky.
 From thy nest every rafter
 Will rot, and thine eagle home
 Leave thee naked to laughter,
 When leaves fall and cold winds come.

TO A LADY WITH A GUITAR.

ARIEL to Miranda :—Take
 This slave of music, for the sake
 Of him, who is the slave of thee ;
 And teach it all the harmony
 In which thou canst, and only thou,
 Make the delighted spirit glow,
 Till joy denies itself again,
 And, too intense, is turned to pain.
 For by permission and command
 Of thine own Prince Ferdinand,
 Poor Ariel sends this silent token
 Of more than ever can be spoken ;
 Your guardian spirit, Ariel, who
 From life to life must still pursue
 Your happiness, for thus alone
 Can Ariel ever find his own ;
 From Prospero's enchanted cell,
 As the mighty verses tell,
 To the throne of Naples he
 Lit you o'er the trackless sea,
 Flitting on, your prow before,
 Like a living meteor.
 When you die, the silent Moon,
 In her interlunar swoon,
 Is not sadder in her cell
 Than deserted Ariel ;
 When you live again on earth,
 Like an unseen Star of birth,
 Ariel guides you o'er the sea
 Of life from your nativity :
 Many changes have been run
 Since Ferdinand and you begun
 Your course of love, and Ariel still
 Has tracked your steps and served your will.
 Now in humbler, happier lot,
 This is all remembered not ;
 And now, alas ! the poor sprite is Imprisoned for some fault of his
 In a body like a grave—
 From you, he only dares to crave,
 For his service and his sorrow,
 A smile to-day, a song to-morrow.

The artist who this idol wrought,
 To echo all harmonious thought,

Felled a tree, while on the steep
The woods were in their winter sleep,
Rocked in that repose divine
On the wind-swept Apennine ;
And dreaming, some of autumn past,
And some of spring approaching fast,
And some of April buds and showers,
And some of songs in July bowers,
And all of love ; and so this tree,—
O that such our death may be !—
Died in sleep, and felt no pain,
To live in happier form again :
From which, beneath Heaven's fairest star,
The artist wrought this loved Guitar,
And taught it justly to reply,
To all who question skilfully,
In language gentle as thine own ;
Whispering in enamoured tone
Sweet oracles of woods and dells,
And summer winds in sylvan cells ;
For it had learnt all harmonies
Of the plains and of the skies,
Of the forests and the mountains,
And the many-voiced fountains ;
The clearest echoes of the hills,
The softest notes of falling rills,
The melodies of birds and bees,
The murmuring of summer seas,
And pattering rain, and breathing dew,
And airs of evening ; and it knew
That seldom-heard mysterious sound,
Which, driven on its diurnal round
As it floats through boundless day,
Our world enkindles on its way—
All this it knows, but will not tell
To those who cannot question well
The spirit that inhabits it ;
It talks according to the wit
Of its companions ; and no more
Is heard than has been felt before,
By those who tempt it to betray
These secrets of an elder day.
But, sweetly as its answers will
Flatter hands of perfect skill,
It keeps its highest, holiest tone
For our beloved friend alone.

FRAGMENTS OF AN UNFINISHED DRAMA.

THE following fragments are part of a Drama, undertaken for the amusement of the individuals who composed our intimate society, but left unfinished. I have preserved a sketch of the story as far as it had been shadowed in the poet's mind.

An Enchantress, living in one of the islands of the Indian Archipelago, saves the life of a Pirate, a man of savage but noble nature. She becomes enamoured of him; and he, inconstant to his mortal love for a while returns her passion; but at length, recalling the memory of her whom he left, and who laments his loss, he escapes from the enchanted island and returns to his lady. His mode of life makes him again go to sea, and the Enchantress seizes the opportunity to bring him, by a spirit-brewed tempest, back to her island.

*Scene, before the Cave of the Indian Enchantress.
The Enchantress comes forth.*

ENCHANTRESS.

He came like a dream in the dawn of life,
He fled like a shadow before its noon;
He is gone, and my peace is turned to strife,
And I wander and wane like the weary moon.
O sweet Echo, wake,
And for my sake
Make answer the while my heart shall break!

But my heart has a music which Echo's lips,
Though tender and true, yet can answer not,
And the shadow that moves in the soul's eclipse
Can return not the kiss by his now forgot;
Sweet lips! he who hath
On my desolate path
Cast the darkness of absence, worse than death!

The Enchantress makes her spell: she is answered by a Spirit.

Spirit. Within the silent centre of the earth
My mansion is; where I have lived insphered
From the beginning, and around my sleep
Have woven all the wondrous imagery
Of this dim spot, which mortals call the world;
Infinite depths of unknown elements
Massed into one impenetrable mask;
Sheets of immeasurable fire, and veins
Of gold, and stone, and adamantine iron.
And as a veil in which I walk through Heaven

I have wrought mountains, seas, waves, and clouds,
And lastly light, whose interfusion dawns
In the dark space of interstellar air.

A good Spirit, who watches over the Pirate's fate, leads, in a mysterious manner, the lady of his love to the Enchanted Isle. She is accompanied by a youth, who loves her, but whose passion she returns only with a sisterly affection. The ensuing scene takes place between them on their arrival at the Isle.

INDIAN YOUTH AND LADY.

Indian. And if my grief should still be dearer to me
Than all the pleasures in the world beside,
Why would you lighten it?—

Lady. I offer only
That which I seek, some human sympathy
In this mysterious island.

Indian. Oh! my friend,
My sister, my beloved! What do I say?
My brain is dizzy, and I scarce know whether
I speak to thee or her.

Lady. Peace, perturbed heart!
I am to thee only as thou to mine,
The passing wind which heals the brow at noon,
And may strike cold into the breast at night,
Yet cannot linger where it soothes the most,
Or long soothe could it linger.

Indian. But you said
You also loved?

Lady. Loved! Oh, I love. Methinks
This world of love is fit for all the world,
And that for gentle hearts another name
Would speak of gentler thoughts than the world owns.
I have loved.

Indian. And thou lovest not? If so
Young as thou art, thou canst afford to weep.

Lady. Oh! would that I could claim exemption
From all the bitterness of that sweet name.
I loved, I love, and when I love no more
Let joys and grief perish, and leave despair
To ring the knell of youth. He stood beside me,
The embodied vision of the brightest dream,
Which like a dawn heralds the day of life;
The shadow of his presence made my world
A paradise. All familiar things he touched,
All common words he spoke, became to me
Like forms and sounds of a diviner world.
He was as is the sun in his fierce youth,
As terrible and lovely as a tempest;
He came, and went, and left me what I am.
Alas! Why must I think how oft we two
Have sat together near the river springs,

Under the green pavilion which the willow
 Spreads on the floor of the unbroken fountain,
 Strewn by the nurslings that linger there,
 Over that islet paved with flowers and moss,
 While the musk-rose leaves, like flakes of crimson snow,
 Showered on us, and the dove mourned in the pine,
 Sad prophetess of sorrows not her own.

Indian. Your breath is like soft music, your words are
 The echoes of a voice which on my heart
 Sleeps like a melody of early days.
 But as you said—

Lady. He was so awful, yet
 So beautiful in mystery and terror,
 Calning me as the loveliness of heaven
 Soothes the unquiet sea :—and yet not so,
 For he seemed stormy, and would often seem
 A quenchless sun masked in portentous clouds ;
 For such his thoughts, and even his actions were ;
 But he was not of them, nor they of him,
 But as they hid his splendour from the earth.
 Some said he was a man of blood and peril,
 And steeped in bitter infamy to the lips.
 More need was there I should be innocent ;
 More need that I should be most true and kind :
 And much more need that there should be found one
 To share remorse, and scorn, and solitude,
 And all the ills that wait on those who do
 The tasks of ruin in the world of life.
 He fled, and I have followed him.

Indian. Such a one
 Is he who was the winter of my peace.
 But, fairest stranger, when didst thou depart
 From the far hills, where rise the springs of India,
 How didst thou pass the intervening sea ?

Lady, If I be sure I am not dreaming now,
 I should not doubt to say it was a dream.

A SONG.

A widow bird sat mourning for her love
 Upon a wintry bough ;
 The frozen wind crept on above,
 The freezing stream below.

There was no leaf upon the forest bare,
 No flower upon the ground,
 And little motion in the air
 Except the mill-wheel's sound.

THE INVITATION.

Best and brightest, come away,
 Fairer far than this fair day,
 Which like thee to those in sorrow,
 Comes to bid a sweet good-morrow
 To the rough year just awake
 In its cradle on the brake.
 The brightest hour of unborn spring,
 Through the winter wandering,
 Found it seems the halcyon morn,
 To hoar February born ;
 Bending from Heaven, in azure mirth,
 It kissed the forehead of the earth,
 And smiled upon the silent sea,
 And bade the frozen streams be free ;
 And waked to music all their fountains,
 And breathed upon the frozen mountains,
 And like a prophetess of May,
 Strewed flowers upon the barren way,
 Making the wintry world appear
 Like one on whom thou smilest, dear.

Away, away, from men and towns,
 To the wild wood and the downs—
 To the silent wilderness
 Where the soul need not repress
 Its music, lest it should not find
 An echo in another's mind,
 While the touch of Nature's art
 Harmonises heart to heart.
 I leave this notice on my door
 For each accustomed visitor :—
 “I am gone into the fields
 To take what this sweet hour yields ;—
 Reflection, you may come to-morrow,
 Sit by the fire-side of Sorrow.—
 You with the unpaid bill, Despair,
 You, tiresome verse-reciter, Care,
 I will pay you in the grave,
 Death will listen to your stave.—
 Expectation too, be off !
 To-day is for itself enough ;
 Hope in pity mock not woe
 With smiles, nor follow where I go ;

Long having lived on thy sweet food,
 At length I find one moment good
 After long pain—with all your love,
 This you never told me of."

Radiant Sister of the Day,
 Awake ! arise ! and come away !
 To the wild woods and the plains,
 To the pools where winter rains
 Image all their roof of leaves,
 Where the pine its garland weaves
 Of sapless green, and ivy dun,
 Round stems that never kiss the sun,
 Where the lawns and pastures be
 And the sandhills of the sea,
 Where the melting hoar-frost wets
 The daisy-star that never sets,
 And wind-flowers and violets,
 Which yet join not scent to hue,
 Crown the pale year weak and new ;
 When the night is left behind
 In the deep east, dim and blind,
 And the blue noon is over us,
 And the multitudinous
 Pillows murmur at our feet,
 Where the earth and ocean meet,
 And all things seem only one,
 In the universal sun.

---

THE ISLE.

THERE was a little lawny islet
 By anemone and violet,
 Like mosaic, paven :
 And its roof was flowers and leaves
 Which the summer's breath enweaves.
 Where nor sun nor showers nor breeze
 Pierce the pines and tallest trees,
 Each a gem engraven.
 Girt by many an azure wave
 With which the clouds and mountains pave
 A lake's blue chasin.

THE RECOLLECTION.

Now the last day of many days,
 All beautiful and bright as thou,
 The loveliest and the last, is dead,
 Rise, Memory, and write its praise !
 Up, do thy wonted work ! come, trace
 The epitaph of glory fled,
 For now the Earth has changed its face,
 A frown is on the Heaven's brow.

I.

We wandered to the Pine Forest
 That skirts the Ocean's foam,
 The lightest wind was in its nest,
 The tempest in its home.
 The whispering waves were half asleep,
 The clouds were gone to play,
 And on the bosom of the deep,
 The smile of Heaven lay ;
 It seemed as if the hour were one
 Sent from beyond the skies,
 Which scattered from above the sun
 A light of Paradise.

II.

We paused amid the pines that stood
 The giants of the waste,
 Tortured by storms to shapes as rude
 As serpents interlaced.
 And soothed by every azure breath,
 That under heaven is blown,
 To harmonies and hues beneath,
 As tender as its own ;
 Now all the tree tops lay asleep,
 Like green waves on the sea,
 As still as in the silent deep
 The ocean woods may be.

III.

How calm it was !—the silence there
 By such a chain was bound,
 That even the busy woodpecker
 Made stiller by her sound
 The inviolable quietness ;
 The breath of peace we drew
 With its soft motion made not less
 The calm that round us grew.

There seemed from the remotest seat
 Of the wide mountain waste,
 To the soft flower beneath our feet,
 A magic circle traced,
 A spirit interfused around
 A thrilling silent life,
 To momentary peace it bound
 Our mortal nature's strife;—
 And still I felt the centre of
 The magic circle there,
 Was one fair form that filled with love
 The lifeless atmosphere.

IV.

We paused beside the pools that lie
 Under the forest bough,
 Each seemed as 'twere a little sky
 Gulsed in a world below;
 A firmament of purple light,
 Which in the dark earth lay,
 More boundless than the depth of night,
 And purer than the day—
 In which the lovely forests grew,
 As in the upper air,
 More perfect both in shape and hue
 Than any spreading there.
 There lay the glade and neighbouring lawn,
 And through the dark-green wood
 The white sun twinkling like the dawn
 Out of a speckled cloud.
 Sweet views which in our world above
 Can never well be seen,
 Were imaged by the water's love
 Of that fair forest green.
 And all was interfused beneath
 With an Elysian glow,
 An atmosphere without a breath,
 A softer day below.
 Like one beloved, the scene had lent
 To the dark water's breast,
 Its every leaf and lineament
 With more than truth express,
 Until an envious wind crept by,
 Like an unwelcome thought,
 Which from the mind's too faithful eye
 Blots one dear image out.
 Though thou art ever fair and kind,
 The forests ever green,
 Less oft is peace in S——'s mind,
 Than calm in waters seen.

CHARLES THE FIRST.

A FRAGMENT.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—The Pageant to celebrate the arrival of the Queen.A Pursuivant. Place for the Marshal of the Masque !First Speaker. What thinkest thou of this quaint masque, which turnsLike morning from the shadow of the night,
The night to day, and London to a place
Of peace and joy ?Second Speaker. And Hell to Heaven.
Eight years are gone,
And they seem hours, since in this populous street
I trod on grass made green by summer's rain,
For the red plague kept state within that palace
Where now reigns vanity—in nine years more
The roots will be refreshed with civil blood ;
And thank the mercy of insulted Heaven
That sin and wrongs wound as an orphan's cry,
The patience of the great Avenger's ear.Third Speaker (a youth). Yet, father, 'tis a happy sight to see,
Beautiful, innocent, and unforbidden
By God or man ;—'tis like the bright procession
Of skiey visions in a solemn dream
From which men wake as from a paradise,
And draw new strength to tread the thorns of life.
If God be good, wherefore should this be evil ?
And if this be not evil, dost thou not draw
Unseasonable poison from the flowers
Which bloom so rarely in this barren world ?
Oh, kill these bitter thoughts which make the present
Dark as the future !—

* * * * *

When avarice and tyranny, vigilant fear,
And open-eyed conspiracy, lie sleeping
As on Hell's threshold; and all gentle thoughts
Waken to worship him who giveth joys
With his own gift.Second Speaker. How young art thou in this old age of time !
How green in this grey world ! Caust thou not think
Of change in that low scene, in which thou art

Not a spectator but an actor ?
 The day that dawns in fire will die in storms,
 Even though the noon be calm. My travel's done ;
 Before the whirlwind wakes I shall have found
 My inn of lasting rest, but thou must still
 Be journeying on in this inclement air.

*       *       *       *       *

First Speaker.
 Is the Archbishop.

That

Second Speaker. Rather say the Pope.
 London will be soon his Rome : he walks
 As if he trod upon the heads of men.
 He looks elate, drunken with blood and gold ;—
 Beside him moves the Babylonian woman
 Invisibly, and with her as with his shadow,
 Mitred adulterer ! he is joined in sin,
 Which turns Heaven's milk of mercy to revenge.

Another Citizen (lifting up his eyes). Good Lord ! rain it down upon him.
 Amid her ladies walks the papist queen
 As if her nice feet scorned our English earth.
 There's old Sir Henry Vane, the Earl of Pembroke,
 Lord Essex, and Lord Keeper Coventry,
 And others who made base their English breed
 By vile participation of their honour
 With papists, atheists, tyrants, and apostates.
 When lawyers mask 'tis time for honest men
 To strip their vizor from their purposes.

*       *       *       *       *

Fourth Speaker (a pursuivant). Give place, give place !
 You torch-bearers, advance to the great gate,
 And then attend the Marshal of the Masque
 Into the Royal presence.

Fifth Speaker (a law student). What thinkest thou
 Of this quaint show of ours, my aged friend ?

First Speaker. I will not think but that our country's wounds
 May yet be healed—The king is just and gracious,
 Though wicked councils now pervert his will :
 These once cast off—

Second Speaker. As adders cast their skins
 And keep their venom, so kings often change ;
 Councils and councillors hang on one another,
 Hiding the loathsome [ ]
 Like the base patchwork of a leper's rags.

Third Speaker. Oh, still those dissonant thoughts—List, loud music
 Grows on the enchanted air ! And see, the torches
 Rellessly flashing, and the crowd divided
 Like waves before an admiral's prow.

*       *       *       *       *

Another Speaker. Give place—
 To the Marshal of the Masque !

Third Speaker. How glorious ! See those thronging chariots
 Rolling like painted clouds before the wind :

Some are
 Like curved shells dyed by the azure depths
 Of Indian seas ; some like the new-born moon ;
 And some like cars in which the Romans climbed (Canopied by Victory's eagle-wings outspread)
 The Capitolian—See how gloriously
 The mettled horses in the torchlight stir
 Their gallant riders, while they check their pride,
 Like shapes of some diviner element !

Second Speaker. Ay, there they are—
 Nobles, and sons of nobles, patentees,
 Monopolists, and stewards of this poor farm,
 On whose lean sheep sit the prophetic crows.
 Here is the pomp that strips the houseless orphan.
 Hero is the pride that breaks the desolate heart.
 These are the lilies glorious as Solomon,
 Who toil not, neither do they spin,—unless
 It be the webs they catch poor rogues withal.
 Here is the surfeit which to them who earn
 The niggard wages of the earth, scarce leaves ·
 The tithe that will support them till they crawl
 Back to its cold hard bosom. Here is health
 Followed by grim disease, glory by shame,
 Waste by lank famine, wealth by squalid want,
 And England's sin by England's punishment.
 And, as the effect pursues the cause foregone,
 Lo, giving substance to my words, behold
 At once the sign and the thing signified—
 A troop of cripples, beggars, and lean outcasts,
 Horsed upon stumbling shapes, carted with dung,
 Dragged for a day from collars and low cabins
 And rotten hiding-holes, to point the moral
 Of this presentment, and bring up the rear
 Of painted pomp with misery !

Speaker. 'Tis but
 Tho anti masque, and serves as discords do
 In sweetest music. Who would love May flowers
 If they succeeded not to Winter's flaw ;
 Or day unchanged by night ; or joy itself
 Without the touch of sorrow ?

SCENE II.—A Chamber in Whitehall.

Enter the KING, QUEEN, LAUD, WENTWORTH, and ARCHY.

King. Thanks, gentlemen. I heartily accept
This token of your service: your gay masque
Was performed gallantly.

Queen. And, gentlemen,
Call your poor Queen your debtor. Your quaint pageant
Rose on me like the figures of past years,
Treading their still path back to infancy,
More beautiful and mild as they draw nearer
The quiet cradle. I could have almost wept
To think I was in Paris, where these shows
Are well devised—such as I was ere yet
My young heart shared with [ ] the task,
The careful weight of this great monarchy.
There, gentlemen, between the sovereign's pleasure
And that which it regards, no clamour lifts
Its proud interposition.

* * * * *

King. My lord of Canterbury.

Archy. The fool is here.

Laud. I crave permission of your Majesty
To order that this insolent fellow be
Chastised: he mocks the sacred character,
Scoffs at the stake, and—

King. What, my Archy!
He mocks and mimics all he sees and hears,
Yet with a quaint and graceful licence—Prithee
For this once do not as Prynne would, were he Primate of England.
He lives in his own world; and, like a parrot,
Hung in his gilded prison from the window
Of a queen's bower over the public way,
Blasphemies with a bird's mind:—his words, like arrows
Which know no aim beyond the archer's wit,
Strike sometimes what eludes philosophy.

Queen. Go, sirrah, and repent of your offence
Ten minutes in the rain: be it your penance
To bring news how the world goes thereto. Poor Archy!
He weaves about himself a world of mirth
Out of this wreck of ours.

Laud. I take with patience, as my Master did,
All scoffs permitted from above.

King. My lord,
Pray overlook these papers. Archy's words
Had wings, but these have talons.

Queen. And the lion
 That wears them must be tamed. My dearest lord,
 I see the new-born courage in your eye
 Armed to strike dead the spirit of the time.

* * * * *

Do thou persist : for faint but in resolve,
 And it were better thou hadst still remained
 The slave of thine own slaves, who tear like curs
 The fugitive, and flee from the pursuer ;
 And Opportunity, that empty wolf,
 Flies at his throat who falls. Subdue thy actions,
 Even to the disposition of thy purpose,
 And be that tempered as the Ebro's steel ;
 And banish weak-eyed Mercy to the weak,
 Whence she will greet thee with a gift of peace,
 And not betray thee with a traitor's kiss,
 As when she keeps the company of rebels,
 Who think that she is fear. This do, lest we Should fall as from a glorious pinnacle
 In a bright dream, and awake as from a dream
 Out of our worshipped state.

* * * * *

Land. And if this suffice not,
 Unleash the sword and fire, that in their thirst
 They may lick up that scum of schismatics.
 I laugh at those weak rebels who, desiring
 What we possess, still prate of christian peace,
 As if those dreadful messengers of wrath,
 Which play the part of God 'twixt right and wrong,
 Should be let loose against innocent sleep
 Of templed cities and the smiling fields,
 For some poor argument of policy
 Which touches our own profit or our pride,
 Where indeed it were christian charity
 To turn the cheek even to the smiter's hand :
 And when our great Redeemer, when our God
 Is scorned in his immediate ministers,
 They talk of peace !
 Such peace as Canaan found, let Scotland now.

* * * * *

Queen. My beloved lord,
 Have you not noted that the fool of late
 Has lost his careless mirth, and that his words
 Sound like the echoes of our saddest fears ?
 What can it mean ? I should be loth to think
 Some factious slave had tutored him.

King. It partly is,
 That our minds piece the vacant intervals
 Of his wild words with their own fashioning ;

As in the imagery of summer clouds,
Or coals in the winter fire, idlers find
The perfect shadows of their teeming thoughts :
And partly, that the terrors of the time
Are sown by wandering Ruinour in all spirits ;
And in the lightest and the least, may best
Be seen the current of the coming wind.

Queen. Your brain is overwrought with these deep thoughts.
Come, I will sing to you ; let us go try
These airs from Italy,—and you shall see
A cradled miniature of yourself asleep,
Stamped on the heart by never-erring love ;
Liker than any Vandyke ever made,
A pattern to the unborn age of thee,
Over whose sweet beauty I have wept for joy
A thousand times, and now should weep for sorrow,
Did I not think that after we were dead
Our fortunes would spring high in him, and that
The cares we waste upon our heavy crown
Would make it light and glorious as a wreath
Of heaven's beams for his dear innocent brow.

King. Dear Henrietta !

SCENE III. - HAMPDEN, PYM, CROMWELL, and the younger VANE.

Hampden. England, farewell ! thou, who hast been my cradle,
Shalt never be my dungeon or my grave !
I hold what I inherited in thee
As pawn for that inheritance of freedom
Which thou hast sold for thy despoiler's smile :---
How can I call thee England, or my country ?
Does the wind hold ?

Vane. The vanes sit steady
Upon the Abbey-towers. The silver lightnings
Of the evening star, spite of the city's smoke,
Tell that the north wind reigns in the upper air.
Mark too that flock of fleecy-winged clouds
Sailing athwart St. Margaret's.

Hampden. Hail, fleet herald
Of tempest ! that wild pilot who shall guide
Hearts free as his, to realms as pure as thine,
Beyond the shot of tyranny ! And thou,
Fair star, whose beam lies on the wide Atlantic,
Athwart its zones of tempest and of calm,
Bright as the path to a beloved home,
O light us to the isles of th' evening land !
Like floating Edens, cradled in the glimmer
Of sunset, through the distant mist of years

Tinged by departing Hope, they gleam ! Lone regions,
 Where power's poor dupes and victims yet have never Propitiated the savage fear of kings
 With purest blood of noblest hearts ; whose dew
 Is yet unstained with tears of those who wake
 To weep each day the wrongs on which it dawns ;
 Whose sacred silent air owns yet no echo
 Of formal blasphemies ; nor impious rites
 Wrest man's free worship from the God who loves
 Towards the worm, who envies us his love,
 Receive thou, young [ ] of Paradise,
 These exiles from the old and sinful world !
 This glorious clinie, this firmament, whose lights
 Dart mitigated influence through the veil
 Of pale-blue atmosphere ; whose tears keep green
 The pavement of this moist all-feeding earth ;
 This vaporous horizon, whose dim round
 Is bastioned by the circumfluous sea,
 Repelling invasion from the sacred towers :
 Presses upon me like a dungeon's grate,
 A low dark roof, a damp and narrow vault :
 The mighty universe becomes a cell
 Too narrow for the soul that owns no master.

While the loathliest spot

Of this wide prison, England, is a nest
 Of cradled peace built on the mountain tops,
 To which the eagle-spirits of the free,
 Which range through heaven and earth, and scorn the storm
 Of time, and gaze upon the light of truth,
 Return to brood over the [ ] thoughts
 That cannot die, and may not be repelled.

A DIRGE.

Rough wind, that moanest loud
 Grief too sad for song ;
 Wild wind, when sullen cloud
 Knells all the night long ;
 Sad storm, whose tears are vain,
 Bare woods, whose branches stain,
 Deep caves and dreary main,
 Wail, for the world's wrong !

THE TRIUMPH OF LIFE.

SWIFT as a spirit hastening to his task
 Of glory and of good, the Sun sprang forth
 Rejoicing in his splendour, and the mask

Of darkness fell from the awakened Earth—
 The smokeless altars of the mountain snows
 Flamed above crimson clouds, and at the birth

Of light, the Ocean's orison arose,
 To which the birds tempered their matin lay.
 All flowers in field or forest which unclose

Their trembling eyelids to the kiss of day,
 Swinging their censers in the element,
 With orient incense lit by the new ray

Burned slow and inconsuitably, and sent
 Their odorous sighs up to the smiling air ;
 And, in succession due, did continent,

Isle, ocean, and all things that in them wear
 The form and character of mortal mould,
 Rise as the sun their father rose, to bear

Their portion of the toil, which he of old
 Took as his own, and then imposed on them ;
 But I, whom thoughts which must remain untold

Had kept as wakeful as the stars that gem
 The cone of night, now they were laid asleep
 Stretched my faint limbs beneath the hoary stem

Which an old chesnut flung athwart the steep
 Of a green Apennine : before me fled
 The night ; behind me rose the day ; the deep

Was at my feet, and Heaven above my head,
 When a strange trance over my fancy grew
 Which was not slumber, for the shade it spread

Was so transparent that the scene came through
 As clear as, when a veil of light is drawn
 O'er evening hills, they glimmer ; and I knew

That I had felt the freshness of that dawn
 Bathe in the same cold dew my brow and hair,
 And sate as thus upon that slope of lawn

Under the self-same bough, and heard as therè
 The birds, the fountains, and the ocean hold
 Sweet talk in music through the enamoured air,
 And then a vision on my brain was rolled.

---

As in that trance of wondrous thought I lay,
 This was the tenour of my waking dream :—
 Methought I sate beside a public way

Thick strewn with summer dust, and a great stream
 Of people there was hurrying to and fro,
 Numerous as gnats upon the evening gleam,

All hastening onward, yet none seemed to know
 Whither he went, or whenevèr he came, or why
 He made one of the multitude, and so

Was borne amid the crowd, as through the sky
 One of the million leaves of summer's bier;
 Old age and youth, manhood and infancy,

Mixed in one mighty torrent did appear :
 Some flying from the thing they feared, and some
 Seeking the object of another's fear ;

And others as with steps towards the tomb,
 Pored on the trodden worms that crawled beneath,
 And others mournfully within the gloom

Of their own shadow walked and called it death ;
 And some fled from it as it were a ghost,
 Half fainting in the affliction of vain breath :

But more, with motions which each other crost,
 Pursued or spurned the shadows the clouds threw
 Or birds within the noon-day ether lost,

Upon that path where flowers never grew,—
 And weary with vain toil and faint for thirst,
 Heard not the fountains, whose melodious dew

Out of their mossy cells for ever burst ;
 Nor felt the breeze which from the forest told
 Of grassy paths and wood, lawn-interspersed,

With over-arching elms and caverns cold,
And violet banks where sweet dreams brood, but they Pursued their serious folly as of old.

And as I gazed, methought that in the way
The throng grew wilder, as the woods of June
When the south wind shakes the extinguished day,

And a cold glare intenser than the noon,
But icy cold, obscured with blinding light
The sun, as he the stars. Like the young moon

When on the sunlit limits of the night
Her white shell trembles amid crimson air,
And whilst the sleeping tempest gathers might,

Doth, as the herald of its coming, bear
The ghost of its dead mother, whose dim form
Bends in dark ether from her infant's chair, —

So came a chariot on the silent storm
Of its own rushing splendour, and a Shape
So sate within, as one whom years deform,

Beneath a dusky hood and double cape,
Crouching within the shadow of a tomb;
And o'er what seemed the head a cloud-like cape

Was bent, a dun and faint ethereal gloom
Tempering the light: upon the chariot beam
A Janus-visaged shadow did assume

The guidance of that wonder-winged team;
The shapes which drew it in thick lig'nings
Were lost:—I heard alone on the air's soft stream

The music of their ever-moving wings.
All the four faces of that charioteer
Had their eyes banded; little profit brings

Speed in the van and blindness in the rear,
Nor then avail the beams that quench the sun
Or that with banded eyes could pierce the sphere

Of all that is, has been, or will be done;
So ill was the car guided—but it past
With solemn speed majestically on.

The crowd gave way, and I arose aghast,
Or seemed to rise, so mighty was the trance,
And saw like clouds upon the thunder's blast,

The million with fierce song and maniac dance
Raging around—such seemed the jubilee
As when, to meet some conqueror's advance,

Imperial Rome poured forth her living sea
From senate-house, and forum, and theatre,
When [ ] upon the free

Had bound a yoke, which soon they stooped to bear.
Nor wanted here the just similitude
Of a triumphal pageant, for where'er

The chariot rolled, a captive multitudo
Was driven; - all those who had grown old in power
Or misery, - all who had their age subdued

By action or by suffering, and whose hour
Was drained to its last sand in weal or woe,
So that the trunk survived both fruit and flower; —

All those whose fame or infamy must grow
Till the great winter lay the form and name
Of this green earth with them for ever low; —

All but the sacred few who could not tame
Their spirits to the conquerors; - but as soon
As they had touched the world with living flame,

Fled back like eagles to their native noon,
Or those who put aside the diadem
Of earthly thrones or gems [ ]

Were there, of Athens or Jerusalem
Were neither 'mid the mighty captives seen,
Nor 'mid the ribald crowd that followed them,

Nor those who went before fierce and obscene.
The wild dance maddens in the van, and those
Who lead it - fleet as shadows on the green,

Outspeed the chariot, and without repose
Mix with each other in tempestuous measure
To savage music, wilder as it grows,

They, tortured by their agonising pleasure,
Convulsed and on the rapid whirlwinds spun
Of that fierce spirit whose unholy leisure

Was soothed by mischief since the world begun,—
Throw back their heads and loose their streaming hair;
And in their dance round her who dims the sun,

Maidens and youths fling their wild arms in air ;
As their feet twinkle they recede, and now
Bending within each other's atmosphere

Kindle invisibly—and as they glow,
Like moths by light attracted and repelled,
Oft to their bright destruction come and go,

Till like two clouds into one vale impelled
That shake the mountains when their lightnings mingle
And die in rain—the fiery band which held

Their natures, snaps—the shock still may tingle ;
One falls and then another in the path
Senseless—nor is the desolation single,

Yet ere I can say where—the chariot hath Past over them—nor other trace I find
But as of foam after the ocean's wrath

Is spent upon the desert shore ;—behind,
Old men and women foully disarrayed,
Shake their grey hairs in the insulting wind,

And follow in the dance, with limbs decayed,
Seeking to reach the light which leaves them still
Farther behind and deeper in the shade.

But not the less with impotence of will
They wheel, though ghastly shadows interpose
Round them and round each other, and fulfil

Their part, and in the dust from whence they rose
Sink, and corruption veils them as they lie,
And past in these performs what [ ] in those.

Struck to the heart by this sad pageantry,
Half to myself I said—And what is this ?
Whose shape is that within the car ? And why—

I would have added—is all here amiss ?—
But a voice answered—“ Life !”—I turned, and knew
(O Heaven, have mercy on such wretchedness !)

That what I thought was an old root which grew
To strange distortion out of the hill side,
Was indeed one of those deluded crew,

And that the grass, which methought hung so wide
And white, was but his thin discoloured hair,
And that the holes it vainly sought to hide,

Were or had been eyes :—"If thou canst, forbear
To join the dance, which I had well forborne!"
Said the grim Feature (of my thought aware) ;

"I will unfold that which to this deep scorn
Led me and my companions, and relate
The progress of the pageant since the morn ;

"If thirst of knowledge shall not then abate,
Follow it thou even to the night, but I
Am weary."—Then like one who with the weight

Of his own words is staggered, weakly
He paused ; and, ere he could resume, I cried,
"First, who art thou?"—"Before thy memory,

"I feared, loved, hated, suffered, did and died,
And if the spark with which Heaven lit my spirit
Had been with purer sentiment supplied,

"Corruption would not now thus much inherit
Of what was once Rousseau,—nor this disguise
Stained that which ought to have disdained to wear it :

"If I have been extinguished, yet there rise
A thousand beacons from the spark I bore"—
"And who are those chained to the ear?"—"The wise,

"The great, the unforgotten,—they who wore
Mитres and helms and crowns, or wreaths of light,
Signs of thought's empire over thought—their lore

"Taught them not this, to know themselves ; their might
Could not repress the mystery within,
And for the morn of truth they feigned, deep night

"Caught them ere evening."—"Who is he with chin Upon his breast, and hands crost on his chain?"—
"The child of a fierce hour ; he sought to win

"The world, and lost all that it did contain
Of greatness, in its hope destroyed ; and more
Of fame and peace than virtue's self can gain

"Without the opportunity which bore
Him on his eagle pinions to the peak
From which a thousand climbers have before

"Fallen, as Napoleon fell."—I felt my cheek
Alter to see the shadow pass away,
Whose grasp had left the giant world so weak,

That every pigmy kicked it as it lay ;
 And much I grieved to think how power and will
 In opposition rule our mortal day,

And why God made irreconcileable
 Good and the means of good ; and for despair
 I half disdained mine eyes' desire to fill

With the spent vision of the times that were
 And scarce have ceased to be.—“Dost thou behold,”
 Said my guide, “those spoilers spoiled, Voltaire,

“Frederick, and Paul, Catherine, and Leopold,
 And hoary anarchs, demagogues, and sage—
 —names which the world thinks always old,

“For in the battle life and they did wage,
 She remained conqueror. I was overcome
 By my own heart alone, which neither age,

“Nor tears, nor infamy, nor now the tomb
 Could temper to its object.”—“Let them pass,”
 I cried, “the world and its mysterious loom

“Is not so much more glorious than it was,
 That I desire to worship those who drew
 New figures on its false and fragile glass

“As the old faded.”—“Figures ever new
 Rise on the bubble, paint them as you may ;
 We have but thrown, as those before us threw,

“Our shadows on it as it past away.
 But mark how chained to the triumphal chair
 The mighty phantoms of an elder day ;

“All that is mortal of great Plato there
 Expiates the joy and woe his master knew not :
 The star that ruled his doom was far too fair,

“And life, where long that flower of Heaven grew not,
 Conquered that heart by love, which gold, or pain,
 Or age, or sloth, or slavery could subdue not.

“And near him walk the [ ] twain,
 The tutor and his pupil, whom Dominion
 Followed as tame as vulture in a chain.

“The world was darkened beneath either pinion
 Of him whom from the flock of conquerors
 Fame singled out for her thunder-bearing minion ;

"The other long outlived both woes and wars,
Throned in the thoughts of men, and still had kept
The jealous key of truth's eternal doors,

"If Bacon's eagle spirit had not leapt
Like lightning out of darkness—he compelled
The Proteus shape of Nature as it slept

"To wako, and lead him to the caves that held
The treasure of the secrets of its reign.
See the great bards of elder time, who quelled

"The passions which they sung, as by their strain
May well be known: their living melody
Tempers its own contagion to the vein

"Of those who are infected with it—I
Have suffered what I wrote, or viler pain,
And so my words have seeds of misery!"—

[There is a chasm here in the MS. which it is impossible to fill up. It appears from the context, that other shapes pass, and that Rousseau still stood beside the dreamer, as] — — — he pointed to a company,

'Midst whom I quickly recognised the heirs
Of Caesar's crime, from him to Constantine;
The anarch chiefs, whose force and murderous snares

Had founded many a sceptre-bearing line,
And spread the plague of gold and blood abroad:
And Gregory and John, and men divine,

Who rose like shadows between man and God;
Till that eclipse, still hanging over heaven,
Was worshipped by the world o'er which they strode,

For the true sun it quenched—"Their power was given
But to destroy," replied the leader:—"I
Am one of those who have created, even

If it be but a world of agony."—
"Whence comest thou? and whither goest thou?
How did thy course begin?" I said, "and why?

"Mine eyes are sick of this perpetual flow
Of people, and my heart sick of one sad thought—
Speak!"—"Whence I am, I partly seem to know,

"And how and by what paths I have been brought
To this dread ~~pass~~, methinks even thou may'st guess;—
Why this should be, my mind can compass not;

" Whither the conqueror hurries me, still less ;—
But follow thou, and from spectator turn
Actor or victim in this wretchedness,

" And what thou wouldest be taught I then may learn
From thee. Now listen :—In the April prime,
When all the forest tips began to burn

" With kindling green, touched by the azure clime
Of the young year's dawn, I was laid asleep
Under a mountain, which from unknown time

" Had yawned into a cavern, high and deep ;
And from it came a gentle rivulet,
Whose water, like clear air, in its calm sweep

" Bent the soft grass, and kept for ever wet
The stems of the sweet flowers, and filled the grove
With sounds, which whoso hears must needs forget

" All pleasure and all pain, all hate and love,
Which they had known before that hour of rest ;
A sleeping mother then would dream not of

" Her only child who died upon her breast
At eventide—a king would mourn no more
The crown of which his brows were dispossess'd

" When the sun lingered o'er his ocean floor,
To gild his rival's new prosperity.
Thou wouldest forget thus vainly to deplore

" Ills, which if ill can find no cure from thee,
The thought of which no other sleep will quell,
Nor other music blot from memory,

" So sweet and deep is the oblivious spell ;
And whether life had been before that sleep
The heaven which I imagine, or a hell

" Like this harsh world in which I wake to weep,
I know not. I arose, and for a space
The scene of woods and waters seem to keep,

" Though it was now broad day, a gentle trace
Of light diviner than the common sun
Sheds on the common earth, and all the place

" Was filled with magic sounds woven into one
Oblivious melody, confusing sense
Amid the gliding waves and shadows dun ;

“ And, as I looked, the bright omnipresence
Of morning through the orient cavern flowed,
And the sun’s image radiantly intense

“ Burned on the waters of the well that glowed
Like gold, and threaded all the forest’s maze
With winding paths of emerald fire ; there stood

“ Amid the sun,—as he amid the blaze
Of his own glory, on the vibrating
Floor of the fountain paved with flashing rays, —

“ A Shape all light, which with one hand did fling
Dew on the earth, as if she were the dawn,
And the invisible rain did ever sing

“ A silver music on the mossy lawn ;
And still before me on the dusky grass,
Iris her many-coloured scarf had drawn :

“ In her right hand she bore a crystal glass,
Mantling with bright Nepenthe ; the fierce splendour
Fell from her as she moved under the mass

“ Out of the deep cavern, with palms so tender,
Their tread broke not the mirror of its bellow ;
She glided along the river, and did bend her

“ Head under the dark boughs, till, like a willow,
Her fair hair swept the bosom of the stream
That whispered with delight to be its pillow.

“ As one enamoured is upborne in dream
O’er lily-paven lakes ’mid silver mist,
To wondrous music, so this shape might seem

“ Partly to tread the waves with feet which kissed
The dancing foam ; partly to glide along
The air which roughened the moist amethyst,

“ Or the faint morning beams that fell among
The trees, or the soft shadows of the trees ;
And her feet, ever to the ceaseless song

“ Of leaves, and winds, and waves, and birds, and bees,
And falling drops moved to a measure new,
Yet sweet, as on the summer evening breeze,

“ Up from the lake a shape of golden dew
Between two rocks, athwart the rising moon,
Dances i’ the wind, where never eagle flew ;

"And still her feet, no less than the sweet tune
 To which they moved, seemed as they moved to blot
 The thoughts of him who gazed on them ; and soon

"All that was, seemed as if it had been not ;
 And all the gazer's mind was strown beneath
 Her feet like embers ; and she, thought by thought,

"Trampled its sparks into the dust of death,
 As day upon the threshold of the east
 Treads out the lamps of night, until the breath

"Of darkness re-illumine even the least
 Of heaven's living eyes !—like day she came,
 Making the night a dream ; and ere she ceased

"To move, as one between desire and shame
 Suspended, I said—' If, as it doth seem,
 Thou comest from the realm without a name,

"' Into this valley of perpetual dream
 Show whence I came, and where I am, and why—
 Pass not away upon the passing stream.'

"' Arise and quench thy thirst,' was her reply,
 And as a shut lily, stricken by the wand
 Of dewy morning's vital alchemy,

"I rose ; and, bending at her sweet command,
 Touched with faint lips the cup she raised,
 And suddenly my brain became as sand,

"Where the first wave had more than half erased
 The track of deer on desert Labrador ;
 Whilst the wolf, from which they fled amazed,

"Leaves his stamp visibly upon the shore,
 Until the second bursts ;—so on my sight
 Burst a new vision, never seen before,

"And the fair shape waned in the coming light,
 As veil by veil the silent splendour drops
 From Lucifer, amid the chrysolite

"Of sun-rise, ere it tinge the mountain tops ;
 And as the presence of that fairest planet,
 Although unseen, is felt by one who hopes

"That his day's path may end, as he began it,
 In that star's smile, whose light is like the scent
 Of a jonquil when evening breezes fan it,

"Or the soft note in which his dear lament
The Brescian shepherd breathes, or the caress
That turned his weary slumber to content ;*

"So knew I in that light's severe excess
The presence of that shape which on the stream
Moved, as I moved along the wilderness,

"More dimly than a day-appearing dream,
The ghost of a forgotten form of sleep ;
A light of heaven, whose half-extinguished beam

"Through the sick day in which we wake to weep,
Glimmers, for ever sought, for ever lost ;
So did that shape its obscure tenour keep

"Beside my path, as silent as a ghost ;
But the new Vision, and the cold bright ear,
With solemn speed and stunning music, crost

"The forest, and as if from some dread war
Triumphantly returning, the loud million
Fiercely extolled the fortune of her star.

"A moving arch of victory, the vermillion
And green and azure plumes of Iris had Built high over her wind-winged pavilion,

"And underneath ethereal glory clad
The wilderness, and far before her flew
The tempest of the splendour, which forbade

"Shadow to fall from leaf and stone ; the crew
Seemed in that light, like atomies to dance
Within a sunbeam ;—some upon the new

"Embroidery of flowers, that did enhance
The grassy vesture of the desert, played,
Forgetful of the chariot's swift advance ;

"Others stood gazing, till within the shade
Of the great mountain its light left them dim ;
Others outspeeded it ; and others made

"Circles around it, like the clouds that swim
Round the high moon in a bright sea of air ;
And more did follow, with exulting hymn,

"The chariot and the captives fettered there :—
But all like bubbles on an eddying flood
Fell into the same track at last, and were

* The favourite song, "Stanco di pascolar le pecorello," is a Brescian national air.

"Borne onward. I among the multitude
Was swept—me, sweetest flowers delayed not long ;
Me, not the shadow nor the solitude ;

"Me, not that falling stream's Lethean song ;
Me, not the phantom of that early form,
Which moved upon its motion—but among

"The thickest billows of that living storm
I plunged, and bared my bosom to the clime
Of that cold light, whose airs too soon deform.

"Before the chariot had begun to climb
The opposing steep of that mysterious dell,
Behold a wonder worthy of the rhyme

"Of him who from the lowest depths of hell,
Through every paradise and through all glory,
Love led serene, and who returned to tell

"The words of hate and care ; the wondrous story
How all things are transfigured except Love ;
(For deaf as is a sea, which wrath makes hoary,

"The world can hear not the sweet notes that move
The sphere whose light is melody to lovers)
A wonder worthy of his rhyme—the grove

"Grew dense with shadows to its inmost covers,
The earth was grey with phantoms, and the air
Was peopled with dim forms, as when there hovers

"A flock of vampire-bats before the glare
Of the tropic sun, bringing, ere evening,
Strange night upon some Indian vale ;—thus were

"Phantoms diffused around ; and some did fling
Shadows of shadows, yet unlike themselves,
Behind them ; some like eaglets on the wing

"Were lost in the white day ; others like elves
Danced in a thousand unimagined shapes
Upon the sunny streams and grassy shelves ;

"And others sate chattering like restless apes
On vulgar hands, [ ]
Some made a cradle of the ermined capes

"Of kingly mantles ; some across the tire
Of pontiffs rode, like demons ; others played
Under the crown which girt with empire

“ A baby’s or an idiot’s brow, and made
Their nests in it. The old ananomies
Sate hatching their bare broods under the shade

“ Of demon wings, and laughed from their dead eyes
To re-assume the delegated power,
Arrayed in which those worms did monarchise,

“ Who made this earth their charnel. Others more
Humble, like falcons, sat upon the fist
Of common men, and round their heads did sour;

“ Or like small gnats and flies, as thick as mist
On evening marshes, thronged about the brow
Of lawyers, statesmen, priest, and theorist; —

“ And others, like discoloured flakes of snow
On fairest bosoms and the sunniest hair,
Fell, and were melted by the youthful glow

“ Which they extinguished ; and, like tears, they were
A veil to those from whose faint lids they rained
In drops of sorrow. I became aware

“ Of whence those forms proceeded which thus stained
The track in which we moved. After brief space,
From every form the beauty slowly waned ;

“ From every firmest limb and fairest face
The strength and freshness fell like dust, and left
The action and the shape without the grace

“ Of life. The marble brow of youth was cleft
With care ; and in those eyes where once hope shone,
Desire, like a lioness bereft

“ Of her last cub, glared ere it died ; each one
Of that great crowd sent forth incessantly
These shadows, numerous as the dead leaves blown

“ In autumn evening from a poplar tree,
Each like himself and like each other were
At first ; but some distorted seemed to be

“ Obscure clouds, moulded by the casual air ;
And of this stuff the car’s creative ray
Wrapt all the busy phantoms that were there,

“ As the sun shapes the clouds ; thus on the way
Mask after mask fell from the countenance
And form of all ; and long before the day

"Was old, the joy which waked like heaven's glance
 The sleepers in the oblivious valley died ;
 And some grew weary of the ghastly dance,

"And fell, as I have fallen, by the way-side ;—
 Those soonest from whose forms most shadows past,
 And least of strength and beauty did abide."

"Then, what is life ?" I cried.—

TO ——

THE keen stars were twinkling,
 And the fair moon was rising among them,
 Dear *** !
 The guitar was tinkling,
 But the notes were not sweet till you sung them
 Again.
 As the moon's soft splendour
 O'er the faint cold starlight of heaven
 Is thrown,
 So your voice most tender
 To the strings without soul had then given
 Its own.

The stars will awaken,
 Though the moon sleep a full hour later,
 To-night ;
 No leaf will be shaken
 Whilst the dews of your melody scatter
 Delight.
 Though the sound overpowers,
 Sing again, with your dear voice revealing
 A tone
 Of some world far from ours,
 Where music and moonlight and feeling
 Are one.

FRAGMENTS.*

I.

TO —.

HERE, my dear friend, is a new book for you :
 I have already dedicated two
 To other friends, one female and one male,
 What you are, is a thing that I must veil ;
 What can this be to those who praise or rail
 . I never was attached to that great sect
 Whose doctrine is that each one should select
 Out of the world a mistress or a friend,
 And all the rest, though fair and wise, commend
 To cold oblivion - though it is the code
 Of modern morals, and the beaten road
 Which those poor slaves with weary footsteps tread
 Who travel to their home among the dead,
 By the broad highway of the world -and so
 With one sad friend, and many a jealous foe,
 The dreariest and the longest journey go.

Free love has this, different from gold and clay
 That to divide is not to take away.
 Like ocean, which the general north wind breaks
 Into ten thousand waves, and each one makes
 A mirror of the moon ; like some great glass,
 Which did distort whatever form might pass,
 Dashed into fragments by a playful child,
 Which then reflects its eyes and forehead mild,
 Giving for one, which it could ne'er express,
 A thousand images of loveliness.

If I were one whom the loud world held wise,
 I should disdain to quote authorities
 In the support of this kind of love ;—
 Why there is first the God in heaven above,
 Who wrote a book called Nature, 'tis to be Reviewed I hear in the next Quarterly ;

* These fragments do not properly belong to the poems of 1822. They are gleanings from Shelley's manuscript books and papers ; preserved not only because they are beautiful in themselves, but as affording indications of his feelings and virtues.

And Socrates, the Jesus Christ of Greece ;
 And Jesus Christ himself did never cease
 To urge all living things to love each other,
 And to forgive their mutual faults, and smother
 The Devil of disunion in their souls.

* * * *

It is a sweet thing, friendship, a dear balm,
 A happy and auspicious bird of calm,
 Which rides o'er life's ever tumultuous Ocean ;
 A God that broods o'er chaos in commotion ;
 A flower which fresh as Lapland roses are,
 Lifts its bold head into the world's pure air,
 And blooms most radiantly when others die,
 Health, hope, and youth, and brief prosperity ;
 And, with the light and odour of its bloom,
 Shining within the dungeon and the tomb ;
 Whose coming is as light and music are
 'Mid dissonance and gloom - a star
 Which moves not 'mid the moving heavens alone,
 A smile among dark frowns—a gentle tone
 Among rude voices, a beloved light,
 A solitude, a refuge, a delight.

If I had but a friend ! why I have three,
 Even by my own confession ; there may be
 Some more, for what I know ; for 'tis my mind
 To call my friends all who are wise and kind,
 And these, Heaven knows, at best are very few,
 But none can ever be more dear than you.
 Why should they be ? my muse has lost her wings,
 Or, like a dying swan, who soars and sings,
 I should describe you in heroic style,
 But as it is--are you not void of guile ?
 A lovely soul, formed to be blessed and bless ;
 A well of sealed and secret happiness :
 A lute, which those whom love has taught to play
 Make music on, to cheer the roughest day ?

II.

TO WILLIAM SHELLEY.

Thy little footsteps on the sands
 Of a remote and lonely shore ;
 The twinkling of thine infant hands
 Where now the worm will feed no more :
 Thy mingled look of love and glee
 When we returned to gaze on thee.

III.

AND who feels discord now or sorrow ?
 Love is the universe to-day—
 These are the slaves of dim to-morrow,
 Darkening Life's labyrinthine way.

IV.

A GENTLE story of two lovers young,
 Who met in innocence and died in sorrow,
 And of one selfish heart, whose rancour clung
 Like curses on them ; are ye slow to borrow
 The lore of truth from such a tale ?
 Or in this world's deserted vale,
 Do ye not see a star of gladness
 Pierce the shadows of its sadness,
 When ye are cold, that love is a light sent
 From heaven, which none shall quench, to cheer the innocent ?

V.

I AM drunk with the honey wine
 Of the moon-unfolded eglantine,
 Which fairies catch in hyacinth buds :—
 The bats, the dormice, and the moles
 Sleep in the walls or under the sward
 Of the desolate Castle yard ;
 And when 'tis spilt on the sunnier earth,
 Or its fumes arise among the dew,
 Their jocund dreams are full of mirth,
 They gibber their joy in sleep ; for few
 Of the fairies bear those bowls so new !

VI.

YE gentle visitations of calm thought—
 Moods like the memories of happier earth,
 Which come arrayed in thoughts of little worth,
 Like stars in clouds by the weak winds enwrought,
 But that the clouds depart and stars remain,
 While they remain, and ye, alas, depart !

VII.

THE world is dreary,
 And I am weary
 Of wandering on without thee, Mary ;
 A joy was erewhile
 In thy voice and thy smile,
 And 'tis gone, when I should be gone too, Mary.

VIII.

My dearest Mary, wherefore hast thou gone,
And left me in this dreary world alone !
Thy form is here indeed—a lovely one—
But thou art fled, gone down the dreary road,
That leads to Sorrow's most obscure abode ;
Thou sittest on the hearth of pale despair,

Where

For thine own sake I cannot follow thee.

IX.

IX.

WHEN a lover clasps his fairest,
Then be our dread sport the rarest.
Their caresses were like the chaff
In the tempest, and be our laugh
His despair—her epitaph !

When a mother clasps her child,
Watch till dusty Death has piled
His cold ashes on the clay :
She has loved it many a day—
She remains, it fades away.

X.

ONE sung of thee who left the tale untold,
Like the false dawns which perish in the bursting :
Like empty cups of wrought and daidal gold,
Which mock the lips with air, when they are thirsting.

XI.

AND where is truth ? On tombs ! for such to thee
Has been my heart—and thy dead memory
Has lain from childhood, many a changeful year—
Unchangingly preserved and buried there.

XII.

IN the eave which wild weeds cover
Wait for thine ethereal lover ;
For the pallid moon is waning,
O'er the spiral cypress hanging
And the moon no cloud is staining.

It was once a Roman's chamber,
Where he kept his darkest revels,
And the wild weeds twine and clamber ;
It was then a chasm for devils.

XIII.

THERE is a warm and gentle atmosphere
About the form of one we love, and thus
As in a tender mist our spirits are
Wrapt in the —— of that which is to us
The health of life's own life.

XIV.

How sweet it is to sit and read the tales
Of mighty poets, and to hear the while
Sweet music, which when the attention fails
Fills the dim pause.—

XV.

WHAT men gain fairly— that they should possess,
And children may inherit idleness,
From him who earns it —'This is understood ;
Private injustice may be general good.
But he who gains by base and armed wrong,
Or guilty fraud, or base compliances,
May be despoiled ; even as a stolen dress
Is stript from a convicted thief, and he,
Left in the nakedness of infamy.

XVI.

WAKE the serpent not—lest he
Should not know the way to go,—
Let him crawl which yet lies sleeping
Through the deep grass of the meadow !
Not a bee shall hear him creeping,
Not a May-fly shall awaken,
From its cradling blue-bell shaken,
Not the starlight as he's sliding
Through the grass with silent gliding.

XVII.

ROME has fallen, ye see it lying
Heaped in undistinguished ruin :
Nature is alone undying.

XVIII.

THE fitful alternations of the rain,
When the chill wind, languid as with pain
Of its own heavy moisture, here and there
Drives through the grey and beamless atmosphere.

XIX.

I WOULD not be a king—enough
Of woe it is to love !
The path to power is steep and rough,
And tempests reign above.

I would not climb the imperial throne ;
'Tis built on ice which fortune's sun
Thaws in the height of noon.
Then farewell, king, yet were I one,
Care would not come so soon.
Would he and I were far away
Keeping flocks on Hymelay !

XX.

O THOU immortal deity
Whose throne is in the depth of human thought,
I do adjure thy power and thee
By all that man may be, by all that he is not,
By all that he has been and yet must be !

XXI.

HE wanders, like a day-appearing dream,
Through the dim wildernesses of the mind ;
Through desert woods and tracts, which seem
Like ocean, homeless, boundless, unconfined.

XXII.

ON KEATS,

WHO DESIRED THAT ON HIS TOMB SHOULD BE INSCRIBED—

“ Here lieth One whose name was writ on water !”
But ere the breath that could erase it blew,
Death, in remorse for that fell slaughter,
Death, the immortalising winter flew,
Athwart the stream, and time's mouthless torrent grew
A scroll of crystal, blazoning the name
Of Adonais !—

XXIII.

THE rude wind is singing
The dirge of the music dead,
The cold worms are clinging
Where kisses were lately fed.

XXIV.

WHAT art thou, Presumptuous, who profanest
 The wreath to mighty poets only due,
 Even whilst like a forgotten moon thou wanest?
 Touch not those leaves which for the eternal few,
 Who wander o'er the paradise of fame,
 In sacred dedication ever grew,—
 One of the crowd thou art without a name.
 Ah, friend, 'tis the false laurel that I wear;
 Bright though it seem, it is not the same
 As that which bound Milton's immortal hair;
 Its dew is poison and the hopes that quicken
 Under its chilling shade, though seeming fair,
 Are flowers which die almost before they sicken.

XXV.

WHEN soft winds and sunny skies
 With the green earth harmonise,
 And the young and dewy dawn,
 Bold as an unhunted fawn,
 Up the windless heaven is gone—
 Laugh—for ambushed in the day,
 Clouds and whirlwinds watch their prey.'

XXVI.

THE babe is at peace within the womb,
 The corpse is at rest within the tomb,
 We begin in what we end.

XXVII.

EPITAPH.

THESE are two friends whose lives were undivided,
 So let their memory be, now they have glided
 Under their grave; let not their bones be parted,
 For their two hearts in life were single-hearted.

TRANSLATIONS.

HYMNS OF HOMER.

HYMN TO MERCURY.

<sup>I.</sup>
SING, Muse, the son of Maia and of Jove,
The Herald-child, king of Arcadia
And all its pastoral hills, whom in sweet love
Having been interwoven, molest May
Bore Heaven's dread Supreme—an antique grove
Shadowed the cavern where the lovers lay
In the deep night, unseen by Gods or Men,
And white-armed Juno slumbered sweetly then.

<sup>II.</sup>
Now, when the joy of Jove had its fulfilling,
And Heaven's tenth moon chronicled her relief,
She gave to light a babe all babes excelling,
A schemer subtle beyond all belief;
A shepherd of thin dreams, a cow-stealing,
A night-watching, and door-waylaying thief,
Who 'mongst the Gods was soon about to thieve,
And other glorious actions to achieve.

<sup>III.</sup>
The babe was born at the first peep of day ;
He began playing on the lyre at noon,
And the same evening did he steal away
Apollo's herds ;—the fourth day of the moon
On which him bore the venerable May,
From her immortal limbs he leaped full soon,
Nor long could in the sacred cradle keep,
But out to seek Apollo's herds would creep.

<sup>IV.</sup>
Out of the lofty cavern wandering
He found a tortoise, and cried out—" A treasure !"
(For Mercury first made the tortoise sing)
The beast before the portal at his leisure

The flowery herbage was depasturing,
 Moving his feet in a deliberate measure
 Over the turf. Jove's profitable son
 Eyeing him laughed, and laughing thus begun :—

v.

“A useful god-send are you to me now,
 King of the dance, companion of the feast,
 Lovely in all your nature ! Welcome, you
 Excellent plaything ! Where, sweet mountain beast,
 Got you that speckled shell ? Thus much I know,
 You must come home with me and be my guest ;
 You will give joy to me, and I will do
 All that is in my power to honour you.

vi.

“Better to be at home than out of door ;
 So come with me, and though it has been said
 That you alive defend from magic power,
 I know you will sing sweetly when you're dead.”
 Thus having spoken, the quaint infant bore,
 Lifting it from the grass on which it fed,
 And grasping it in his delighted hold,
 His treasured prize into the cavern old.

vii.

Then scooping with a chisel of grey steel,
 He bored the life and soul out of the beast —
 Not swifter a swift thought of woe or weal
 Darts through the tumult of a human breast
 Which thronging cares annoy — not swifter wheel
 The flashes of its torture and unrest
 Out of the dizzy eyes — than Maia's son
 All that he did devise hath feately done.

viii.

And through the tortoise's hard strong skin
 At proper distances small holes he made,
 And fastened the cut stems of reeds within,
 And with a piece of leather overlaid
 The open space and fixed the cubits in,
 Fitting the bridge to both, and stretched o'er all
 Symphonious chords of sheep-gut rhythmical.

ix.

When he had wrought the lovely instrument,
 He tried the chords, and made division meet
 Preluding with the plectrum, and there went
 Up from beneath his hand a tumult sweet
 Of mighty sounds, and from his lips he sent
 A strain of unpremeditated wit
 Joyous and wild and wanton — such you may Hear among revellers on a holiday.

x.

He sung how Jove and May of the bright sandal
 Dallied in love not quite legitimate ;
 And his own birth, still scoffing at the scandal,
 And naming his own name, did celebrate ;
 His mother's cave and servant maids he planned all
 In plastic verse, her household stuff and state,
 Perennial pot, trippet, and brazen pan—
 But singing he conceived another plan.

xi.

Scized with a sudden fancy for fresh meat,
 He in his sacred crib deposited
 The hollow lyre, and from the cavern sweet
 Rushed with great leaps up to the mountain's head,
 Revolving in his mind some subtlefeat
 Of thievish craft, such as a swindler might Devise in the lone season of dun night.

xii.

Lo ! the great Sun under the ocean's bed has Driven steeds and chariot—the child meanwhile strode
 O'er the Pierian mountains clothed in shadows,
 Where the immortal oxen of the God
 Are pastured in the flowering unmown meadows,
 And safely stalled in a remote abode—
 The archer Argicide, elate and proud,
 Drove fifty from the herd, lowing aloud.

xiii.

He drove them wandering o'er the sandy way,
 But, being ever mindful of his craft,
 Backward and forward drove he them astray,
 So that the tracks, which seemed before, were aft :
 His sandals then he threw to the ocean spray,
 And for each foot he wrought a kind of raft
 Of tamarisk, and tamarisk-like sprigs,
 And bound them in a lump with withy twigs.

xiv.

And on his feet he tied these sandals light,
 The trail of whose wide leaves might not betray
 His track ; and then, a self-sufficing wight,
 Like a man hastening on some distant way,
 He from Pieria's mountain bent his flight ;
 But an old man perceived the infant pass
 Down green Onchestus, heaped like beds with grass.

xv.

The old man stood dressing his sunny vine :
 “ Halloo ! old fellow with the crooked shoulder !
 You grub those stumps ? Before they will bear wine
 Methinks even you must grow a little older :

Attend, I pray, to this advice of mine,
 As you would 'scape what might appal a bolder—
 Seeing, see not—and hearing, hear not—and—
 If you have understanding—understand.”—

xvi.

So saying, Hermes roused the oxen vast;
 O'er shadowy mountain and resounding dell,
 And flower-paven plains, great Hermes past;
 Till the black night divine, which favouring fell
 Around his steps, grew grey, and morning fast
 Wakened the world to work, and from her cell,
 Sea-strewn, the Pallantean Moon sublime
 Into her watch-tower just began to climb.

xvii.

Now to Alpheus he had driven all
 The broad foreheaded oxen of the Sun;
 They came unwearied to the lofty stall
 Aud to the water troughs which ever run
 Through the fresh fields--and when with rushgrass tall
 Lotus and all sweet herbage, every one
 Had pastured been, the Great God made them move Towards the stall in a collected drove.

xviii.

A mighty pile of wood the God then heaped,
 And having soon conceived the mystery
 Of fire, from two smooth laurel branches stript
 The bark, and rubbed them in his palms, —on high
 Suddenly forth the burning vapour leapt,
 And the divine child saw delightedly --
 Mercury first found out for human weal
 Tinder-box, matches, fire-irons, flint, and steel.

xix.

And fine dry logs and roots innumerous
 He gathered in a delve upon the ground--
 And kindled them -and instantaneous
 The strength of the fierce flame was breathed around :
 And whilst the might of glorious Vulcan thus
 Wrapt the great pile with glare and roaring sound,
 Hermes dragged forth two heifers, lowing loud,
 Close to the fire—such might was in the God.

xx.

And on the earth upon their backs he threw
 The panting beasts, and rolled them o'er and o'er,
 And bored their lives out. Without more ado
 He cut up fat and flesh, and down before
 The fire on spits of wood he placed the two,
 Toasting their flesh and ribs, and all the gore
 Pursed in the bowels; and while this was done
 He stretched their hides over a craggy stone.

We mortals let an ox grow old, and then
 Cut it up after long consideration,—
 But joyous-minded Hermes from the glen
 Drew the fat spoils to the more open station
 Of a flat smooth space, and portioned them ; and when
 He had by lot assigned to each a ration
 Of the twelve Gods, his mind became aware
 Of all the joys which in religion are.

xxvii.

For the sweet savour of the roasted meat
 Tempted him, though immortal. Nathlesse
 He checked his haughty will and did not eat,
 Though what it cost him words can scarce express,
 And every wish to put such morsels sweet
 Down his most sacred throat, he did repress ;
 But soon within the lofty portalled stall
 He placed the fat and flesh and bones and all.

xxviii.

And every trace of the fresh butchery
 And cooking, the God soon made disappear,
 As if it all had vanished through the sky ;
 He burned the hoofs and horns and head and hair,—
 The insatiate fire devoured them hungrily ;
 And when he saw that everything was clear,
 He quenched the coals and trampled the black dust,
 And in the stream his bloody sandals tossed.

xxix.

All night he worked in the serene moonshine —
 But when the light of day was spread abroad
 He sought his natal mountain-peaks divine.
 On his long wandering, neither man nor god
 Had met him, since he killed Apollo's kine,
 Nor house-dog had barked at him on his road ;
 Now he obliquely through the key-hole passed,
 Like a thin mist, or an autumnal blast.

xxx.

Right through the temple of the spacious cave
 He went with soft light feet—as if his tread
 Fell not on earth; no sound their falling gave ;
 Then to his cradle he crept quick, and spread
 The swaddling clothes about him : and the knave
 Lay playing with the covering of the bed,
 With his left hand about his knees—the right
 Held his beloved tortoise-lyre tight.

xxxii.

There he lay innocent as a new-born child,
 As gossips say ; but, though he was a god,
 The goddess, his fair mother, unbeguiled
 Knew all that he had done, being abroad ;

"Whence come you, and from what adventure wild,
 You cunning rogue, and where have you abode
 All the long night, clothed in your impudence ?
 What have you done since you departed hence ?

xxvii.

"Apollo soon will pass within this gate,
 And bind your tender body in a chain
 Inextricably tight, and fast as fate,
 Unless you can delude the God again,
 Even when within his arms—ah, runagate !
 A pretty torment both for gods and men
 Your father made when he made you!"—"Dear mother," Replied sly Hermes, "wherefore scold and bother ?

xxviii.

"As if I were like other babes as old,
 And understood nothing of what is what ;
 And cared at all to hear my mother scold.
 I in my subtle brain a scheme have got,
 Which, whilst the sacred stars round Heaven are rolled,
 Will profit you and me—nor shall our lot
 Be as you counsel, without gifts or food,
 To spend our lives in this obscure abode.

xxix.

"But we will leave this shadow-peopled cave,
 And live among the Gods, and pass each day
 In high communion, sharing what they have
 Of profuse wealth and unexhausted prey ;
 And, from the portion which my father gave
 To Phœbus, I will snatch my share away,
 Which if my father will not—nathlesse I,
 Who am the king of robbers, can but try.

xxx.

"And, if Latona's son should find me out,
 I'll countermine him by a deeper plan ;
 I'll pierce the Pythian temple-walls, though stout,
 And sack the fane of everything I can —
 Caldrons and tripods of great worth no doubt,
 Each golden cup and polished brazen pan.
 All the wrought tapestries and garments gay."—
 So they together talked ;—meanwhile the Day

xxxi.

Ethereal born, arose out of the flood
 Of flowing Ocean, bearing light to men.
 Apollo passed toward the sacred wood,
 Which from the innost depths of its green glen
 Echoes the voice of Neptune,—and there stood
 On the same spot in green Onchestus then
 That same old animal, the vine-dresser,
 Who was employed hedging his vineyard there.

XXXII.

Latona's glorious Son began :—“ I pray
 Tell, ancient hedger of Onchestus green,
 Whether a drove of kine has passed this way,
 All heifers with crooked horns? for they have been Stolen from the herd in high Pieria,
 Where a black bull was fed apart, between
 Two woody mountains in a neighbouring glen,
 And four fierce dogs watched there, unanimous as men.

XXXIII.

“ And what is strange, the author of this theft
 Has stolen the fatted heifers every one,
 But the four dogs and the black bull are left: —
 Stolen they were last night at set of sun,
 Of their soft beds and their sweet food bereft.
 Now tell me, man born ere the world begun,
 Have you seen any one pass with the cows?”
 To whom the man of overhanging brows, —

XXXIV.

“ My friend, it would require no common skill
 Justly to speak of everything I see:
 On various purposes of good or ill
 Many pass by my vineyard, and to me
 'Tis difficult to know the invisible
 Thoughts, which in all those many minds may be: —
 Thus much alone I certainly can say,
 I tilled these vines till the decline of day,

XXXV.

“ And then I thought I saw, but dare not speak
 With certainty of such a wondrous thing,
 A child, who could not have been born a week,
 Those fair-horned cattle closely following,
 And in his hand he held a polished stick:
 And, as on purpose, he walked wavering
 From one side to the other of the road,
 And with his face opposed the steps he trod.”

XXXVI.

Apollo, hearing this, passed quickly on --
 No winged omen could have shown more clear
 That the deceiver was his father's son.
 So the God wraps a purple atmosphere
 Around his shoulders, and like fire is gone
 To famous Pylos, seeking his kine there,
 And found their track and his, yet hardly cold,
 And cried—“ What wonder do mine eyes behold!

XXXVII.

“ Here are the footsteps of the horned herd
 Turned back towards their fields of asphodel; —
 But these! are not the tracks of beast or bird,
 Grey wolf, or bear, or lion of the dell,

Or maned Centaur—sand was never stirred
 By man or woman thus ! Inexplicable !
 Who with unwearied feet could e'er impress
 The sand with such enormous vestiges ?

xxxviii.

“That was most strange—but this is stranger still !”
 Thus having said, Phœbus impetuously
 Sought high Cyllene’s forest-einetured hill,
 And the deep cavern where dark shadows lie,
 And where the ambrosial nymph with happy will Bore the Saturnian’s love-child, Mercury—
 And a delighted odour from the dew
 Of the hill pastures, at his coming, flew.

xxxix.

And Phœbus stooped under the craggy roof
 Arched over the dark cavern :—Maia’s child
 Perceived that he came angry, far aloof,
 About the cows of which he had been beguiled,
 And over him the fine and fragrant woof
 Of his ambrosial swaddling-clothes he piled—
 As among firebrands lies a burning spark
 Covered, beneath the ashes cold and dark.

xl.

There, like an infant who had sucked his fill,
 And now was newly washed and put to bed,
 Awake, but courting sleep with weary will
 And gathered in a lump, hands, feet, and head,
 He lay, and his beloved tortoise still
 He grasped and held under his shoulder-blade ;
 Phœbus the lovely mountain goddess knew,
 Not less her subtle, swindling baby, who

xli.

Lay swathed in his sly wiles. Round every crook
 Of the ample cavern, for his kine Apollo
 Looked sharp ; and when he saw them not, he took
 The glittering key, and opened three great hollow
 Recesses in the rock—where many a nook
 Was filled with the sweet food immortals swallow,
 And mighty heaps of silver and of gold
 Were piled within—a wonder to behold !

xlii.

And white and silver robes, all overwrought
 With cunning workmanship of tracery sweet—
 Except among the Gods there can be nought
 In the wide world to be compared with it.
 Latona’s offspring, after having sought
 His herds in every corner, thus did greet
 Great Hermes :—“ Little cradled rogue, declare,
 Of my illustrious heifers, where they are !

" Speak quickly ! or a quarrel between us
 Must rise, and the event will be, that I
 Shall haul you into dismal Tartarus,
 In fiery gloom to dwell eternally !
 Nor shall your father nor your mother loose
 The bars of that black dungeon—utterly
 You shall be cast out from the light of day,
 To rule the ghosts of men, unblest as they."

XLIV.

To whom thus Hermes slyly answered :—" Son
 Of great Latona, what a speech is this !
 Why come you here to ask me what is done
 With the wild oxen which it seems you miss ?
 I have not seen them, nor from any one
 Have heard a word of the whole business ;
 If you should promise an immense reward,
 I could not tell more than you now have heard.

XLV.

" An ox-stealer should be both tall and strong,
 And I am but a little new-born thing,
 Who, yet at least, can think of nothing wrong :—
 My business is to suck, and sleep, and fling
 The cradle clothes about me all day long.—
 Or, half asleep, hear my sweet mother sing,
 And to be washed in water clear and warm,
 And hushed and kissed and kept secure from harm.

XLVI.

" Oh, let not e'er this quarrel be averred !
 The astounded Gods would laugh at you, if e'er
 You should avenge a story so absurd,
 As that a new-born infant forth could fare
 Out of his home after a savage herd.

I was born yesterday--my small feet are Too tender for the roads so hard and rough :—
 And if you think that this is not enough,

XLVII.

" I swear a great oath, by my father's head,
 That I stole not your cows, and that I know
 Of no one else who might, or could, or did.—
 Whatever things cows are I do not know,
 For I have only heard the name." —This said,
 He winked as fast as could be, and his brow
 Was wrinkled, and a whistle loud gave he,
 Like one who hears some strange absurdity.

XLVIII.

Apollo gently smiled and said :—" Aye, aye,—
 You cunning little rascal, you will bore
 Many a rich man's house, and your array
 Of thieves will lay their siege before his door,

Silent as night, in night ; and many a day
 In the wild glens rough shepherds will deplore
 That you or yours, having an appetite,
 Met with their cattle, comrade of the night !

XLIX.

" And this among the Gods shall be your gift,
 To be considered as the lord of those
 Who swindle, house-break, sheep-steal, and shop-lift ;
 But now if you would not your last sleep doze,
 Crawl out !"—Thus saying, Phœbus did uplift
 The subtle infant in his swaddling-clothes,
 And in his arms, according to his wont,
 A scheme devised the illustrious Argiphont.

* * * * *

And sneezed and shuddered—Phœbus on the grass
 Him threw, and whilst all that he had designed
 He did perform—eager although to pass,
 Apollo darted from his mighty mind
 Towards the subtle babe the following scoff :
 " Do not imagine this will get you off,

L.

" You little swaddled child of Jovo and May ! " '—
 And seized him :—" By this omen I shall trace
 My noble herds, and you shall lead the way."—
 Cyllenian Hermes from the grassy place,
 Like one in earnest haste to get away,
 Rose, and with hands lifted towards his face,
 Round both his ears up from his shoulders drew
 His swaddling clothes, and—" What mean you to do

LI.

" With me, you unkind God ! " —said Mercury :
 " Is it about these cows you tease me so ?
 I wish the race of cows were perished !—I
 Stole not your cows—I do not even know
 What things cows are. Alas ! I well may sigh,
 That, since I came into this world of woe,
 I should have ever heard the name of one—
 But I appeal to the Saturnian's throne."

LII.

Thus Phœbus and the vagrant Mercury
 Talked without coming to an explanation,
 With adverse purpose. As for Phœbus, he Sought not revenge, but only information,
 And Hermes tried with lies and roguery
 To cheat Apollo.—But when no evasion
 Served—for the cunning one his match had found—
 He paced on first over the sandy ground.

<sup>LIV.</sup>
He of the Silver Bow, the child of Jove,
Followed behind, till to their heavenly Sire
Came both his children—beautiful as Love,
And from his equal balance did require
A judgment in the cause wherein they strove.
O'er odorous Olympus and its snows
A murmuring tumult as they came arose, -

<sup>LV.</sup>
And from the folded depths of the great Hill,
While Hermes and Apollo reverent stood
Before Jove's throne, the indestructible
Immortals rushed in mighty multitude ;
And, whilst their seats in order due they fill,
The lofty Thunderer in a careless mood
To Phœbus said :—" Whence drive you this sweet prey,
This herald-baby, born but yesterday! -

<sup>LVI.</sup>
" A most important subject, trifler, this
To lay before the Gods!"— " Nay, father, nay,
When you have understood the business,
Say not that I alone am fond of prey.
I found this little boy in a recess
Under Cyllene's mountains far away - .
A manifest and most apparent thief,
A scandal-monger beyond all belief.

<sup>LVII.</sup>
" I never saw his like either in heaven
Or upon earth for knavery or craft : -
Out of the field my cattle yester-even,
By the low shore on which the loud sea laughed,
He right down to the river-ford had driven ;
And mere astonishment would make you daft
To see the double kind of footsteps strange
He has impressed wherever he did range.

<sup>LVIII.</sup>
" The cattle's track on the black dust full well
Is evident, as if they went towards
The place from which they came—that asphodel
Meadow, in which I feed my many herds ;
His steps were most incomprehensible - -
I know not how I can describe in words
Those tracks—he could have gone along the sands
Neither upon his feet nor on his hands ; -

<sup>LIX.</sup>
" He must have had some other stranger mode
Of moving on : those vestiges immense,
Far as I traced them on the sandy road,
Seemed like the trail of oak-toppings :—but thence

No mark nor track denoting where they trod
 The hard ground gave :—but, working at his fence,
 A mortal hedger saw him as he past
 To Pylos, with the cows, in fiery haste.

LX.

“ I found that in the dark he quietly
 Had sacrificed some cows, and before light
 Had thrown the ashes all dispersedly
 About the road—then, still as gloomy night,
 Had crept into his cradle, either eye
 Rubbing, and cogitating some new sleight.
 No eagle could have seen him as he lay
 Hid in his cavern from the peering day.

LXI.

“ I taxed him with the fact, when he averred
 Most solemnly that he did neither see
 Nor even had in any manner heard
 Of my lost cows, whatever things cows be ;
 Nor could he tell, though offered a reward,
 Not even who could tell of them to me.”
 So speaking, Phœbus sate ; and Hermes then Addressed the Supreme Lord of Gods and Men :

LXII.

“ Great Father, you know clearly beforehand
 That all which I shall say to you is sooth ;
 I am a most veracious person, and
 Totally unacquainted with untruth.
 At sunrise Phœbus came, but with no band
 Of Gods to bear him witness, in great wrath
 To my abode, seeking his heifers there,
 And saying that I must show him where they are,

LXIII.

“ Or he would hurl me down the dark abyss.
 I know that every Apollonian limb
 Is clothed with speed and might and manliness,
 As a green bank with flowers—but unlike him
 I was born yesterday, and you may guess
 He well knew this when he indulged the whim
 Of bullying a poor little new-born thing
 That slept, and never thought of cow-driving.

LXIV.

“ Am I like a strong fellow who steals kine ?
 Believe me, dearest Father, such you are,
 This driving of the herds is none of mine ;
 Across my threshold did I wander ne'er,
 So may I thrive ! I reverence the divine
 Sun and the Gods, and I love you, and care
 Even for this hard accuser—who must know
 I am as innocent as they or you.

LXV.

"I swear by these most gloriously-wrought portals-- (It is, you will allow, an oath of might)
Through which the multitude of the Immortals
Pass and repass for ever, day and night,
Devising schemes for the affairs of mortals—
That I am guiltless; and I will requite,
Although mine enemy be great and strong,
His cruel threat—do thou defend the young!"

LXVI.

So speaking, the Cyllenian Argiphont
Winked, as if now his adversary was fitted :—
And Jupiter, according to his wont,
Laughed heartily to hear the subtle-witted
Infant give such a plausible account,
And every word a lie. But he remitted
Judgment at present—and his exhortation
Was, to compose the affair by arbitration.

LXVII.

And they by mighty Jupiter were bidden
To go forth with a single purpose both,
Neither the other chiding nor yet chidden :
And Mercury with innocence and truth
To lead the way, and show where he had hidden
The mighty heifers.—Hermes, nothing loth,
Obeyed the Egis-bearer's will—for he
Is able to persuade all easily.

LXVIII.

These lovely children of Heaven's highest Lord
Hastened to Pylos and the pastures wide
And lofty stalls by the Alphean ford,
Where wealth in the mute night is multiplied
With silent growth. Whilst Hermes drove the herd
Out of the stony cavern, Phœbus spied
The hides of those the little babe had slain,
Stretched on the precipice above the plain.

LXIX.

"How was it possible," then Phœbus said,
"That you, a little child, born yesterday,
A thing on mother's milk and kisses fed,
Could two prodigious heifers ever slay?
E'en I myself may well hereafter dread
Your prowess, offspring of Cyllenian May,
When you grow strong and tall." He spoke, and bound
Stiff withy bands the infant's wrists around.

LXX.

He might as well have bound the oxen wild.
The withy bands, though starkly interknit,
Fell at the feet of the immortal child,
Loosened by some device of his quick wit.

Phœbus perccived himself again beguiled,
 And stared—while Hermes sought some hole or pit,
 Looking askance and winking fast as thought,
 Where he might hide himself, and not be caught.

LXXI.

Sudden he changed his plan, and with strange skill
 Subdued the strong Latonian, by the might
 Of winning music, to his mightier will ;
 His left hand held the lyre, and in his right
 The plectrum struck the chorrls—unconquerable
 Up from beneath his hand in circling flight
 The gathering music rose—and sweet as Love
 The penetrating notes did live and move

LXXII.

Within the heart of great Apollo—he Listened with all his soul, and laughed for pleasure.
 Close to his side stood harping fearlessly
 The unabashed boy ; and to the measure
 Of the sweet lyre, there followed loud and free
 His joyous voice ; for he unlocked the treasure
 Of his deep song, illustrating the birth
 Of the bright Gods and the dark desert Earth :

LXXIII.

And how to the Immortals every one
 A portion was assigned of all that is ;
 But chief Mnemosync did Maia's son
 Clothe in the light of his loud melodies ;—
 And, as each God was born or had begun,
 He in their order due and fit degrees
 Sung of his birth and being—and did move
 Apollo to unutterable love.

LXXIV.

These words were winged with his swift delight :
 “ You heifer-stealing schemer, well do you
 Deserve that fifty oxen should requite
 Such minstrclies as I have heard even now.
 Comrade of feasts, little contriving wight,
 One of your secrets I would gladly know,
 Whether the glorious power you now show forth
 Was folded up within you at your birth,

LXXV.

“ Or whether mortal taught or God inspired
 The power of unpremeditated song ?
 Many divinest sounds have I admired
 The Olypian Gods and mortal men among ;
 But such a strain of wondrous, strange, untired,
 And soul-awakening music, sweet and strong,
 Yet did I never hear except from thee,
 Offspring of May, impostor Mercury !

LXXVI.

" What Muse, what skill, what unimagined use,
 What exercise of subtlest art, has given
 Thy songs such power?—for those who hear may choose
   From three, the choicest of the gifts of Heaven,
 Delight, and love, and sleep, sweet sleep, whose dews
   Are sweeter than the balmy tears of even :—
 And I, who speak this praise, am that Apollo
 Whom the Olympian Muses ever follow :

LXXVII.

" And their delight is dance, and the blithe noise
   Of song and overflowing poesy ;
 And sweet, even as desire, the liquid voice
   Of pipes, that fills the clear air thrillingly ;
 But never did my inmost soul rejoice
   In this dear work of youthful revelry,
 As now I wonder at thee, son of Jove ;
 Thy harpings and thy song are soft as love.

LXXVIII.

" Now since thou hast, although so very small,
   Science of arts so glorious, thus I swear, —
 And let this cornel javelin, keen and tall,
   Witness between us what I promise here,—
 That I will lead thee to the Olympian Hall,
   Honoured and mighty, with thy mother dear,
 And many glorious gifts in joy will give thee,
 And even at the end will ne'er deceive thee."

LXXIX.

To whom thus Mercury with prudent speech .—
 " Wisely hast thou inquired of my skill :
 I envy thee no thing I know to teach
   Even this day :—for both in word and will
 I would be gentle with thee ; thou canst reach
   All things in thy wise spirit, and thy sill
 Is highest in heaven among the sons of Jove,
 Who loves thee in the fulness of his love.

LXXX.

" The Counsellor Supreme has given to thee
   Divinest gifts, out of the amplitude
 Of his profuse exhaustless treasury ;
   By thee, 'tis said, the depths are understood
 Of his far voice ; by thee the mystery
   Of all oracular fates,—and the dread mood
 Of the diviner is breathed up, even I—
 A child—perceive thy might and majesty —

LXXXI.

" Thou canst seek out and compass all that wit
   Can find or teach ;—yet since thou wilt, come, take
 The lyre—be mine the glory giving it—
   Strike the sweet chords, and sing aloud, and wake

*Thy joyous pleasure out of many a fit
Of tranced sound—and with fleet fingers make
Thy liquid-voiced comrade talk with thee,—
It can talk measured music eloquently.*

LXXXII.

“ Then bear it boldly to the revel loud,
Love-wakening dance, or feast of solemn state,
A joy by night or day—for those endowed
With art and wisdom who interrogate
It teaches, babbling in delightful mood,
All things which make the spirit most elate,
Soothing the mind with sweet familiar play,
Chasing the heavy shadows of dismay.

LXXXIII.

“ To those who are unskilled in its sweet tongue,
Though they should question most impetuously
Its hidden soul, it gossips something wrong—
Some senseless and impertinent reply.
But thou who art as wise as thou art strong,
Canst compass all that thou desirest. I
Present thee with this music-flowing shell,
Knowing thou canst interrogate it well,

LXXXIV.

“ And let us two henceforth together feed
On this green mountain slope and pastoral plain,
The herds in litigation—they will breed
Quickly enough to recompence our pain,
If to the bulls and cows we take good heed ;—
And thou, though somewhat over fond of gain,
Grudge me not half the profit.”—Having spoke,
The shell he proffered, and Apollo took.

LXXXV.

And gave him in return the glittering lash,
Installing him as herdsman ;—from the look
Of Mercury then laughed a joyous flash ;
And then Apollo with the plectrum strook
The chords, and from beneath his hands a crash
Of mighty sounds rushed up, whose music shook
The soul with sweetness, and like an adept
His sweeter voice a just accordance kept.

LXXXVI.

The herd went wandering o'er the divine mead,
Whilst these most beautiful Sons of Jupiter
Won their swift way up to the snowy head
Of white Olympus, with the joyous lyre
Soothing their journey ; and their father dread
Gathered them both into familiar
Affection sweet,—and then, and now, and ever,
Hermes must love Him of the Golden Quiver,

To whom he gave the lyre that sweetly sounded,
 Which skilfully he held and played thereon.
 He piped the while, and far and wide rebounded
 The echo of his pipings; every one
 Of the Olympians sat with joy astounded,
 While he conceived another piece of fun,
 One of his old tricks—which the God of Day
 Perceiving, said:—“I fear thee, Son of May;—

LXXXVIII.

“ I fear thee and thy sly chameleon spirit,
 Lest thou shouldst steal my lyre and crooked bow;
 This glory and power thou dost from Jove inherit,
 To teach all craft upon the earth below:
 Thieves love and worship thee—it is thy merit
 To make all mortal business ebb and flow
 By roguery:—now, Hermes, if you dare
 By sacred Styx a mighty oath to swear,

LXXXIX.

“ That you will never rob me, you will do
 A thing extremely pleasing to my heart.”
 Then Mercurry sware by the Stygian dew,
 That he would never steal his bow or dart,
 Or lay his hands on what to him was due,
 Or ever would employ his powerful art
 Against his Pythian fame. Then Phœbus swore
 There was no God or man whom he loved more.

XC.

“ And I will give thee as a good-will token
 The beautiful wand of wealth and happiness;
 A perfect three-leaved rod of gold unbroken,
 Whose magic will thy footsteps ever bless;
 And whatsoever by Jove's voice is spoken
 Of earthly or divine from its recess,
 It like a loving soul to thee will speak,
 And more than this do thou forbear to seek:

XCI.

“ For, dearest child, the divinations high
 Which thou requirest, 'tis unlawful ever
 That thou, or any other deity,
 Should understand—and vain were the endeavour;
 For they are hidden in Jove's mind, and I,
 In trust of them, have sworn that I would never Betray the counsels of Jove's immost will
 To any God—the oath was terrible.

XCII.

“ Then, golden-wanded brother, ask me not
 To speak the fates by Jupiter designed;
 But be it mine to tell their various lot
 To the unnumbered tribes of human kind.

Let good to these and ill to those be wrought
 As I dispense—but he who comes consigned
 By voice and wings of perfect augury
 To my great shrine, shall find avail in me.

xciii.

“ Him will I not deceive, but will assist;
 But he who comes relying on such birds
 As chatter vainly, who would strain and twist
 The purpose of the Gods with idle words,
 And deems their knowledge light, he shall have mist
 His road—whilst I among my other hoards
 His gifts deposit. Yet, O son of May,
 I have another wondrous thing to say :

xciv.

“ There are three Fates, three virgin Sisters, who,
 Rejoicing in their wind-outspeeding wings,
 Their heads with flour snowed over white and new,
 Sit in a vale round which Parnassus flings
 Its circling skirts—from these I have learned true
 Vaticinations of remotest things.
 My father cared not. Whilst they search out dooms,
 They sit apart and feed on honeycombs.

xcv.

“ They, having eaten the fresh honey, grow
 Drunk with divine enthusiasm, and utter
 With earnest willingness the truth they know ;
 But, if deprived of that sweet food, they mutter
 All plausible delusions ;—these to you
 I give ;—if you inquire, they will not stutter ;
 Delight your own soul with them :—any man
 You would instruct may profit if he can.

xcvi.

“ Take these and the fierce oxen, Maia’s child—
 O’er many a horse and toil-enduring mule,
 O’er jagged-jawed lions, and the wild
 White-tusked boars, o’er all, by field or pool,
 Of cattle which the mighty Mother mild
 Nourishes in her bosom, thou shalt rule—
 Thou dost alone the veil of death uplift—
 Thou givest not—yet this is a great gift.”

xcvii.

Thus King Apollo loved the child of May
 In truth, and Jove covered them with love and joy.
 Hermes with Gods and men even from that day
 Mingled, and wrought the latter much annoy,
 And little profit, going far astray
 Through the dun night. Farewell, delightful Boy,
 Of Jove and Maia sprung,—never by me,
 Nor thou, nor other songs, shall unremembered be.

TO CASTOR AND POLLUX.

YE wild-eyed Muses, sing the Twins of Jove,
 Whom the fair-angled Leda mixed in love
 With mighty Saturn's heaven-obscuring Child,
 On Taygetus, that lofty mountain wild,
 Brought forth in joy, mild Pollux void of blame,
 And steel-subduing Castor, heirs of fame.
 These are the Powers who earth-born mortals save
 And ships, whose flight is swift along the wave.
 When wintry tempests o'er the savage sea
 Are raging, and the sailors tremblingly
 Call on the Twins of Jove with prayer and vow
 Gathered in fear upon the lofty prow,
 And sacrifice with snow-white lambs, the wind
 And the huge billow bursting close behind,
 Even then beneath the weltering waters bear
 The staggering ship—they suddenly appear,
 On yellow wings rushing athwart the sky,
 And lull the blasts in mute tranquillity,
 And strew the waves on the white ocean's bed,
 Fair omen of the voyage; from toil and dread,
 The sailors rest, rejoicing in the sight,
 And plough the quiet sea in safe delight.

TO MINERVA.

I SING the glorious Power with azuro eyes,
 Athenian Pallas! tameless, chaste, and wise,
 Trilogenia, town-preserving maid,
 Revered and mighty; from this awful head
 Whom Jove brought forth, in warlike armour drest,
 Golden, all radiant! wonder strange possessed
 The everlasting Gods that shape to see,
 Shaking a javelin keen, impetuously
 Rush from the crest of Ægis-bearing Jove;
 Fearfully Heaven was shaken, and did move
 Beneath the might of the Cerulean-eyed;
 Earth dreadfully resounded, far and wide,
 And lifted from its depths, the sea swelled high
 In purple billows, the tide suddenly
 Stood still, and great Hyperion's sun long time
 Checked his swift steeds, till where she stood sublime,
 Pallas from her immortal shoulders threw
 The arms divine; wise Jove rejoiced to view.
 Child of the Ægis-bearer, hail to thee,
 Nor thine nor others' praise shall unremembered be.

TO THE SUN.

OFFSPRING of Jove, Calliope, once more
 To the bright Sun, thy hymn of music pour;
 Whom to the child of star-clad Heaven and Earth
 Euryphaessa, large-eyed nymph, brought forth ;
 Euryphaessa, the famed sister fair
 Of great Hyperion, who to him did bear
 A race of loveliest children ; the young Morn,
 Whose arms are like twin roses newly born,
 The fair-haired Moon, and the immortal Sun,
 Who, borne by heavenly steeds his race doth run
 Unconquerably, illumining the abodes
 Of mortal men and the eternal gods.

Fiercely look forth his awe-inspiring eyes,
 Beneath his golden helmet, whence arise
 And are shot forth afar clear beams of light ;
 His countenance with radiant glory bright,
 Beneath his graceful locks far shines around,
 And the light vest with which his limbs are bound,
 Of woof ethereal, delicately twined
 Glows in the stream of the uplifting wind.
 His rapid steeds soon bear him to the west ;
 Where their steep flight his hands divine arrest,
 And the fleet car with yoke of gold, which he Sends from bright heaven beneath the shadowy sea.

TO THE MOON.

DAUGHTERS of Jove, whose voice is melody,
 Muses, who know and rule all minstrelsy !
 Sing the wide-winged Moon. Around the earth,
 From her immortal head in Heaven shot forth,
 Far light is scattered—boundless glory springs,
 Where'er she spreads her many-beaming wings
 The lampless air glows round her golden crown.

But when the Moon divine from Heaven is gone
 Under the sea, her beams within abide,
 Till, bathing her bright limbs in Ocean's tide,
 Clothing her form in garments glittering far,
 And having yoked to her immortal car
 The beam-invested steeds, whose necks on high

Curve back, she drives to a remoter sky
 A western Crescent, borne impetuously.
 Then is made full the circle of her light,
 And as she grows, her beams more bright and bright,
 Are poured from Heaven, where she is hovering then,
 A wonder and a sign to mortal men.

The Son of Saturn with this glorious Power
 Mingled in love and sleep—to whom she bore,
 Pandæia, a bright maid of beauty rare
 Among the Gods, whose lives eternal are.

Hail Queen, great Moon, white-armed Divinity,
 Fair-haired and favourable, thus with thee,
 My song beginning by its music sweet
 Shall make immortal many a glorious feat
 Of demigods, with lovely lips, so well
 Which minstrels, servants of the muses, tell.

TO THE EARTH, MOTHER OF ALL.

O UNIVERSAL mother, who dost keep
 From everlasting thy foundations deep,
 Eldest of things. Great Earth, I sing of thee ;
 All shapes that have their dwelling in the sea,
 All things that fly, or on the ground divine
 Live, move, and there are nourished—these are thine
 These from thy wealth thou dost sustain ; from thee
 Fair babes are born, and fruits on every tree
 Hang ripe and large, revered Divinity !

The life of mortal men beneath thy sway
 Is held ; thy power both gives and takes away !
 Happy are they whom thy mild favours nourish,
 All things unstinted round them grow and flourish.
 For them, endures the life-sustaining field
 Its load of harvest, and their cattle yield
 Large increase, and their house with wealth is filled.
 Such honoured dwell in cities fair and free,
 The homes of lovely women, prosperously ;
 Their sons exult in youth's new budding gladness,
 And their fresh daughters free from care or sadness,
 With bloom-inwoven dance and happy song,
 On the soft flowers the meadow-grass among,
 Leap round them sporting—such delights by thee
 Are given, rich Power, revered Divinity.

Mother of gods, thou wife of starry Heaven,
 Farewell ! be thou propitious, and be given
 A happy life for this brief melody,
 Nor thou nor other songs shall unremembered be.

THE CYCLOPS.

A Satyr Drama.

TRANSLATED FROM THE GREEK OF EURIPIDES.

SILENUS.
CHORUS OF SATYRS.ULYSSES.
THE CYCLOPS.

Silens. O BACCHUS, what a world of toil, both now
 And ere these limbs were overworn with age,
 Have I endured for thee ! First, when thou fledst
 The mountain nymphs who nurst thee, driven afar
 By the strange madness Juno sent upon thee ;
 Then in the battle of the sons of Earth,
 When I stood foot by foot close to thy side,
 No unpropitious fellow combatant,
 And, driving through his shield my winged spear,
 Slew vast Enceladus. Consider now,
 Is it a dream of which I speak to thee ?
 By Jove it is not, for you have the trophies ! . . .
 And now I suffer more than all before.
 For, when I heard that Juno had devised
 A tedious voyage for you, I put to sea
 With all my children quaint in search of you,
 And I myself stood on the beaked prow
 And fixed the naked mast ; and all my boys,
 Leaning upon their oars, with splash and strain
 Made white with foam the green and purple sea,—
 And so we sought you, king. We were sailing
 Near Malca, when an eastern wind arose,
 And drove us to this wild Aetnean rock ;
 The one-eyed children of the Ocean God,
 The man-destroying Cyclopes inhabit,
 On this wild shore, their solitary caves ;
 And one of these, named Polyphemus, has caught us
 To be his slaves ; and so, for all delight
 Of Bacchic sports, sweet dancs and melody,
 We keep this lawless giant's wandering flocks.
 My sons indeed, on fur declivities,
 Young things themselves, tend on the youngling sheep,
 But I remain to fill the water casks,
 Or sweeping the hard floor, or ministering

Some impious and abominable meal
 To the fell Cyclops. I am wearied of it !
 And now I must scrape up the littered floor
 With this great iron rake, so to receive
 My absent master and his evening sheep
 In a cave neat and clean. Even now I see
 My children tending the flocks hitherward.
 Ha ! what is this ? are your Sicilian measures
 Even now the same as when with dance and song
 You brought young Bacchus to Athæa's halls ?

CHORUS OF SATYRS.

STROPHE.

Where has he of race divine
 Wandered in the winding rocks ?
 Here the air is calm and fine
 For the father of the flocks ;—
 Here the grass is soft and sweet,
 And the river eddies meet
 In the trough beside the cave,
 Bright as in their fountain wave.—
 Neither here, nor on the dew
 Of the lawny uplands feeding ?
 Oh, you come !—a stone at you
 Will I throw to mend your breeding ;—
 Get along, you horned thing,
 Wild, seditious, rambling !

EPODE.*

An Iacchic melody
 To the golden Aphrodite
 Will I lift, as erst did I
 Seeking her and her delight
 With the Mænads, whose white feet
 To the music glance and fleet.
 Bacchus, O beloved, where,
 Shaking wide thy yellow hair,
 Wanderest thou alone, afar ?
 To the one-eyed Cyclops, we,
 Who by right thy servants are,
 Minister in misery,
 In these wretched goat-skins clad,
 Far from thy delights and thee.

Silenus. Be silent, sons ; command the slaves to drive
 The gathered flocks into the rock-roofed cave.
Chorus. Go ! But what needs this serious haste, O father ?
Silenus. I see a Grecian vessel on the coast,
 And thence the rowers, with some general,

* The Antistrophe is omitted.

Approaching to this cave. About their necks
 Hang empty vessels, as they wanted food,
 And water-flasks.—O miserable strangers !
 Whence come they, that they know not what and who
 My master is, approaching in ill hour
 Tho inhospitable roof of Polyphemus,
 And the Cyclopien jaw-bone, man-destroying ?
 Be silent, Satyrs, while I ask and hear,
 Whence coming, they arrive the Ætnian hill.

Ulysses. Friends, can you show me some clear water spring,
 The remedy of our thirst? Will any one
 Furnish with food seamen in want of it?
 Ha ! what is this ? We seem to be arrived
 At the blithe court of Bacchus. I observe
 This sportive band of Satyrs near the caves.
 First let me greet the elder.—Hail !

Silenus. Hail thou,
 O Stranger ! Tell thy country and thy race.

Ulysses. The Ithacan Ulysses and the king
 Of Cephalonia.

Silenus. Oh ! I know the man,
 Wordy and shrewd, the son of Sisyphus.

Ulysses. I am the sunc, but do not rail upon me.—

Silenus. Whence sailing do you come to Sicily?

Ulysses. From Ilion, and from the Trojan toils.

Silenus. How touched you not at your paternal shore ?

Ulysses. The strength of tempests bore me here by force.

Silenus. The self-same accident occurred to me.

Ulysses. Were you then driven here by stress of weather ?

Silenus. Following the Pirates who had kidnapped Bacchus.

Ulysses. What land is this, and who inhabit it ?—

Silenus. Ætna, the loftiest peak in Sicily.

Ulysses. And are there walls, and tower-surrounded towns ?

Silenus. There are not.—These lone rocks are bare of men.

Ulysses. And who possess the land ? the race of beasts ?

Silenus. Cyclops, who live in caverns, not in houses.

Ulysses. Obeying whom ? Or is the state popular ?

Silenus. Shepherds : no one obeys any in aught.

Ulysses. How live they ? do they sow the corn of Ceres ?

Silenus. On milk and cheese, and on the flesh of sheep.

Ulysses. Have they the Bromian drink from the vine's stream ?

Silenus. Ah ! no ; they live in an ungracious land.

Ulysses. And are they just to strangers ?—hospitable ?

Silenus. They think the sweetest thing a stranger brings,
 Is his own flesh.

Ulysses. What ! do they eat man's flesh ?

Silenus. No one comes here who is not eaten up.

Ulysses. The Cyclops now—where is he ? Not at home ?

Silenus. Absent on Ætna, hunting with his dogs.

Ulysses. Know'st thou what thou must do to aid us hence ?

Silenus. I know not : we will help you all we can.

Ulysses. Provide us food, of which we are in want.

Silenus. Here is not anything, as I said, but meat.

Ulysses. But meat is a sweet remedy for hunger.

Silenus. Cow's milk there is, and store of curdled cheese.

Ulysses. Bring out : I would see all before I bargain.

Silenus. But how much gold will you engage to give ?

Ulysses. I bring no gold, but Bacchic juice.

Silenus. O joy !

'Tis long since these dry lips were wet with wine.

Ulysses. Maron, the son of the God, gave it me.

Silenus. Whom I have nursed a baby in my arms.

Ulysses. The son of Bacchus, for your clearer knowledge.

Silenus. Have you it now ?—or is it in the ship ?

Ulysses. Old man, this skin contains it, which you see.

Silenus. Why this would hardly be a mouthful for me.

Ulysses. Nay, twice as much as you can draw from thence.

Silenus. You speak of a fair fountain, sweet to me.

Ulysses. Would you first taste of the unmingled wine ?

Silenus. "Tis just--tasting invites the purchaser.

Ulysses. Here is the cup, together with the skin.

Silenus. Pour : that the draught may fillip my remembrance .

Ulysses. See !

Silenus. Papaiapæx ! what a sweet smell it has !

Ulysses. You see it then ?—

Silenus. By Jove, no ! but I smell it.

Ulysses. Taste, that you may not praise it in words only.

Silenus. Babai ! Great Bacchus calls me forth to dance !

Joy ! joy !

Ulysses. Did it flow sweetly down your throat ?

Silenus. So that it tingled to my very nails.

Ulysses. And in addition I will give you gold.

Silenus. Let gold alone ! only unlock the cask.

Ulysses. Bring out some cheeses now, or a young goat.

Silenus. That will I do, despising any master.

Yes, let me drink one cup, and I will give

All that the Cyclops feed upon their mountains.

* * * * *

Chorus. Ye have taken Troy, and laid your hands on Helen ?

Ulysses. And utterly destroyed the race of Priam.

Silenus. * * * * *

The wanton wretch ! She was bewitched to see

The many-coloured anklets and the chain

Of woven gold which girt the neck of Paris,

And so she left that good man Menelaus.

There should be no more women in the world

But such as are reserved for me alone. —

See, here are sheep, and here are goats, Ulysses ;

Here are unsparing cheeses of pressed milk ;

Take them ; depart with what god-speed ye may ;

First leaving my reward, the Bacchic dew
Of joy-inspiring grapes.

Ulysses. Ah me ! Alas !
What shall we do ? the Cyclops is at hand !
Old man, we perish ! whither can we fly ?

Silenus. Hide yourselves quick within that hollow rock.

Ulysses. 'Twere perilous to fly into the net.

Silenus. The cavern has recesses numberless ;
Hide yourselves quick.

Ulysses. That will I never do :
The mighty Troy would be indeed disgraced
If I should fly one man. How many times
Have I withstood with shield immovable,
Ten thousand Phrygians !—If I needs must die,
Yet will I die with glory ;—if I live,
The praise which I have gained will yet remain.

Silenus. What, ho ! assistance, comrades, haste, assistance !

The CYCLOPS, SILENUS, ULYSSES ; CHORUS.

Cyclops. What is this tumult ? Bacchus is not here,
Nor tympanies nor brazen castanets.
How are my young lambs in the cavern ? Milking
Their dams, or playing by their sides ? And is
The new cheese pressed into the bull-rush baskets ?
Speak ! I'll beat some of you till you rain tears—
Look up, not downwards, when I speak to you.

Silenus. See ! I now gape at Jupiter himself,
I stare upon Orion and the stars.
Cyclops. Well, is the dinner fitly cooked and laid ?
Silenus. All ready, if your throat is ready too.
Cyclops. Are the bowls full of milk besides ?
Silenus. O'erbrimming ;
So you may drink a tunful if you will.

Cyclops. Is it ewe's milk, or cow's milk, or both mixed ?—
Silenus. Both, either ; only pray don't swallow me.

Cyclops. By no means.—

* * * * *

What is this crowd I see beside the stalls ?
Outlaws or thieves ? for near my cavern home
I see my young lambs coupled two by two
With willow bands ; mixed with my cheeses lie
Their implements ; and this old fellow here
Has his bald head broken with stripes.

Silenus. Ah me !
I have been beaten till I burn with fever.
Cyclops. By whom ? Who laid his fist upon your head ?
Silenus. Those men, because I would not suffer them
To steal your goods.

Cyclops. Did not the rascals know
I am a God, sprung from the race of heaven ?
Silenus. I told them so, but they bore off your things,

And ate the cheese in spite of all I said,
 And carried out the lambs—and said, moreover,
 They'd pin you down with a three-enbit collar,
 And pull your vitals out through your one eye,
 Torture your back with stripes; then, binding you,
 Throw you as ballast into the ship's hold,
 And then deliver you, a slave, to move
 Enormous rocks, or found a vestibule.

Cyclops. In truth? Nay, haste, and place in order quickly
 The cooking knives, and heap upon the hearth,
 And kindle it, a great faggot of wood.—
 As soon as they are slaughtered, they shall fill
 My belly, broiling warm from the live coals,
 Or boiled and seethed within the bubbling cauldron.
 I am quite sick of the wild mountain game;
 Of stags and lions I have gorged enough,
 And I grow hungry for the flesh of men.

Silens. Nay, master, something new is very pleasant
 After one thing for ever, and of late
 Very few strangers have approached our cave.

Ulysses. Hear, Cyclops, a plain tale on the other side
 We, wanting to buy food, came from our ship
 Into the neighbourhood of your cave, and here
 This old Silenus gave us in exchange
 These lambs for wine, the which he took and drank,
 And all by mutual compact, without force.
 There is no word of truth in what he says,
 For silly he was selling all your store.

Silens. I? May you perish, wretch—

Ulysses. If I speak false!
Silens. Cyclops, I swear by Neptune who begot thee,
 By mighty Triton and by Nereus old,
 Calypso and the glaucous ocean Nymphs,
 The sacred waves and all the race of fishes—
 Be these the witnesses, my dear sweet master,
 My darling little Cyclops, that I never Gave any of your stores to these false strangers.—
 If I speak false may those whom most I love,
 My children, perish wretchedly!

Chorus. There stop!
 I saw him giving these things to the strangers.
 If I speak false, then may my father perish,
 But do not thou wrong hospitality.

Cyclops. You lie! I swear that he is juster far
 Than Rhadamanthus—I trust more in him.
 But let me ask, whence have ye sailed, O strangers?
 Who are you? and what city nourished ye?

Ulysses. Our race is Ithacan.—Having destroyed
 The town of Troy, the tempests of the sea
 Have driven us on thy land, O Polyphemus.

Cyclops. What, have ye shared in the unenvied spoil
Of the false Helen, near Scamander's stream ?

Ulysses. The same, having endured a woeful toil.

Cyclops. O basest expedition ! Sailed ye not
From Greece to Phrygia for one woman's sake ?

Ulysses. 'Twas the Gods' work—no mortal was in fault.
But, O great offspring of the Ocean King !

We pray thee and admonish thee with freedom,
That thou dost spare thy friends who visit thee,
And place no impious food within thy jaws.

For in the depths of Greece we have upreared

Temples to thy great father, which are all

His homes. The sacred bay of Taenarus

Remains inviolate, and each dim recess

Scooped high on the Malcean promontory,

And airy Sunium's silver-veined crag,

Which divine Pallas keeps unprofaned ever,

The Gerastium asylums, and whate'er

Within wide Greece our enterprise has kept

From Phrygian contumely ; and in which

You have a common care, for you inhabit

The skirts of Grecian land, under the roots

Of Aetna and its crags, spotted with fire.

Turn then to converse under human laws ;

Receive us shipwrecked suppliants, and provide

Food, clothes, and fire, and hospitable gifts ;

Nor, fixing upon oxen-piercing spits

Our limbs, so fill your belly and your jaws.

Priam's wide land has widowed Greece enough ;

And weapon-winged murder heaped together

Enough of dead, and wives are husbandless,

And ancient women and grey fathers wail

Their childless age :—if you should roast the rest,

And 'tis a bitter feast that you prepare,

Where then would any turn ? Yet be persuaded ;

Forego the lust of your jaw-bone; prefer

Pious humanity to wicked will ;

Many have bought too dear their evil joys.

Silenus. Let me advise you ; do not spare a morsel

Of all his flesh. If you should eat his tongue

You would become most eloquent, O Cyclops.

Cyclops. Wealth, my good fellow, is the wise man's God ;

All other things are a pretence and boast.

What are my father's ocean promontories,

The sacred rocks whereon he dwells, to me ?

Stranger, I laugh to scorn Jove's thunderbolt,

I know not that his strength is more than mine.

As to the rest I care not.—When he pours

Rain from above, I have a close pavilion

Under this rock, in which I lie supine,

Feasting on a roast calf or some wild beast,
 And drinking pans of milk, and gloriously
 Emulating the thunder of high heaven.
 And when the Thracian wind pours down the snow,
 I wrap my body in the skins of beasts,
 Kindle a fire, and bid the snow whirl on.
 The earth by force, whether it will or no,
 Bringing forth grass, fattens my flocks and herds,
 Which, to what other God but to myself
 And this great belly, first of deities,
 Should I be bound to sacrifice ? I well know
 The wise man's only Jupiter is this,
 To eat and drink during his little day,
 And give himself no care. And as for those
 Who complicate with laws the life of man,
 I freely give them tears for their reward.
 I will not cheat my soul of its delight,
 Or hesitate in dining upon you :—
 And that I may be quit of all demands,
 These are my hospitable gifts ;—fierce fire
 And yon ancestral cauldron, which o'erbubbling
 Shall finely cook your miserable flesh.
 Creep in !—

Ulysses. Ay, ay ! I have escaped the Trojan toils,
 I have escaped the sea, and now I fall
 Under the cruel grasp of one impious man.
 O Pallas, mistress, Goddess, sprung from Jove,
 Now, now, assist me ! Mightier toils than Troy
 Are these ;—I totter on the chasms of peril ;—
 And thou who inhabitest the thrones
 Of the bright stars, look, hospitable Jove,
 Upon this outrage of thy deity,
 Otherwise be considered as no God.

CHORUS (alone).

For your gaping gulf and your gullet wide
 The ravine is ready on every side ;
 The limbs of the strangers are cooked and done,
 There is boiled meat, and roast meat, and meat from the coal,
 You may chop it, and tear it, and guash it for fun,
 A hairy goat's skin contains the whole.
 Let me but escape, and ferry me o'er
 The stream of your wrath to a safer shore.

The Cyclops Aetnean is cruel and bold,
 He murders the strangers
     That sit on his hearth,
 And dreads no avengers
     To rise from the earth.

He roasts the men before they are cold,
He snatches them broiling from the coal,
And from the cauldron pulls them whole,
And minces their flesh and gnaws their bone
With his cursed teeth, till all be gone.

Farewell, foul pavilion !
Farewell, rites of dread !
The Cyclops vermillion,
With slaughter uncloying,
Now feasts on the dead,
In the flesh of strangers joying !

Ulysses. O Jupiter ! I saw within the cave
Horrible things : deeds to be feigned in words,
But not believed as being done.

Chorus. What ! sawest thou the impious Polypheme
Feasting upon your loved companions now ?

Ulysses. Selecting two, the plunkest of the crowd,
He grasped them in his hands.—

Chorus. Unhappy man ! . . . *

Ulysses. Soon as we came into this craggy place,
Kindling a fire, he cast on the broad hearth
The knotty limbs of an enormous oak,
Three waggon-loads at least, and then he strewed
Upon the ground, beside the red fire light,
His couch of pine leaves ; and he milked the cows,
And pouring forth the white milk, filled a bowl
Three cubits wide and four in depth, as much
As would contain four amphorae, and bound it
With ivy wreaths ; then placed upon the fire
A brazen pot to boil, and make red hot
The points of spits, not sharpened with the sickle,
But with a fruit-tree bough, and with the jaws
Of axes for Athenian slaughterings.*
And when this God-abandoned cook of hell
Had made all ready, he seized two of us,
And killed them in a kind of measured manner ;
For he flung one against the brazen rivets
Of the huge cauldron, and seized the other
By the foot's tendon, and knocked out his brains
Upon the sharp edge of the craggy stone :
Then peeled his flesh with a great cooking knife,
And put him down to rouse. The other's limbs
He chopped into the cauldron to be boiled.
And I, with the tears raining from my eyes,
Stood near the Cyclops, ministering to him ;

* I confess I do not understand this.—Note of the Author.

The rest, in the recesses of the cave,
 Clung to the rock like bats, bloodless with fear.
 When he was filled with my companions' flesh,
 He threw himself upon the ground, and sent
 A loathsome exhalation from his maw.
 Then a divine thought came to me. I filled
 The cup of Maron, and I offered him
 To taste, and said :—“ Child of the Ocean-God,
 Behold what drink the vines of Greece produce,
 The exultation and the joy of Bacchus.”
 He, satiated with his unnatural food,
 Received it, and at one draught drank it off,
 And, taking my hand, praised me :—“ Thou hast given
 A sweet draught after a sweet meal, dear guest.”
 And I, perceiving that it pleased him, filled
 Another cup, well knowing that the wine
 Would wound him soon and take a sure revenge.
 And the charm fascinated him, and I
 Plied him cup after cup, until the drink
 Had warmed his entrails, and he sang aloud
 In concert with my wailing fellow-seamen
 A hideous discord—and the cavern rung.
 I have stolen out, so that if you will
 You may achieve my safety and your own.
 But say, do you desire, or not, to fly
 This uncompanionable man, and dwell,
 As was your wont, among the Grecian nymphs,
 Within the fane of your beloved God ?
 Your father there within agrees to it,
 But he is weak and overcome with wine,
 And caught as if with birdlime by the cup,
 He claps his wings and crows in doating joy.
 You who are young escape with me, and find
 Bacchus your ancient friend ; unsuited he
 To this rude Cyclops.

Chorus. O my dearest friend,
 That I could see that day, and leave for ever
 The impious Cyclops.

* * * *

Ulysses. Listen then what a punishment I have
 For this fell monster, how secure a flight
 From your hard servitude.

Chorus. Oh sweeter far
 Than is the music of an Asian lyre
 Would be the news of Polypheme destroyed.
Ulysses. Delighted with the Bacchic drink, he goes
 To call his brother Cyclops—who inhabit
 A village upon Ætna not far off.

Chorus. I understand : catching him when alone,

You think by some measure to dispatch him,
Or thrust him from the precipice.

Ulysses. Oh no ;
Nothing of that kind ; my device is subtle.
Chorus. How then ? I heard of old that thou wert wise.
Ulysses. I will dissuade him from this plan, by saying
It were unwise to give the Cyclopses
This precious drink, which if enjoyed alone
Would make life sweeter for a longer time.
When vanquished by the Bacchic power, he sleeps,
There is a trunk of olive-wood within,
Whose point, having made sharp with this good sword,
I will conceal in fire, and when I see
It is alight, will fix it, burning yet,
Within the socket of the Cyclops' eye,
And melt it out with fire—as when a man
Turns by its handle a great anger round,
Fitting the frame-work of a ship with beams.
So will I in the Cyclops' fiery eye
Turn round the brand, and dry the pupil up.

Chorus. Joy ! I am mad with joy at your device.
Ulysses. And then with you, my friends, and the old man.
We'll load the hollow depth of our black ship,
And row with double strokes from this dread shore!

Chorus. May I, as in libations to a God,
Share in the blinding him with the red brand ?
I would have some communion in his death.

Ulysses. Doubtless ; the brand is a great brand to hold.
Chorus. Oh ! I would lift a hundred waggon-loads,
If like a wasp's nest I could scoop the eye out
Of the detested Cyclops.

Ulysses. Silence now !
Ye know the close device—and when I call,
Look ye obey the masters of the craft.
I will not save myself and leave behind
My comrades in the cave : I might escape,
Having got clear from that obscure recess,
But 'twere unjust to leave in jeopardy
The dear companions who sailed here with me.

CHORUS.

Come ! who is first, that with his hand
Will urge down the burning brand
Through the lids, and quench and pierce
The Cyclops' eye so fiery fierce ?

SEMI-CHORUS I.—Song within.
Listen ! listen ! he is coming,
A most hideous discord humming,
Drunken, museless, awkward, yelling,
Far along his rocky dwelling ;

Let us with some comic spell
 Teach the yet unteachable.
 By all means he must be blinded,
 If my counseil be but minded.

SEMI-CHORUS II.

Happy those made odorous
 With the dew which sweet grapes weep,
 To the village hastening thus,
 Seek the vines that soothe to sleep,
 Having first embraced thy friend,
 There in luxury without end,
 With the strings of yellow hair,
 Of thy voluptuous leman fair,
 Shall sit playing on a bed ! —
 Speak, what door is opened ?

CYCLOPS.

Ha ! ha ! ha ! I'm full of wine,
 Heavy with the joy divine,
 With the young feast oversated.
 Like a merchant's vessel freighted
 To the water's edge, my crop
 Is laden to the gullet's top.
 The fresh meadow grass of spring
 Tempts me forth, thus wandering
 To my brothers on the mountains,
 Who shall share the wine's sweet fountains.
 Bring the cask, O stranger, bring !

CHORUS.

One with eves the fairest
 Cometh from his dwelling :
 Some one loves thee, rarest,
 Bright beyond my telling.
 In thy grace thou shinest
 Like some nymph divinest,
 In her caverns dewy ; —
 All delights pursue thee,
 Soon pied flowers, sweet-breathing,
 Shall thy head be wreathing.

- Ulysses.* Listen, O Cyclops, for I am well skilled
 In Bacchus, whom I gave thee of to drink.
Cyclops. What sort of God is Bacchus then accounted ?
Ulysses. The greatest among men for joy of life.
Cyclops. I guipt him down with very great delight.
Ulysses. This is a God who never injures men.
Cyclops. How does the God like living in a skin ?
Ulysses. He is content wherever he is put.
Cyclops. Gods should not have their body in a skin.
Ulysses. If he give joy, what is his skin to you ?
Cyclops. I hate the skin, but love the wine within.

Ulysses. Stay here; now drink, and make your spirit glad.

Cyclops. Should I not share this liquor with my brothers?

Ulysses. Keep it yourself, and be more honoured so.

Cyclops. I were more useful, giving to my friends.

Ulysses. But village mirth breeds contests, broils, and blows.

Cyclops. When I am drunk none shall lay hands on me.—

Ulysses. A drunken man is better within doors.

Cyclops. He is a fool, who drinking loves not mirth.

Ulysses. But he is wise, who drunk, remains at home.

Cyclops. What shall I do, Silenus? Shall I stay?

Silens. Stay—for what need have you of pot companions?

Cyclops. Indeed this place is closely carpeted
With flowers and grass.

Silens. And in the sun-warm noon
'Tis sweet to drink. Lie down beside me now,
Placing your mighty sides upon the ground.

Cyclops. What do you put the cup behind me for?

Silens. That no one here may touch it.

Cyclops. Thievish one!
You want to drink;—here place it in the midst.
And thou, O stranger, tell how art thou called?

Ulysses. My name is Nobody. What favour now
Shall I receive to praise you at your hands?

Cyclops. I'll feast on you the last of your companions.

Ulysses. You grant your guest a fair reward, O Cyclops.

Cyclops. Ha! what is this? Stealing the wine, you rogue!

Silens. It was this stranger kissing me, because
I looked so beautiful.

Cyclops. You shall repent
For kissing the coy wine that loves you not.

Silens. By Jupiter! you said that I am fair.

Cyclops. Pour out, and only give me the cup full.

Silens. How is it mixed? Let me observe.

Cyclops. Curse you!
Give it me so.

Silens. Not till I see you wear
That coronal, and taste the cup to you.

Cyclops. Thou wily traitor!

Silens. But the wine is sweet.
Aye, you will roar if you are caught in drinking.

Cyclops. See now, my lip is clean and all my beard.

Silens. Now put your elbow right, and drink again.
As you see me drink— * * *

Cyclops. How now?

Silens. Ye Gods, what a delicious gulp!

Cyclops. Guest, take it;—you pour out the wine for me.

Ulysses. The wine is well accustomed to my hand.

Cyclops. Pour out the wine!

Ulysses. I pour; only be silent.

Cyclops. Silence is a hard task to him who drinks.

Ulysses. Take it and drink it off ; leave not a dreg,
Oh, that the drinker died with his own draught !

Cyclops. Papai ! the vine must be a sapient plant.

Ulysses. If you drink much after a mighty feast,
Moistening your thirsty maw, you will sleep well ;
If you leave aught, Bacchus will dry you up.

Cyclops. Ho ! ho ! I can scarce rise. What pure delight !
The heavens and earth appear to whirl about
Confusedly. I see the throne of Jove
And the clear congregation of the Gods.
Now if the Graces tempted me to kiss,
I would not, for the loveliest of them all
I would not leave this Ganymede.

Silenus. Polypheme,
I am the Ganymede of Jupiter.

Cyclops. By Jove you are ; I bore you off from Dardanus.

ULYSSES AND THE CHORUS.

Ulysses. Come, boys of Bacchus, children of high race,
This man within is folded up in sleep,
And soon will vomit flesh from his fell maw ;
The brand under the shed thrusts out its smoke,
No preparation needs, but to burn out
The monster's eye ;—but bear yourselves like men.

Chorus. We will have courage like the adamant rock.
All things are ready for you here ; go in,
Before our father shall perceive the noise.

Ulysses. Vulcan, Ætnæan king ! burn out with fire
The shining eye of this thy neighbouring monster !
And thou, O Sleep, nursling of gloomy night,
Descend unmixed on this God-hated beast,
And suffer not Ulysses and his comrades,
Returning from their famous Trojan toils,
To perish by this man, who cares not either
For God or mortal ; or I needs must think
That Chance is a supreme divinity,
And things divine are subject to her power.

CHORUS.

Soon a crab the throat will seize
Of him who feeds upon his guest,
Fire will burn his lamp-like eyes
In revenge of such a feast !
A great oak stump now is lying
In the ashes yet undying.

Come, Maron, come !
Raging let him fix the doom,
Let him tear the eyelid up,
Of the Cyclops—that his cup
May be evil !
Oh, I long to dance and revel

With sweet Bromian, long desired,
 In loved ivy-wreaths attired ;
     Leaving this abandoned home—
     Will the moment ever come ?

Ulysses. Be silent, ye wild things ! Nay, hold your peace,
 And keep your lips quite close ; dare not to breathe,
 Or spit, or e'en wink, lest ye wake the monster,
 Until his eye be tortured out with fire.

Chorus. Nay, we are silent, and we chaw the air.

Ulysses. Come now, and lend a hand to the great stake
 Within—it is delightfully red hot.

Chorus. You then command who first should seize the stake
 To burn the Cyclops' eye, that all may share
 In the great enterprise.

Semi-Chorus I.                  We are too few ;
 We cannot at this distance from the door
 Thrust fire into his eye.

Semi-Chorus II.                  And we just now
 Have become lame ; cannot move hand nor foot.

Chorus. The same thing has occurred to us ;--our ancles
 Are sprained with standing here. I know not how.

Ulysses. What, sprained with standing still ?

Chorus.                          And there is dust
 Or ashes in our eyes, I know not whence.

Ulysses. Cowardly dogs, ye will not aid me, then ?

Chorus. With pitying my own back and my back-bone,
 And with not wishing all my teeth knocked out !
 This cowardice comes of itself—but stay,
 I know a famous Orphic incantation
 To make the brand stick of its own accord
 Into the skull of this one-eyed son of Earth.

Ulysses. Of old I knew ye thus by nature ; now
 I know ye better.—I will use the aid
 Of my own comrades—yet though weak of hand
 Speak cheerfully, that so ye may awaken
 The courage of my friends with your blithe words.

Chorus. This I will do with peril of my life,
 And blind you with my exhortations, Cyclops.

Hasten and thrust,
 And parch up to dust,
 The eye of the beast,
 Who feeds on his guest.
 Burn and blind
 The Ætnæan hind !
 Scoop and draw,
 But beware lest he claw
 Your limbs near his maw.

Cyclops. Ah me ! my eye-sight is parched up to cinders.

Chorus. What a sweet paean ! sing me that again !

Cyclops. Ah me ! indeed, what woe has fallen upon me !

But, wretched nothings, think ye not to flee
Out of this rock ; I, standing at the outlet,
Will bar the way, and catch you as you pass.

Chorus. What are you roaring out, Cyclops ?

Cyclops. I perish !

Chorus. For you are wicked.

Cyclops. And besides miserable.

Chorus. What, did you fall into the fire when drunk ?

Cyclops. 'Twas Nobody destroyed me.

Chorus. Why then no one
Can be to blame.

Cyclops. I say 'twas Nobody
Who blinded me.

Chorus. Why then, you are not blind !

Cyclops. I wish you were as blind as I am.

Chorus. Nay,
It cannot be that no one made you blind.

Cyclops. You jeer me ; where, I ask, is Nobody ?

Chorus. No where, O Cyclops * * *

Cyclops. It was that stranger ruined me : - the wretch
First gave me wine, and then burnt out my eye,
For wine is strong and hard to struggle with.
Have they escaped, or are they yet within ?

Chorus. They stand under the darkness of the rock,
And cling to it.

Cyclops. At my right hand or left ?

Chorus. Close on your right.

Cyclops. Where ?

Chorus. Near the rock itself.
You have them.

Cyclops. Oh, misfortune on misfortune !

I've crack'd my skull.

Chorus. Now they escape you there.

Cyclops. Not there, although you say so.

Chorus. Not on that side.

Cyclops. Where then ?

Chorus. They creep about you on your left.

Cyclops. Ah ! I am mocked ! They jeer me in my ills.

Chorus. Not there ! he is a little there beyond you.

Cyclops. Detested wretch ! where are you ?

Ulysses. Far from you
I keep with care this body of Ulysses.

Cyclops. What do you say ? You proffer a new name.

Ulysses. My father named me so ; and I have taken
A full revenge for your unnatural feast ;
I should have done ill to have burned down Troy,
And not revenged the murder of my comrades.

Cyclops. Ai ! ai ! the ancient oracle is accomplished ;

It said that I should have my eye-sight blinded
By you coming from Troy, yet it foretold
That you should pay the penalty for this
By wandering long over the homeless sea.

Ulysses. I bid thee weep—consider what I say,
I go towards the shore to drive my ship
To mine own land, o'er the Sicilian wave.

Cyclops. Not so, if whelming you with this huge stone
I can crush you and all your men together;
I will descend upon the shore, though blind,
Groping my way adown the steep ravine.

Chorus. And we, the shipmates of Ulysses now,
Will serve our Bacchus all our happy lives.

EPIGRAMS.

SPIRIT OF PLATO.

FROM THE GREEK.

EAGLE! why soarest thou above that tomb?
To what sublime and star-y-paven home
Floatest thou?
I am the image of swift Plato's spirit,
Ascending heaven—Athens does inherit.
His corpse below.

FROM THE GREEK.

A MAN who was about to hang himself,
Finding a purse, then threw away his rope;
The owner coming to reclaim his pelf,
The halter found and used it. So is Hope
Changed for Despair—one laid upon the shelf,
We take the other. Under heaven's high cope
Fortune is God—all you endure and do
Depends on circumstance as much as you.

TO STELLA.

FROM PLATO.

THOU wert the morning star among the living,
Ere thy fair light had fled;—
Now, having died, thou art as Hesperus, giving
New splendour to the dead.

FROM PLATO.

KISSING Helena, together
 With my kiss, my soul beside it
 Came to my lips, and there I kept it,—
 For the poor thing had wandered thither,
 To follow where the kiss should guide it,
 O, cruel I, to intercept it !

SONNETS FROM THE GREEK OF MOSCHUS.

Τὰς ἄλα τὰς γλαυκὰς ὅταν ἀνεύεις ἀτρέμα βάσην; - Κ. Τ. Ι.

I.

WHEN winds that move not its calm surface sweep
 The azure sea, I love the land no more:
 The smiles of the serene and tranquil deep
 Tempt my unquiet mind.—But when the roar
 Of ocean's grey abyss resounds, and foam
 Gathers upon the sea, and vast waves burst,
 I turn from the drear aspect to the home
 Of earth and its deep woods, where, interspersed,
 When winds blow loud, pines make sweet melody :
 Whose house is some lone bark, whose toil the sea,
 Whose prey, the wandering fish, an evil lot
 Has chosen.—But I my languid limbs will fling
 Beneath the plane, where the brook's murmuring
 Moves the calm spirit but disturbs it not.

II.

PAN loved his neighbour Echo—but that child
 Of Earth and Air pined for the Satyr leaping;
 The Satyr loved with wasting madness wild
 The bright nymph Lyda—and so the three went weeping.
 As Pan loved Echo, Echo loved the Satyr;
 The Satyr Lyda—and thus love consumed them.—
 And thus to each—which was a woeful matter—
 To bear what they inflicted, justice doomed them;
 For, inasmuch as each might hate the lover,
 Each, loving, so was hated.—Ye that love not
 Be warned—in thought turn this example over,
 That, when ye love, the like return ye prove not.

SONNET FROM THE ITALIAN OF DANTE.

DANTE ALIGHIERI TO GUIDO CAVALCANTI.

GUIDO, I would that Lappo, thou, and I,
 Led by some strong enchantment, might ascend
 A magic ship, whose charmed sails should fly
 With winds at will where'er our thoughts might wend,
 So that no change, nor any evil chance,
 Should mar our joyous voyage ; but it might be,
 That even satiety should still enhance
 Between our hearts their strict community ;
 And that the bounteous wizard then would place
 Vanna and Bice and my gentle love,
 Companions of our wandering, and would grace
 With passionate talk, wherever we might rove,
 Our time, and each were as content and free
 As I believe that thou and I should be.

SCENES

FROM

THE MAGICO PRODIGIOSO OF CALDERON.

CYPRIAN as a Student; CLARIN and MOSCON as poor Scholars, with books.

Cyprian. In the sweet solitude of this calm place,
 This intricate wild wilderness of trees
 And flowers and undergrowth of odorous plants,
 Leave me ; the books you brought out of the house
 To me are ever best society.
 And whilst with glorious festival and song
 Antioch now celebrates the consecration
 Of a proud temple to great Jupiter,
 And bears his image in loud jubilee
 To its new shrine, I would consume what still Lives of the dying day, in studious thought,
 Far from the throng and turmoil. You, my friends,
 Go and enjoy the festival ; it will
 Be worth the labour, and return for me
 When the sun seeks its grave among the billows,
 Which among dim grey clouds on the horizon
 Dance like white plumes upon a hearse ;—and hero
 I shall expect you.

Moscon. I cannot bring my mind,

Great as my haste to see the festival
 Certainly is, to leave you, Sir, without
 Just saying some three or four hundred words.
 How is it possible that on a day
 Of such festivity, you can bring your mind
 To come forth to a solitary country
 With three or four old books, and turn your back
 On all this mirth ?

Clarin. My master's in the right ;
 There is not anything more tiresome
 Than a procession day, with troops of men,
 And dances, and all that.

Moscon. From first to last,
 Clarin, you are a temporising flatterer ;
 You praise not what you feel, but what he does : - Toadeater !

Clarin. You lie—under a mistake
 For this is the most civil sort of lie
 That can be given to a man's face. I now
 Say what I think.

Cyprian. Enough, you foolish fellows,
 Puffed up with your own doting ignorance,
 You always take the two sides of one question.
 Now go, and as I said, return for me
 When night falls, veiling in its shadow wide
 This glorious fabrie of the universe.

Moscon. How happens it, although you can maintain
 The folly of enjoying festivals,
 That yet you go there ?

Clarin. Nay, the consequence
 Is clear :—who ever did what he advises
 Others to do ! -

Moscon. Would that my feet were wings,
 So would I fly to Livia.

[Exit.]

Clarin. To speak truth,
 Livia is she who has surprised my heart ;
 But he is more than half way there.—Soho !
 Livia, I come ; good sport, Livia, soho !

[Exit.]

Cyprian. Now since I am alone, let me examine
 The question which has long disturbed my mind
 With doubt, since first I read in Plinius
 The words of mystic import and deep sense
 In which he defines God. My intellect
 Can find no God with whom these marks and signs
 Fitly agree. It is a hidden truth
 Which I must fathom.

[Reads.]

Enter the Devil, as a fine Gentleman.

Daemon. Search even as thou wilt,
 But thou shalt never find what I can hide.

Cyprian. What noise is that among the boughs? Who moves?
What art thou?—

Dæmon. "Tis a foreign gentleman.
Even from this morning I have lost my way
In this wild place, and my poor horse, at last
Quite overcome, has stretched himself upon
The enamelled tapestry of this mossy mountain,
And feeds and rests at the same time. I was Upon my way to Antioch upon business
Of some importance, but wrapt up in cares
(Who is exempt from this inheritance?)
I parted from my company, and lost
My way, and lost my servants and my comrades.

Cyprian. 'Tis singular, that, even within the sight
Of the high towers of Antioch, you could lose
Your w... Of all the avenues and green paths
Of this wild wood there is not one but leads,
As to its centre, to the walls of Antioch;
Take which you will you cannot miss your road.

Dæmon. And such is ignorance! Even in the sight
Of knowledge it can draw no profit from it.
But, as it still is early, and as I
Have no acquaintances in Antioch,
Being a stranger there, I will even wait
The few succeeding hours of the day,
Until the night shall conquer it. I see
Both by your dress and by the books in which
You find delight and company, that you
Are a great student;—for my part, I feel
Much sympathy with such pursuits.

Cyprian. Have you Studied much?—

Dæmon. No;—and yet I know enough
Not to be wholly ignorant.

Cyprian. Pray, Sir,
What science may you know?—

Dæmon. Many.

Cyprian. Alas!

Much pains must we expend on one alone,
And even then attain it not;—but you
Have the presumption to assert that you
Know many without study.

Dæmon. And with truth.
For, in the country whence I come, sciences
Require no learning;—they are known.

Cyprian. Oh, would
I were of that bright country! for in this
The more we study, we the more discover
Our ignorance.

Dæmon. It is so true, that I

Had so much arrogance as to oppose
 The chair of the most high Professorship,
 And obtained many votes, and though I lost,
 The attempt was still more glorious than the failure
 Could be dishonourable : if you believe not,
 Let us refer it to dispute respecting
 That which you know best, and although I
 Know not the opinion you maintain, and though
 It be the true one, I will take the contrary.

Cyprian. The offer gives me pleasure. I am now
 Debating with myself upon a passage
 Of Plinius, and my mind is racked with doubt
 To understand and know who is the God
 Of whom he speaks.

Demon. It is a passage, if I recollect it right, couched in these words :
 "God is one supreme goodness, one pure essence,
 One substance, and one sense, all sight, all hands."

Cyprian. 'Tis true.
Demon. What difficulty find you here ?

Cyprian. I do not recognise among the Gods
 The God defined by Plinius : if he must
 Be supreme goodness, even Jupiter
 Is not supremely good ; because we see
 His deeds are evil, and his attributes
 Tainted with mortal weakness. In what manner
 Can supreme goodness be consistent with
 The passions of humanity ?

Demon. The wisdom
 Of the old world masked with the names of Gods
 The attributes of Nature and of Man ;
 A sort of popular philosophy.

Cyprian. This reply will not satisfy me, for Such awe is due to the high name of God,
 That ill should never be imputed. Then,
 Examining the question with more care,
 It follows, that the gods should always will
 That which is best, were they supremely good.
 How then does one will one thing—one another ?
 And you may not say that I allege
 Poetical or philosophic learning :—
 Consider the ambiguous responses
 Of their oracular statues ; from two shrines
 Two armies shall obtain the assurance of
 One victory. Is it not indisputable
 That two contending wills can never lead
 To the same end ? And, being opposite,
 If one be good is not the other evil ?
 Evil in God is inconceivable ;
 But supreme goodness fails among the gods
 Without their union.

Dæmon.

I deny your major.

These responses are means towards some end
Unfathomed by our intellectual beam.
They are the work of providence, and more
The battle's loss may profit those who lose,
Than victory advantage those who win.

Cyprian. That I admit, and yet that God should not (Falsehood is incompatible with deity)
Assure the victory, it would be enough.
To have permitted the defeat; if God
Be all sight,—God, who beheld the truth,
Would not have given assurance of an end
Never to be accomplished; thus, although
The Deity may according to his attributes
Be well distinguished into persons, yet,
Even in the minutest circumstance,
His essence must be one.

Dæmon. To attain the end,
The affections of the actors in the scene
Must have been thus influenced by his voice.

Cyprian. But for a purpose thus subordinate
He might have employed genii, good or evil,—
A sort of spirits called so by the learned,
Who roam about inspiring good or evil,
And from whose influence and existence we
May well infer our immortality: —
Thus God might easily, without descending
To a gross falsehood in his proper person,
Have moved the affections by this mediation . . .
To the just point.

Dæmon. These trifling contradictions
Do not suffice to impugn the unity
Of the high gods; in things of great importance
They still appear unanimous; consider
That glorious fabric—man, his workmanship,
Is stamped with one conception.

Cyprian. Who made man
Must have, methinks, the advantage of the others.
If they are equal, might they not have risen
In opposition to the work, and being
All hands, according to our author here,
Have still destroyed even as the other made?
If equal in their power, and only unequal
In opportunity, which of the two
Will remain conqueror?

Dæmon. On impossible
And false hypothesis, there can be built
No argument. Say, what do you infer
From this?

Cyprian. That there must be a mighty God
